The Ostrich

- ¶ Who has ever heard a word of praise for the ostrich? Who has ever uttered a syllable of sympathy for the ostrich after he has buried his head in the sand and received a kick on the shins?
- ¶ The echoes answer,—with silence.
- ¶ Then what can be said for the film ostrich who realizes that Motion Picture News leads the trade paper field, whose every test proves that Motion Picture News stands far in the foreground, whose own good sense tells him that he is sure of every advertising dollar spent in The News and only gambling or doling charity on other occasions—what can be said for him when he spends his appropriation by the highly efficient method of simple division into equal parts?
- ¶ Who will defend an ostrich? Who wants to be an ostrich? The ostrich is a simple bird; the wise ones let their advertising shout that

"WHY CHANGE YOUR WIFE?," which has just broken records everywhere it has been shown, is the third picture in an epoch-making series of master productions devoted to married life.

Your people have seen this last one and the second one, "Don't Change Your Husband."

But have they seen the first—a picture just as keenly penetrating, as deeply searching, as marvelously produced, as the other two?

Show it to them now! They all want to see it, and see it again!

New prints and

"THE RED LANE"

A GREAT story for every man, woman or child, from your highest priced seat to the back of the gallery.

A romance of the Big Woods, laid in a scenic wonderland up along the Canada Border, and full of inspiring outdoors atmosphere.

The story of a fighting young Revenue Officer who undertakes to clean up a band of smugglers but finds his work complicated by the fact that the girl he has come to love is the daughter of the chief offender. Just exactly the kind of part that vigorous FRANK MAYO can play to perfection—a part full of romantic encounters and man-to-man struggles in dramatic situations. Directed by LYNN REYNOLDS, who made that great money-picture, "THE BRUTE BREAKER," with MAYO a few months ago. Story by the famous and popular author. HOLMAN DAY.

A Romance of Heroism

TRULY, a great picture. A rousing, stirring picture. A romantic picture. A story that sweeps you up out of your humdrum life and carries you off to sea—to fight with strong, silent Elmo Lincoln against the perils of mutiny on the high seas—to fall in love with a beautiful woman and sacrifice liberty for her sake—to escape from the fetid dungeon of a southern republic and become master of a colony of beach-combers and then to save the one woman from a terrible fate in the midst of a revolution. Splendidly acted by Elmo Lincoln, famous star of "Tarzan of the Apes," and a great company in outdoor scenes of tempest and sunshine that have rarely been equalled for their wonderful photography. MERMAID COMEDIES

JACK WHITE has put the best of his experience with the Mack Sennett and Sunshine studios into this initial Mermaid Comedy.

Rapid fire action and pretty girls are featured, with such clever comedians as Jimmie Adams, Frank Coleman and Lige Cromley.

It is built with a single purpose—a succession of laughs in attractive settings and without vulgarity. IT'S A REAL COMEDY. There'll be a Mermaid every four weeks.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF PARTICULAR IMPORTANCE

TO THE Independent Producer, Director, Star or Author

BY THE

Pioneer Film Corporation

¶ The Pioneer Film Corporation with its unrivaled system of exchanges throughout the United States and Canada offers to the Independent American Producer an assured and profitable market for his productions.

¶ The individual star, whether legitimate or screen, the individual director or author, contemplating entering the independent field, who is seeking advice or financial assistance, will find the Pioneer willing to go into careful consideration of his proposition.

¶ In the past, the greatest difficulties confronting the independent producer, whether director, star or author, was either the lack of an assured and profitable outlet for his product, or the lack of proper co-operation and financial support.

¶ The Pioneer organization is more than anxious to encourage independent production by every means of assistance, financial or otherwise, to develop to the fullest extent the great possibilities which it believes lies in the hands of the individual star (man or woman), the individual director or author.

¶ The Pioneer has behind it a record of constant and consistent growth, and is today the largest and most successful independent motion picture distributing organization in the world.

¶ The coming season will be, from all indications, the biggest in the history of the industry. The public demand is for big pictures—big in story, big in production, big in stars.

¶ The Pioneer is interested in big pictures. The Pioneer plan of co-operation, exploitation and distribution is based upon the broad and square principle of "live and let live."

¶ Our hand is constantly on the pulse of public demand and we know exactly the type of picture that will find a profitable market.

¶ The Pioneer policy is one of co-operation with the Independent Producer—co-operation based upon expert technical skill and sound business procedure.

The producer, having finished pictures, which he has not disposed of, is especially invited to communicate with us. We are ready to negotiate for such completed productions, and wish to assure the producer, regardless of the price which he places upon his pictures, that we will make satisfactory arrangements with him, upon either an entire cash or co-operative basis.

No Weakly Effort Wins Such Support

ADJUTANT-GENERAL
THE DIRECTOR, NATIONAL PARK SERVICE
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR NATIONAL PARK SERVICE WASHINGTON

Los Angeles, California,
May 5, 1920.

To Superintendents of National Parks, and Custodians of National Monuments

The bearer of this letter, Mr. Leland J. Burrud, or other representative of the Sunset-Burrud motion picture interests, will visit several of the national parks and national monuments during the year 1920, for the purpose of making motion pictures of scenes in these reservations.

I have seen pictures that have already been completed by this enterprise, and I consider its product equal to, if not surpassing, most of the scenic film that I have observed. I am much interested in having the superintendents and custodians aid Mr. Burrud and his representatives and assistants in any way compatible with the public business entrusted to them to perform, and the park and monument executives are authorized to cooperate in this scenic picture work as opportunity permits.

No charges will be made at the gates of the Parks for cars used by Mr. Burrud or his representatives and assistants in touring these reservations.

Stephen J. Harker
Director.

CC to each superintendent and custodian.

It is very evident from this letter that the Government is well aware of the surpassing high quality of Sunset-Burrud productions.

We can pile evidence upon evidence why you should be booking now---but all of it harks back to the original argument---quality. And we are sure this will win your support also. First release July 4th.

"A CUMBERLAND ROMANCE" IS ANOTHER "JENNY BE GOOD" IT IS MARY MILES MINTER AT HER BOX OFFICE BEST ~ ~ ~

WE thought "JENNY BE GOOD" stood alone in its class and immediately suggested extra days' booking on it. We have the same enthusiasm about the latest Mary Miles Minter subject, "A CUMBERLAND ROMANCE." It is there, too — contains the much-to-be-desired box-office pull which brings the public in steadily and sends 'em out approving heartily.

Aside from the two Minter-Realart subjects indicated, there are only three others available. They are: "NURSE MARJORIE," the Israel Zangwill play adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers and directed by William D. Taylor; "JUDY OF ROGUES' HARBOR," from the famous novel by Grace Miller White (author of "Tess of the Storm Country"), adapted by Clara Beranger and directed by Mr. Taylor; and "ANNE OF GREEN GABLES," from the celebrated "Anne" books—all four of 'em — by L. M. Montgomery, adapted by Frances Marion and directed by William D. Taylor.

How Theatre Audiences are Increased by Non-Theatrical Motion Picture Exhibitions

The SCHOOL — CHURCH — HOME, etc., are the natural feeders to Theatrical Motion Picture audiences.

Here the desire to see pictures is developed.

Increased theatre audiences are directly attributable to pictures shown outside the theatre.

Lord Northcliffe, an early and prominent user of Safety Standard Films and Projectors, writes: "I find that the use of home motion pictures increases the desire of my family and myself to visit the motion picture theatres."

Non-Theatrical Exhibitions are best made with "Safety Standard" Film.

A PERSONAL MESSAGE TO THE AMERICAN PRODUCER

I have just arrived in your hospitable country, preparatory to the formation of the Cinema Sales Corporation, an organization which will specialize in the distribution of American Productions of quality in the United Kingdom. The new company will not in any way interfere with my affiliation with Hayward Productions, which organization, I am happy to announce, is meeting with wonderful success.

Mr. Henry Cundy, my business associate, has accompanied me on this trip, and we have both put up at the Hotel Astor in New York, where we will be accessible to the American Producer.

Our mission is to obtain the best American productions, and we are prepared to negotiate at once for the acquisition of such productions for distribution in the United Kingdom. In this connection, we are pleased to announce that we are working in association with Mr. Walter Hoff Seely, American representative of the Cinema Sales Corporation, whose offices are at 50 East 42nd Street.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY TO EXHIBITORS!

WITH the release of CONWAY TEARLE and ROSEMARY THEBY in "WHISPERING DEVILS" Exhibitors are offered one of the biggest box-office clean-ups in months, being the film adaptation of Henry Arthur Jones's powerful story "Michael and His Lost Angel." The tremendous scenes between the minister and the beautiful girl in which the man of God is torn with conflicting passions, makes this production border on the sensational, yet it is clean in every foot thru six big reels.

EVERY feature for exploitation that guarantees capacity is found in this throbbing picture. The drawing power of Conway Tearle supported by Rosemary Theby and picked cast including Esther Ralston, one of the most beautiful girls in pictures, plus the force and power of the story, tense scenes and highly dramatic situations makes this a winner from every angle. THEATRE OWNERS NOTICE

A big and successful Theatre Organization which is at present contracting for more film than it can use in its own houses wishes to affiliate with one independent exhibitor in each of certain cities and towns who is in a position to handle strictly high class productions. We will expect such theatres to pay exactly the same percentage of rentals as we figure for our own theatres. Our reason for seeking the affiliation of a number of other theatre owners of standing is to increase our buying power and the stability of our organization and business generally. We will extend to them an equal share in all the advantages of our own strongly entrenched position. Our proposition will bear the fullest investigation—legal, financial and otherwise.

Our company holds a number of most attractive contracts with producers, which assure a continuous supply of releases from some of the strongest box-office stars and directors. Our company's buying power and financial position is such as to command a continuous supply of high grade attractions for the future. We stand ready to share—for mutual benefit—these advantages with a number of exhibitors whose standing and financial position as individual exhibitors in their localities will stand investigation.

We invite a theatre connection in any city or town in which we are not at the present time operating a theatre of our own. We will not affiliate with theatres which compete with each other. It must be distinctly understood that only bona fide exhibitors will be considered and it must be further distinctly understood that the productions upon which we can offer open days are those which we have first booked for our own theatres.

We wish to discontinue the competitive booking of our attractions and believe our plan of disposing of open time to theatres of standing on the same terms we ourselves pay will prove more satisfactory in the long run.

This is a straight-out exhibitor's proposition made by us to other exhibitors for our mutual benefit.

It is an opportunity to join your theatre with the most powerful chain of houses in the world on an arrangement for a long term, but which you can terminate after giving it a fair trial if it is not all we represent it to be.

Our theatres will protect yours. Your theatres will protect ours.

Your theatres are safeguarded because they will play only attractions which we first play in our houses and at the same prices. If they pay us they will pay you.

We will never enter your town and zone in competition with you and no competitor will dare do so once you have affiliated with us.

Until such time as sufficient houses have joined, we will continue to rent our attractions to theatres which have not joined us and those who do join us will share in the profits of the exchanges we now operate. Exhibitors who join us will also share, in proportion to their holdings, in the management of the company through local boards of directors which in turn will elect the national Board of Directors which will manage our business.

This is undoubtedly the best proposition ever offered exhibitors who are in a position to avail themselves of it. It will do away with advance deposits. Any money put up by an exhibitor will be for stock in our company or advance payments for pictures and we will put up dollar for dollar with him. However, it is our intention to ourselves finance all purchases of productions. If an exhibitor is dissatisfied after the trial period, we will return to him the money he has paid for stock. It will secure their independence in the same measure that it does our own. It is just a practical basis—and the only practical one—upon which exhibitors can get together for mutual benefit. It is not an effort to "sew up" an exhibitor to a producing-distributing concern. It is purely an effort to bring exhibitors together for their common good on a fair and equitable basis. A great many exhibitors have already joined us. Many will regret not having done so when some more far sighted exhibitor in their town has beaten them to it. We know we must be fair and just to all in order to survive. We want those who join us to make as much money out of the arrangement as we do. It must pay both of us to last. This is a simple explanation of our Franchise Plan. Write any First National office for complete details. Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The Cost of Neglect

NOTHING that is compulsory should be regarded as shameful, therefore an angle worm has no just cause to blush. But an exhibitor who willingly accepts any kind of poster that is handed to him is in a different category. In that case he is paying for the best,—and if he doesn't get RITCHEY posters he doesn't get the best,—he gets stung! And it's his own fault.

The size of his audience depends as much upon his poster as it does upon his program. Neglecting the poster factor is therefore neglecting his own pocketbook. Centering his attention upon his photo-play to the exclusion of the poster that is to accompany it is to consider only one side of a question that very definitely has two sides. The poster represents the box-office side.

To book a good film requires good judgment. To get RITCHEY posters requires only an insistence upon having them. Every exhibitor is entitled to them, for the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. was primarily created and developed to render him a perfect poster service. When exhibitors assert their rights in the matter of posters the custom of sending them ordinary posters will automatically cease. Accepting any old thing is not compulsory, but it is shameful. It is also asinine,—and from a purely box office point of view it is little short of suicidal!

The Day and the Hour

MARCUS LOEW is quoted as declaring, when he saw some thousands of dollars contributed by exhibitors at Cleveland to the cause of national organization, "Now, at last, I know you have a real organization—I know you mean business."

After disheartening year in and year out efforts at organization it was only natural to await tangible evidences of purpose before admitting to faith any proposed organization. But neither Mr. Loew nor any other impartial observer of men and events at Cleveland needed the rustle of the checkbook to drive away their doubts. The situation is well summarized in the report wired to the home office by the managing editor of Motion Picture News last Thursday. Unfortunately too late for inclusion in last week's issue, it still stands as proof of the pulse and feeling of the gathering at Cleveland:

"Thursday morning, at Cleveland, is not too early to write the editorial thought born of the exhibitors convention. It could just as well have been written Monday morning. For at first sight of an exhibitors convention that actually drew seven hundred or more real theatre owners, at first touch with the serious mien of these exhibitors, the story was told.

"This is the appointed hour for the birth of a nation-wide, one hundred per cent exhibitor organization."

"This is said with a full knowledge of the many petty things that will arise and that will be created to block the path of the association. But never at any time have the exhibitors at Cleveland forgotten the main issue, and never will they forget it if our judgment is correct. Organization is the sole thought, the only motive.

"We are ready to pin our own faith to the calibre of men we have seen in Cleveland. National organization is here, national organization is assured, on the day that such men as these have travelled from California's shores and Maine's coasts to meet in the Lake City."

STANDING out above all other desires at Cleveland was the ever-present "now or never" feeling. It was this "last stand" conviction on the part of so many exhibitors that made them cling to Sydney Cohen, as the visible evidence of the fact that "organization that accomplishes" is possible.

Personalities played but a minor part here. Politics — of the sinister, intriguing sort — was absent. "Cohen, Berman and O'Reilly" had records of deeds, New York State had shown the way—what else mattered? Attacks that failed to erase a single item of the record of accomplishment only served to strengthen faith in the new leaders.

And so we were presented with the spectacle of a steam-roller working, but a steam-roller that was the creation of the convention, that was the desire of the individual and the majority, a benevolent steam-roller that operated only to sweep aside the petty, the haranguing, the possibly insincere.

TOO often in the past the close of a convention has been the signal for a chorus of praise created solely because any word in the nature of criticism might be calculated to crush the faint flicker of life held by the organization.

Too often in the past it has been the editorial policy to call for a rally round the standard, for active campaign and organization work, more in hope than in confidence that any such programme would result.

On this occasion we have no fear. We are sitting in the shadow of deeds performed in New York State. We have seen at first hand the creation of organization spirit where there was previously only political spirit; we have seen the fostering of this organization spirit until it reached the hundred per cent point. We have seen its results.

The type of men whom we have watched, and the calibre of men whom they have gathered around them as fellow officers and in the executive committee of the new organization—these men have our faith. Their fire at Cleveland was not the sort that sizzles out at home. Their fervor at Cleveland will not be replaced by indifference when back at the home box office.

Let New York's story be told again! In another State—and still another—in every State! New York's job was not done in a day, but New York's task was accomplished. Let's repeat the story, in every State, and then—the Nation!

More Promotions in Famous Players-Lasky Sales Organization

Al Lichtman announced this week the following promotions in the Famous Players-Lasky sales organization:

Harold G. Ballance, formerly Branch Manager at Los Angeles, is appointed District Manager of District No. 1, which includes the New England states, with headquarters at Boston, succeeding Harry Asher resigned. In the same territory, Herbert I. Kraus, formerly Sales Manager at the Detroit office, is appointed Branch Manager at Boston, succeeding J. A. McConville, resigned. Succeeding Mr. Ballance as Branch Manager at Los Angeles is O. V. Treggardi, who is promoted from the office of Sales Manager in that exchange.

Myron H. Lewis, formerly Special Representative with headquarters in Kansas City, is coming to the Home Office in New York as assistant to S. R. Kent, General Sales Manager, and R. C. LiBeau is promoted from the position of Branch Manager at Des Moines to the post vacated by Mr. Lewis.

Miss Sarah Lyons has been promoted to the position of Manager of the Exchange Service Department, succeeding Joseph di Lorenzo, who recently resigned to take charge of distribution for Baumer Films, Inc.

Ascher Theatre Opened in Chicago Suburb

Chicago, June 10. Ascher Brothers will formally open their Forest Park theatre in Forest Park, one of the most beautiful of Chicago's suburbs, tonight, with "Jes' Call Me Jim," starring Will Rogers, as the feature.

The house which has been erected at a cost of $350,000 and seats 1,500 persons, is one of the most beautiful motion picture theatres possessed by any small town in the United States and will draw patronage from not only Forest Park but Oak Park, Maywood, Riverside, Berwyn, Melrose Park and other nearby towns.

Harold Lloyd Comes East for Consultation

Harold Lloyd arrived in New York on June 11th from California to consult with Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchanges. Accompanying him were Hal E. Roach, of the Rolin Film Company, and Harley M. Walker, title-writer. The comedian will remain East for a week.

Glantzberg-Estes Wedding

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Pinckney Lee Estes and Ernst Glantzberg, which took place on June 10th in New York city. Mr. and Mrs. Glantzberg will make their home in New York.

Matthew Singer (left) and Joe Sinel bid good-bye to a First National official upon their departure from New York for the Truckee range in California. Their trip is undertaken to spread the doctrine of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Who is the official? None other than Bill Yearsley!

Hatrick Answers Recent Editorial in "Times"

E. B. Hatrick, general news manager of the International Film Service Co., takes vigorous exception to the editorial criticism of the New York Times, which condemns the showing on the screen of pictures of Eugene V. Debs being notified that he has been selected as Socialist candidate for President. The Times editorial, states Mr. Hatrick, is merely the expression of an individual opinion on the propriety of nominating Mr. Debs as a candidate for President, and there is no reason why the writer of it should drag it into the movies.

Manager Wenzel Leaves Superba Theatre

Arthur Wenzel, who for more than a year has served as manager of the Superba theatre, Los Angeles, Universal Film Company's house, tendered his resignation to accept the management of the Victory theatre, Los Angeles, which is the property of Mack Sennett.

Joe Brandt Resigns from National Film Corp.

JOE BRANDT, director general of the National Film Corporation and eastern representative of the Marion H. Kohn Productions, has resigned from National, according to personal telegraphic advices received by Joe Weil, director of publicity for these companies.

Mr. Brandt intimates that his resignation will take effect as soon as he can complete the marketing arrangements for "Kentucky Colonel." He left New York for the coast about a month ago to supervise the production of "The Son of Tarzan" serial which Harry Revier is now making for National. This is now well on its way toward completion.

Mr. Brandt has not as yet revealed his future plans but it is expected that he will go into the producing business himself. It is also said that he will head a big sales organization in New York, for independent producers.

Black Sets Forth Views On Recent Convention

Alfred S. Black, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, has issued a résumé of the independent exhibitor question since the St. Louis Convention two years ago, in a statement addressed to "the exhibitors of the United States, particularly those not present at the Cleveland Convention."

The M. P. E. of A., states Mr. Black, did not deem it advisable to take part officially in a movement such as the "Patterson movement," which, he said, had all the earmarks of a convention originated in the interests of a large distributor-exhibitor organization having franchises to dispose of. Mr. Black further states that, despite the fact that his league was assured fair play and equal recognition at the mass meeting of all three leagues on Tuesday afternoon of the Cleveland convention, these assurances were immediately broken. He claims that "steam roller tactics" were carried out throughout the entire convention, and further believes that there was plenty of dissatisfaction on the part of the delegates themselves to the "high-handed methods" adopted.

Mr. Black has called a convention of his association to meet July 28th and 29th at the Hotel Astor, New York. All exhibitors are urged to be present to form an "organization to be run for the best interests of all exhibitors and not for a favorite few."

Australian Exhibitors in Los Angeles Studios

Twenty-six exhibitors of Sydney, Melbourne and other Australian cities, including H. L. Townsend, owner of thirty-one Australian theatres, and James Colby, head of the Colby Theatre Syndicate, arrived in the United States a few days ago and will tour this country to learn American methods of motion picture presentation. After spending several days in San Francisco the Australian exhibitors went to Los Angeles, where they visited studios and theatres.

The exhibitors departed from Los Angeles on Saturday, June 5th, with the intention of visiting Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Boston and other Eastern cities.

British Exhibitors Act to End Bad Print Evil

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland announces that it has taken steps, through its General Council, to remedy the bad print evil in those countries. That the practice of supplying poor prints may cease, the Council urges that all should be printed from the same negative as exhibited at the Trade Shows.

A copy of the above resolution is to be sent to all the principal manufacturers of America.

Producers Form Big Mercantile Company in Los Angeles

Producers Association Is Now Organized to Lower the Production Costs

A GIGANTIC mercantile venture that will save the motion picture industry millions of dollars annually has been launched by members of the Motion Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles and consists of the organization of a corporation to be known as Cinema Mercantile Company, capitalized at $500,000.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the California secretary of State and these articles set forth, the purposes to be: "To purchase, own, improve, sell, lease and deal in real property of every description; to buy, sell, own, hold and deal in personal property of all kinds; to buy, sell and deal in merchandise of all kinds; and to do and perform all other acts and things necessary or incidental to purposes herein above set forth."

The incorporators are: Abraham Lehr, vice-president Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; Joseph W. Engel, treasurer and general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation; C. H. Christie, vice-president of the Christie Film Company; Robert Brunton, president of Robert Brunton Studios, Inc.; William S. Smith, vice-president of Vitagraph Company; Sol M. Wurtzel, general manager of Fox Film Corporation; Frank A. Garbutt, vice-president and general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Studios; R. R. Nehls, vice-president American Film Company, Santa Barbara; H. R. Hough, general manager Robertson-Cole Studios, Inc.; Mack Sennett, president Mack Sennett Film Corporation; Carl L. Laemmle, president Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Thomas H. Ince, president Thomas H. Ince Studios, Inc.; Hal E. Roach, president Rolin Film Company; Louis B. Mayer, president Louis B. Mayer Productions; W. J. Reynolds, secretary Motion Picture Producers' Association.

Since the filing of the incorporation papers officers have been elected as follows: Frank A. Garbutt, president; Joseph W. Engel, Abraham Lehr and Sol Wurtzel, vice-president, and W. J. Reynolds, secretary and treasurer. The above-mentioned officers together with Thomas H. Ince and Charles H. Christie will serve as an executive committee on board of directors.

The formation of this big mercantile organization which will be operating within a few months has been under consideration for more than three years and promises to be the most helpful and cost reducing enterprise inaugurated to date by any organization of the film industry. Joseph W. Engel, of Metro, is referred to as father of this movement and it has been a pet idea of his for the past three

Zukor Defines Stand of Famous Players-Lasky

ADOLPH ZUKOR, president of Famous Players-Lasky, in a statement recently issued, defines his company's stand on the exhibitor-producer question. The statement in full is as follows:

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation had no idea of entering the exhibiting field until two years ago, when a group of exhibitors decided to go into the producing and distributing field and made offers to every star and every director employed by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"The main argument these exhibitors had to offer our people was that these exhibitors, through their ownership of theatres, could offer these stars and directors better distribution of their product than could be had through a company that was in no way engaged in the exhibiting end of the business.

"In self-defense we were forced to take steps to provide an outlet for our pictures in every section where the proper presentation of our produce was threatened by activities of exhibitors who were producing and distributing their own pictures.

"We were faced with a situation in which we were not able to obtain proper representation in many important communities without becoming interested in theatres—a situation forced upon Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by exhibitors who are distributing their own product. We had no desire to enter the exhibiting business. We have no desire to extend our theatre interests.

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will be very glad at all times to confer with a committee representing all exhibitors—including exhibitors who are producing and distributing pictures—for the purpose of bringing about harmony and understanding in all branches of our industry for the mutual benefit of all."

or four years. Shortly after the organization of producers association Mr. Engel made the suggestion of forming a co-operative association for the buying of all supplies for all studios by one company and conducting a mercantile business that could handle the rental needs of producing companies with the result that about a year ago Engel was named chairman of a committee organized to investigate and prepare ways and means of creating such a mercantile corporation. As the result of this committee's work the matter has been brought to a successful climax in the filing of the corporation papers and the subscribing of stock.

It is impossible to estimate definitely what saving will be made possible for the industry by this company. Annually the motion picture companies spend a trifle more than $20,000,000 in Los Angeles for supplies, building material and a like amount for salaries. Of the $20,000,000 a trifle less than $1,000,000 is spent for rental of furniture, props and costumes. The other $19,000,000 has been used in the past to purchase materials and merchandise at retail prices in most instances. By the new organization all needed materials and merchandise will be purchased direct from the manufacturer in great quantities, thus eliminating the profits to jobbers, wholesalers and retailers, in addition to the extra cost of freight when shipped in small quantities.

In addition to buying solely for the needs of the film industry, the Cinema Mercantile Company will conduct a retail business in the city of Los Angeles, with branches in Hollywood and Culver City, where the general public may buy from the big stocks to be handled. In short, the new company is to be a great big department store handling everything conceivable and conducted along lines that will be in keeping with such a retail establishment. All members of the Motion Picture Producers' Association will be stock holders and no stock will be sold to others.

The formation of this company is the direct outcome of motion picture companies being forced to pay rentals on furnishings needed for settings at what has been considered by some an exorbitant rate and buying at retail prices that aggregate in round numbers 100 per cent. increase cost over the original price the merchandise was sold by the manufacturer for. In one instance producers have, by referring to rental bills, found that four different organizations have spent $1,400 for the use of a lounge which during pre-war times was marked to sell at retail for $250. With the increase in the price of furniture during the war this lounge has been advanced in price on several occasions and is now said to be marked $750. The rental price for this per week previous to the war was $25 or 10 per cent. The price has been advanced now to $75 or 10 per cent. of the present retail price.

In fixing rentals the charge by Los Angeles firms has been 10 per cent. of the marked retail price. Producers estimate that if a piece of furniture costs $100 in Grand Rapids from the manufacturer, the mark up on freight would be approximately 25 per cent., which is the less than carload lot, but is about four times the actual cost of the freight, as the dealers receive such merchandise in carload lots. The universal mark up on furniture is said to be 100 per cent. over the cost freight price, therefore, the piece of furniture costing $100 would be marked $250. Thus in four weeks at 10 per cent. the producer pays the original cost of the furniture.

Another Downtown Theatre in Chicago

THAT the Chicago "loop" will have another monster moving picture theatre, is indicated by the important announcement by Jones, Linick and Schaefer that they intend to rebuild the McVicker's Theatre at a cost of upward of three million dollars, erecting a sixteen story office building on the site in addition to a four thousand seat house. Jones, Linick & Schaefer also announce that they have leased the Garrick Theatre, another of the loop's leading playhouses.

General Representative Ralph T. Kettering, speaking of policies for the two houses said, "It is impossible to look forward to what three years hence may bring, but in all probability vaudeville will be booked at the Garrick and McVicker's will be made one of the greatest picture houses in America."

"We have taken a twenty-five year lease upon the Garrick Theatre at an annual rental of $75,000. Our Lease begins September 1st, 1923, but we are hopeful that we may be able to secure possession before that time. Just because Jones, Linick & Schaefer have been conservative during the war is no reason why such a policy should continue longer. Jones, Linick & Schaefer bear the honor of having built more playhouses in Chicago than any other firm and at present control more theatres in the "loop" than any other firm. We have just begun to grow."

Famous Players to Have Indianapolis Exchange

Famous Players-Lasky will have an exchange in Indianapolis before long, according to Fred E. Creswell, special representative of the company, who has been in the Hoosier capital the past two weeks. Creswell announced the leasing of a building at 38-40 South Capitol avenue and plans for its immediate remodelling to house the exchange. C. C. Wallace, of Indianapolis, will have charge of the new plant.

Mr. Creswell also announced that the company will begin wrecking a part of the English hotel to make room for its new $1,225,000 movie palace next January 1. The new theatre will be completed ten months thereafter.

Trading Company Creates Film Department

The demand for American films in Japan, Corea and Manchuria has caused the Union Trading Company, with offices in Los Angeles and a number of cities in the far east, to incorporate a motion picture exporting department at their Los Angeles branch. This is a $500,000 corporation with a paid up capital of one-fourth that amount which heretofore has been giving its attention to the importing of silk and buttons and exporting of cotton, iron, oil, machinery and chemicals. The film department has been placed in charge of K. Mukaeda and the company has organized film exchanges in the principal cities in which they export to.

St. John Succeeds Poole at California Theatre

Bert St. John has been appointed manager of presentation of the California theatre of Los Angeles, succeeding Robert Poole, who left this position to accept the business management of film matters for Harold Bell Wright. Mr. St. John served in a similar capacity at Clunes Auditorium for two years.

Elaborate Production of Play by Screen Stars

Had Augustus Thomas been present at the presentation of "Arizona" at Clunes Auditorium, Los Angeles, on the evenings of June 3, 4, 5, the event would have no doubt been the most important of his theatrical career, for on these evenings his play, that has stood the test of twenty-seven theatrical seasons, was presented by what really was an all-star cast, staged under the direction of that master player, Theodore Roberts.

Perhaps no production in the annals of the drama was ever staged in such a pretentious manner by players of such note. All the important professionals of west coast screendom who were not upon the stage were to be seen in the big auditorium. The superlative degree is needed to criticize the work of any member of the cast or staff and Los Angeles audiences were given the greatest treat in this presentation. The cast and staff were as follows:

Henry Canby	 Mr. Theodore Roberts
Colonel Bonham	 Mr. Howard Hickman
Tom Wong	 Mr. Sessue Hayakawa
Mrs. Canby	 Miss Sylvia Ashton
Estrella Bonham	 Miss Clara Kimball Young
Jenna Keller	 Miss Ruth Renick
Lieutenant Denton	 Mr. Dustin Farnum
Bonnie Canby	 Miss Jessie Barriscale
Miss MacCullach	 Miss Brenda Fowler
Dr. Fenlon, surgeon	 Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle
Captain Holman	 Mr. Clyde Fillmore
Tom Weston	 Mr. William Desmond
Lieutenant Halleck	 Mr. Jack Holt
Sergeant Keller	 Mr. Charles Murray
Lieutenant Young	 Mr. Monte Blue
Private Quigley	 Mr. Eddie Sutherland
Sergeant Major	 Mr. Ted Duncan
Major Cochran	 Mr. Edward McWade

Soldiers, cowboys, ranch hands, etc., by representative members of the Moving Picture Profession.

Stage	 Theodore Roberts
Stage Director	 Theodore Roberts
Stage Manager	 Tom Forman
Assistant Stage Manager	 Eddie Sutherland
Master Carpenter	 Casey Cuthbert
Master of Properties	 Dallas McLish
Electrician	 George Hall
Musical Director	 Max Fisher

It was a benefit for the Hollywood Motion Picture Post of the American Legion and proceeds are to go towards building a club house. The net receipts were $18,000 for three performances in Los Angeles and one in San Diego.

Black Answers Article in Exhibitors Herald

Alfred S. Black, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, in a letter addressed to the exhibitors of the country answers the article which appeared in the Exhibitors Herald as to where he personally stood in connection with the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, by quoting his reply to the Herald. The letter reads:

"Gentlemen:

"In reply to your article as to where I stand at the present time, it would first be perfectly proper to question your honesty of purpose. Why have you seen fit at this eleventh hour to apparently play politics for certain interests? What are your inside motives and who is back of you in the attack launched?"

"The Producer-Distributor-Exhibitor movement in the New England States has been and is led today by Mr. Nathan B. Gordon who controls the New England 1st National franchise and is one of the important officials in their national movement. Mr. Gordon with his affiliations, controls the largest chain of theatres in New England. The Black chain is a close second. There is hardly a more pronounced example of Producer-Distributor-Exhibitor control than that of the Nathan B. Gordon activities in New England."

"My organization has been and is now friendly to the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. Under the conditions just noted, it would be poor business judgment to be otherwise, as long as possible."

"As to what booking arrangements I may have with the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. or any other Film Company, that is my private business and no one has the right to inquire into same."

"My organization has not sold out to the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. or does their corporation control its activities."

"As the head of the Black Theatres, I am today, and expect to be for some time, one of the largest buyers of independent movies in the United States. There are but very few men more interested than I am in future film rental and no one more interested in exhibitor organization upon sound business lines. There is wonderful field for work helpful to everyone in the exhibiting end of the business, but personal ambitions, the control of the organization for personal gain or for selfish reasons must be cut out, if we are to expect an amalgamated exhibitors organization to succeed as it should."

"Very truly yours,

"Alfred S. Black."

Kettering-Harris Suit Was Not Contested

According to Ralph Thomas Kettering, a false impression was created by the publication in the New York papers of an account of a suit instituted against him by William Harris, producer of John Drinkwater's play, "Abraham Lincoln." Mr. Harris sought to restrain Mr. Kettering from using the name "Abraham Lincoln" in connection with his play.

The impression created, said Mr. Kettering, was that he had contested the case, and lost, which he states is not a fact. The suit was not defended, is the claim, but the belief has spread that Mr. Kettering lost the case. Mr. Kettering believes that the name of Abraham Lincoln is common property, but he did not wish to engage in a controversy with a fellow playwright, as his play is different in every respect from Mr. Drinkwater's.

Pantages Theatre Opening Postponed Ten Days

Delay in finishing interior of the new Pantages theatre at Seventh and Hill streets, Los Angeles, has forced Alexander Pantages to postpone the opening of this 2,300-seat house from June 4th to about July 15th. The opening bill will consist of vaudeville and a full program of films featuring the Vitaphone production, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone."

Return with Far East Films for Universal

After a year spent in the Far East filming adventure pictures, Edward Laemmle and W. F. Adler are back in the United States with 40,000 feet of what are said to be some of the most interesting pictures ever taken. Edward Laemmle arrived in Chicago Saturday on his way to New York and was met by Carl Laemmle, Louis Laemmle and Harry Berman at the station.

Included in the pictures are remarkable views of the head hunters of Borneo, the first ever taken, and of natives of Sarawack, the land of the White Raja, which were taken after a trip of 360 miles up the Bayrum River; a tiger hunt in Siam, during which the tiger leaped on the camera and Mr. Adler narrowly escaped death; cannibals of New Guinea and other scenes of the Far East.

The adventures of the Universal Film Company's expedition would, it is said, make material for the most thrilling serial ever produced and includes the wreck of the schooner which was loaned to them by the Dutch government and smashed on a reef off the Coast of New Guinea in a district inhabited by cannibals, compelling them to camp in this hostile country for two months until another ship could be sent for the party.

A long march into the tropical haunts of the head hunters of Borneo, under the protection of native Malay soldiers and adventures during one of the chronic revolts of Southern China, where the commander of the 1st Division of the Kwantung Expeditionary forces decorated Mr. Laemmle with a gold star of China for bravery, also were features of the trip.

Messrs. Laemmle and Alder were able during their tour to secure some valuable and unusual pictures showing the native rights, ceremonies and habits of the cannibals and head hunters and savages in some of the wildest regions left on earth and penetrated districts where white men had never been seen before.

The party used Bell and Howell camera and films specially prepared by Eastman to withstand the tropical heat and dampness, and most satisfactory results were achieved in the way of photography.

The pictures, it is understood, will be released individually and will include two and five reel features.

British Representative Seeks U. S. Pictures

Harry Ward, of London, has arrived in America and is stopping at the Hotel Astor, New York City. He announces that he is here to buy American product for distribution in the United Kingdom by the Cinema Sales Corporation, an organization soon to be formed. The new company will not in any way interfere with his connection with the Hayward Productions, he announces.

Henry F. Sewall

HENRY F. SEWALL, vice-president of Motion Picture News, Inc., died at two o'clock, Thursday morning, at his summer home at Briarcliff, N. Y.

Mr. Sewall was president of Sewall and Alden, a prominent New York insurance company; general manager of the Casualty Department of the Preferred Accident Insurance Co., and vice-president of the Surbrug Chocolate Corporation. He was born in New York City in 1877, and was graduated from Cornell University in 1897. He was a man of extraordinary personality and brilliant ability and had a wide circle of loyal friends and business acquaintances.

Vitagraph Represented at Big Convention

The Vitagraph Company made its presence at the Convention felt through the persons of two of its most affable and well-known representatives—Bill Wright, of the New York office, and J. R. Johnson, the Vitagraph Cleveland manager. Manager Johnson, and his salesmen from the Cleveland office, assisted Bill Wright in meeting and greeting the exhibitors.

After the handshaking ritual, Mr. Wright led each and every exhibitor to the suites of rooms he had in both hotels and there loaded them up with literature on coming Vitagraph specials.

Lee Herz Gets Exclusive Pictures of Auto Race

Lee Herz, president of the Silec Film Exchange, recently accomplished what is regarded as a genuine "scoop." He purchased the rights to the exclusive picture of the automobile race in Indianapolis Decoration Day and the same was shown at the Pastime theatre, Chicago, on the Wednesday night following.

A. S. Black Congratulates Republican Nominee

Alfred S. Black, president of the Motion Pictures Exhibitors of America, Inc., has written to Governor Coolidge, of Massachusetts, congratulating him on his nomination for vice-president on the Republican ticket. Mr. Black stated that no man in public life today had shown more respect for right and justice.

A.M.P.A. Will Golf and Dine with Reichenback

An invitation from Harry Reichenback to the members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers to play a golf tournament as his guests the coming week at the Bayside Golf Club met with few takers when it was explained that non-golfing members would be expected to caddy for the rest, but upon Reichenback's adding that a complimentary luncheon "plus" would be served the members accepted in a body.

What Griffith Started Cupid Finished

"Barthelmess" Hay. On June 18, 1920, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, New York, Richard Sailer Barthelmess of New York and Mary Hay, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Frank Merrill Caldwell, of New York."

The above announcement probably will be read by subscribers to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS several hours before this publication reaches its readers. In fact, unless a national calamity interferes, by this time "Dick" Barthelmess, idol of thousands of matinee girls, is a benedict, and little Mary Hay, feature dancer of the Ziegfeld "Nine O'Clock Revue," has lost her identity as Mary Hay and taken her rightful place as Mrs. Richard Barthelmess.

All of which, being interpreted, means that Richard Barthelmess, late leading man to Miss Dorothy Gish in "The Hope Chest," "Peppy Polly," "I'll Get Him Yet" and "Boots," and more recently the bright particular star in D. W. Griffith's production of "Broken Blossoms," has taken unto himself a bride.

Mary Hay Caldwell, known to the screen and the speaking stage as Mary Hay, is now Mrs. Barthelmess. If you do not know Mary Hay it might be illuminating to recall the talented little dancer who appeared in the German dugout scene in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World." That was back in 1918.

When Mr. Griffith was seeking about to find a particularly beautiful and talented girl to appear as Kate Brewster in his forthcoming production of "Way Down East," he found Miss Hay quite ready to resume her motion picture work. It was during the rehearsals of "Way Down East" that the romance between Miss Hay and Mr. Barthelmess found its ripe fruition in the engagement and wedding. Mr. Barthelmess, who is to be the David Bartlett of the screen version, will have many scenes with his bride.

Exhibitor Visits Coast

H. Bridwar, manager of the West End, Brooklyn, is on his way to Los Angeles on a well-earned vacation. He has an invitation to visit the Fairbanks Studio while on the coast and also expects to look over other production plants. J. Jackson is acting as manager of the West End during his absence.

Dresner Visits New York

A. Dresner, of the Exhibitors Film Exchange, Washington, D. C., was a visitor to New York during the week, viewing pictures and buying for his territory. Mr. Dresner reports film conditions prosperous in his territory, and has even better words to say for the equipment line he handles, which is headed by the Powers machine.

Cleveland Convention News and the Aftermath

Headquarters Engaged; Books to Be Audited; Cohen Refuses A Salary

IT was announced today at the Temporary Headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in the Times Building, that accountants have been engaged to audit all the books of the Convention and make a report. This report will be printed in its entirety in all the trade papers. The report will contain the name of every exhibitor who at Cleveland made a contribution to the creation of a preliminary fund for the organization. All incoming contributions, which should be made through the respective state leagues, will also be printed in the trade papers.

It was also announced that the officials of the new national organization have sent letters to the various officers of the state organizations inviting them to make up their share toward the fund of $100,000, which was pledged at the national convention. Under this arrangement the secretary and treasurer of the respective state organizations will have authority to make collections from their states towards the $100,000 organization fund. Checks should be made payable to "E. T. Peters, Treasurer, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

After the adjournment of the National Convention at Cleveland, the Executive Committee held a special session at the Hotel Winton in which they passed a resolution fixing the salary of the National President, Sydney S. Cohen, at the sum of $25,000 per annum. The resolution set forth that the discharge of the duties of the office of President entailed not only loss of time and money but required a high order of ability which should not be left without some fairly adequate compensation.

The newly elected president was informed of the intention of the committee. He said he appreciated very deeply the spirit which had prompted his fellow exhibitors to endow the office with such a substantial salary. "All during this convention," Mr. Cohen continued, "I have received so much encouragement and so many words of appreciation for what little I have been able to accomplish that I feel a great obligation has been laid upon me and it will require my utmost efforts to live up to the kind expectations of my friends. I cannot see my way clear to accept the salary which the organization so generously has tendered to me. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has just been born. It will need a great deal of care and above all things it will need funds. Under these circumstances I think it is my plain duty to decline the salary and to ask the committee to devote the money to organization purposes."

Dempsey Verdict of Interest to Film Men

THE speedy acquittal of Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion pugilist, of the charge of draft evasion, is of interest to film men and exhibitors because of the effect it will undoubtedly have on the bookings of Pathe's serial featuring the champ. No one move could be calculated to establish Dempsey's popularity in the place it held after his victory over Willard than the speed with which the Federal Grand Jury in San Francisco rendered its verdict.

On Thursday afternoon of the Convention, when the finance committee reported that at least $100,000 would be required to form a real organization, a collection was taken up on the floor and $14,300 in cash was paid in. "Now I know you have a real organization." That's what Marcus Loew said when the total amount of subscriptions was read off by Secretary Sam Berman of New York. "A little while ago," Mr. Loew went on to say, "I was afraid this convention was going to end, like other motion picture exhibitor conventions, in conversation." These words accompanied a voluntary contribution, on the part of Mr. Loew, for $2,000. "I want it further to be understood," Mr. Loew went on to say, "that I expect to contribute to the general fund, that every one of my theatres will contribute through whatever local zone association it belongs to."

Three cheers from the Convention body followed Mr. Loew's remarks. As an evidence of good faith with the exhibitors, and carrying out his previous statement that he was an exhibitor first, and a producer only by necessity, Mr. Loew told the body at large that, on the previous evening, in a conversation with Adolph Zukor, he had offered to swap his interests in the Metro producing company to Mr. Zukor for Mr. Zukor's theatres. Evidently Mr. Zukor didn't take Mr. Loew up on the deal, for nothing more was said on the subject.

Speaking of this subject of mixing producing and exhibiting, Frank Rembusch of Shelbyville, Indiana, had something interesting to say. Rembusch and Mr. Zukor had a little private seance together on Wednesday evening, during which Mr. Zukor, according to Mr. Rembusch, said that he would stay out of the exhibiting business if the exhibitors would stay out of the producing business. "If First National will stop taking away our stars, and if the exhibitors will stop making advertising films, then I shall stop buying theatres." This, according to Rembusch, is the platform on which Mr. Zukor stands, and will continue to stand.

The Thursday morning session, called for ten o'clock, opened at 11:20, but made up for its late beginning by staying in session continuously until 4:30 P. M., until all the business of the meeting was accomplished. This was the outstanding feature of the Cleveland Convention. It had a set program laid out, and it followed that program right through from beginning to end.

The Credentials Committee, Charles O'Reilly of New York, chairman, reported that out of the 800 exhibitors who registered, only seven were questioned as to their eligibility as members of the convention. These were Charles Olson, Indiana; Alfred Black, Boston; Lee Ochs, New York; Fabian, New York; Sablosky and McGirk of Philadelphia, and Marcus Loew. These men were questioned as to any possible connection with any producing organization, and every one of them was favorably passed on by the Credentials committee.

Alfred S. Black not only took exception to the challenge upon his name, as being persona non grata in the convention hall, but circulated a pamphlet among the visiting exhibitors, charging Sydney Cohen, Sam Berman, Henry Lustig and Fred Herrington with having ulterior reasons for calling the present convention.

But the exhibitors expressed themselves unanimously for Cohen and for the other men mentioned in the pamphlet. When A. M. Jackson of California, chairman of the nominations committee, read off his list of candidates for office, with Sydney Cohen as president, the whole slate was unanimously and uproariously adopted by the body at large.

Mr. Rembusch, of Boston, made a big personal conquest when he bowed to the will of the majority. W. C. Patterson of Atlanta, Ga., made a motion, which was unanimously carried, that "In behalf of the splendid co-operation evidenced by Frank J. Rembusch, in view of his splendid co-operative method, the convention go on record as endorsing the spirit of Mr. Rembusch in the manner of his helping the organization."

The Executive Committee was appointed and a message was sent to Governor Smith, of New York, expressing gratitude to him for signing the deposit bill and the Cotillo bill. A message to Governor Coolidge also expressed the exhibitors' appreciation of his vetoing the Massachusetts censorship bill.

Resolutions Adopted at Cleveland by Exhibitors' Convention

THE resolutions adopted at the National Convention of Exhibitors of the United States, just assembled at Cleveland, are summarized below under their proper headings.

Famous Players-Lasky

"Your Committee on Business Relations begs leave to report that the following resolution was passed unanimously:

WHEREAS, this Committee, after carefully deliberating upon the data placed before it, and after interviewing, individually and collectively, many independent exhibitors who are accredited delegates from all points of the United States, to your Convention, find that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is the most flagrant offender against the independent exhibitor movement, in as much as this corporation, over the protests of independent exhibitors, has continued to extend its theatre activities in unfair competition with the independent exhibitor, BE IT THEREFORE

RESOLVED, that it is the sense of your Committee that this Organization urge every independent exhibitor to protect himself, by all lawful means, from the aforesaid mentioned corporation until such time as they furnish competent evidence that they have changed their plan of producer-distributor-exhibitor control of the motion picture industry and will deal fairly and equitably with each independent exhibitor throughout the United States."

Americanization

"The motion picture theatre owners of America, in convention assembled, take this occasion of avowing their intention to cooperate with the movement for Americanizing the foreign-born who have sought the opportunity of this Republic. We believe that the screen is especially suited for the intelligent promotion of this important work."

The convention, moreover, offered the benefit of its experiences in the preparation of suitable scenarios and pictures for the purpose of Americanization and concluded its resolution as follows:

RESOLVED, That this Convention appoint a committee consisting of exhibitors whose advice and experience shall be available in the preparation of scenarios and the placing of the pictures."

Percentage

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in national convention assembled at the City of Cleveland, hereby declare their firm opposition to every form of percentage booking. We look upon percentage booking as a deliberate step of the producing interests to gain possession of our theatres and to put the independent exhibitor out of business."

"We appeal and ask aid for this policy, not only to our fellow exhibitors, but to the great hosts of the public who are regular patrons of motion picture theatres. If the same interests control production and exhibition there can be but one result—higher prices of admission and poorer pictures."

Deposits

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in National Convention assembled in the City of Cleveland, denounce the use by the producers of the moneys exacted from the Exhibitors on the pretense that such deposits are necessary to insure the payment of film bills. It is well known that more than one producing company has been financed with capital obtained from Wall Street on the credit of these deposits which did not belong to the Producers, but remained the property of the Exhibitor and could not lawfully be used for any purpose except to secure the payment of film bills."

The convention also recommended that the various state legislatures adopt laws similar to that now in force in New York State. This law requires all such deposits to be segregated by the Producer or Distributor in a bank to the credit of the Exhibitor with the interest accrued thereon.

The convention also adopted a resolution denouncing any deposit system of collecting funds "more than seven days in advance of the play-date of the picture, irrespective of the time of the execution of the contract or playing date given."

"It is recommended that this Convention go on record as opposed to the same, and that steps be taken through the proper channels to the end that such practice be discontinued and abolished."

Censorship

Censorship was also condemned. The public was declared to be the only censor of pictures, and it was decided to take all proper and lawful steps to prevent the enactment of any vicious laws. The resolution, in part, is as follows:

"We reiterate our opposition to local, state or federal censorship, as censorship is vicious in principle and wholly alien to the spirit and genius of our institutions. The great factor in the control and management of all forms of public amusement is public opinion. Public opinion keeps a careful watch over every form of amusement, and no form of amusement can exist without public approval."

Contracts

RESOLVED, That we are irrevocably in favor of Standard Film Service Contracts and that they be signed and become at once binding upon all parties concerned in each respective distributing zone without further reference to the so-called home offices or elsewhere."

The convention also passed a resolution branding the contracts "now entered into by and between the Exhibitor and the Producer" as "inequitable." The convention recommended that the Business Relations Committee draft a form of contract in which the rights of the exhibitor will be equally protected with those of the Producer and Distributor. This form of contract to be submitted to the Producer and Distributor. A uniform contract to be used by all Producers and Distributors was also recommended. The Law and Legislative Committee was called upon to draft such a uniform contract, submit the same to Producers and Distributors and report their attitude concerning this uniform contract.

Posters

RESOLVED, That it is the sense of this Committee that we are unalterably against all contracts with Distributors for pictures that compel us to use any certain or given amount of advertising matter."

"We insist that the amount used be left entirely to the discretion of the Exhibitor who uses the picture, and the amount that he uses be left under his control, and purchased outright at a fair price, and under no consideration to be leased from the Distributor or Producer."

Non-Theatrical Screens

RESOLVED, That this Convention go on record as opposing the practice common among exchanges throughout the country of supplying regular feature films and comedies to non-theatrical institutions and that the producers of the country be asked to restrict the distribution to such institutions of films of a purely religious or educational nature."

Schools and Churches

RESOLVED, That it is the sense of this Committee that we condemn as unfair competition, the leasing or giving free of charge, or by playing percentage, any School, Church, Community House, or Charitable Organization, of pictures in conflict with the use of such pictures by a motion picture theatre."

It was agreed that Producers should first consult with theatre owners before they allow their picture to be shown in any of the above mentioned places, and so inform any other organization. This does not apply to strictly educational or religious subjects.

Investigations Ordered

RESOLVED, That the incoming officers and executive committees be and are hereby instructed to investigate the so-called co-operative theatre franchises as presented by First National Associated Theatres, National Theatres, Inter-State Feature Exchange and any other similar organization solvent or insolvent, and report in bulletin or letter form to members of this organization."

Film-Rental Tax

A protest was also registered against the present federal tax on film rental. The main objection to this tax was not, it was said, a selfish one, but the Convention believed that to tax the motion picture screen in worse statesmanship than taxing newspapers or books. It was agreed to take all lawful steps to enact legislation to repeal this provision of the law.

F.I.M. Clubs

RESOLVED, That this convention protests against the activity of so-called F. I. M. Clubs or similar organizations throughout the country. These Clubs or organizations pretend to act in place of the lawfully constituted courts of the country in all disputes between Producers or exchanges on the one hand, the Exhibitors on the other hand."

It was also decided to send a copy of this resolution to the Attorney General of the United States, because the presumed jurisdiction of these clubs claim to extend from state to state.

Music Tax

RESOLVED, That this organization urge Congress to modify the copyright laws of the United States so as to do away with the unjust tax imposed for the use of music in theatres."

Music Fees

RESOLVED, That it be the sense of this Committee that maximum as the success of the members of the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, and the success of their Productions, is based almost exclusively upon the popularizing of such production by the playing of them in the motion picture theatres, that we condemn as unjust, inequitable and an ingratitude on their part that they should insist upon the additional collection from our theatres after they have been paid a sufficient sum for each piece of music to yield them a just and fair profit."

In the future the use of the screen for slides to the act mentioned parties shall be denied until they discontinue their present demands."

Public Opium Screen

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in National Convention assembled, now make a public declaration of the fact that the screens of this country belong to them and to the public which they serve. This convention condemns the practice of certain producers and producers' organizations to plague the screens of this country to any purpose whatever."

Independent Producer

RESOLVED, That this Convention looks upon the motion picture art as one of limitless possibilities and will always reject the idea that this motion picture art can fall into the hands of few in the exclusion of many. This Convention pledges its hearty and practical support to the independent producer and distributor and declares its intention of assisting both the independent producer and distributor in marketing their products. We believe that there can be no end to competition in producing pictures of quality."

Foreign Made Films

"We deprecate the intent on the part of certain producers to curtail the output of quality pictures. Art being international, we favor all motion pictures of merit and quality, regardless of where they are made. We therefore favor the importation of high-class motion pictures, if by such means competition could be kept alive amongst producers."

Condemn A. S. Black

RESOLVED, That this Convention express its severe condemnation of the cowardly and groundless attack made by Alfred S. Black upon Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly, Berman, Lustig and Herrington, and be it further

RESOLVED, That we regard this devious way of attacking these men as an effort to undo or discredit the honest and constructive work done by these men. It is further

RESOLVED, That this convention declare its unbounded confidence in the integrity and honesty of Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly, Berman, Lustig and Herrington."

Aaron J. Jones of Jones, Lunck & Schaefer has returned from Philadelphia, where with his team mate, Judge Joseph Sabath of Idlewild Country Club, he won the annual eastern-western golf championship, held at Philmont Country Club. Messrs. Jones and Sabath brought with them the trophy they won, a beautiful hand hammered sterling cup, which will be put on view at the Idlewild Country Club.

Frank Williams has joined the staff of Robertson-Cole as booker. He enjoys a wide acquaintance among Chicago exhibitors and will prove a good acquisition for Robertson-Cole Exchange.

Sol J. Abrams, formerly with the Shakespeare theatre, has been appointed manager of the New President theatre, one of the most popular southside houses, according to an announcement just made by Julius Lamb, Managing Director of the Brunhild & Young Enterprises.

The Julian Theatre on Belmont Avenue, is to be completely remodeled, according to an announcement by Manager Robins, who says that he expects to install a six piece orchestra and run high-class programs of pictures.

Building Commissioner Bostrom has approved plans for the city's largest theatre and issued a permit for the construction. The theatre is to be known as the Capitol and will occupy an L shaped lot, corner North State street and East Lake in the loop, and will contain 5,000 seats. Balaban & Katz, its owners estimate the cost at $1,250,000 and hope to have the new moving picture house ready by February.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Jones, who have been living at the Sisson Hotel during the winter, have opened their summer home at Flossmoor, which is one of the show places of the south shore district. Their youngest son, Aaron J. Jones, Jr., has just completed his first year at Culver Military Academy and won highest honors.

George De Kruijff has resigned as Publicity Director for Robertson-Cole at Chicago to go with Henry E. Rice, who is getting out a series of automobile road guides. Mr. De Kruijff's departure from the film industry will be regretted as he has made many friends while with Universal and Robertson-Cole and has made an exceptionally good record as a publicity and exploitation man.

The work of picking the winner of the Herald-Examiner Elks' Beauty Contest will be completed this week and announced next Sunday.

The full committee of judges consisting of Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, Chief of Police John J. Garrity, Judge Jacob H. Hopkins, Ashton Stevens and Harry J. Ridings held a special meeting at which the fifteen girls remaining in the finals of the contest were present and it is understood, reached a decision. The winner will ride on the principal float of the Elks' Parade July 7th and will typify the "Spirit of America." She also will be given a contract as a Universal star at a salary of $10,000 a year and will be taken to Universal City where she will be trained under the personal direction of one of Mr. Laemmle's best directors. This week the fifteen beauties who reached the finale of the contest appeared in a fashion show in connection with Andreas Dippel's production of "Gypsy Love" at the Auditorium and several Universal short reel specials also were featured.

R. L. Bradford, manager of Famous Players-Lasky's Chicago branch has tendered his resignation effective June 15th. While Mr. Bradford has been manager for only a few months, he has become one of the most popular exchange men in the Chicago district, and made fast friends of hundreds of exhibitors. Mr. Bradford has not as yet announced what his plans are for the future, but it is rumored that he is about to make an important connection.

I. M. Schwartz has been appointed Chicago manager for the Educational Film Corporation, and will open offices in the Consumers' Building, at an early date. Historical handling of films is to be done through the Chicago office of Educational National. Mr. Schwartz was former sales manager of the First National office here.

William Esch and his brother have taken over the Princess Theatre at Newcastle, Indiana, and are now running that house. It will be remembered that Mr. Esch was manager of theatres in La Porte, Indiana, some time ago.

S. G. Chappett, manager of the Irving Park Theatre, 4003 Irving Park Boulevard, underwent an operation for stomach trouble the week and his friends are all hoping for his early recovery.

Calvin W. Brown, representing D. W. Howells, of New York, was in Chicago last week, and while here arranged with Harry Weis of Superior Screen Service, Inc., for the handling of all the D. W. Howells productions in Illinois and Indiana territory.

Despite the hot weather, a number of out of town exhibitors were in Chicago during the week viewing and booking pictures, among them being Mr. Wood, of the firm of Wall & Wood, Calumet, Illinois; Fred Fairchild, of the White Palace Theatre, at Watou, Illinois; Mr. W. W. Drum, of the American Theatre, Mohonk, Illinois; and Everett Theatre, Peru, Illinois; Cooper Opperman of the Crescent Theatre, Pontiac, and Manager Heiferman, of the Perfect Theatre, Huntington.

Harry Weis, must have been fishing all summer, and to insure it he purchased an island from the Government on the Tippecanoe River, near Wynnham, Indiana, where he is having a summer home erected which is scheduled to be ready about July 1st. The reach of river is noted for its excellent fishing, and the only way to go to Harry's new kingdom is either to swim or row. Callers will findly park their car at the river bank.

Phil H. Solomon, manager of Marquette Film Distributing Corporation's Chicago office, now has three live wire salesmen on his staff, Harold Loeb, covering the city, George Weinberg, Illinois, and Dan P. Ryan, Indiana, and reports splendid business. Mr. Solomon is anticipating heavy bookings of Masterpieces summer releases, which include "Tillie Makes Up," starring Marie Dressler; "The Rise of Susan," with Eugene O'Brien and "Hearts in Exile."

Result of Associated's Convention

FOLLOWING the powerful co-ordination of effort resulting from the convention of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., at Cleveland, influential exhibitor-members and exhibitor-officers this week stated that the Associated Exhibitors are working progressively as a single, positive unit. According to announcement they are working forcefully and carefully, with the sole purpose in view of soon presenting to the independent exhibitors of the country a plan whereby the showman is given the right to the pursuit of pictures, profits and protection without strings attached.

With one stream of product already flowing, and with the assurance of further sources of product forthcoming from F. C. Quimby, general manager, who recently arrived in New York from the Coast, the Associated Exhibitors believe that within a few days they will have information to impart to other independent exhibitors which will prove Associated's claim to "the perfect plan."

Associated's sub-franchise plan, which now is being tuned into complete and absolute harmony with the aims and purposes of independent exhibitors, as gleaned from the exhibitors themselves during the big Cleveland convention, is virtually ready to submit to the sincerely independent theatre owners of the United States.

An interesting feature surrounding the sub-franchise proposition is that it is said to embody the spirit of every constructive resolution passed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Cleveland last week. This is especially true as regards those passages of the resolutions whose purpose is to obtain for the exhibitor protection from the forces and powers that seek to destroy his independence. Associated's plan is claimed to be thoroughly sound in principle and fully equitable in application.

During the meetings of Associated's exhibitor-members, exhibitor problems were discussed at length and in minute detail. The men worked day and night in what proved to be a successful endeavor to put into final form the plan whereby the independent exhibitor, be he big or small, is assured the opportunity of sharing in an honest-to-goodness co-operative proposition.

Among the officers and members of Associated who took part in the meetings at Cleveland were Harry M. Crandall, Washington, D. C.; H. H. Wellenbrink, Montclair; James O. Clemmer, Seattle; I. Libson, Cincinnati; Dennis Harris, Pittsburgh; Saul Harris, Little Rock; Samuel Harding, Kansas City; Joseph Morgan, Washington, D. C.; Paul Gusdanovic, Cleveland; M. S. Cohen, Council Bluffs; J. H. Cooper, Wichita; Harold Franklin, Buffalo; Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago; R. D. Craver and F. R. Rogers, Charlotte; M. L. Malevinsky, F. C. Quimby, Phil Ryan and others.

Attractive Stage Settings For Current Features

Stage setting originated for "On With the Dance" by Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo. For full details of Mr. Franklin's presentation of this picture see

"On With the Dance!" That's exactly what Mac Murray's entertaining vehicle meant at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo. In presenting this production for the entertainment of Buffalo theatregoers, Managing Director Harold B. Franklin introduced a solo dancer for the first time in this big film palace. As a prologue to the feature itself, Mr. Franklin introduced Gertrude Blakeslee, a Buffalo girl, in a terpsichorean gem somewhat similar to the dance put on by Miss Murray in the film play.

As a background for this novelty, Mr. Franklin erected a striking stage setting, the feature of which was the colored glass fountain, made of thousands of pieces of vari colored glass to represent falling water. On this glass fountain different colored spot lights were played, giving a most brilliant effect. Through the back drop an illuminated new moon peeped. At one side a peacock, vividly colored, was perched on the limb of a tree around which flowers were entwined. In this setting Miss Blakeslee tripped the light fantastic to the accompaniment of a Tchaikowski motif, which was also used whenever Miss Murray danced in the picture. It was an excellent introduction for the feature itself and went a long way toward giving the desired atmosphere for the film.

Songs Prove Excellent Advertising Medium for Bain

Although there have been scores of accounts of how various exhibitors throughout the United States have specialized on one or just a few features and exploiting various special feature attractions, it remained for B. M. Bain, manager of the Victoria theatre, Wilmington, N. C., to co-ordinate the various methods used by individual exhibitors in a thorough exploitation campaign that appealed to his city at large.

Partly favored by the circumstances under which "The River's End" was produced, Mr. Bain found that the use of the song written about the picture co-operate advertising with the book-stores, newspaper publicity and bill-board advertising were his achieved goal.

Besides elaborate window displays in the two leading book-stores, both the Kress and Woolworth stores displayed the songs prominently, and had them played and sung inside the store. The Victoria theatre orchestra featured "The River's End" song for a week before the opening and during its run. Added to this was a sale of the books and songs on the opening day in the theatre lobby.

Newspaper publicity started ten days in advance and consisted of individual ads on the different characters in the story, the book having a wonderful sale in Wilmington.

Chambers Makes Money on America's Aridity

IN keeping with his "Minute-Ahead-of-the-Times" policy, Manager Stanley Chambers of the Palace theatre, Wichita, Kans., introduced a novel program at that popular house recently.

With "The Six Best Cellars" and "The Sweet Dry and Dry" comprising the program, Mr. Chambers styled the offering the "Good Spirits Show" and in his advertising and advance publicity played up to the good old "take it or leave it alone days."

With his usual foresight, he had his operators extract from the various news weeklies, all pictures bearing directly or indirectly on the national aridity, and place them all in one news feature or magazine. A "Mutt and Jeff" cartoon that was appropriate was also selected.

P. Hans Flath, organist in chief of the Palace, arranged a most novel and entertaining musical prologue.

The curtain rose on an ancient wine cellar. Seated at a table and slightly the "worse for wear" was a dandy, who sang "In the Deep, Deep Cellar." Following this, a Swiss barmaid sang "Absinthe Frapee." At the close of this number four young men composing the American Legion quartette rushed on the stage in the costume of Heidelberg students and sang the "Stein Song" from the famous "Prince of Pilsen," closing with the chorus by the quartette and soloists.

Suddenly the stage became black and upon being relighted, the huge cask labels, which had read, "whiskey," "rum," "port," "gin," "champagne," etc., were replaced with "Bevo," "hair tonic," "lemon extract," "Jamaica ginger," etc. The offering closed with the six performers singing "The Alcoholic Blues."

During the prologue several novel effects were introduced by the introduction of the devil, who rose from behind the whiskey cask, and a small negro boy who popped his head up over the gin barrel.

The scenic effects were the work of Kirke Parrett, of the Palace staff, and Mr. Flath arranged the musical part of the program.

The whole gave just the proper atmosphere for the showing of pictures which deal with prohibition, and was handled in such a way that not the slightest protest was heard.

A special exploitation feature that preceded the presentation of "On With the Dance" at the New Grand theatre, Montreal, starting Sunday, May 9, was an eight-page section in the Montreal Herald which was a booster for the engagement. The theatre, which is managed by George Rotzky, hooked up with a number of commercial houses for the special advertising. Various details were arranged by W. A.

Reckless Driving Stunt to Advertise Show

"I FINE you $50.00," roared Judge Ogle to T. B. Noble, Jr., in corporation court, when the latter pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding, reckless driving, open muffler and driving in the safety zone and so forth. The whole affair including the wild and breeze burning ride through the downtown streets of Wichita Falls, Texas, was arranged by Manager W. D. Harwell, of the Empress theatre to advertise the "Wally Reid" feature, "Excuse My Dust" appearing at that theatre. Harwell accompanied his friend on the wild ride. And there can be no doubt but that it was good publicity when the yellow Stutz racer with the conspicuous streamer on the rear, "Excuse My Dust" and the driver doing his best to give everybody the dust, thundered through the streets of Wichita Falls with the throngs of wondering citizens lining the sidewalk. Young Noble attained a speed that was estimated by witnesses to be somewhat between 45 and 100 miles an hour and one old man who had driven his horse and surrey up to the curb to let the "cyclone" go by, wanted to know where the fire was. A deputy police commissioner, attempted to catch the flying meteor in the city chariot but in his own words "gave it up and went home so sick I couldn't eat any supper."

When the "fly cops" finally nabbed the speeder the car was directly in front of the Empress movie house where the picture they were advertising was showing. In a short time the street around the car was blocked with curious people seeking the cause of all the disturbance and it was only with aid of several policemen that the crowd was dispersed. Then the speeder were taken to the city hall to be booked for everything on the docket except "bootlegging." The desk sergeant asked for a $25 bond but the night chief who was just coming on duty, required the speeders to put up a round hundred frog skins and forbid him from driving his car away. For several hours the rakish appearing yellow car lingered in front of the police station. Again the crowd gathered and many different angles to the situation were expressed, varying from, "I heard that they found an empty bottle in the car" to "I thought Barney Oldfield was running a hamburger stand in Frisco."

Well, it was "good advertising," Mr. Harwell philosophized, "for we had the biggest night crowd that has been to the Empress since I have been here." And anyone who saw or those who heard but did not see, the yellow streak that flew around with machine gun explosions of the open muffler, will no doubt agree it was the liveliest "press agent" stunt that has ever been pulled in the city.

Mercy Says Newspaper Advertising Best of All

Yakima, Washington Exhibitor Experiments with All Kinds of Publicity

NEW methods of exploitation of motion picture theatres are becoming a real danger to the exhibitor in the smaller cities and the managers of neighborhood theatres, through luring them through the most effective form of advertising for theatres so located, according to Frederick Mercy, owner and manager of three theatres in Yakima, Washington. Mr. Mercy holds the theory and advances a sound basis for the belief, that newspaper advertising is the one essential to successful exploitation in a place where the transient patronage is negligible.

One of the theatres owned by Mr. Mercy is devoted exclusively to pictures. The other two arrange for road shows when they are obtainable and run pictures on other dates. He has but recently opened the Mercy theatre, the third in his list, which is devoted to road shows and pictures.

"After some experimenting I have found that in a city of this size, newspaper advertising pays better than any other kind of exploitation with which I am acquainted," said Mr. Mercy. "In a place where there is not a large transient class from which to draw patronage a theatre must look for support to a steady, regular repeat attendance, from people who are regular in the town and settled in their habits. They use the same route day after day in going to and from work, have particular stores at which they trade, so a lobby display or anything else attached to theatre reaches but a small portion of the population.

"A mailing list is good for special exploitation but if it is used every week it soon loses its effectiveness. The list of attractions is soon mislaid or lost, and the people wishing to attend a theatre look elsewhere to learn what is being shown at the places of entertainment. The elsewhere that they look is in the newspapers, and therefore I am of the opinion that the many new ways of exploitation which have been devised, all effective for special purposes, are liable to lure the small town man away from the most essential form of advertising, that in the newspapers.

"Don't take it that because I am strongly prejudiced in favor of newspaper advertising that I do not believe in other forms of exploitation. I do. Lobby displays are especially effective, one reason being, the improvement in the appearance and attractiveness of the theatre, thus making pleasant impression upon first sight, a valuable adjunct.

"I know my theatres have gained in the past many patrons through lobby displays, providing the picture being thus exploited be the sort which lends itself to lobby display decoration, like for instance "In Old Kentucky," for which I recently went to some expense and considerable labor to advertise in this way."

Mr. Mercy declares that heralds, programs, circulars, and many other methods of printed exploitation have their uses, but that they lose their effectiveness by overuse, and that the most reliable standby for the exhibitor in a non-transient territory, is newspaper space.

Tiffin Exhibitors Put Over Mystery Girl

Lady From Culver City Gets Ohio City All Excited

IT'S one thing to start a mystery exploitation stunt, but it's quite another to hold the interest of the public after the mystery bubble is "busted"—and that's just what Managers Stoffer and Sennett of the Grand theatre, Tiffin, Ohio, just finished accomplishing in connection with their six-day run of Goldwyn pictures, in celebration of Goldwyn week. The week's program opened with Geraldine Farrar in "The Stronger Vow" for the first two days, followed by Rex Beach's "The Brand" for the next two days, and finishing with Mabel Normand in "Up Stairs."

With the true showman's idea of breaking into everyday affairs with something out of the ordinary to get folks talking, Messrs. Stoffer and Sennett secured the services of Miss Leone Merriam, a beautiful young lady who has had both stage and screen experience. All dolled up in the newest spring attire, she stepped from the train at Tiffin, with a mask over her face. As she started for the taxicab stand, a crowd immediately gathered around her. The police were called to clear the mystery. Was this some female bandit? Was she some prominent vamp hiding her identity? While they were trying to solve some of these puzzles, the girl hopped into a waiting taxi, and was whisked to the Ohio

Hotel. Another crowd gathered when she approached the desk to see how she would register. But all these rubber-necks learned was that THE MYSTERY GIRL? CULVER CITY, LOS ANGELES, was in their midst.

"Who is she?" That's what they were all asking down in Tiffin. "Who is she?" That's what the Tiffin newspapers devoted a lot of unpurchasable space to discuss. "Who is She?" That was the sign on either side of the 1920 millionaire type of automobile in which she rode around the business and residence sections of Tiffin for a solid week prior to the opening of the Goldwyn pictures at the Grand theatre.

The mask was the prominent feature of "THE MYSTERY GIRL'S" attire. She never appeared on the streets without it. She never was seen in the Tiffin department stores without it. And wherever she was, there was also a regular procession following her.

Then, the day before the opening of the Goldwyn week, came the grand denouement. The papers explained away the mystery of "THE MYSTERY GIRL." They devoted much conspicuous space—without charge to Messrs. Stoffer and Sennett—to linking the girl up with the picture program at the Grand theatre the following week.

Then Stoffer and Sennett announced that "THE MYSTERY GIRL" would be pleased to meet the people of Tiffin during every performance at the Grand theatre during the Goldwyn Celebration Week. Now actresses are a breed quite apart from the staid old stay-at-homes. And the stay-at-homes, many of whom would like to have broken the traces, almost tumbled over each other in the effort to see "Miss Mystery Maid."

Even then Managers Stoffer and Sennett weren't through with their showmanship. They went one step farther. For, not only did their patrons "have a look" at the actress, but they were entertained by her with a nifty little vaudeville act. The usual singing and dancing and comedy stuff that they were all used to seeing in the regular two-a-day houses, but it was something altogether new for a picture house, and it's always something new that gets the coin, so Messrs. Stoffer and Sennett cashed in on the strength of the enterprising and intelligent handling of the publicity on "THE MYSTERY GIRL" with jammed houses for every performance.

Gates Admits All Dayton "Jennys" Free

MARK GATES, manager of Loew's Dayton theatre, Dayton, O., has recently concluded one of his characteristically effective exploitation campaigns for Mary Miles Minter's latest production, "Jenny Be Good."

Mr. Gates is a strong believer in exploitation, in fact has been the pioneer in this field in the Middle West, since the big Dayton theatre opened over two years ago.

As the opening gun in the exploitation campaign on "Jenny Be Good" a two column story in three Dayton newspapers announced the fact that every blonde young lady in the city named Jenny, whether her last name was Smith, Jones, Brown or Cohen, would be admitted free of charge to the opening matinee of the picture.

The first three stories of this stunt were obtained under heavy difficulties, as all the Dayton dailies were turning down eight to ten columns of paid advertising every day in the week and it took a man with considerable nerve to approach a city editor in such trying times with a publicity idea.

This fact, however, did not stop Mr. Gates and after planting three two column stories in the papers he obtained a total of eleven stories in the local newspapers on the same subject as well as a large streamer photograph of the "blonde Jennies" who received free admission.

In addition to the exploitation that was obtained by admitting the young women to the theatre free, Mr. Gates also carried three different stories to the effect that infants in arms would also be admitted free of charge. One of the leading merchants in the town donated an entire suit of baby clothes for the first baby in the theatre on the opening Monday.

To the mother of the second baby a beautiful new cap was presented by the same store. In this way the interest in the affair was sustained throughout the showing.

These exploitation features proved unusually effective and particularly well adapted to the subject. The young women who saw the picture as guests of the management started valuable word-of-mouth advertising that increased business daily.

Steurle Gives "Sex" Much Exploitation

Exploitation which did much to enhance the success of the engagement of "Sex" was put over by Joseph Steurle, manager of the Walnut theatre, Louisville, recently.

The big feature of the campaign was the fifteen-minute dancing exhibition staged by Mlle. Doreen, a clever professional dancer. The terpsichorean exhibition included a skillful reproduction of the "spider dance" staged by Miss Glaum in the picture. Manager Steurle played this dance up in a big way, putting the dancer's name in electric lights directly underneath the title of the picture, and also using her name in the newspaper advertisements. In the lobby was a life-sized cut-out of Miss Glaum, surrounded by stills of Mlle. Doreen in characteristic attitudes, as well as stills taken from the picture. Newspaper space was used heavily to exploit the picture, and in addition Mr. Steurle prepared a special folder which was sent to over 7,000 Louisville homes, giving interesting reading and scenes from the picture.

Lays Aside Immediate Profits to Build

AS clever a bit of showmanship as has ever been accomplished in the Mississippi valley must be credited to Ben Levy, manager of the Hippodrome theatre, Webb City, Mo., as a result of an exigency in which he recently found himself.

Mr. Levy, following out his ideas and extensive exploitation for productions that merit appropriations for promotion according to trade paper accounts, had planned an unusually effective campaign in behalf of "The River's End."

But in the midst of Mr. Levy's fine intentions, his lieutenant, who supervises and executes the display exploitation, set off to conquer new fields, leaving Mr. Levy holding the proverbial sack which in this instance contained nothing more or less than paint and brushes, cut-out ideas—all of which he could not handle personally.

Taking advantage of the fact that Rotary Club members from Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma were holding a convention in Webb City, and the natural conclusion that their presence in the city would evidence itself in increased theatre patronage providing the proper sort of a cooperative inducement were made, Mr. Levy grasped at the opportunity of tendering his house to the Rotary Club members. It so chanced that the Hippodrome theatre was the only local structure of sufficient size to accommodate the convention in the fashion desired.

Mr. Levy's courtesy was amply repaid by the manner in which the Rotarians patronized the showing of "The River's End," in their appreciation of the fact that the exhibitor had cancelled an entire day's showing to accommodate the members of the convention.

McNally Makes the Newark Resemble Farm

"Down on Farm," Great Exploitation Bet, Says Newark Veteran Showman

"If you want to see the real styles for down on the farm for this summer, come to the Newark theatre," was the announcement that was sent broadcast recently by J. B. McNally, of the Newark theatre, Newark, N. J., which but formed the nucleus of the greatest theatre exploitation that has ever been known of in that town. It was all done in connection with Mack Sennett's five-reel comedy, "Down on the Farm."

To start off his exploitation campaign he took space in the Wanted columns of his town's newspapers reading as follows:

"Wanted—A cow; must be gentle and kind-faced, to stand in front of the Newark theatre during run of 'Down on the Farm,' week of May 9th. Milk to be the property of the theatre. Address in confidence, Manager, Newark theatre, Market St., East of Broad."

The advertisement created a great deal of comment, and there were no end of replies.

"In all my 27 years in the show business," said Mr. McNally, "there never was a picture that lent itself to such unique jazz exploitation as this 'farm' picture of Sennett's. And I made up my mind that I would certainly go to it on this production."

And he did. The exterior and the interior of the theatre was farm from start to finish. Across the entire front of the theatre, at the curb, there was built a special cooping, in which were prize chickens, ducks, pigs and donkeys. The front of the house was decorated with corn stalks and hay and straw, tastefully arranged in a manner that attracted people to the theatre. The entire lobby of the theatre was decorated with farm implements and the walls and ceilings were covered with corn stalks.

For a ballyhoo stunt for the streets Mr.

McNally had a team with a big horse and a small donkey pulling it, and in which he had a farmer and his wife doing all sorts of stunts, and parading through the streets all the afternoon. All his ushers, ticket takers, choppers, musicians and stage hands were dressed in farmer dress during the entire week. The orchestra played "hoe-down" music during the picture and everyone had a gala time.

"Of all the stunts that I ever pulled with any performance I enjoyed doing this one most of all. It's not only fun to do it in such a manner, and it's not only fine to see what real exploitation will do to get the people to the house, but at the end of the week when you 'count up' you know that it has all been worth while."

Mr. McNally is conceded to be one of the liveliest live-wires in the east, and has pulled many real exploitation ideas, of which but few others save the thousands in his own town have ever heard about.

Pomeroy Presents Musical Tableau of Merit

PRESENTING a musical tableau in actual conjunction with a moving picture feature was the stunt that Manager Harry Pomeroy of the Strand theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, carried out in the screening of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" during the first half of the week of April 5.

Pomeroy practically threw all precedent to the winds in carrying out this prologue but the effect of a picture on the screen simultaneously with a "living picture" proved to be a harmonious combination, judging by the plaudits of the crowd and the congratulations of assembled moving picture men who had gathered to witness the experiment.

For the prologue a former organ loft just to one side of the screen proper was used. The lattice work in front of this "box" was replaced by a transparent curtain on which was painted a large church window. During the introductory scenes of the film feature a crowd is seen gathering at a church for the wedding and during the screening of these scenes a soft blue spotlight was used to illuminate the curtain. In the meantime an organ is used to provide the appropriate music, namely the Wedding March.

When the church interior is shown on the screen, soft lights behind the transparent drop reveal a chance setting in which the central figure is a surprised soloist and, as the action develops, he sings an appropriate selection. With the finish of the wedding ceremony in the picture proper, the lights fade out, leaving the church exterior as before. On the screen the outside of the church is shown once more, too, with the people leaving the edifice. The blue spot on the special setting gradually fades out; the voice also passes out and the main picture proceeds.

The tableau is carried out practically as an extended portion of the picture on the screen and the combination effect is heightened by reason of the fact that the setting is on a level with the screen. There is no stage at the Strand and the tableau gave the appearance of a picture in the wall and almost in conjunction with the moving picture. There was not enough action on the part of the soloist to divert all attention from the moving picture and the two could be seen in practically one glance.

The wedding atmosphere was further heightened by the use of chimes which continued as the people were seen leaving the church. The soloist was William Nixon of Ottawa, a talented local vocalist.

In spite of the fact that the film feature was proceeding, the theatre audience broke into applause at the finish of the tableau.

Style Show Wins for Mercy

A cooperative idea that enables exhibitors to have the advantage of pretty and well-gowned women as an attraction on the stages of their theatres has been advanced by Frederick Mercy, manager and owner of the Mercy Theatre, Yakima, Washington, a city of approximately 21,000 population, as the result of his recent experience with the exploitation of a special attraction.

Endeavoring to find some novelty that would bring out the idea of temperament in a wife, coincident to his showing of Constant Talmadge in "A Temperamental Wife," Mr. Mercy arranged with the manager of a local ladies' clothing store to allow the models to display costumes on the stage of his theatre. The idea was entirely new in Yakima and considerable importance was attached to its carrying out. However, Mr. Mercy had no idea that his success would be of such an extent that justified him in using the idea as a permanent part of his program.

It is now quite a usual program feature for the Mercy theatre to have a group of fashionably dressed young women strut across its stage to the tempo of a clinging orchestral score.

"It brings the 'Follies' to the picture show," declared the local dramatic critic in his amusement column.

Newark Theatre Exploitation Gets Great Results

Real farm stunts were pulled by J. R. McNally, manager of the Newark theatre, Newark, N. J., in the exploitation of "Down on the Farm," self-explanatory cuts are shown on this page. A story giving an account of Mr. McNally's campaign in detail appears on page 6.

Ben Brown Improves on Yearsley's Exploitation Idea

Man Who Sleeps in Cemetery Tells Experiences to Theatre Audiences

THE official goose-flesh of Viroqua, Wis., stood up like pimples on a pineapple last week when Ben C. Brown, manager of the Star theatre, decided to insert a new page in Viroqua's showmanship ledger.

Whether Mr. Brown's idea was particularly original or not matters very little. The fact stands out that he made improvements on the graveyard stunt conceived by C. L. Yearsley, First National publicity manager, in behalf of "The Greatest Question." Mr. Brown's improvements came about this way:

After reading accounts of how other exhibitors' efforts for "The Greatest Question" ended with the finding of someone to accept payment for spending the night alone in a graveyard, Mr. Brown decided that he would find someone who would have a wonderful story to tell; someone who would come forth with a string of impressions weird and spooky enough to send a thrill down the backbone of even the trap drummer.

Mr. Brown anticipated that he would find plenty of townsmen to take up his offer to earn $10. But he decided firmly to accept only an impressionable person who could be relied upon for a unique story of what happened during that night in the graveyard.

The advertisement attracted attention. Some of the townspeople who took it seriously were afraid to take up the offer. There were others in the city, however, who openly scoffed at the genuineness of the offer but made no effort to collect the money. The manager of the Star had set his heart on having somebody go through with the stunt, for he had arranged with the local newspaper to carry an account of it and he wanted the publicity story.

Dr. W. C. Butt, one of the most widely known people in Viroqua, is a great friend of the theatre manager. Brown finally appealed to him to earn the $10 and Butt took him up more or less as a joke, but the story had a sequel entirely unexpected. Butt had experiences in the cemetery which made ghost stories current in Viroqua sound like Eugene Field.

He had no sooner gotten out of sight of the guard which had accompanied him on the burying ground when a bony hand clutched him by the throat and threw him violently to the ground. Three times he was forced to abandon the spots he had chosen for his night's repose because of sheer nervousness caused by a white ghostly figure which appeared in the bushes near his resting place, and which emitted a low moaning sound. Supernatural scrapings and knockings came from the trees about him, but he finally fled to his home about four-thirty in the morning, after something cold and clammy had clutched at his heart, and a chilly, deadening sensation began to spread from there over his body.

Butt is a good talker, and when he told Brown of his experiences with the perfectly natural explanations of them, the exhibitor saw his chance for a killing and he got Butt's promise to explain nothing to anybody. Then he advertised that Butt would tell his experiences in the graveyard at each showing of "The Greatest Question."

People knew that Butt had fled home at an early hour in the morning from the cemetery, and this was enough to whet their appetites for any kind of a yarn about ghosts. The theatre was jammed the first day of the showing and Butt told of his experiences. Then he gave the explanations. The bony hand which had clutched his throat was the bare fork of a low hanging limb. The white ghostly shape that haunted him was a straying calf. Nocturnal sparrows caused the trembling and shakings of the trees, and his final experience had come through rolling, left side first, into a puddle of water. His haste to get home was caused by his anxiety to get dry clothing.

Mr. Butt's story was dramatic, especially the display of his scratched neck where the "bony" hand had clutched it. The record for the two days showed an attendance fifty per cent. above the best previous business for two days the theatre had ever done.

Valdez Presents New Idea in Exploitation

Texas Exhibitor Has Plan Which Should Appeal to Small Town Showmen

ONE of the best examples of far-sighted showmanship to occur this year comes from Laredo, Texas, where Leo M. Valdez, manager of the Royal theatre, devised an exploitation plan which probably would be successful in almost any medium sized city.

Mr. Valdez cancelled his show for one night in order to turn over his theatre to high school for commencement exercises, figuring that the difference between the rental he would collect and the regular night's receipts would be more than compensated by the people he would reach with a lobby display he arranged for his show the following Sunday and Monday.

Mr. Valdez has reason for wanting some special exploitation. Nuevo Laredo, just across the border, had been captured by Mexican revolutionists just the week before and there were daily expectations of a night attack on the part of the Federal troops to regain the city. With such an attraction playing in opposition it was practically impossible to coax people inside a motion picture theatre, that is, outside of regular patrons of the house, and Mr. Valdez felt that he wanted special exploitation that would reach people who were not regular patrons of the theatre.

The high school commencement exercises gave him his idea. The Royal theatre provided a bigger seating capacity than any place in the city which could be procured by the school officials, and they eagerly accepted the offer of the theatre at the same rental they had expected to pay for a smaller hall. While the passing out of heralds could not be thought of Mr. Valdez lined the lobby of the theatre with lithographs of Norma Talmadge in "The Daughter of Two Worlds" which he had booked for Sunday and Monday following the commencement exercises. He also placed heralds on the coin confectionery boxes on the back of each seat.

Commencement exercises are generally always crowded and this one in Laredo was no exception, and judging from the attendance at the two days showing of the attraction, practically everyone at the graduation exercises afterward patronized the theatre and brought friends with them for the various performances. In addition Mr. Valdez has found that renting of his theatre is regarded as an act of fine courtesy by the school authorities and the public generally so that the theatre and himself have gained a degree of good will with the population of Laredo.

A Few More Letters on Reviews

"I am writing to you as a small town exhibitor and my views are based upon my experiences in my home town. Pictures are sold through the branch exchanges by salesman in a way that no other commodity could be sold, and if we were to lose or be deprived of the valuable information that we are able to gather from trade papers relative to true conditions, we would certainly lose something that is of indefinite worth to us in buying."

Avenue Theatre,
Carlton Theatre,
Du Bois, Pa.

"The reviews should be continued, as they are a very good help to the exhibitor in his bookings and also in advertising the picture to his patrons, for if the picture is not so good he is not going to flaunt it to the sky, but will go a little easy in his advertising, but on the other hand if it is a very good production, he has a chance to boost it and make a little extra money."

Wm. Dabb,
Lyric Theatre,
Shenandoah, Pa.

"Your circular letter of the 24th at hand and it is the first time I have taken the time and trouble to answer such correspondence.

"I place a lot of confidence in your paper when I book features for my theatre, and also when I buy features for my exchange, and propose to continue doing so in the future. For your information I just returned from a trip covering about eighteen towns and in my talks with the exhibitor I am always handing a boost for MOTION PICTURE NEWS because I believe you mean what you say, and in a majority of cases the exhibitor agrees with me that your paper is there.

"I'm not shooting this letter for any other reason than for what it stands, which is frank expression."

"YOUR MOTION PICTURE NEWS would be of no value to any exhibitor if you do not publish your opinion of pictures."

"We have always found the services of your reviewers to be strictly FAIR for both the PRODUCING COMPANY and the EXHIBITORS. Now to be frank with you, if you cut out the REVIEWING of the pictures and just work for the PRODUCING COMPANIES we will at once CUT OUT YOUR NEWS. Probably you would not miss us alone, but I am sure that thousands of others will do likewise."

C. A. Grissinger, Mgr.

"I for one take off my hat to the NEWS and give you thanks for your stand, as thousands of other exhibitors will do."

B. J. Callahan,

Seaside, Oregon.

"I certainly do want you to continue your reviews as in the past. I am a conscientious exhibitor and before I play a picture I want to know whether or not it merits a strong advertising campaign. I have no other means of learning the merits of a picture except through your reviews and therefore they mean more to me than any other part of your publication."

C. W. H. Johnston,
Liberty Theatre,
Louisville, Texas.

"Well, I could not close this letter without a few words in praise of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. It is one of the best trade papers I ever read. It is the only paper I carry home with me, for I read it from cover to cover, and I can't tell you the number of times when I lost, misplaced, or failed to get a press sheet on a picture that I have dug back in the NEWS and go to dope and get my ad out just the same as if I had the whole force from the exchange at my command."

Thomas Meighan Upsets Cleveland Traffic

According to a report from the Famous Players-Lasky headquarters, Cleveland's traffic was hampered considerably when Thomas Meighan undertook the selection of ten of the prettiest girls that appeared in a large crowd at the Soldiers and Sailors monument, for the purpose of assigning them places in his next picture, "The Frontier of the Stars." Later there was considerable excitement in the streets downtown when the star went to the rescue of a number of girls "trapped" in a "fire" at one of the downtown department stores. It is said that a crowd, estimated at about 20,000, witnessed this thriller for the new production.

Awards Ass't Director Verdict of $30,000

A statement just received from the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation says that James J. Dealy, an assistant director at the New York studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has just been awarded a verdict of $30,000 against Gus Hill, Inc., before Supreme Court Justice McCook, for injuries that destroyed the sight of an eye. The accident, the statement declares, occurred during a performance of "Mutt and Jeff" at Gallopolis, Ohio, in February, 1918, when there was a flareback from a weapon the plaintiff had to discharge.

Foreigners Pay Well for "Tarzan"

In the foreign market as well as in America, "The Return of Tarzan," the Numa production of Edgar Rice Burroughs' world renowned book, is starting off with a rush that bids fair to place it ahead of even "Tarzan of the Apes" as a box office triumph. Arthur Ziehm, manager of foreign sales for Goldwyn, is receiving record breaking bids for the foreign territory that remains open, and this week closed two big contracts, one for Japan, China and the Philippines, the other for all of Latin America.

Live News From The Producers

Equity Announces Picture

Conway Tearle and Miss Theby Appear in "Whispering Devils"

WHAT is heralded as one of the most emotional photodramas of the year is announced for early release by the Equity Pictures Corp. in the form of a six-reel production called "Whispering Devils," starring the celebrated Conway Tearle and Rosemary Theby.

The story is an adaptation of the sensational dramatic success "Michael and His Lost Angel," written by one of the foremost playwrights of the day, Henry Arthur Jones, and dealing with the fierce struggle of passion against purity in a way that sweeps the spectator with its compelling power. It bristles with moments of red-blooded emotion and terrific intensity rarely achieved on the screen.

The cast has been declared to be one of the best ever assembled. With Conway Tearle, known as one of the strongest emotional characters of the screen, and Rosemary Theby, whose bewitching charm and compelling artistry needs no introduction in the leading roles, the supporting cast is one that fits their respective parts like a glove. Lenore Lynard, Dr. Walter Bytell, Esther Ralston, Laura May and Warren Millais are in the cast.

John M. Voshell, director for Famous Players, Universal and other leading producers, and notable for his work in "Daddy Long Legs" with Mary Pickford, is the director of "Whispering Devils" and Tony Gaudio is responsible for the fine photography.

Tourneur Plans for Future

As Contract with Famous Players Nears End, He Organizes His Staff

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Company is rapidly nearing its termination and he is giving much of his attention to the formulating of his plans as a member of the Associated Producers. He is now working on the final scenes of "Deep Waters," which is being adapted for the screen from F. Hopkinson Smith's novel, "Caleb West, Master Dyer" and expects to finish the production within a week or so, when he will immediately start filming the final production under his present contract. While the name of this production has not been yet announced, it is stated that the vehicle is a well known stage play in which Miss Hope Hampton will be seen as the star.

In the future Maurice Tourneur will make fewer pictures a year; possibly not more than two or three, and in no event will he make more than four, but into these productions will go the limitless resources of a great producing organization. They will not be made according to the time clock or calendar, for as much time will be devoted to them as is necessary to turn out productions which will represent the unstinted genius of the producer.

In forming his new organization, Mr. Tourneur will carry a few capable actors in stock, but the majority of his players will be cast according to their ability to interpret the characters of the story at hand. Jack Gilbert, who was engaged as a permanent member of Mr. Tourneur's organization some time ago to play juvenile leads, is now one of the important factors of the organization, having been given the post of assistant director as well as that of adapting the stories for screen interpretation.

Barbara Bedford, although unknown to the photoplay fans at the present time is another important member of the organization. Other artists are being considered by Mr. Tourneur, and it is likely that more names will be added to this list of stock players by the time he is ready to start work with the new organization.

Vitagraph's Serial Is Two-Thirds Finished

With the release date of "Hidd'n Dangers," the scientific serial co-starring Joe Ryan and Jean Paige, still a month away, a wire received from the coast last Tuesday by John M. Quinn, general manager of Vitagraph, Inc., states that the serial is more than two-thirds completed. On the strength of the earlier episodes and the novelty of the serial—which seems to have made a most favorable impression with exhibitors ever on the alert for "something new"—"Hidd'n Dangers" has rolled up a big pre-release record.

Vitagraph will follow its policy of giving the motion picture patrons, millions of whom are devotees of Vitagraph serials, a large slice of the story at the start. In this way the plot is securely and unforgettably "planted."

"The Inside of the Cup," the famous novel of Winston Churchill's which created so much discussion a few years ago, has been put into a picture by Cosmopolitan Productions under the direction of Albert Capellani. All the scenes have been made and the cutting and titling is nearly completed. In the cast are Edith Hallor, Margaret Clayton, Margaret Seddon, W. P. Carleton, David Torrence, Richard Carlyle, Jack Bohn, Albert Roccardi, Frank A. Lyon and George Story.

"The Silver Horde" is Setting New Records

Rex Beach's "The Silver Horde" is breaking records for extended bookings at the largest theatres in the country, according to reports received at the home of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation from the twenty-two Goldwyn exchanges. Starting with three weeks on Broadway, and week runs in many cities of the far West and middle West, Rex Beach's latest production is setting even a faster pace than "The Girl From Outside." In a number of instances, exhibitors have varied from a policy of two and three day showings in order to keep "The Silver Horde" for a full week.

"Tarzan" Gets Newspaper Space

"THE Return of Tarzan," the special attraction now playing under the Goldwyn banner, at the Broadway Theatre, New York, seems more than destined to duplicate the remarkable performance of its predecessor, "Tarzan," for during the extremely hot spell of the past two weeks, business at the Broadway is normal, whereas a big slump was expected, it having occurred at various New York Theatres.

Following a tremendous exploitation campaign, Tarzan opened on a holiday Sunday, when every beach and resort within fifty miles of New York was crowded and capacity business ruled during one of the hottest Sundays recorded in many years in the Metropolitan.

The opening week at the Broadway resulted in remarkable criticisms. Hearst's Evening Journal referred to the Tarzan picture as the greatest thrill ever screened and nominated it far better than "Tarzan of the Apes."

The Evening Mail termed it a series of thrilling adventures and a romantic spectacle with punch and entertainment qualities bound to please. The New York Tribune prophesied that "The Return of Tarzan" would remain on Broadway many weeks and called it a great picture.

The Evening World was so impressed with the film that it arranged for the publication of a new Tarzan story and called the Broadway engagement a positive "Broadway Triumph" and on Tuesday, June 15th, ran a streamer all the way across its front page announcing the beginning of the Tarzan story on the magazine page.

The Times, World, Herald, Sun, Post, Evening Sun and Evening Telegram used such terms as "novelty," "unusual," "remarkable" and the Evening Sun in a half-column article, retailed the exploits of Tarzan, his hand to hand fights against the lions and remarked on the difficulties a director must have had to handle such a difficult subject.

Previous to the opening of Tarzan, the Goldwyn publicity department planted a live lion in a room of a Broadway hotel, and with Gene Pollar in charge under the registered name of T. R. Zann, succeeded in pulling front-page newspaper stories all over the country, with follow-up stories and editorial comment.

The original booking at the Broadway Theatre was for one week, but business was so eminently satisfactory that a second week was announced and at the end of the second week an indefinite run was announced and the latter part of this the third week, business instead of falling off, was increasing.

The Goldwyn exchanges through out the country now have their prints and summer engagements are being arranged. That "The Return of Tarzan" is a great summer attraction is best shown by the returns at the Broadway Theatre, on June 11, when the thermometer registered ninety degrees, the hottest June day in twenty-six years, and despite this June 11th was one of the best days during the entire engagement.

A very sensational line of paper has been gotten out on the film, and other punch aids are being distributed through the exchanges now, with local campaigns being arranged to synchronize with the local play-dates.

Foreign Buyer in New York

J. C. Barnstyn Issues Significant Statement to Trade

the most formidable distributing organization of films in the Dutch territory. Besides their executive offices in the Hague and the branch offices which they maintain in different sections of the country, they also operate a number of first-run theatres in many large cities in Holland.

Mr. Barnstyn's latest trip to America is primarily for two reasons; to export large quantities of American films throughout Europe and to dispose of the motion picture offerings of our European confreres. He will remain in America permanently from now on, and has opened New York offices at 220 West 42nd Street.

His plans and policies for the future are embodied in the following statement which he has issued to the trade press: "I have just returned from a long sojourn in Holland and an extended tour of Continental Europe, and am happy to announce that I have perfected arrangements to act as the American representative for several large Continental film renters operating extensively throughout Europe."

"I retain my interest in the H. A. P. Film Company of Holland, which organization I shall represent in this country as their exclusive buyer of films for consumption in the Holland territory. In this respect I might mention that plans are well underway for the acquisition of a number of 'special' productions, the names of which I shall be pleased to announce when contracts are closed.

"I have been appointed the American representative for the Cinematographic M. Hacken, Societe Anonyme of Belgium, France and Switzerland. This organization specializes in the distribution of motion pictures on a large scale, and I propose to purchase many big American offerings for this company during the coming year.

"The J. Lundin Photoplay Company of Stockholm, a vast motion picture enterprise recently perfected to acquire American and native productions for distribution throughout the Scandinavian territory, will be represented in America by my organization. I am at present negotiating for a number of American pictures for distribution by this new company, and shall make known the details of the contract at some later period.

"In making this announcement to the American trade, I wish to impress upon all those who might be interested in doing business with me, that I am desirous of obtaining big American productions. I have the facilities for marketing these pictures, and the money to pay for same.

"While my interests will be chiefly devoted to the purchase of American productions for my clients in Continental Europe, I have also arranged to bring over the product of some of the largest European producers for distribution in this country. I am positive that an interchange of motion pictures between this country and Europe will bring with it an era of good will and prosperity.

Mary Pickford Given Award

THE Board of Merit of the Motion Picture Theatrical Association of the World awarded its first seal of merit for any motion picture yet produced to Mary Pickford for her production "Suds," which will be released by United Artists very shortly.

Hiram Abrams, president of the "Big Four," was notified of the award this week and immediately sent a wireless message to Miss Pickford who was in mid ocean, on her way to England with her husband, Douglas Fairbanks. The formal presentation of the gold medal of the seal of merit will be presented to Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, Mary's mother, at a special presentation ceremony on Sunday evening at the George M. Cohan Theatre. The presentation will be made by Frank Bacon, and an address will be made by Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York.

This exceptional honor for Miss Pickford's latest production marks this picture as the name of wholesome, artistic, sincere entertainment, according to the Board of Merit, which is comprised of nearly fifty of the most representative personalities in the East. Each made special comments upon the production, and all agreed that it was a most excellent picture.

First Seal of Merit Conferred for Her Work in "Suds"

Daniel Frohman, well known theatrical producer, commented on the production as follows: "Excellent. Capital. The theme of 'imagination' is admirably illustrated in the mind of a simple, ingenuous girl with humorous and pathetic effect. Mary has never done a more vivid piece of character work."

Albert St. Peter of the United Americans said that "the moral of the picture is excellent and the comedy is clean. Give it the seal of merit."

James M. Bruce, President of the New York Kindergarten Association, stated that in his mind the picture was excellent and certainly deserved the medal of merit.

Anning S. Prall, President of the Board of Education of New York City, after viewing the picture and voting it the medal of merit said, "I was very much impressed by the picture and think it is a wonderfully wholesome production, the kind that school children should be sent to see. The characterization of the slavery girl is very interesting and it is undoubtedly the best production that Miss Pickford has ever made."

Mary H. Ford, writer and lecturer on "The Bahai Revelation" and on works of art, and the author of "The Oriental Rose," voted enthusiastically for the medal of merit for "Suds," saying the picture was excellent, true to life and very high class in entertainment.

E. J. Parker, representing the Salvation Army, was greatly enthused over the picture and said that he knew of none other that could be given the medal of merit in preference to this excellent production of "Suds."

Leo P. Bergley, representing the Knights of Columbus, said he considered the production very enlightening and entertaining and wanted it surely to get the merit medal of highest honors.

Mr. A. Le Barbier, representing the Associated Catholic Charities, was very enthusiastic in his endorsement of the excellence of the picture.

"I had no idea Miss Pickford could act so well, for it is the best picture she has ever presented," was the enthusiastic endorsement made on the production by Elmer Gates, of the Hotel Imperial.

Pearl White Starts Location Work

According to a statement from the William Fox headquarters, Pearl White, who recently returned from Europe, has joined her production company in the mountains near Pineville, Ky., and is now engaged in taking exteriors on that location for her next picture. Charles Giblyn is directing this picture. Those exteriors not requiring the presence of the star have already been turned out by the company, work having been carried on by the party during the star's absence. Richard C. Travers and J. Thornton Baston are included in Miss White's support. The star is under contract to make a series of feature-productions for William Fox.

Maurice Tournour Will Direct Hope Hampton

Arrangements have been consummated under the terms of which, Maurice Tournour will present Miss Hope Hampton as the star in a Maurice Tournour Production, work upon which will be started within a short time.

The name of the production has not been announced as yet, but elaborate preparations are being made at this time which point to its being one of the most lavish productions that this producer has contributed to the screen for some time.

Sills Has Leading Role in "The Week End"

Milton Sills is the handsome leading man with Margarita Fisher in the new American Special, "The Week End," a popular Cosmo Hamilton success produced for the screen under the expert direction of George L. Cox.

Before the camera Mr. Sills has played the lead with many of the best known stars in the film world, and his services are constantly in demand by the larger producers.

Mid-West Premiere for Dwan Picture

The First National Exhibitor's Circuit chose the middle West as the setting for the inaugural presentation of Allan Dwan's "A Splendid Hazard," presented by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation. The Dwan production received its premiere at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, and the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, opening at both houses on June 6th.

Tom Terriss Finishes [First Vita Special]

Tom Terriss has just returned from California where he completed his first special production for Vitagraph. The picture, which will not be released, it is said, until September, is as yet untitled. It is an adaptation of Gouverneur Morris's "Trumpet Island." Mr. Terriss is starting work on his second production which is titled "Dead Men Tell No Tales," by E. V. Hornung. Mr. Terriss says that he is negotiating with two big stars to appear in the cast. He will announce their names shortly.

Carpentier Sees His Picture

BESIDES the thousands of exhibitors, newspaper people, and motion picture filmers who looked eagerly for the Georges Carpentier picture, when it was released by Robertson-Cole, the star of "The Wonder Man" himself was an interested spectator at Cleveland, Ohio. There for the first time he saw the picture in his own private railroad coach, the showing being one of the most unique in history.

For, so busy has the famous French pugilist and soldier been with engagements which necessitated wide travel over the country, that he never had had opportunity to see the picture during the time it was being put out in New York. So he eagerly accepted the invitation of the Robertson-Cole branch at Cleveland to be present at a showing in that city.

Like so many who have seen "The Wonder Man," whether they have been exhibitors, newspaper or trade paper writers, or just plain fans who paid to get in, Carpentier liked the picture. "I didn't know I was such a good actor," he said with that pleasant look which has been named "The Million Dollar Smile."

Carpentier, who has been moving over the country at a most rapid rate, since the completion of "The Wonder Man" in May, was in Cleveland giving a sparring exhibition in League Park. It was planned to show the picture in the afternoon. This, however, could not be arranged because the print had been put into the mail, headed for Columbus, where it was to be censored.

Mr. Lebensburger, manager of the Robertson-Cole office, got on the trail of the print and through some hook or crook managed to get it back from the postoffice. By the time the print was recovered it was too late to give a screening because Carpentier was due to make his appearance at League Park at 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. Lebensburger decided to wait until after the show. The Frenchman was staying in his private car in New York Central yards. Lebensburger arranged to bring down a projecting machine and show the film in the Pullman parlor.

It then developed that the supply of electrical "juice" was insufficient. A hurry up call for wires was sent out—and answered. After much maneuvering Lebensburger finally got a connection on one of the boats lying in the local harbor, and the screening began.

Carpentier was immensely pleased. The sporting editors of the various Cleveland papers were present and voted "The Wonder Man" an excellent production. After the screening the Frenchman played host to the assembled visitors with a 3 o'clock breakfast.

New Yorkers Want to Be "Shunshine" Girls

Somewhat the word was spread when Hampton Del Ruth, supervising director of Fox Sunshine Comedies, arrived in New York about ten days ago, that a plan was afoot to engage a number of new beauties for the Sunshine Comedies. Since the Fox annual convention adjourned and Del Ruth has taken possession of an office in the new Fox building in West 55th street, dozens of pretty girls daily have presented themselves at the Casting Department inquiring for "the gentleman who is selecting the girls for the Sunshine Comedies."

Paramount Stars Win Popularity Contest

Paramount stars have been returned the winners in a second popularity contest conducted by Para Todos, a prominent Brazilian magazine widely read by motion picture patrons. The contest included two divisions, to determine the most popular actor and the most popular actress. In the former division William S. Hart received 10,956 votes, a lead of nearly 1,500 votes over his nearest competitor, Wallace Reid finished third in this contest. Dorothy Dalton was adjudged to be the most popular actress, having a total vote of 7,986 votes.

"A Live Wire Hick" a "A Flying A" Picture

"A Live-Wire Hick," adapted from American's "New York Luck," one of William Russell's big successes, will follow "The Week-End," a Cosmo Hamilton popular novel recently screened.

Pathe Gets Capitol Cartoons

THE world rights to the celebrated "Capitol Travellaughs" produced by Hy Mayer, internationally famous cartoonist, which have been feature at the Capitol theatre, New York, since its opening, have been taken over by Pathe Exchange, Inc. Paul Binnet, Vice President and General Manager of the great distributing organization, concluded the contract with Edward Howes, representing the Morrell Realty Corporation, owners of the Capitol theatre. Pathe takes possession of the Mayer creations immediately following their showing at the Capitol which has pre-release rights to each of the series. Beginning sometime in August, the "Travellaughs" will be incorporated in the Pathe Review.

Hy Mayer, the clever cartoonist who imparts education with a laugh and who lectures on the curtain rather than before the curtain, began his art career in Cincinnati in 1887. In the subsequent thirty-three years, his drawings have appeared in practically every paper and magazine throughout the entire world. Mayer's drawings are instructive because human nature is his keynote, the wild world his studio, the sky his light and the people his actors.

One of Mayer's earliest successes was a series under the caption, "Wormseye Views" appearing in "Life" and which was copied all over the world. In later years, after having had his cartoons published in the Century, Harper's, Scribners' and other leading American magazines, the more clearly defined humorous side of Mayer's nature appeared in the compilation of two albums—"In Laughaud" and "Fantasies in Ha Ha." Mayer found an outlet for many of his quips while editor-in-chief of "Puck," a position he held for seven years. Later, and for a period of ten years, Mayer produced the "Impressions of the Passing Show," topical cartoon feature in the New York Times. Shortly afterward, Mayer created the "Kiss-Me-Doll," winning a world of popularity.

It was Hy Mayer whose hand was first seen drawing directly under the eye of the camera in motion pictures. His sudden change from the magazine to the screen is best explained in his own words: "The advance of time, the birth and development of the motion picture industry caused me to consider the proposition of the best method of reaching a desired audience—both from the standpoint of numbers and appreciation," Mayer explains. "The motion picture screen proved the best solution. Despite wonderful circulations of certain magazines, my audiences were limited. But on the screen—well, my circulation, as one might call it, became approximately 5,000,000 a day."

Coinciding with the opening of the Capitol theatre, Mayer created and developed his "Travellaugh" idea, a sort of combination of science with drawn cartoons in which Mayer uses the people as his subjects, not scenes. For instance, Mayer finds material at the Bronx Zoo, the East Side, Greenwich Village and Coney Island. He even finds certain canine types which he loves to compare with the types found among human beings in his work.

"Loew Is Still an Exhibitor"

MARCUS LOEW, president of Loew's, Inc., addressing the Metro exchange managers and district managers at their recent convention at the Hotel Astor, explained the purchase by Loew's, Inc., of a controlling interest in Metro Pictures Corporation as a matter of self-protection to himself as an exhibitor, in order to insure his string of theatres a continuous supply of first class attractions.

"I am an exhibitor first, last and all the time," he said, "and because I have become interested in a big producing organization does not mean that I have changed my attitude. When I effected a business affiliation with Metro I had no intention of opposing other independent exhibitors. I have no such intention now. I want to help rather than fight other exhibitors."

"My watchword is co-operation. There's more to be gained by working together every time than in fighting. A motion picture war would be disastrous to the industry. I want exhibitors to co-operate and I want to co-operate with them."

"This is my answer to rumors that have been spread—you probably have heard them—by people who want to embarrass me."

"Let me tell you that I am taking absolutely no hand in the producing end of Metro Pictures Corporation. The two organizations are separate and distinct. I have always been absolutely satisfied with Metro productions and I'm more than satisfied with them now. I take no credit for those productions. I have nothing to do with them. The producing end of Metro is up to the president of the corporation, Richard A. Rowland. And it's going to continue to be up to him. My end of the business is the exhibiting end and that's the only end for which I assume responsibility. For the productions I have absolute faith in Mr. Rowland's judgment."

Would Rather Co-operate Than Oppose Showmen, He Says

Mr. Loew went on to explain, however, that the new capital he had brought to Metro would enable it to keep on expanding in the producing line, and, with the enlargement of the screen output, the general quality would be improved.

"The present Metro output satisfies me," said Mr. Loew, "and, isfies my patrons. 'Alias Jimmy isfies my patrons. 'Alits Jimmy Valentine' with Bert Lytell and 'Shore Acres' with Alice Lake are as popular with my theatre patrons as any productions I have ever shown. 'Old Lady 31' from both the critics and the public got unstinted praise, and Viola Dana in 'Dangerous to Men' and May Allison in 'The Cheater' were reliable feature attractions everywhere."

"I expect Metro will make about fifty pictures during the coming year, and fifty pictures insure me a constant supply of first class entertainment. Mr. Rowland estimates the cost of production will be more than $9,000,000. He expects to spend from $125,000 to $250,000 on each of these productions. Then, in addition to the producing studios in Hollywood and New York, there's to be the third studio on Long Island, which I figure to cost about $2,000,000. The three studios have to be operating to make all the pictures Mr. Rowland intends to have produced."

Frank Campeau Added to Dwan's Cast

The cast of Allan Dwan's sixth independent production to be presented by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation through First National has been augmented by the addition of Frank Campeau. Mr. Campeau has been assigned the leading "heavy," a type of characterization in which he has proved himself to be without equal.

Special Pictures Opens Three New Exchanges

Three new exchanges are being added to the organization of the Special Pictures Corporation, according to announcement made this week by H. J. Roberts, sales manager. They will be located at Salt Lake City, Milwaukee, and Albany

Vitagraph Announces Film

Will Start August 1st to Produce New "Wallingford" Story

"THE Son of Wallingford," written by George Randolph Chester in collaboration with Mrs. Chester, has been selected by Albert E. Smith as another Vitagraph special production. The work of filming will be started about August first, it is announced this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester have been busy for several months past writing "The Son of Wallingford," and have now practically completed the novel. This will be published serially in one of America's best known magazines, which will run the opening instalment within the next few weeks. During the serial publication of the novel, production on the film version will be in progress at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio under the personal supervision of Mr. Chester, and the picture will be released at the time of the publication of the final instalment in the magazine. The novel will also make its appearance in book form at that time.

Mr. Chester, who is editor-in-chief of Vitagraph and Mrs. Chester will put the story in scenario form, and will assist in the selection of the special cast for "The Son of Wallingford."

George Randolph Chester, it will be recalled, is internationally known in the world of letters as the creator of that lovable vagabond, J. Rufus Wallingford, a fiction character referred to among English-speaking peoples more frequently than any of the creations of Charles Dickens. While J. Rufus and his side-partner, "Blackie Daw," will appear in the new adventures of the Wallingford family, "The Son of Wallingford" will not be in any way a sequel to the earlier stories of Wallingford.

8,742 Draw Clara's Eyes

Amateur Artists Strive to Draw Clara Kimball Young's Pretty Eyes

NO stronger proof of the popularity of Clara Kimball Young could be found than in the results of the contest which has just closed, in which 8,742 of her admirers of artistic talent participated in a competition for the most faithful drawing of Miss Young's famous eyes. The drawings submitted have been pouring in since the first announcement of the contest was made in the December issue of Photoplay Magazine. Amateurs only were allowed to participate, despite many anxious inquiries from professionals to try their gifted hands at the mysterious "Eyes of Young." The judges were Clara Kimball Young herself, Rolf Armstrong, cover artist of Photoplay Magazine, and James R. Quirk, publisher of Photoplay.

The possible winners were first sifted down to fifty, and by a process of elimination were reduced to nine. Drawings were submitted from all over the United States, and $500 in prizes were distributed to the nine winners, who live in seven different states. Illinois took two of the prizes; including the first prize, and New York made off with two more. An interesting variety of sketches were sent in, including oil-paintings, pencil sketches, water-colors and crayons.

The lucky artist who took first prize was Miss Alma M. Carlson of Chicago, Ill., who received $150 for her excellent pencil sketch. Her reproduction was a speaking likeness, with perfect shade effect, and faithful in every detail. Judging from the many letters that accompanied the offerings, the artists had to make repeated visits to the theatres to catch another glimpse of the puzzling eyes of Clara Kimball Young.

Equity Has Curtiss Film

To Release and Distribute Edith Taliaferro Six-Reel Production

ANNOUCEMENT is made by Equity Pictures that they have acquired from the Curtiss Pictures Corp. the domestic rights to the release and distribution of a six reel feature starring Edith Taliaferro, and called "Keep to the Right." The scenario is by the well-known American author, Robert Bronson Stockbridge, and the picture is directed by John G. Adolph.

Although the scenario had been in the hands of the director for months, it was definitely decided not to begin work till the most suitable star could be obtained for the feminine lead. Edith Taliaferro, whose fame on the legitimate stage has stamped her as one of the most fascinating actresses of the present day, was finally secured, with an all-star cast.

"Keep to the Right" promises to add new laurels to Equity's triumphs. The story forms one of the most gripping romances ever presented on the screen, and in the course of its shifting scenes takes the spectator through two continents.

Jerome Storm Leaves Ray

Directed Star in Fourteen Pictures; Now Seeks Wider Scope

JEROME STORM, who has directed Charles Ray in his last fourteen pictures has resigned from the Ray organization following the completion of "Peaceful Valley," the star's first National production, the final scenes of which were filmed last week. The director has not divulged his future plans, but it is likely that he eventually will make productions under his own name.

Mr. Storm has been responsible for the directorial perfection of all the Ray productions during the past two years, thus his name, as well as that of the star, has come to stand for superior entertainment in the mind of the public.

"I regret that I feel it necessary to part with Mr. Ray," stated Mr. Storm when he learned that the announcement had become public. "Work with him has been an inspiration which I truly appreciate. I consider Mr. Ray a genius, and I know that his ability and personality will carry any picture no matter who directs it. Thus for the sake of my own ambition, I decided to take the step which I have contemplated for a long time but which I continually postponed because of the fine association with the star."

Before becoming the official director for Mr. Ray, Mr. Storm directed Emil Bennett in five pictures. He was associated with Thomas H. Ince as a director for three years, and was an actor in the Ince stock company for three and a half years prior to directing. His experience on the stage before entering pictures, cover five years, during which time he served as director and business manager as well as an actor.

"Slim Princess" Stars Mabel Normand

Mabel Normand's third and last picture for the current Goldwyn season will be "The Slim Princess," an adaptation of George Ade's stage success, directed by Victor Schertzinger. According to Goldwyn's releasing system, definite release dates are not assigned to productions; instead a number are made available for exhibitors at the same time. "The Slim Princess" is among those scheduled for the summer months.

With only three pictures made during the season, Miss Normand has established a precedent that may, it is said, have an influence on Goldwyn's future policy in handling the comedienne. Starting with "Jinx," one of the greatest matinee pictures ever produced, following with the inimitable "Pinto," the story of the western cowgirl who breaks into New York society, and concluding with "The Slim Princess" each of the Mabel Normand productions has been a special picture.

Samuel Merwin Novel Being Picturized

"The Passionate Pilgrim," Samuel Merwin's famous novel which ran serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is now in the process of picturization by Cosmopolitan Productions, under the direction of Robert G. Vignola. The cast so far engaged consists of Matt Moore, Charles Gerard, Arthur McDonald, Tom Ryan, Albert Riccardi, Frankie Mann, Ruby De Remer, Claire Whitney and Helen Lindroth.

The DeHavens with A. S. Kane

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven have effected a tie-up during the past week with the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation. The noted pair of comedians will henceforth be affiliated with Mr. Kane who will handle their business with the First National Exhibitors Circuit, through which their productions are to be released, and who will supervise all the Eastern interests of these stars.

While in New York City last month, Mr. Carter De Haven made the preliminary arrangements whereby the Kane corporation is to take over the business affairs of the star and his wife in their forthcoming First National productions. Negotiations concluded during the past week complete the affiliation of one of the best known figures in the producing end of the business and this distinguished pair of front rank luminaries.

The news of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven and Arthur S. Kane received distinctly favorable comment from keen observers of the picture business. It was pointed out that the De Havens under the supervision of a film man of Mr. Kane's acknowledged standing are in a position to supersede in a large way their previous successes, and are assured of bringing out productions that combine all the big qualities of pre-established box-office value.

The new affiliation of Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven brings to attention the rapid rise in popularity of this couple, and marks another milestone in their progress as a first class film attraction. The De Havens are credited with being among the top-notchers in their particular field, and are rated as big drawing cards. Their new era of production under the First National banner in smashing Broadway comedy successes is confidently expected to establish them more than ever in the front rank of universally known picture personalities.

In a statement from the Kane offices, President Arthur S. Kane announces the latest acquisition of his company and predicts tremendous business possibilities arising from the new affiliation of the De Havens with First National. The statement reads:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that we are in a position to announce the culmination of negotiations between Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven and the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation whereby the career business interests of this distinguished pair of comedians will be handled through our offices and these artists are to become affiliated with our corporation.

"The forthcoming production activities of Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven under the First National banner certainly mark a great stride toward in the film career of these already established picture attractions known throughout the country as capable and dexterous interpreters of comic roles through many victorious years on the legitimate stage Mr. and Mrs. De Haven have even outdone their previous fine work since making their advent in the motion picture field. They represent a particularly effective and popular side of our daily human relations and by their capacity for rendering the comic side of actual daily domestic problems in their amusing aspects, have established for themselves a unique position among performers for the camera.

"For exhibitors it is especially interesting to note that Mr. and Mrs. De Haven will bring their recognized personalities and talents to the fore in great big amusing vehicles adapted from stage successes of wide reputation. The combination of these luminaries in high standard productions of famous successes furnishes of course, an unbeatable array of real money values. They represent the stuff of which box-office supremacy is built. For the De Havens under First National we freely predict great things and we desire to express our complete satisfaction at being allied with a production unit of such high possibilities and standing."

"Passers-By" Booked at Capitol

"PASSERS-BY," J. Stuart Blackton's screen version of the stage success by C. Haddon Chambers, has been booked to the Capitol theatre by the New York Exchange of Pathe. It will be the feature attraction at the Metropolitan playhouse during the week of June 20th. Samuel L. Rothapel, who has just assumed the managing directorship of the Capitol, saw "Passers-By" soon after he came to New York and was thoroughly impressed by the Blackton production. He plans to give the photodrama wide exploitation, for he regards it as one of the best examples of the cinema art that has been released this year.

Herbert Rawlinson, who plays the lead in "Passers-By," is an established favorite at the Capitol, where he has appeared in a series of detective pictures during the last six months. In the role of Peter Waverton, Rawlinson assumes the part which thousands of New York theatre-goers remember as played in the stage version by Charles Cherry and Richard Bennett. Two other prime favorites with New York audiences are prominent in the cast—William J. Ferguson, who plays Pine, the butler, and Tom Lewis, who portrays Nighty, the caddy. Mr. Ferguson only recently closed his New York engagement in "The Little Whopper," a musical comedy which played an entire season at the Casino theatre. In the last few months Tom Lewis has been a headliner at the Palace theatre, and on Sunday night, June 6th, he was featured in the Lambs' Gambol at the Hippodrome.

In addition to Lewis and Ferguson, another well known character actor, Dick Lee, is included in the cast. Lee is favorably known for his remarkable character delineations, and as Burns, the derelict in "Passers-By," he gives one of the most finished performances of his career.

Leile Valentine, who has the leading female role, is well known on stage and screen. She played for three years in "The Boomerang," on tour, and in her film career has appeared with Olive Thomas and other stars.

Young Charles Stuart Blackton, six year old son of Commodore Blackton, plays a highly important part as Little Peter. The young star gives a most competent performance, and offers great exploitation possibilities. He is known to thousands of film enthusiasts for his work in the "Country Life" series, produced by Paula Blackton, and for his efforts in other pictures produced by Commodore Blackton. He had a very important part in "The Moonshine Trail."

"Passers-By," said to be the biggest achievement of Blackton's long motion picture career, is being booked in the finest type of theatres in the country. It is an elevating production based upon human elements with which C. Haddon Chambers was so thoroughly familiar.

Commodore Blackton has achieved what other producers have attempted without much success—the transference to the screen of the real atmosphere of London, including the most realistic fog and night scenes. In order to obtain the fog effects, which were essential to the success of the picture, he spent weeks devising a new photographic invention, the secret of which he carefully guards. Those who have been caught in a London fog will realize the perfectness of atmosphere furnished by the director-producer in "Passers-By."

"39 East" Is Started by Realart

Constance Binney started work recently on the film version of "39 East" for Realart, in New York City. It was in this play a little over a year ago that Miss Binney made her first popular triumph on the stage and was greeted widely as one of the country's most promising young actresses.

The romantic comedy is the work of Rachel Crothers, who has been America's most successful woman playwright. Among her plays are "Old Lady 31," "A Little Journey," "Mother Carey's Chickens," "The Heart of Paddy Whack," "Our selves," "Young Wisdom," "Once Upon a Time," "The Coming of Mrs. Patrick" and "Myself Betina."

Miss Binney opened in "39 East" early in the Spring of 1919 at the Broadhurst Theatre. On the opening night she carried off the acting honors of the production and almost instantly found herself greeted as a star.

Anita Stewart Will Come East Soon

On the completion of "Sowing the Wind," which is now being made at the Coast, Anita Stewart will come east to spend the summer. It is expected that Mr. Mayer will also come east as soon as Miss Stewart and Mrs. Chaplin have finished the productions in which they are now working.

"Human Stuff" Release Date Is Named

Universal announces the release of Harry Carey's latest picture, "Human Stuff," for June 28th. It is an adaptation from a story by Tarkington Baker. It was directed by Reeves Eason.

Carey is capably supported by Mary Charleston, as the girl who hopes to win him; Rudolph Christian, as his father; Ruth Fuller Golden, as his sister; Fontaine La Rue, as a Spanish girl; Joe Harris, as the owner of a neighboring ranch; Charles LeMoine, as his foreman and by a host of other popular people act in congenial roles.

Critics' Verdict Favorable

Kellerman Picture Well Received by Press Critics on West Coast

SOL LESSER is in receipt of a wire from his Los Angeles office, quoting the reviews on the Annette Kellerman production, "What Women Love," the premier of which was given at the Temple theatre, Santa Ana, Calif., on June 1. Mr. Lesser is highly elated at the expressions of the press, as he feels that in Los Angeles, where critics see, hear and eat pictures, a production must have considerable merit before receiving the following criticisms.

May Markson of the Record says, "Retrospectively different production, some remarkable underwater scenes."

Grace Kinesley of the Times says, "A hummingbird, fresh, bubbling, thoroughly delightful from all standpoints. Reveals Annette Kellerman as delightful comedienne in a role in which she presents an entirely new self to the world. Sol Lesser will give all directors a run for their money."

Guy Price of the Herald says, "Lightning like action, marvelous submarine photography, subtle situations, novel pieces of comedy business, well-woven love story with melodramatic climaxes that furnish a variety of entertaining features."

Maudie Chatham of the Examiner says, "Without a doubt it will be a sensation with its novelty and excellence. Miss Kellerman is the speediest worker on the screen to day, even throwing the strenuous Doug Fairbanks in the shade by a safe margin. Every inch of the six reels is crammed with action."

Monroe Lathrop of the Express says, "An assured winner. Miss Kellerman alone among women stars could do the things she does with grace and physical snap."

All the critics agree that the picture gives Wheeler Oakman, who plays opposite Miss Kellerman, a role which shows new insight into his dramatic ability. Also that the entire cast, settings, photoplay titles, and story are of the highest order.

Imposter Is Posing as Courtney Cooper

Cosmopolitan Productions states that an imposter posing as Courtney Ryley Cooper and as the author of the Boston Blackie stories under the "nom de plume" of Jack Boyle has fleeced several Los Angeles producers and is now in New York, according to a telegram received from the coast by R. L. Giffen from Courtney Ryley Cooper. Cosmopolitan Productions particularly is interested in the matter since it has only recently signed a contract with Jack Boyle, who is in the East, whereby it acquires all motion picture rights to all his stories.

British Regatta Scenes Used in Metro Picture

Metro has just received from England pictures of the Henley Regatta, which will be used in the forthcoming production of the spectacular melodrama, "The Marriage of Mary," by Cecil Raleigh. The scenes show close-ups of the races and of the arrival of King George and Queen Mary in the Royal Barge. There are also scenes showing the crowds and the shifting panorama of the Thames.

Hodkinson Announces "The Green Flame"

"The Green Flame" directed by Ernest C. Warde, is the next Kerrigan production, following his two latest successes, "Number 99" and "The Dram Cheater." The popular star is said to have one of the best parts in his career as a screen favorite. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation reports a continued demand for "Kerrigan pictures," especially for "Live Sparks" and "30,000," and expects great summer business on "The Green Flame."

In the company surrounding J. W. Kerrigan in "The Green Flame" are: Fritz Brunette, Jay Morley, Edwin Wallock, Myles McCarthy, Claire De Brey, and William Moran.

J. Warren Kerrigan, as Frank Markham, is in wrong twice in twenty-four hours. For one thing he gives the wrong girl flowers. He is left alone in a taxi, where appearances are all against him. The villain of "The Green Flame" is an excellent characterization. He makes a very convincing villain, and certainly gets all that is coming to him in the last two reels.

Priscilla Dean Begins Another on the Coast

Production on Priscilla Dean's new picture, "Outside the Law," has begun at Universal City, Cal. Tod Browning, who directed the volatile star in "The Virgin of Stamboul" also is in charge of her current production. He also wrote the story. Among those already selected for the cast are Lon Chaney, Wheeler Oakman, Ralph Lewis and E. A. Warren.

Unique Titling Will Aid "Midchannel"

A new departure is marked by the titling of Clara Kimball Young's next production, according to an announcement by Equity Pictures. Those who have read Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "Midchannel," or who have seen it produced on the legitimate stage ten years ago, with Ethel Barrymore in the feminine lead, will recall that the dramatic language used in the play forms one of its chief charms.

Accordingly Director Harry Garson hit on the novel idea of pre-serving the punch and pepper of dialogue in the sub-titles of the film. By this means nothing of the expressiveness of the play will be lost, while much in the way of sumptuous scenic effects and properties, that could not be embodied on the stage, will be introduced.

"Jenny Be Good" to Be at Broadway House

Mary Miles Minter's latest picture for Realart, "Jenny Be Good," adapted from the novel by Wilbur Finley Fauley, has been booked as the attraction at the Rialto theatre, New York, by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld for the week of July 4th.

In "Jenny Be Good," Miss Minter is said to enact the strongest dramatic role she has ever attempted as a star. Reports from various important cities about the country have given unqualified approval to Miss Minter's steady advance to the foremost rank of the screen's dramatic artists and a number of big exhibitors have declared "Jenny Be Good" the best picture and box office attraction the star has ever made.

Sidney Bracey, for years a famous Gilbert and Sullivan light opera tenor in England and Australia, has been engaged to play an important character role in Wanda Hawley's second starring vehicle upon which work has been started at the Realart Studios in Hollywood.

Sam Woods, former assistant to Cecil B. DeMille, and, more recently director for Wallace Reid and Ethel Clayton, has been engaged to direct the third Wanda Hawley production, which will be started in a short time.

Robertson-Cole Buys A Ranch

Purchases 460 Acres of Land in Santa Monica, Cal.

To finish the task of giving to its producing units situated on the Pacific Coast the most complete possible equipment, Robertson-Cole has acquired an extensive property at Santa Monica, California, which is to be known as the "R-C Ranch." Its acquisition supplements the purchase of ground in Los Angeles, announced last week, upon which the erection of a studio, to house the producing units, has been begun.

The "R-C Ranch" was secured for the purpose of giving the various producing units which are making pictures for Robertson-Cole, open space on which to make their exterior scenes. Work on some of the early releases of Robertson-Cole already has been started at the ranch, and within a short time all Robertson-Cole exterior scenes which do not call for an extraordinary background will be made here.

There is a total of 460 acres of ground in the "R-C Ranch" which is so situated that it has a broad sweep of ocean along one side. Besides this feature, which provides admirably for the making of beach, sea-side, marine and deep-water productions, there is a great wealth of other sorts of backgrounds. The ranch contains streams of several sizes, ranging from a river down to a brook. Not only has it flat grounds, but there are great stretches of rolling country, as well as an elevation high enough to furnish mountains.

The ranch, as it now stands, is partly improved, containing a number of buildings of various sorts, which may be used in the making of a wide variety of pictures. It is the intention of Robertson-Cole immediately to start further improvements of the "R-C Ranch," so that it will equal, before many months have passed, any similar tract in the world.

Street scenes of many types are needed, and these will be started at once. Then there are to be many types of country house, from the humble cottage through to the mansion of the wealthy, besides every other sort of building fashioned after the architecture of many lands, as Robertson-Cole pictures are cosmopolitan, not only in their appeal and scale, but in their stories and locations.

The "R-C Ranch" will be under the direction of H. R. Hough. He is general manager of Robertson-Cole Studios, Inc., the company which was recently incorporated to erect the Robertson-Cole Studio which is under way in Los Angeles, and which will improve the ranch now taken over. Aided by a large staff of assistants, Mr. Hough will execute the Robertson-Cole plans which call for the complete operation of both studio and ranch at the earliest possible date.

The acquisition by Robertson-Cole of the "R-C Ranch" is another movement in the series which has been executed within the last six months with the aim of making the company the distributor of pictures which are surpassed by none. With its producing units scattered, and forced to rent at extravagant prices the equipment which they needed, Robertson-Cole realized the great need of a central producing point, as well as a central control.

Consequently the plan of a central studio, as well as a central point for the making of exteriors, was made, and carried out. On his recent trip to the Coast, A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice president and general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, looked at certain properties from which were selected, after his return to New York, that on which the studio is being built, and that which comprises the "R-C Ranch."

Marion Davies Acclaimed Ovation for Star Following Ritz-Carlton Showing of "Restless Sex"

MORE than a thousand specially invited guests thronging the big grand ball room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on Wednesday evening of last week to see a private showing of Cosmopolitan Productions' "The Restless Sex," stood up at the close and gave Marion Davies, the star, a spontaneous ovation.

Huge banks of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, ferns, and potted palms, were arranged about in a beautiful decorative effect, and the foyer immediately outside the grand ball room was filled with baskets of flowers sent to Miss Davies by her many friends. During the showing of the picture a twenty-piece orchestra under the leadership of Prof. James Bradford furnished the incidental music.

A partial list of those present as submitted by Cosmopolitan Productions, included Alice Joyce, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, Joseph M. Schenck, Vera Gordon, William Roselle, John W. Considine, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. MacLean, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Pearllyn Stanleys, Harrison Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borzage, Robert Z. Leonard, Frank Murray, George D. Baker, Hamilton King, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wanger, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vance, Daniel Frohman, Mr. Joseph Vance, Edgar Selden, Alma Rubens, Montagu Love, Dora Davidson, Gaston Glass, Anna Wheaton, Mrs. Irene Loftis, Matt

Moore, Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, Arline Savage, Mr. and Mrs. John McGinnis, Theodor May, Joseph King, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Kerry, and Albert Capellani. In Miss Davies' personal party which occupied the entire balcony were Judge and Mrs. Douras, her parents, Mrs. George Van Cleave, Paul Chalfonte, Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Page and Henry M. Hobart.

This is the first time that anyone outside of the company's officials has seen "The Restless Sex," and the showing was only for personal friends. The public will not be privileged to see it for several weeks when it is scheduled to open for a pre-release New York run at a Broadway theatre.

Charles Hutchison Does Daredevil Stunt

Charles Hutchison, his director, W. S. Van Dyke, and a company of extras made a journey into the mountains to film a thrill stunt for the sixth episode of the star's serial for Pathe. Hutchison made a jump from an oil derrick sixty feet high to a tree nearby without sustaining even a scratch, it is reported. This forthcoming Pathe thriller, the working title of which is "The Double Adventure," was put into production at the Brunton studios April 19th.

Gives Them Chance to View Two-Reelers Well Ahead of Release

FULL opportunity to view all short-subjects well in advance of their release is promised by Educational Film Corporation as the result of the operation of its own exchange system. Each office will be supplied with copies of all subjects several weeks ahead, and exhibitors will be invited to inquire as fully into the quality of one and two reel pictures as they do into their features. This plan is made possible because the company and its various producing units are well ahead of their schedule.

"Four Times Boiled" was the initial two reel comedy release, this being scheduled for the week of June 20. However, some of the exchanges were not quite ready for business at that time, and this picture remains to be first shown in some territories. The second of these comedies, "An Overall Hero," has been completed, and while the necessary scenes were being retaken for this, the third comedy was made and work is now starting on the fourth. All of these feature animals and Arthur Nowell, the wonderful child-actor, are under the direction of Wm. S. Campbell.

"Mermaid Comedies," is a new brand, the first year's output including six comedies made under the direction of Jack White, of Sennett and Sunshine directional fame, and six featuring Lloyd Hamilton. The two first of the Mermaids are now in the Educational vaults. "A Fishy Start," the first White comedy, in which Marvel Rea has the leading role, and the initial Lloyd Hamilton, "Duck Inn." Work is well under way on the third and fourth will be begun in a short time.

"Torchy" and "Torchy Comes Through," the two first of the "Torchy" Comedies, made from the celebrated stories by Sewell Ford and produced by Master Films, Inc., have been entirely completed, and work is starting on the third. Johnny Hines, the comedian, is reported to be a bear for work and with the first release of the "Torchy" set for the week of July 11 he will be well on the third by that time.

Since signing the contract which provides for the distribution of all two-reel Christie Comedies through Educational, Al. and Charles Christie have been speeding things up in Los Angeles. The first two, "Kiss Me Caroline," with Bobby Vernon and "A Sensitive Siren" with Fay Tincher are now completed and in the New York offices. The third Christie Comedy, with Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Devore, has been and is now being cut and titled in Los Angeles.

Jack Pickford, Mabel Normand and Others Making New Pictures

WITH the completion of "The Man Who Had Everything" at Goldwyn's Culver City studios, Jack Pickford will take a few days' rest before starting work in a film version of George Ade's "Just Out of College," a comedy that enjoyed great popularity on the stage a number of years ago. The leading character in "Just Out of College" is perfectly adopted to the personality of the young Goldwyn star, who will continue under the direction of Al Green.

Another interesting announcement from the Culver City Studios concerns the forthcoming appearance of Mabel Normand in "Head Over Heels," the successful stage play in which Mitzi Hajos was starred. As in all of her recent photoplays, "Jinx," "Emo" and "The Slim Princess," now ready for release, the Goldwyn comedienne will be directed by Victor Schertzinger. Those selected for the supporting cast, thus far, are Otto Hoffman, Hugh Thompson and Doris Deane.

During the past week a seventy-five piece symphony orchestra has figured in the making of scenes for "The Great Lover," a film version of Leo Ditrichstein's renowned stage triumph being produced under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

E. Mason Hopper has finished the picturization of Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "It's a Great Life" and is ready to resume work on the Booth Tarkington "Edgar Comedies," the next one in the series going under the title of "Edgar's Sunday Courtship." Director Harry Beaumont is in the midst of "Stop Thief," in which Tom Moore is being starred, and Reginald Barker, with an all-star company, is still at Catalina Island working on an elaborate version of a dramatic story of the sea by Ben Ames Williams.

Newest Star Begins Work

Bebe Daniels Starts on "You Never Can Tell" for Realart

BEBE DANIELS started work at the Realart studios in Hollywood on July 7th on her first production as a star, "You Never Can Tell." Many of her friends were on hand to watch the taking of the first scenes and to wish her the best of luck in her new career.

Miss Daniels was recently installed at the studios in a star dressing room along with Wanda Hawley, who has completed there one picture as a Realart star and is now at work on her second. The two are old companions at the Lasky studios where they worked together in De Mille productions and as leading women for several male stars.

Chester Franklin has been engaged to direct the new Realartist. He is a veteran and capable director with a number of highly successful productions to his credit. He comes to Realart after having completed a series of popular "kid" productions.

Helmuth Walton Bergman wrote the scenario for the picture from two stories by Grace Lovell Bryan, which were published in the Saturday Evening Post about six months ago, entitled "You Never Can Tell" and "Class." Mr. Bergman has been a continuity writer for many years and is best known for his work in adapting fifteen O. Henry stories for the screen.

The story selected for Miss Daniels' first vehicle is that of a girl of vaulting ambition. Dissatisfied with her home surroundings, where money is even scarcer than soap, she starts out to earn her own living. She gets a job behind the

The six pictures in which Miss Daniels appeared before becoming a Realart star were "Male and Female," "Everywoman" and "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. De Mille productions; "The Dancin' Fool" and "Sick Abed" with Wallace Reid, and "Hunting Trouble" with Robert Warwick.

"Week End" Nearly Ready

American Busy Titling, Tinting and Toning "Flying A" Picture

"THE Week End," a new "Flying A" special, filmed from the original script by Cosmo Hamilton, is undergoing the tinting, toning and titling processes. The American believes that the matter of titles is of the utmost importance, and, as the surplus of titles has been eliminated, as in all high class productions of the present day, those remaining, together with the illustrations, are worked out with the greatest care. The subtitles of this snappy comedy of "an unchaperoned weekend at Hideaway," are handled with a light touch entirely in keeping with the spirit of the story. The pastels which illustrate many of the scenes give a beautiful translucent quality to the picture on the screen through which one may perceive the vistas beyond. That the drawings are those of a finished artist is apparent. The pastels are interspersed with queer little cartoon-like sketches "in lighter vein" with a subtle play upon the words of the subtitles.

"The Week End" was produced at the Company's Santa Barbara studio under the expert direction of George L. Cox. Margarita Fisher receives excellent support from Milton Sills and Bertram Grassby. Also included in the cast are Mary Lee Wise, Harvey Clark, Mayme Kelso and Beverly Travers.

Rocket Corporation to Make Six Pictures

The Rocket Film Corporation, recently organized under the laws of California, is to open offices in Hollywood within the next week and plan to begin work on their first of a series of six pictures by July first. This company was organized by R. R. Rockett for two years business manager at Balboa studios and for the past year purchasing agent for the Universal Film Company's big plant at Universal City. Associated with Rockett in this enterprise is his brother A. L. Rockett, E. H. Christensen, S. C. Buchan, and C. E. Morgan. Six stories have been purchased and negotiations will be closed within a few days for director and leading people for the first production.

Sculptor Praises Artistry of "Shore Acres"

Lee Oscar Lawrie, famous sculptor, is another leader of his profession who has been won to high praise of motion pictures through the brilliant success of "Shore Acres," the Metro Special production featuring Alice Lake.

In a letter to Rex Ingram, who directed the big production, he praises the manner in which the story is told, its delicacy of touch and the photography. The letter has been added to the many that have already reached the Hollywood studios of the producing company.

Arthur F. Howe Invents Movie Card Game

Alfred F. Howe is the inventor of a new card game, which is said to be not only engrossing as entertaining, but which proves a comprehensive test for one's knowledge of personalities in the cinema art. The deck is of the usual dimensions and each card contains the portrait of a screen star and his or her autograph, together with half a dozen questions having to do with the individual's career. The game is a guessing one, the object of each player being to obtain and retain as many cards as possible through the lack of movie knowledge of his opponents.

Eleven Metro Pictures Ready

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION announces the completion of camera work on ten new special productions, and virtual completion of the eleventh, the eleven being the combined output of the company's two large studios situated respectively in Hollywood, California, and in New York. Of the eleven new productions ten are in the hands of editors, cutters and title writers, who will spend several weeks on them in the process of assembling them for release. With a few exceptions these big pictures will not be distributed by Metro to the trade until the early fall.

Eight of the specials were produced at Metro's western studios. They are "The Price of Redemption," starring Bert Lytell; "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," with an all-star cast; "The Saphire," co-starring William H. Crane and Buster Keaton; "Held in Trust," starring May Allison; "The Chorus Girl's Romance," starring Viola Dana; "The Mist Wife," featuring Alice Lake; "Hearts are Trumps," with an all-star cast; and "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," a C. E. Shurtleff production featuring Mitchell Lewis.

At the New York studios the following pictures are being completed: "Love, Honor and Obedience," an S-L production with an all-star cast; "The Marriages of Mayfair," with an all-star cast, and "Clothes," with an all-star cast including Olive Tell and Crawford Kent.

The first New York production to be completed is "Love, Honor and Obedience." This is an adaptation by Eugene Walter of Charles Neville Buck's novel, "The Tyranny of Weakness." The cast includes Wilda Bennett, Claire Whitney, Kenneth Harlan, Henry Harmon and E. J. Ratcliffe. The director

"The Marriages of Mayfair" is an adaptation by Julia Burnham of Cecil Raleigh's Drury Lane melodrama. The cast includes Thomas Ross, Wilfred Lytell, Frank Currier, Francis X. Conlan, Jack Crosby, Gladys Coburn, Thea Talbot and Florence Court. The director is George W. Terwilliger. "Clothes" is the stage drama by Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock in which Grace George starred some years ago. The scenario was written by Arthur Zelner. Fred Sittenham is director and Arthur Caldwell cameraman.

Bert Lytell's new production at Hollywood, "The Price of Redemption," is an adaptation of I. A. R. Wyllie's novel, "The Temple of Dawn." The scenario was written by June Mathis. Dallas M. Fitzgerald is the director and Sol Politio cameraman.

United States Leads, says Tracy

"THE United States has progressed faster than the rest of the world in developing the motion picture," says Louis Tracy, one of the best known British novelists, and the author of "The Silent Barrier." This novel is the first of the Tracy books to be done in pictures by Gibraltar Pictures, under the name of Louis Tracy Productions, Inc., released through W. W. Hodkinson Corp. He has watched the progress of "The Silent Barrier" from the book to the screen with intense interest.

The cast of the production he thinks especially good, as it includes Sheldon Lewis, Corinne Barker, Florence Dixon, Donald Cameron, Gladys Hulette, Fuller Mellich, and others.

Mr. Tracy admits that he was "among those who used to regard the cinema as merely an interesting if somewhat jerky medium of expression. That was in the days when imperfect mechanism gave us flickering, indistinct pictures and when dramatic action was represented by grotesque mummy born of the then existing conviction that an idea could only be 'put across' as we say here, by violent gesticulation, grimaces and contortions. How times have changed and convictions, too, mine among them."

British Novelist Admits Country's Lead in Production

The author of "The Silent Barrier" was in charge of the British Mission in New York during the war and was one of the first advisers of the British government to realize the enormous advantage that could be gained by intelligent use of the film.

It is impossible to over estimate the enormous influence of the motion picture present and future in furthering the ends of civilization," says the British novelist. "The modern picture drama is a marvel of subtlety, of technical and artistic excellence. Gone is the flickering film, gone is the gesticulating, grimacing mummer. Instead we have the greatest actors of our time revealing to us all the refinements of dramatic art without a spoken word."

"There is not a shadow of doubt that the United States has progressed faster than has the re-

"The Saphire" is an adaptation by June Mathis of "The New Henrietta," by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, founded on Emerson Howard's drama, "The Henrietta." "Held in Trust" is a dramatization of George Lydie Turner novel, which appeared in the Red Book Magazine. Sarah A. Mason wrote the scenario. John L. Ince, director; Jackson Rose, cameraman; and E. J. Shuller, art director.

"The Chorus Girl's Romance" was first told in short story form by E. Scott Fitzgerald under the title of "Head and Shoulders" in The Saturday Evening Post. Percy Heath made it into a screen play and William Dowling put it on as director. "The Mist Wife" stars Alice Lake as a woman who marries into a New York family where footmen and Harvard accent prevail. The story is founded on Julie Herne's stage play, "The Outsider." The adaptation was made by Lois Zellner and A. P. Younger. Edwin Mortimer is director.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" is an adaptation of the stage success by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan. The cast includes Eugene Pallone, Ruth Stonchouse, Kathleen Kuhlman and Henry Miller, Jr. The scenario is by June Mathis and A. P. Younger; W. M. Edmund, cameraman; and Sidney Ullman, interior designer.

"Hearts Are Trumps" is an adaptation by June Mathis of Cecil Raleigh's Drury Lane melodrama, produced under the direction of Rex Ingram.

"The Mutiny of the Elsinore" is a dramatization of Jack London's novel by A. S. Le Vain. Edward Sloman is director. The cast includes Mitchell Lewis, Helen Ferguson and William V. Mong.

mainder of the world in developing the motion pictures. Some of the American productions are superb in every way. So are some of the foreign ones, but not in the same proportion. But the encouraging thing is that everywhere the fact has been realized that there are few limitations to the possibility of motion picture drama.

"Everywhere great sums are being invested in this amazing new industry which promises to do more toward civilizing savage races and advancing backward ones than all the guns and punitive parties have done in a century of fighting."

Exhibitor Praises Fox News Reel

The kind of praise which offers real encouragement to a producer today has come to William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation and editor-in-chief of Fox News, the film newspaper which encircles the earth, from an exhibitor in Madril, Oklahoma. J. H. Long, owner of the Princess Theatre in Madril, is the theatre man who, unsolicited, has offered the highest possible praise to Fox News, the buy two-a-week.

Mounted Police Like Neilan Picture

Marshall Neilan's initial independent production, "The River's End," again received the official endorsement and praise from Canadians and members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, successors to the famous "Royal Northwest Mounted Police," which figures so prominently in the James Oliver Curwood story visualized by Mr. Neilan.

At the invitation of Joe F. Pierce, manager of the Allen theatre, Calgary, Inspector Spaulding and the local detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, viewed a special showing of "The River's End," given with the idea of getting the criticism of these experts, on the technical merits of the picture.

Fast Work Claimed on Convention Reels

Two hours after the Republican National Convention opened its session at the Coliseum in Chicago, International News Reels showing the assembling of the delegates, the opening of the session, and many of the nationally known delegates and candidates, were exhibited in the Chicago and suburban theatres. The scenes were made at eleven o'clock Tuesday morning which is one o'clock New York time, and finished prints ready for projection were at the New York theatre in time for the first show Wednesday evening. This is considered a record in speed and constitutes, says Cosmopolitan Productions, another "scoop" for International News Reels.

'Wolves of Kultur' to Be Shown in Parks

Neilan Takes Quick Trip

Producer Speeds to New York to Close Several Important Deals

MARSHALL Neilan, recently elected vice president of Associated Producers, Inc., arrived in New York last week and after a short business visit in which he closed several important deals, returned to California on Saturday to begin work on a plan of intensive Summer production, preparatory to the fall releasing season.

While in New York, Mr. Neilan held several conferences with executives of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in connection with his Summer producing plans involving future pictures to be released thru this organization in accordance with his present arrangements. Several interesting announcements are expected as a result of these meetings in the near future.

Regarding his plans for First National, releases to be distributed in the near future, Mr. Neilan announced that the title of his fourth independent production is "Dinty," and features Wesley Barry in the main part. The third Neilan picture for First National release following "The River's End" and "Don't Ever Marry" is now complete with the exception of the title.

On Mr. Neilan's return to his studio the plant will witness its busiest period since it was opened several months ago. In accordance with Mr. Neilan's new plans, Pete

Paramount Releases Two

"Paris Green," with Ray, and Dorothy Gish Pictures Are Issued

A TYPICAL Charles Ray picture bearing the more or less explicit title, "Paris Green," a Thomas H. Ince production, and Dorothy Gish in "Remodeling Her Husband," are the Paramount releases scheduled for June 13.

Julien Josephson, author of "The Rusher," "The Egg Crate Wallow," "Bill Henry" and other small town classics which have made Charlie Ray famous, wrote the story and scenario of "Paris Green."

Ann May plays opposite Ray in the role of Ninon Robinet, the little Parisienne, while Norris Johnson is the less faithful American girl. The remainder of the cast includes Bert Woodruff, Donald McDonald, Gordon D. Mullen, William Courtright, Ida Lewis and Otto Hoffman. The photography is the work of Chester Lyons.

The Dorothy Gish picture, "Remodeling Her Husband," has an added claim to distinction in the fact that it was directed by the star's equally famous sister, Lillian Gish. The latter was doubly qualified for her task, for not only has she mastered every detail of film technique during her long career in pictures under the supervision of David W. Griffith she possesses, of course, a thorough knowledge of her sister's talent and delightfully distinctive mannerisms.

For Miss Gish's leading man the legitimate stage was drawn upon, the choice falling upon James Rennie, who never had appeared in pictures before but whose work opposite Ruth Chatterton in "Moonlight and Honeyuckle" attracted much attention. The cast also includes Marie Burke, Downing Clarke and Frank Kingdom, the last named having been for years a conspicuous figure on the stage.

Cleveland Showing of "Married Life"

In the Grand Ball-Room of the Hotel Statler on Wednesday noon, June 9th, a large number of exhibitors witnessed a showing of "Married Life," Mack Sennett's latest five-reel comedy, featuring Ben Turpin. Phyllis Haver is Mr. Turpin's leading woman. The screening was arranged by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Ohio and E. M. Asher, Mr. Sennett's personal representative. A special orchestra entertained the audience with selections. Photos of the leading players were given to each one of those present.

Six Houses Play "Sex" at Same Time

Six theatres playing "Sex" at the same time in St. Louis, is the tribute paid J. Parker Read, Jr.'s productions starring Louise Glaum. These theatres are: The Arco, the Lafayette, the Gravano, the Novelty, the Maffitt and the Montgomery.

"Woman in His House" Stars Mrs. Chaplin

"The Woman in His House" is to be the title of Louis B. Mayer's First National release, starring Mildred Harris Chaplin, which has been almost six months in the making. The picture was directed by John M. Stahl from his original manuscript.

Shown without titles at the First National convention, held recently at Chicago, it proved to be as startling as it is beautiful and dramatic. So immense is the importance of this picture that Mr. Mayer has decided to hold it up until fall and then have it exhibited in the largest theatres of the country.

Martin Leaves 'After Six Weeks Visit

Having concluded a six weeks' study of American exploitation methods in the motion picture industry, Frederick Martin, advertising manager for the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of London, sailed for home recently. During his stay in the United States Mr. Martin made a complete tour of the country, spending several days in Hollywood at the Lasky studio. The leading motion picture theatres in New York City, Buffalo, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and other cities were inspected by Mr. Martin as a means of obtaining information of value to British exhibitors.

Goldwyn to Distribute Rothapfel's Ideas

For the benefit of exhibitors who are interested in the most modern angles of showmanship, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is prepared to supply, each week, programs of the "Rothapfel type of bill" as shown at New York's magnificent motion picture palace, the Capitol. This service will be supplied regularly to any exhibitor sending his name and address to the Goldwyn office.

"AN EASTERN WESTERN"

Directed by HAL ROACH

A TWO REEL COMEDY SPECIAL

Blase Critics Unite In A Paean Of Praise At The Surpassing Excellence Of The Wonderful Two Reel Lloyd Comedies;

"There has been more and better laughter on Broadway because of these comedies. They are funny . . . The house is kept laughing all the time . . . They have found clever, unexpected, original things for Lloyd to do,—stunts irresistibly risible . . . So thanks for the Lloyd comedies. They make people laugh whole-heartedly, healthily."—New York Times.

"'An Eastern Westerner' is a very good comedy . . . That Harold Lloyd is its star should be enough of a recommendation to those who have seen him before."—New York Tribune.

"'An Eastern Westerner', the best of its type since Mr. Lloyd's previous comedy ('Haunted Spooks') . . . Lloyd is more amusing than ever."—New York Telegraph.

"For unusual tricks and gags, for hilarious surprises or real plot, you will search long and far before coming upon the equal of the Lloyd picture. In 'Haunted Spooks' Lloyd shows new trick after new trick. His attempts at suicide, each one winding up with a preposterously funny surprise, the rapid action in the 'haunted' house, these are scenes that for sheer nonsensical comedy value attain the topmost heights. And the biggest laugh of the season, the one in which the Jewish gentlemen are revealed talking in the automobile, is destined to go down in history as a piece of tomfoolery par excellence."

Big Stories Help All Pathe's Features

Pathe's feature business is keeping pace with the growing progress recorded by its short subjects and serials sales department, largely due to the type of story the great distributing organization is now releasing. "The story is the thing," says Pathe, judging by the reception given by exhibitors to Augustus Thomas's "Rio Grande," produced by Edwin Carewe; "Sherry," George Barr McCutcheon's novel filmed by Edgar Lewis; "Simple Souls," adapted by Jesse D. Hampton from the book by Charles Hastings Turner, with Blanche Sweet in the leading role; and "The Deadlier Sex," written by Bayard Veiller, author of "The Thirteenth Chair." Miss Sweet also has the lead in "The Deadlier Sex."

Maigne's Assistants Reach New York

Faxon M. Dean and Bert Dorris, cameraman and assistant director, respectively, have arrived from the Coast to work with Director Maigne at the New York studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on "The Frontier of the Stars," with Thomas Meighan. Mr. Dean and Mr. Dorris were associated with Mr. Maigne on the production of "The Copperhead" and immediately after its completion went to the Coast with him to make "The Fighting Chance" with a special cast, and "A Cumberland Romance," with Mary Miles Minter, for which latter production they were loaned to Realart.

Fox Changes Name of Forthcoming Picture

William Fox has selected a new title for the film version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's story, "Myra Meets His Family," which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. This story adapted to the screen by Joseph F. Pollard at the Hollywood studios, is being filmed under the direction of Howard M. Mitchell in California with the beautiful Eileen Percy as its star. "The Husband Hunter" is the title adopted for this film, which is the second starring vehicle for Miss Percy.

No Slackening of Production

MIDSUMMER promises no let up in production activities at the Lasky studio and stars and directors are having no respite from their labors between pictures. Those who will start work on new pictures within the next few days are Directors George Melford and William DeMille, while those who shortly will be changing roles include Roscoe Arbuckle, Bryant Washburn and Wallace Reid.

Ethel Clayton already has begun work on her last picture to be made for Paramount prior to her vacation, after which she will go to London to make at least two pictures there for the company. Tom Forman is directing the present film, which is an adaptation by Mary O'Connor from Cynthia Stockley's short story, "Rosanne Ozanno." In this picture Miss Clayton depicts the character of a young girl who is obsessed by something in the nature of a charm placed upon her by a Malay woman who saved her from death when she was an infant and kept her in charge for two years. The woman gives her the power to hate well and a love for bright things. Thus when she grows up she has an inordinate passion for diamonds and whenever she comes to hate any individual that one invariably falls ill or has an accident. Rosanne indulges in diamond stealing in Kimberly, but escapes punishment and is finally saved from her obsessions through love. Jack Holt plays the leading male role. One of the features will be the beautiful costumes worn by the star. One gown, known as "The Queen of Sheba," weighs fifty pounds and is composed entirely of imitation pearls.

It seems probable that Cecil B. DeMille will not start work on his next special before the first of July or at least not until the last of June. The nature or title of it is as yet not announced. The producer has several stories in mind and from these will choose one which he will make. There are no announcements as yet regarding the cast, but it is understood that several new faces will appear.

George Melford will start this week on Opic Read's "The Jacklins," scenario by Frank Condon, with Monte Blue, Mabel Julienne Scott and Charles Ogle in the leading roles. A number of important settings are being constructed for this, and there will be a considerable amount of location work as well.

Summer to Mark Active Season for Famous Players Studios

Walter Woodie has just about completed the scenario for "The Traveling Salesman," which will afford a starring vehicle for Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle. The heavy-weight star of Paramount-Artcraft Pictures will be directed by Joseph Henabery. The leading woman has not yet been decided on.

Wallace Reid will start next week also on "The Charm School" by Alice Duer Miller, scenario by Tom Geraghty, and James Cruze will be the director. As yet there are no further selections in the matter of cast ready for announcement.

Bryant Washburn will begin in a short time on "Wanted: A Blonish" directed by Maurice Campbell with scenario by Douglas Bronston. This is an amusing story by a young man who is turned down by his Boston sweetheart because he has never accomplished anything of consequence. He starts out and becomes involved in a maze of intrigue with a lady of the chorus and others. He eventually wins the girl of his choice.

William DeMille is about ready to start on "His Friend and His Wife," by Cosmo Hamilton, which was recently published in book form. Following this, it is understood, he will produce "Footlights," by Rita Weiman, scenario by Olga Printzlau. Miss Weiman, besides being a playwright of note, is one of the best-known contributors to the Saturday Evening Post and her stories have won wide recognition for their uniform excellence.

A Big Year for Hodkinson Releasing Organization to Have Big Independent Productions

W. W. HODKINSON predicts that the pictures made by independent producers and released through the Hodkinson organization will be of an unusually high average quality this season.

Seventeen pictures were released through Hodkinson from April, 1919, to April, 1920, and many of these are winning a steadily widening market. The success of the Benjamin B. Hampton Productions, for instance, justifies the statement, that he has never made a failure, from "The Westerners," "The Stagebrusher," "Desert Gold" to "Riders of the Dawn."

For the eight months following, seventeen pictures are already scheduled for release, and the rumors are that numerous independent producers are in daily conference with W. W. Hodkinson in regard to the distribution of their product.

From every angle—story, cast, producer, amount of money expended and exploitation possibilities, each of these pictures takes high rank as quality product. The Kerrigan production, "No. 99" and "The Green Flame" provide this popular star two of the best stories in which he has ever acted.

W. W. Hodkinson gives as evidence of the guaranteed quality of forthcoming pictures, the fact that each one is made by separate producing units, each with a reason for existing. The producing units releasing through Hodkinson will include Benjamin B. Hampton, Irvin Willat, J. Parker Read, Jr., Robert Brunton, Dial Film Company, Louis Tracy Productions, Inc.

Old Spanish Mission Used for Location

The historic Spanish mission at San Juan Capistrano, between Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., will form the background for some of the most important scenes in "Hearts Are Trumps," a new Metro production. "Hearts Are Trumps" is from the Drury Lane melodrama by Cecil Raleigh.

Thomas Meighan Draws Cleveland Crowds

Before a crowd of 20,000, that stopped all traffic on the main thoroughfare in Cleveland, Thomas Meighan, star of Paramount Pictures, created a sensation by filming several scenes from his new production recently.

Meighan had previously announced that at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument Square he would select the ten prettiest girls to appear with him in a special picture. Traffic was blocked for two hours until the police reserves appeared and cleared passage for vehicles and street cars, while Meighan selected eighteen pretty girls for his picture.

The recent scenes which were taken will be incorporated in "The Frontier of the Stars," an adaptation from Albert Payson Terhune's story which will be Meighan's next Paramount picture.

"Notorious Miss Lisle" Released in August

Release date for "The Notorious Miss Lisle," starring Katherine MacDonald and which will be distributed by Associated First National Pictures Inc., has been set for August 2d.

The recent announcement stating that this production would not be released until February 14, 1921, was an error.

"House of Toys" Campaign Book Ready

A campaign book of the new American special, "The House of Toys," the six-act all-star photoplay written by Henry Russell Miller, is ready for distribution to exhibitors.

Merto Releases Announced

Lytell Coming in "Misleading Lady" and Foote in London Novel

"THE Misleading Lady," by Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey, has been purchased by Metro Pictures Corporation as a starring vehicle for Bert Lytell. It will be Mr. Lytell's first picture to be made at Metro's New York studios in West Sixty-first street following his return from California, where he spent nearly two years making special productions. The former stage success will be scenarioized by Arthur Zellner.

In addition Metro announces that Courtenay Foote, who appeared in the recent stage success "Adam and Eva," has left for Hollywood to play the leading role in "The Star Rover" for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc. This production is to be a special pictorialization of the novel of Jack London and will be released through Metro Pictures Corporation's system of exchanges.

"The Misleading Lady" was one of the big Broadway successes of several seasons ago and it was kept up for years on the road. The stage play had its settings in a country home on the Hudson and a bungalow in the Adirondacks. The screen play will have its backgrounds in South Africa, New York and Westchester as well.

Outside of Mr. Lytell, the only member of the cast yet engaged is Frank Currier, "the grand old man of Metro." Mr. Currier will play an escaped lunatic who surprised Craigan and the misleading lady in the mountain bungalow.

"Any Old Port" Given Release Date

"Any Old Port," a naughty, nautical comedy of life on the high seas is the latest Rolin offering which Pathe will release June 27th. "Snub," Pollard, comedian is starred in a comic seagoing role. Marie Mosquini, the little Italian beauty, Eddie Boland, the slicker, and "Sunshine Sambo" the little colored comedian, assist Pollard in his high-seas funmaking

"Great Day" Written by Prominent Authors

Two distinguished British authors are interested in the screening of "The Great Day," the first production of the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., at their new studios at Islington, London, namely, George R. Sims and Louis N. Parker, who collaborated in writing the sensational drama for Drury Lane from which the film is being made.

"The Red Lane" Is Set for July Release

The recent completion of "The Red Lane" at Universal City assures the early presentation of an unusual outdoor photo-drama. Frank Mayo is the star and the production was supervised by Lynn Reynolds. It will be released early next month. "The Red Lane" is from the pen of Holman Day, the New England novelist and the story has to do with the breaking up of a band of smugglers. The scenes are laid on the border between Maine and Canada. Supporting Frank Mayo are Lillian Rich, James L. Mason, Jean Hersholt, James O'Neill, Earl Formes, Paul Weigel, Frank Thorne, Harry Lamont, Frederick Herzog, Margaret Mann and Mila Davenport.

Lesser Exploits Film at Convention

Repeating his stunt activities at the Cleveland Convention, Sol Lesser, this time through his publicity representative, Maurie Meyers, again succeeding in attracting attention of the exhibitors.

The first shot was fired Monday night, when ten bell boys started paging prominent exhibitors with telegrams which proved to be "Annette Keller-Grams," advertising "What Women Love."

Harry Gribbon to Play in Christie Casts

Harry Gribbon, who is known to probably every motion picture fan in the country from the feature-roles that he has in Mack Sennett productions, including "Down on the Farm," has been added to the long list of players appearing in the two-reel Christie Comedies which will be released bi-weekly by Educational Films Corporation.

Bernard G. Ziv, newly appointed publicity director for Chicago United Theatres, Inc.

Bernard Ziv to Handle Chicago Theatre

Announcement is made of the appointment of Bernard G. Ziv to the position of Director of Publicity for the Chicago United Theatres, Inc., soon to open the first of their chain of theatres planned for Chicago. Mr. Ziv had been connected with the amusement department of the Chicago Evening American for the past five years.

The new theatre, which is to be called the Stratford, is located in one of the busiest sections of Chicago outside of the loop, 63rd and Halsted street. It cost approximately $1,000,000 and will be the latest word in motion picture construction. The house will seat 3,000 people and will have a forty-piece symphony orchestra of the highest caliber.

One of the most complete Typhoon cooling and ventilating systems in the city has been installed in the Stratford Theatre and will aid greatly in making the patrons of this house comfortable during the warmest days.

Clara Beranger Going Abroad for Awhile

Clara Beranger, who has just signed another contract with the Famous Players Lasky Corporation to do scenarios and original stories for them, will start off her new contract-term by taking a trip to the London studio of the Famous Players Company. She will do a big special over there and confer with some of the English writers who have been signed up by the Famous Players, but she will not remain there permanently. Her plans are to return to New York the end of August.

H. S. Lavner Resigns

According to an announcement just received, H. S. Lavner has resigned from the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation as publicity and exploitation manager. No statement was made by Mr. Lavner as to his future plans.

Tarkington to Write Features

BOOTH Tarkington will write feature photoplays which will be released by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Announcement of this has just been made by that corporation. The rights to these photoplays, which will be the first of their kind written for the screen by Mr. Tarkington, were secured from Tarkington Baker, the author's cousin, through Henry Hertzbrun, his attorney.

Many flattering offers for the rights were received by Mr. Baker, said Mr. Hertzbrun, before he recently went to India on a picture mission and left in doubt the fate of the projected photoplays. The decisive influence which caused Goldwyn to finally be selected to produce the pictures was the great financial and artistic success of the "Edgar" series of two-reel comedies which Mr. Tarkington wrote for production at the Culver City Studios.

The "Edgar" stories, known officially as "The Adventures and Emotions of Edgar Pomeroy," have proven money-makers from the beginning, and officers of the Goldwyn company believe that they give every indication that Mr. Tarkington has mastered the art of writing original screen themes. Consequently, they believe that the longer stories, about American life, which he will now compose for the films will be among the biggest box-office attractions which they will have to offer to exhibitors.

The universal acceptance of "Edgar," by critics and public alike, has created a market for the Tarkington screen wares which exhibitors will sell with gratifying results, the officers say. In a manner, these short-reel comedies, which have been successful in themselves as stories and as lucrative assets, will now prove to have been missionary workers arousing the interest of the motion-picture audiences so that when the first of the longer photoplays, written about and for adults, are produced, they will already have a decided appeal and value both to the exhibitor and his patrons.

There is another phase to Mr. Tarkington's decision to write directly for the screen which must prove important in the long run. This phase is the acquisition to the screen of another writer who will create for the new medium with intelligence and sincerity. Producers have long felt the need of having screen writers whose stories will beat the time scrutiny of logic and turn aside irony. Perhaps the greatest reputation which has yet set out to write film vehicles is Maurice Maeterlinck, who is under a long term contract with Goldwyn to write one story a year for the screen.

It is only recently that American writers of artistic reputation have begun to show sympathy with the endeavors of producers to make the screen an art at once truthful and purposeful. Approximately a year ago Samuel Goldwyn and Rex Beach organized the Eminent Authors Pictures, on the original promise that the associated authors were to cooperate in the picturization of their themes. This group of writers is composed of Rupert Hughes, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Gouverneur Morris, Gertrude Atherton, Basil King and Leroy Scott. Their productions have been significantly successful, particularly "Scratch My Back," their last release, from the pen of Rupert Hughes.

The Goldwyn company, in common with other producing units, feels that the great problem is not so much the buying of notable themes as the securing of the active interest of writers of imagination in picturization. It is held that the screen is not merely an interpretative art which shall rely on translation from the novel and drama, but one that requires a creation peculiar to itself. Mr. Tarkington's action in writing directly in screen language is an active evidence of the success of this viewpoint.

British Company Tells Its Plans

One Picture Completed in London for First National

"I learned," said Mr. Higham, in explaining his interest in Alliance, "that practically no British pictures were being shown in Canada, New Zealand, or Australia. The people of these countries, parts of the British Empire, had no opportunity to learn what England really was or meant. By means of the screen, America was obtaining the most subtle kind of propaganda, and working on the principle that seeing leads to liking and liking to loving, I decided that British films should be shown in these countries."

"There is another reason why stories laid in England should be made there," continued Mr. Higham. "You could no more get the atmosphere of an English drawing room than we could accurately depict a story laid in your West. An English salesman and a Chicago drummer are two different persons. They may be both likable and pleasant, a British actor has no opportunity to study a Chicagoan, and an American cannot appreciate an English salesman."

Mr. Higham said that several discrepancies should be discerned in recent American pictures dealing with British stories. That the American producer is realizing that is evident from the fact that he is planning production abroad. And Alliance, said Mr. Higham, would welcome such healthy competition. "We will," said Mr. Higham, "develop our own Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin. There is always room for new genius, and a new type of comedy, I believe, would be welcomed by the public. We certainly expect to make pictures which you, of America, used to the best of the world, will enjoy. And if they reach you they will reach the world."

Alliance is now making "Carnival," acknowledged to be one of the most stirring dramas ever produced on the London stage. The British company, it is said, outbid an American concern for the picture rights. Some of the scenes are laid in Venice during carnival time; the British cast will go there at that time, to obtain accurate scenes.

The Alliance Corporation also owns a controlling interest in the British Actors Film Company, which is composed of a small group of English actors and actresses, who handed themselves together.

From the story

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS

Directed by TOM TERRISS

With An All-Star Cast

Impatient with his own excesses, following the sudden acquisition of great wealth, the man seeks seclusion on an uninhabited island to work out his own salvation. The Girl, seeking to escape life with a man who has proved loathsome to her, plans to jump from an airplane in which she is riding—but an electrical storm changes her plans. The airplane is wrecked, and crashes on Trumpet Island. The man and the woman meet.

This is only the beginning. The story was judged big enough to spend more than a quarter of a million dollars in producing it, over a period of several months. It will be the big picture of the year.

As the heroine of this absorbing story, proves the age-old truth that the heart of a woman may beat as sadly beneath silks and satins as beneath more humble garb.

A play with great, crashing moments of drama which at no time becomes melodrama—a story of unexpected twistings and turnings which create SUSPENSE—a picture which will add still more prestige to the name of this beautiful star.

Bookings for Pathe Serial

"Pirate Gold," Released August 15, Already Wins Many Contracts

FOLLOWING the announcement last week by Paul Binnet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., that "Pirate Gold," the new serial starring George B. Seitz with Marguerite Courtot, would be released August 15th, a report from the Serial Sales Department states that the picture has already proven itself one of the most attractive ever offered the exhibitors by Pathe.

Contracts signed for the new serial have already reached an amount which more than doubles the bookings written on "Bound and Gagged," the first serial in which Seitz starred, at the date of release of that picture.

The fact that bookings on "Pirate Gold" have mounted up to such huge proportions so far in advance of release and before the advertising campaign has been opened, is a remarkable tribute to the popularity gained by George B. Seitz in "Bound and Gagged."

The campaign books and the paper are in work now and it is expected they will be completed in a week. The advance trailer, made up from scenes from the picture itself, is already available and has been highly endorsed by exhibitors who have seen the reel.

Practically every house which showed "Bound and Gagged" is represented in the contracts which Pathe now has on "Pirate Gold," and among these are a large proportion of the theatres of the first class, with a number of long runs far exceeding the average for a serial play.

Press Hails Hughes Comedy

New York Times Says "Scratch My Back" Is What People Want

THAT leading newspapers, as well as the general public, are ready to welcome pictures that depart from the customary rut and are "different," was evidenced by the treatment accorded Rupert Hughes' comedy "Scratch My Back," in the New York Times of June 15th. This Goldwyn release, during its week's engagement at the Capitol Theatre, New York, caused more comment than any picture shown on Broadway for months.

"Scenarists, directors, actors and all those whose minds run smoothly—in a rut—should have gone to the Capitol Theatre last week to mark the enthusiasm with which spectators approved of the ridicule heaped upon their favorite movie stuff by Rupert Hughes in 'Scratch My Back,'" writes the critic of the New York Times. "It was an interesting sight and ought to have been illuminating to those blinded by the belief that the public wants its heroes and heroines from their plot stock room.

"The spectators at the Capitol, when the writer was there, frequently showed by laughter and applause that they enjoyed the story's disrespect for the canons of plot composition—they applauded with a fervor that was a revelation of the weariness they had suffered from more orthodox plots and of the delight Mr. Hughes' heresy gave them.

"They hugely enjoyed the story's mockery of the canned stuff which has been fed them so often and which, apparently, the public is getting tired of."

Educational Plans to Aid Exhibitor in Selection of Short Lengths

WITH a large number of short subject releases and the number constantly increasing Educational Films Corporation is planning a new aid for exhibitors through its exchanges in twenty-four principal cities. This, in brief, will be the selection of short subjects to give just the right balance to programs.

"Since we are not concerned with feature productions," says the statement, "we feel that we are in a position to give the exhibitor expert advice on the best material with which to complete his bill. The large variety of product that we have will enable us to have a wide selection. Manifestly we are interested in making the short subjects stand out as an important portion of the bill, and therefore from a selfish motive alone we would be concerned in supplying the material that offers the best results to the exhibitor."

"This is just evidence of another advantage of our having exchanges which devote their attention exclusively to short subjects."

"While we expect those exhibitors who can do so to actually see our pictures, it is never-the-less a fact that the great number of theatre managers cannot see this. It is to them that this phase of our service will be of the greatest value. The exhibitors as a whole have passed the point where they regard the short subject merely as a 'filler,' and our exchanges, instead of merely shipping them 'a reel' will be able to send just the sort of pictures that fill the need.

"Every one of our exchange men will be thoroughly familiar with all of our product. We will keep them advised in advance and then they will see the pictures. They will also see as many feature pictures as possible, and at least keep informed of their character through the trade journals. Therefore, when an exhibitor writes he has Mary Jones in 'The Fickleness of Fanny' for a certain date, we will be able to supply just the comedy and other material that will best suit."

"We will further be able to supply pictures that fit very closely in with various pictures to the extent that they have been used at leading theatres in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Indianapolis and other cities. New prints of all the subjects that we have retained will be always available in territories where they have not been shown."

Carmel Meyers Will Star

Universal Signs Musical Comedy Actress for Eight Productions

THE return of Carmel Meyers to Universal City recently was the signal for a jollification on the part of Universal stars and players, anxious to welcome the little star "home" after her fling on the musical comedy stage. Formerly one of Universal's most popular screen actresses, Miss Meyers deserted the moving pictures to appear in "The Magic Melody," a musical comedy success.

Although she achieved immediate popularity before the footlights, a year on the stage was enough for her. She signed a new contract with Universal and will produce eight pictures during the coming year. She will be starred.

Her first picture, which she already has begun, is "In Folly's Trail," from a magazine story by Katherine Leiser Robbins. Doris Schroeder has put the story into screen form and Rollin Sturgeon, one of Universal's leading directors, is in charge of the production.

Universal has surrounded its prodigal star with a cast of good players, prominent in which are Thomas Holding, as an aristocratic young artist, George B. Williams as a New York clubman, Arthur Clayton as a man-about-town, William Rambridge as a southern colonel, Beth Lyons as a Dixie belle and Viola Lind as a New York chorus girl. Miss Meyers has the role of Lita O'Farrell, a New York butterfly, intent on selling herself to the highest bidder who comes with a ring and a marriage certificate.

"In Folly's Trail" is a story of that phase of New York life which lies between aristocracy and Bohemia, with an occasional excursion into neighboring territory—where art holds sway or where the bright lights exert their lure.

"Trumpet Island" Out in Fall

ALBERT F. Smith, president of Vitagraph, makes the announcement this week that the second of that company's big specials, "Trumpet Island," will be released in September. The film is now practically completed, with the exception of a few scenes to be made in New York City and along the Hudson River, and the major portion of the picture, which was made on the West Coast, is now undergoing final editing and cutting at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio.

"Trumpet Island" is a story of love and adventure, fashioned after the best style of Gouverneur Morris, from one of whose narratives the elaborate picturization was made by Lillian and George Randolph Chester, themselves writers of international reputations. Several months were spent on the adaptation, and Tom Terriss, the director, only recently returned East from California, having been directing the filming of this special there for the past three months.

The cost of this production is said to have passed the quarter of a million mark, as there is an all-star cast in addition to scenes in which hundreds of players appear, and mammoth and palatial sets in which the wild midnight orgies of millionaires are shown.

A big three months' campaign of advertising and exploitation is being launched on this special which is the first of the Tom Terriss special productions.

"Trumpet Island" was filmed in the famed Imperial Valley of Southern California and Catalina

View from "Trumpet Island," Vitagraph special production, directed by Tom Terriss, with Marguerite De La Motte and Wallace MacDonald in leading roles

Island—with the exception of the comparatively few Eastern scenes—and work was accomplished only after weeks and weeks of patient and persistent effort on the part of Director Tom Terriss. Marguerite De La Motte and Wallace MacDonald head the all-star cast, and they enjoyed their first airplane rides during the production of this special. "Our most difficult location," said Mr. Terriss, "was a deep and almost impassable canyon in the Imperial Valley. This is in the middle of the Imperial desert, and by a strange freak of nature, is formed in what is almost a cliff in the mountains. It is a wonderful oasis, containing a torrent of water and tall African palm trees, the only palm trees of their kind growing in the state of California. Into this ravine we transported a small cement floor, with mud-chess trucks containing all manner of implements and tools for building small bridges and hut, also many saw motors to create the wind for the storm scenes, and being unknown in this sheltered canyon."

"We were compelled to make a trestle framework down the side of the ravine, and down this trestle bridge we had to lower horses on hilllands, and also many members of the company in more or less undignified positions. A temporary bridge was also constructed across the torrent, and a road hauled through masses of tropical vegetation to get to the spot located by airplane several days previous. In clearing the roads into the wilderness, it was no uncommon thing for the men in the company to kill from twenty to thirty rattlesnakes every day. Imperial Valley is in the heart of government reservation land for Indians, and each day's work was eagerly and sometimes a little fearfully watched by hundreds of roving redskins."

Mayflower Has A Big Program

A Special to Be Released Every Third Week in 1920

Mayflower have already been shown to the Nation's theatre-goers. They include Dwan's "The Luck of the Irish" and "Soldiers of Fortune"; Walsh's "The Deep Purple" and Chautard's "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," all of which were released under the Reelart banner. "A Splendid Hazard," an Allen Dwan production with Henry B. Walthall in the leading role, is now receiving pre-release showings in several key cities, preparatory to its general distribution through First National franchise holders.

Allen Dwan's "The Scoffer" is tentatively scheduled for release by First National on August 23rd to be followed on September 27th by "Athletic," founded on Robert W. Chambers' novel of that name and completed last week by Director Franklin. Dwan's "In the Heart of a Fool" will probably be presented on November 15th. "The Law of the Yukon" adapted by Charles Miller from Robert W. Service's immortal verse classic of that name will be released by Reelart early this Fall.

In addition to this, Emile Chautard has completed two productions to be presented by Mayflower, neither of which has been definitely titled.

George Loane Tucker is now cutting and titling "Ladies Must Live." Tucker is under contract to make four additional specials to be presented by Mayflower, two of which, in addition to "Ladies Must Live" will be released during the present year.

Allen Dwan is now working on the sixth of his independent production which, in all probability, will also be released this year, following "In the Heart of a Fool." R. A. Walsh has just begun his second production which together with "The Deep Purple" and a third subject to follow the one now in course of production will constitute this director's contribution to Mayflower's 1920 schedule.

In disclosing the Mayflower program, Mr. Prager commented not only upon the exceptionally large volume of his organization's 1920 output but also upon the fact that every production in the list is a "special."

"Particularly significant of the progress made by Mayflower during its first year of existence," said Mr. Prager, "is the fact that it is presenting a large number of special productions than any independent producing organization in the industry. This fact alone furnishes conclusive proof of the sound financial basis upon which Mayflower is founded."

Edna Shipman

Clan Shipman Prepares for Family Reunion

For the first time since war was declared the Shipman brothers will meet at the summer home of Ernest Shipman on Long Island for a family reunion. The occasion will be the arrival in America of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Shipman who have just completed a four years' tour of Australia, India, Japan and the Eastern Orient, with such noted artists as Nordica, Melba, David Bispham, as well as a number of touring companies and special feature pictures.

Present also will be Joseph Shipman of Los Angeles, famous throughout studio land for his excellent enlargements of all photographic subjects used as back-grounds for the various producing units.

The Rev. Dr. Shipman will absent himself temporarily from his church in Pasadena to officiate at the family reunion.

Edna Shipman will be queen of the occasion celebrating her success as a motion picture actress.

Ernest Shipman has succeeded in promoting a number of producing units of late and will be in a happy frame of mind to act as host on this most auspicious occasion.

Metro Purchases Story from Fitzgerald

"An Orshore Pirate" is the title of the second story by F. Scott Fitzgerald to be purchased by Metro. It will be pictured in the near future. His first story was "Head and Shoulders," now being produced by Metro at the West Coast Studios in Hollywood under the title "The Chorus Girl's Romance," with Viola Dana in the principal part.

Johnston McCully Sells Story to Fairbanks

"The Curse of Capistrano" is the title of a new story just purchased for Douglas Fairbanks, according to an announcement made this week. The story was written by Johnston McCully, the author who enjoys the distinction of never having written a story directly for the screen. Several of Mr. McCully's recent stories have however been purchased as screen material.

India Likes Fox Pictures

E. Lloyd Sheldon, Writing from Orient, Tells of Film Conditions

FROM E. Lloyd Sheldon, writer of original stories, many of which have been produced on the screen by the Fox Film Corporation, J. Gordon Edwards, veteran director of the Fox staff, now engaged in making William Barnum special productions on the Pacific Coast, has received a lengthy communication regarding the film situation in the Orient—and particularly in India, where the writer is at present.

Mr. Sheldon, whose latest successful Fox production will be remembered as "Wolves of the Night," in which William Barnum was starred under the direction of Mr. Edwards, left America several months ago for the Orient with a photographic company for the purpose of securing educational features. In travelling from point to point in India he has made a constant study of the motion picture situation in the various cities visited, and in his letter to Mr. Edwards he speaks highly of the popularity of Fox pictures in this territory.

The Sheldon party will remain in India several months more at least, and from there will go north and west into Tibet and Afghanistan, thence to Persia and Arabia—the while collecting photographic copy and notes on material for educational features and new photodramas to which Sheldon will give his attention upon his return to this country.

The report from Mr. Sheldon to the Fox headquarters by way of J. Gordon Edwards is most enthusiastically confirmed by the Fox sales branch in Bombay. This office was established in the early days of 1919 and now handles the Fox business for the greater half of India and Afghanistan.

Feature Has Atmosphere

Pick Good Locations in Making Production for Robertson-Cole

A ROMANTIC love story, with a background formed by locations which are instantly associated with the mysterious and fascinating, is "Moon Madness" which is to be released at an early date by Robertson-Cole as a special. The picture, which was produced by Haworth, presents the work of an all-star cast, and an atmosphere which takes one far into the deserts of Africa, and into the glamorous city of Paris.

With a humanly interesting story, which concerns a man's life-long wait for revenge on the man who broke up his home, "Moon Madness" will draw a certain return at the box office. Its story, while laid in a rich foreign setting, is thoroughly cosmopolitan in its appeal. It might have happened anywhere, and to a person of any class.

"Moon Madness," written by J. Grubb Alexander, opens in the heart of the African jungle and a spot in the Mojave desert with its towering palms and thick undergrowth of verdure, was selected as a location because of its startling similarity to an African desert oasis.

A cast of seasoned screen artists appear in "Moon Madness," headed by Edith Storey, Wallace MacDonald, popular young leading man, who plays the role of Jan, the Arab boy who is in love with Miss Storey; Sam de Grasse, Josef Swickard, William Courtleigh, Irene Hunt, Fred Starr, and the child actor Frankie Lee, also have prominent roles.

Sada Cowan Signed to Write Scripts

HARRY GARSON and Herbert K. Sonborn announce that they have just placed under contract, Sada Cowan, author of many successes on both the stage and screen, by which Miss Cowan is to write original stories for them exclusively, which will be produced as specials.

Miss Cowan wrote the scenario for "Why Change Your Wife?" In addition to her screen successes she is author of "Playing the Game," produced by the Henry Harris estate; "The State Forbids," "In the Morgue," "The Moonlit Way," "The Honor of America," "The Wonder of the Age," and several others. Miss Cowan's stories will be produced and released as special superproductions and the work of preparing for the first one is being rapidly carried on.

California Ministers Like Will Rogers

Fred A. Miller, general manager of the California theatre, Los Angeles, recently arranged a special invitation showing of Will Rogers in "Jes' Call Me Jim," and is now the possessor of many letters from the clergymen who were present, all of a congratulatory nature. It was described as a picture that "appeals to all that is best in human nature."

Viola Dana Pulls Big in Washington, D.C.

"Played to capacity business" is the report on "Dangerous to Men," the new Metro special production starring Viola Dana, when it was shown simultaneously at Crandall's Metropolitan and Knickerbocker Theatres in the national capital. News of the success of this Dana picture was conveyed to Metro's home offices in New York by George W. Fuller, manager of the company's Washington exchange in a telegram dated June 8th.

Personal Appearances at Superba Theatre

Arthur Wenzel, manager of the Superba Theatre in Los Angeles, is one of the luckiest exhibitors in the country. Almost anytime he shows a big Universal picture, he can count on the personal appearance of the star to help put his picture over. The Superba is a 100 per cent Universal house, having grown so as a result of Carl Laemmle's interest in seeing Universal pictures tried out on the public, when he is in Los Angeles.

For its fidelity to the Universal brand of pictures, the Superba gets many favors at the hands of the Universal studio officials in Universal City, near-by. It frequently is permitted to have pre-release book-

Exhibitors Continue to Praise Universal's "Virgin of Stamboul"

UNIVERSAL officials are still a little dazed by the success of "The Virgin of Stamboul." Letters and telegrams of praise and congratulation continue to pour in from exhibitors in such a constant stream that Universal has not had time to accept the picture's popularity as a matter of course and say "We told you so."

N. Rosen of the Park Theatre, Pittsburgh, has written in to the Universal home office to state that he made fifty per cent more money with "The Virgin of Stamboul" than with any other picture he ever played and he says he runs the largest productions produced.

Earle W. Forsythe of the Star Theatre, Canonsburg, Pa., wrote in loudly calling for more pictures like the big Oriental photo-play. He explained that Canonsburg is a small town but that no picture is too big for him to play. He asked for a return engagement for the Priscilla Dean picture.

From the Liberty Theatre, in Sacramento, California, and the New Garrick, Minneapolis, have come word that "The Virgin of Stamboul" opened in those cities in competition with the season's greatest activity on the part of old Sol. The high-flying mercury, however, had no effect on the crowds that poured into the two playhouses where the big Universal-Jewel production was being shown.

In Rockingham, N. C., the picture played date and date with a heavy rain storm, and came out in the lead. W. Atkinson, manager of the theatre in that place, sent word that "The Virgin of Stamboul" was by far the best picture that ever had been shown there.

Zasu Pitts pictures herself as she will be in thirty years in the new Robertson-Cole attraction, "The Heart of Twenty."

Willat Starts a Rural Story

Begins First Independent Production for Hodgkinson Release

IRVIN V. Willat has begun his first independent production under the name of Willat Productions, Inc., and is filming a New England drama from the book of "Dabney Todd" by F. N. Westcott. Director Willat promises some new angles on rural drama and feels assured that he will strike a note that will put his first picture as an independent producer into the first rank of quality pictures for September, when according to the present schedule announced by the Hodgkinson Corporation the Willat Production will be released to the trade.

Mr. Willat has completed the work of gathering the men he wanted around him to assist in the production of Willat pictures, and has secured many of those who have been associated with him in his previous work.

John S. Waters is assistant director. Andrew Webber and Frank M. Blount are doing the photography, while H. G. Oliver, who was responsible for the technical work in Mr. Willat's most recent productions for Thos. H. Ince, "Behind the Door" and "Below the Surface" is technical director. F. G. Erickson has charge of properties and J. J. Murray is handling the business affairs and publicity for the company. C. A. "Doc" Willat who organized the company, is president and general manager. The product for the coming year will be released through the W. W. Hodgkinson Corporation.

Governor's Wife Praises Company

IN a letter written in the Governor's House, Lincoln, Neb., Mrs. Martha Graves McKelvie, wife of Governor Samuel Roy McKelvie, of Nebraska, pays tribute to Robertson-Cole pictures.

Her letter was written June 10th, to the Robertson-Cole branch at Kansas City, as a part of Mrs. McKelvie's personal efforts for better pictures. Addressing the Robertson-Cole publicity representative at this point, she wrote:

"Certainly you are to be congratulated on the program you have arranged for the coming year, and we people who are interested in the progress of cinema art will find ourselves looking for the 'Robertson-Cole' approval mark on films listed at our theatres—that is, if you continue your present policy of having a program of the best stars.

"I know, personally, many of the stars on your program and am glad to see that you are not featuring the 'vamp' type of star, or picture. I believe you are especially to be congratulated upon signing Hayakawa because he is a real artist and I do not believe he has had a single failure while his pictures are always clean. You have my very good wishes, and it is only through the setting of high standards, such as your company is setting, that we can eliminate the need of censorship. As you know, I am against censorship, unless it be Federal, and for that reason I am anxious to encourage the best in pictures by voicing my approval of any effort to give the public the best."

Quote Reviewer's Report

National Board Praises "Heart of Twenty," a Brentwood Picture

TO sustain its contention that the series of Brentwood comedies, which it has been releasing, are among the most wholesomely entertaining pictures now being produced, Robertson-Cole has just received from the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures a special report on "The Heart of Twenty," the latest of the Brentwood pictures.

This production, featuring Zasu Pitts and presenting a company among which are found Tom Gallery, Jack Pratt, Percy Challenger, Aileen Manning, Hugh Saxon and Billie Lind, tells the story of an interesting group of people in a small town.

The National Board's special report is said to be convincing evidence of the value of this picture, which is typical of the Brentwood productions, to the exhibitor, who is seeking pictures which are clean, full of fun, and of strong optimistic tone. Such an estimate, coming from a body which is altogether unbiased, spells box office success for the exhibitor who books "The Heart of Twenty," according to the producers.

The special report is as follows: "We wish to advise you that the majority comment on your photo-play 'Heart of Twenty' reviews by The National Board of Review was as follows: Entertainment Value—Excellent. Artistic Value—Comely sustained. Coherence of narrative—Excellent. Acting—Very good. Photography—Good. Technical handling—Exceptional. Scene setting—Effective. Moral Effect—Excellent. General Comment—This was considered one of the most effective comedy pictures of the year. The spirit of its atmosphere and its characters is created with great charm and humor. The picture as a whole seems to warrant its being placed in the National Board's list of exceptional pictures."

Warner's Picture is Named

Star to Appear in "One Hour Before Dawn" for Pathe Release

H. B. WARNER, who has just been announced as a new Pathe star, will make his debut under the Gold Rooster emblem in a Jesse D. Hampton production, "One Hour Before Dawn." In fulfillment of its policy to give exhibitors the highest class type of features for Summer consumption, Pathe will release "One Hour Before Dawn" some time in August. The exact date will be set within a week.

The first Warner-Pathe vehicle is an adaptation of "Behind Red Curtains," the book by Mansfield Scott. The screen version was made by Fred Myton, whose recent successes in adaptation have given him a brilliant added distinction as a photodramatist.

"One Hour Before Dawn" was directed by Henry King. Playing opposite Warner in the picture, which will be rated with the great mystery plays, is Anna Q. Nilsson, one of the best known leading women of the screen. Others in the cast include Dorothy Hagan, Thomas Guise, Augustus Phillips, Ralph McCullough, Lillian Rich, Adelle Farnington, Frank Leigh, Howard Davis and Winona Taylor.

Pathe reports "One Hour Before Dawn" surpasses in mystery and interesting sustaining element "The Thirteenth Chair," Bayard Veiller's noted success, which in recent years has stood as the premier mystery drama. Hypnotic influence and other psychic phenomena are introduced in the five reels of compelling, stirring drama.

Watterson R. Rothacker is the honored guest of a party extended to him by his employees in the studio of his big Chicago plant

Rothacker Employees Hold Annual Outing

The employees of Rothacker Film Company's Chicago laboratories were hosts at a very successful party given last week in the studio part of the big building on Diversey Parkway. Watterson R. Rothacker and the other executive members of the company were there as guests and joined fully in the merry making of the evening.

After mingling with the Rothacker staff such as this a visitor is convinced that chiefs and employees of this plant form one big family with loyalty and friendship as predominating features, which, no doubt, is one of the reasons for the splendid work turned out by the organization.

Five snappy acts of vaudeville were presented during the evening which closed with dancing and refreshments.

Bessie Love Will Take Vacation in New York

Bessie Love is the latest luminary to make reservations in Los Angeles for a trip to little old New York City. Miss Love is working on the final scenes of her second Andrew J. Callaghan Production, "Bonnie May" and will leave the Western movie Mecca for the transcontinental trip in the early part of next week. The youthful star is coming to New York principally to purchase a complete wardrobe, and to take a vacation prior to beginning work on her lavish production of Charles Dickens' "The Old Curiosity Shop."

Geraghty Advisor on Realert Staff

Tom Geraghty, formerly scenario writer for Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, is now acting in an advisory capacity on Realert's staff of scenario writers at the Hollywood studios. Chester M. Franklin is another recent arrival in the Realert studios on the Coast. He has taken the office vacated by Charles Maigne.

"Humoresque" Audiences Get Bigger Each Day

Hugo Bresenfeld, director of the Rivoli, Radio and Criterion theatres in New York, declares that "Humoresque," the Cosmopolitan production based on Fannie Hurst's great story, bids fair to revolutionize the motion picture business in at least one respect. "Humoresque" is now in the third week of an indefinite pre-release run at the Criterion and has been proclaimed the greatest picture of the year, the logical successor to "The Miracle Man." Mr. Bresenfeld believes that the day has come when the screen production can compete in the matter of long runs with the best plays of the spoken stage and still draw five audiences a day instead of eight a week.

"It's like a snowball," he said laughingly. "Every day the crowds are growing bigger and we are taking better care of them because they are coming earlier in the day."

Court Decision Proves Reartist's Age

Rumors that have persistently circulated, despite an entire absence of proof that Mary Miles Minter is 26 or 27 or any of a dozen were definitely set at rest in Los Angeles when a recent Federal Court decision put on record that the Reartist reached her eighteenth birthday on April 1, 1920.

The question of whether or not Miss Minter was a minor at the time of signing a contract with the American Film Company was a pivotal one in the suit by which Miss Minter sought to recover $4,125 in back salary.

Good Reports from All on "The Trail's End"

"The best Curwood story ever filmed" is given as the verdict of those who have been privileged to see "The Trail's End," the production which Louis B. Mayer has made from the James Oliver Curwood novel, "Isobel."

Japanese Story Coming Universal Announces "The Breath of the Gods," Starring Tsuru Aoki

T SURU AOKI'S last picture under the Universal banner will be released in a few weeks, it has just been announced by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. It is called "The Breath of the Gods" and is a six reel super production featuring the little Japanese film star in a story of her native land. It is a Universal Jewel picture.

"The Breath of the Gods" is said by many to be the most perfect Oriental photo-drama ever produced. It is absolute in every detail of its portrayal of Nipponese life and customs. Forty some odd different sets were constructed at Universal City during the filming of the feature, each personally supervised by Miss Aoki herself and by Corley E. Ito, a Japanese artist engaged especially as advisor and designer for the picture settings.

The director of "The Breath of the Gods," Rollin Sturgeon, one of the Universal's leading directors, spent three months studying Japanese art and customs before starting to work with the little Nipponese actress.

"The Breath of the Gods" will be released simultaneously with "Under Crimson Skies," a Universal-Jewel picture of sea-life and South American revolution featuring Elmo Lincoln, better known as the "strong man of Universal serials." The twin-release will be the result of Universal's promise to put several big pictures on the market in mid-summer so that Universal exhibitors will be provided with unusual productions with which to hold their patrons during the hot summer months.

Pathe Names July Release

William Desmond in "A Broadway Cowboy" Is Fine Comedy

UNDER the arrangements made by Pathe for supplying exhibitors with big photoplay attractions for the summer, William Desmond in "A Broadway Cowboy" will be the initial "hot weather" release by Pathe. The Jesse D. Hampton production will be issued on July 4th, and according to Pathe, exhibitors who play this production will have double cause for celebrating Independence Day.

The play was produced from "The Man from Make Believe," a story by Byron Morgan, one of America's best known fiction writers. As a romantic comedy it is one of the most amusing and spectacular pictures of its type ever seen upon the screen. The direction of Joseph Franz, who has con-troubled many successes to the Hampton list during the last year, is a noteworthy fact in connection with "A Broadway Cowboy." Mr. Franz made the picture a logical, clean-cut comedy, and in handling his most competent cast, he obtained the fullest measure of co-operation.

Betty Francisco, whose beauty and charm won her a legion of admirers when she was decorating the stage in the Ziegfeld Follies, should augment her best supporters with her work as leading woman. Other characterizations are given by Evelyn Selbie, as Miss Howell, the chaperone; Thomas Delmar, as Sheriff Pat McGann; J. P. Lockney, as Colonel Jordan; Paddy McGuire, as "the prisoner;" and Clark Comstock as Sheriff Sims.

Lucas of the South Does Big Simplex Business

That the reputation of being "the largest supply house in the South" is a well earned title is being demonstrated every day by Mr. Harry Lucas, President and General Manager of the Lucas Theatre Supply Company of Atlanta, Ga., which company holds the exclusive selling franchise for the Simplex Projector throughout the South.

As an indication of the popularity of the Simplex Product, as well as the Lucas business-getting proclivities, it is only necessary to point to the following Simplex installations that were made through the Lucas Office during a recent month:

Electric Theatre Co., Eunice, La.; Ouachita Amusement Co., W. Monroe, La.; Strand Amusement Co., Tampa, Fla.; Marks-Rosenberg Co., Meridian, Miss.; F. E. Huggins, Hemingway, S. C.; Tailman Theatre, Rosedale, Miss.; E. B. Spann, Richton, Miss.; Bonita Theatre, Ludlow, Ga.; Kozzy Theatre, Pass Christian, Miss.; R. G. Creech, LaGrange, N. C.; Shelby Theatre, Shelby, Miss.; Jacob's Theatre, McComb, Miss.; Arcade Theatre, Brookhaven, Miss.; DeSota Theatre, 868 Arkansas Ave., Memphis, Tenn.; J. L. Clayton, Draper, N. C.

Popular Canadian Projectionist at Simplex Factory

An interested visitor and guest at the Simplex plant for several days was Mr. C. A. Dentelbeck, Supervisor of Projection, for the Paramount Theatre, Ltd., of Toronto, Canada.

Mr. Dentelbeck included the aforementioned visit as a part of his itinerary on his way back to Canada from Cleveland, in which city he attended the recent convention of the I. A. T. S. E. of U. S. & C., at which convention he represented as a delegate, Local No. 173 of Toronto, of which he is president.

Mr. Dentelbeck, on account of his prominence in labor circles throughout Canada, and also due to his standing as a projectionist, is looked upon by Canadian exhibitors as an ideal type of labor leader, and while in the City of New York, he expressed his views on various economic and political questions that were listened to with great interest by various leaders in the projection end of the American Film Industry.

Mr. Dentelbeck traced his apprenticeship in the industry back to 1909, when he operated a store show in Toronto, and since that time has held almost every office in his Union of any importance, seeing his organization grow from thirty-five members up to one hundred and seventy-six, and watching the wage scale run from twelve to fifteen dollars in the earlier days, to twenty-five to forty dollars at present. This wage scale being based on a six-day week.

Mr. Dentelbeck's first connection with the Paramount Company was through the Allen Theatre, where he had charge of the projection, and through his ability of producing screen results that were pleasing to all, he gradually assumed charge of the projection for the Paramount Company's circuit, in which are included the following theatres—

"W. H." Announces Policy

H. J. Shepard States His List of Ready Films—Offers Fine Variety

H. J. SHEPARD of the Tower Film Corporation and W. H. Productions Company, is a very impressive man, but like most of his kind he is very hard to interview, for he will not talk.

In his offices at 71 West 23d street he told the writer that he did not believe in words, for he says that this sort of exploitation does not get a man very far.

"What the exhibitor and state right exchange man wants," he says, "are good films which will bring the receipts into the box office and please the patrons."

Have you any particular brand of films or features which you would care to bring to the attention of the state-right buyers?" asked the interviewer.

"There is one feature in which I have implicit faith," said he, "and one which should give the exhibitor what he wants. It is a Tower Film production, 'A Trip to Mars.' This five-reel feature contains the necessary ingredients to make it popular with the exchange men and exhibitors and is proving its worth in many ways, for the subject is a new and timely one and attempts to show the happenings on this planet when it is supposedly discovered by two adventurous travelers who ascend in an airship to study the inhabitants.

"We are launching just now the usual summer campaign in order to dispose of the remaining territories for our various series of re-issue subjects, among which are a series of single reel Arbuckle comedies, a series of Keystone comedy one-reelers, and K. B. two-reel Westerns. And as long as the negatives remain in condition so that prints can be taken these subjects they will be in demand by the state right men, for the picture fans of today and tomorrow will always want to view with interest films which are responsible for making the biggest stars in the motion picture industry.

"To prove that my theory is correct," said Mr. Shepard, "quite a number of state right buyers, who have contracted for these subjects, have proved the above and have several times ordered new prints of the same subjects, which show a healthy demand for the product, the source of which naturally is the public."

"Tillie's Punctured Romance" is meeting with phenomenal success," said Mr. Shepard, "when the fact is considered that it is booked in the class A theatres for long runs. The only territories remaining open are Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Delaware, Maryland, Dist. of Columbia and Virginia.

"The Superman" and 'Everybody's Business,' two of our latest features, are up to standard in every way, and while we do not claim that they are of the 'super-special' variety, a coined expression, they contain the necessary elements to please the picture-loving patron.

"The prices placed on the various products distributed by the Tower Film Corporation and W. H. Productions," said Mr. Shepard, "are such as will allow the state right exchange men to buy at a figure that assures a satisfactory profit and enables him in turn to give the exhibitor attractive films at fair rentals."—FRANK LEONARD

Public Interested in "Mary's Attie"

Charles F. Schworm, treasurer and general sales manager of Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., who has just returned from the Cleveland convention of exhibitors, reports some interesting developments in the exploitation campaign of "Up in Mary's Attie," the six reel comedy feature which Fine Arts is releasing on the state right market.

As an illustration to the exhibitors assembled of the value of the song "Up in Mary's Attie" in connection with the picture, Miss Ethel Brooker, who wrote the music, went to Cleveland during the convention to sing and put over the song in the various cabarets and theatres in Cleveland.

Aywon President Back from Long Trip

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, has just returned from a trip through the middle West which included a few days at the convention in Cleveland.

On his swing around the mid-West circuit Mr. Hirsh met practically all of the State Rights buyers, spending several days in Detroit where he signed contracts for the distribution of the Fox Comedies, the Rex Ray Westerns and the series of Harry Gray features that The Aywon Film Corporation will soon put on the market.

Arrangements were also made by Aywon's President for the State Righting of six new feature productions for the season of 1920-21.

"Discarded Woman" Is Released June 15

"The Discarded Woman," a Burton King production in six reels is announced as the June 15th release on the Hallmark Pictures Corporation's program by Frank G. Hall, its president. The picture is in six reels and was produced under the personal direction of Mr. King whose last special production was "The Last Battalion." Grace Darling and Red La Rouge are the featured players with a supporting cast including E. J. Radcliffe, W. D. Carlton, Madeline Carr and James Cook.

Fine Arts Sells Southwestern Rights

Fine Arts Pictures, Inc. announced last week that they have disposed of the rights to the six reel comedy feature "Up in Mary's Attie" which they are distributing on the state right market for the territory consisting of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas to T. G. Tuttle, of Dallas, Texas.

Famous Spanish Poem Is Pictured

Some years ago, Jose Echegaray, the Spanish poet, wrote a dramatic verse which was accredited as being a masterpiece. Charles Frederic Nirdlinger dramatized this verse, and under the title of "The World And His Wife," it created even a greater sensation. Now, Cosmopolitan Productions has made a feature picture of this play which is said to excel, in point of strength, realism and characterization either the poem or the play.

Robert G. Vignola directed the picture, Alma Rubens is in the stellar role. Montague Love, Pedro de Cordova, Charles Gerard, Gaston Glass, Byron Russell, Peter Barber, Leon Gendron, Vincent Macchia, James Savold, Margaret Dale, Mrs. Allan Walker and Ray Allen are in the supporting cast. The general release of "The World and His Wife" is scheduled for July 25th.

Goodman-Pioneer Tie-Up

Company to Handle "Thoughtless Women," Featuring Alma Rubens

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN, novelist and motion picture producer, signed a contract last week with the Pioneer, whereby the latter concern acquired Dr. Goodman's latest production "Thoughtless Women" in which Alma Rubens is featured as star.

Daniel Carson Goodman, who is the author of "The Wonder Man," in which Georges Carpentier is now appearing, wrote the script and also directed the production of "Thoughtless Women." He has to his credit a long list of successful novels and photo dramas, among which are "Hagar Revels," "Souls in Bondage," "Battle of the Sexes," "The Escape," etc.

Alma Rubens who is now appearing at the Criterion theatre in New York in the Paramount production of "Humoresque" has in "Thoughtless Women" one of the most important roles that she has ever played during her very successful career on the screen.

"Thoughtless Women" is scheduled for release during the early fall and the Pioneer General Staff believes that the picture will meet with a very gratifying reception. It is expected, according to an announcement, that the subsequent productions of Dr. Goodman will all be acquired by the Pioneer.

"Nick Carter" Stories to Be Produced

The Broadwell Productions, recently incorporated in Massachusetts with a capitalization of $300,000 for the purpose of producing the "Nick Carter" series of stories, New England historical and modern subjects and country-life short-subjects, announces that the casting has been completed for the first of the "Nick Carter" productions, which will be entitled "The $100,000 Kiss." This will be in two-reels.

Tom Carrigan, the popular actor, will portray the part of "Nick Carter" with Colin Chase as "Chick," the famous detective's assistant, and Miss Mae Gaston in the role of "Patsy." A capable supporting cast has been built around the three principals named above, consisting in part of Cecil Owen, Irene Blackwell and Edwin Sturgis.

Betty Compson Starts on Second Picture

Betty Compson is preparing to commence production on her second starring picture at the Brunton Studios in Los Angeles. Arthur Rosson, who directed Miss Compson's initial release, "Prisoners of Love," which is now in the process of cutting, has been re-engaged by Miss Compson, and will be assisted by his brother Richard in the direction of the second production. The work of assembling the supporting cast is now under way.

Private Showing Convinces Film Censors

A private showing of "On With the Dance," at Hickory, N. C., resulted in overcoming the objection of several self-appointed censors in the town. The objectors were invited to the showing and pronounced the film satisfactory in every respect.

Honest Appeal to Clergy

Exhibitor in Church-Going Town Gives Private Showing of Film

THE exploitation value which lies in the appeal of George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man" to the religiously inclined, especially in small towns where the church-going element predominates, was exemplified in the success of the showing of the picture at the Opera House, Canon City, Colorado. Manager Jesse E. Jones, who operates also the Jones theatre in Canon City, had the co-operation of A. G. Birch, of the Denver office of Famous Players-Lasky, in conducting his campaign.

The picture was scheduled for the Tuesday following Memorial Day, and as the only newspaper in the town did not publish on either Sunday or Monday, it was decided by Messrs. Birch and Jones that the big drive had to be made straight at the ministers and the women's organizations.

Accordingly, a special showing at the Jones was arranged for Tuesday morning, to which Mr. Jones invited by letter all the ministers and leading women of the town. In his letter he recalled the faith-healing operations of the famous Francis Schlatter, who flourished in Colorado within the memory of most of those whom he addressed, referring to Schlatter as the prototype of "The Patriarch in 'The Miracle Man.'"

Every minister but one accepted the invitation and nearly all the leading women of the town were there. All left the theatre with a determination to tell everybody they knew to go to the Opera House and see the picture—and they did so.

George Walsh Greeted by His Alma Mater!

George Walsh, the Fox star, took a prominent part recently in the exercises held at the High School of Commerce, New York City, and was called upon to present a series of medals, designed by himself, to the winners of the greatest number of points in the various branches of school athletics conducted during the past season. Mr. Walsh, himself a holder of thirteen "C's" during his course at Commerce, also addressed the assembled classes who received him with considerable enthusiasm.

Attractive Paper for "House of Toys"

Unusually attractive paper is said to have been issued for "The House of Toys" starring Seena Owen, with Pell Trenton in the leading male role. The star portrait in color for lobby use, 22 by 28 inches, is unique in design, and there is also in color a still showing an interesting group, same size.

Radin Sells Mayo Picture in Philadelphia

Radin Pictures have sold the five-part dramatic feature, "Thru Eyes of Men" starring Frank Mayo, to the Screen Art Pictures of Philadelphia, for the Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey territory. "Thru Eyes of Men" was written and produced by C. A. Taylor. Frank Mayo is supported in its enactment by a capable cast including Claire MacDowell and Little Ben Alexander.

Pioneer Will Handle Big Independents

When the Pioneer makes its announcement of the complete list of attractions which it will offer to the exhibitor during the coming fall, it will from present indications, contain the names of several of the biggest and most successful independent producers.

Queen Feature Service Buys Radin Series

The Queen Feature Service of Birmingham has purchased the rights from Radin Pictures on the two-part series of "Real Star Dramas," for the Southern territory comprising the states of Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina. This series of short-length dramatic subjects is said to be winning favor with lovers of good stories and finished acting.

L. Gevaert Studies Market Belgium Manufacturer Here to Get Acquainted with American Market

AFTER a busy week establishing contact with the American film industry, L. Gevaert, head of the firm of L. Gevaert & Co., expressed himself as very much pleased with the Metropolis and anxious to see more of America. The Gevaert Company, which operates a large factory in Antwerp, Belgium, manufactures all kinds of photographic material, including plates, paper and raw film stock. Prior to the war much of the raw film used by the principal film manufacturers on the European continent was supplied by this firm. The Gevaert plant specializes in colored positive stock, and it is the special aim of the Belgian manufacturer to acquaint the American market more thoroughly with this brand of the Gevaert product.

M. Gevaert arrived from Antwerp on Saturday, June 25th, and has established his headquarters at the Hotel Astor, New York. He plans to remain on this side of the Atlantic about a month. This is M. Gevaert's first trip to the United States, and while his stay on the present occasion will be very short it is likely that he will visit other film centers in the East before returning to Europe.

When interviewed by a representative of the News at the Hotel Astor, M. Gevaert declared that he was exceedingly anxious to get in personal touch with the American market. "The primary object of my visit at this time," he said, "is to become acquainted personally with the film conditions in the American market and to meet some of the leaders of the trade in this country. I am here principally on a business trip. My time is limited, and so I will not be able to see much of your great country on this visit, but later I may return for a longer stay."

M. Gevaert is accompanied by his personal representative, Leopold Sutto, who has already made the acquaintance of the leaders of the film trade in the East during previous trips to this center. Louis Destenay, with offices in the Longacre Building, New York, has been appointed by M. Gevaert as his United States representative.

The Arrow Film Corporation announces that it has arranged for the distribution of a feature production now in the course of making by the Lifeograph Film Corporation. No details as to the nature of the production are given out but an Arrow official is authoritative for the statement that it will constitute a surprise in an independent field. Arrow is now making plans for the advertising and exploitation of this feature which will be ready for its first showing about the middle of July.

Director Davis Selects Notable Cast

Clay Davis, casting director for Hemmer Superior Productions, has assembled a notable cast for the first picture to be produced by Mary Pickford's former manager under his own trade mark.

"First, then, in importance with us is the selection of the cast. Locations, sets and all other considerations come afterward. You will note in this cast is Flora Finch, remembered by all picture enthusiasts for her work with Biograph, Pathé, Paramount, Edison and others, Pete Raymond, John Boren, Horace Weston and so on, all people of wide and varied life experience and all accomplished actors."

Franey Comedies Make Record for Reelcraft

Nearly two thousand theatres throughout the United States have booked the new series of single reel comedies in which Billy Franey is being featured by the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, according to an estimate compiled by the Sales Department from the contracts already received at the General Office in New York.

Reelcraft officials consider it a very remarkable showing for a selling campaign that has only been four weeks in progress, and released for only two weeks.

Arrow Film Has Three Campaign Books Ready

Three new campaign books have just been received from the press and are now ready for distribution to the independent exchanges and exhibitors according to an Arrow announcement. The campaign books were edited for the second group of three "Ten" productions which are titled "The Trail of the Cavalcade," "The Brinkley Case," and "The Sacred Ruby," all combined in one campaign book, for "Woman's Man" which has Raymond Fielding, and for "Love's Progress" which has Ora Carew.

"The Fatal Sign" Open for Bookings

"Gump Club" Idea Spreads Rapidly

The "Gump Club" idea has taken hold and is proving extremely popular, according to M. J. Mintz of Celebrated Players, who is responsible for the founding of the club. It has won the approval of the daily press in many cities and three of Chicago's papers devoted quite a bit of space to voice their approval of the Gump Club with its policy of replacing worry with good cheer.

Many exchanges now handling the Gumps in their animated form, are profiting by the Gump Club and its activities, and Mr. Mintz is providing them with a fine lot of novelties which will attract attention towards the Gump Club and incidentally towards the cartoons. Balloons, pocket match sales miniature moving pictures, statuettes and paper doll cutouts are among the publicity getting specialties which Mr. Mintz has collected for distribution. The funny identification cards, which all members of the club must receive and carry, are proving one of the biggest hits that have appeared on the publicity horizon for some months.

Mr. Mintz is at work at the headquarters of the Gump Club in the offices of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation on a press sheet for distribution to the Gump exchanges, which contain a list of the titles of the cartoons, synopsis of each one, advertising aids and a full sheet of reproductions of the novelties ready for distributing to the public.

Arrow Comics Are Ready

Fred Ardath Completes Series; Muriel Ostriche Finishes Second

THE last of the series of Fred Ardath Comedies which are being distributed by the Arrow Film Corporation has been completed according to a statement from Arrow this week. The comedies were produced by the Louis Jacobson Enterprises.

Fred Ardath, who stars in this series of two-reel comedies, is one of the best known comedians of the vaudeville stage. For a number of seasons he has been appearing in a big time vaudeville sketch called "The Country Grocer." He has played the entire Keith circuit in this act and is at the present time appearing in Manhattan. His work is said to be of the cleverest ever brought to the screen from the vaudeville stage and is a decided departure from the usual run of two-reel screen comedy.

The Arrow statement reports that the sales on the Ardath comedies are increasing in leaps and bounds and that a large part of the country's territory has already been sold.

Muriel Ostriche, who is producing high class two reel comedies which will be distributed through Arrow, has just completed the second of the series, it is also announced. It has been given the tentative title of "Betty's Green-Eyed Monster." The first one to be completed is entitled, "Betty Sets the Pace."

Work on the third one of the series will begin immediately, and one of the features of the third release, which has not been titled yet, is a scene at the Belmont Race Track near New York.

Territory is Sold on "A Witch's Lure"

B. Herbert Milligan, treasurer and general manager of the Capital Film Company, announces that the following territorial rights to "The Witch's Lure," M. A. Dodge's picture drama of the Texas Oil Fields, have been disposed of; Michigan to the Strand Features; Iowa and Nebraska to Fantanelle Film Exchange, Omaha; Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota to Ludwig Film Exchange. The rights for Illinois and Indiana, as previously announced, have been purchased by Harry Weiss of the Superior Screen Service.

Hallmark to Release "The Americano"

Frank G. Hall, president of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, has placed on the list of special star productions for June 15th release, Douglas Fairbanks in "The Americano," Anita Loos and John Emerson's screen version of Eugene P. Lyle's novel "Blaze Derringer."

Alma Rubens is Mr. Fairbanks' leading woman. Others in support are Spotteswood Aitken, Carl Stockdale, Charlie Stevens, Lillian Langdon and Tom Wilson.

Wm. Steiner Completes Another "Tex" Story

The seventh of the famous "Tex" series of mystery pictures has just been completed by William Steiner, and has been given the title of "Tangled Threads." A statement from Arrow, which is releasing the Tex series, says that this picture will be even better than the six preceding ones.

Renco Now Settled in Coast

Future activities of the Renco Film Company, formerly of Chicago, will be carried on from the new offices of this company in Los Angeles, according to President J. H. Reynolds who is now at Los Angeles to direct the producing and distributing activities.

The Renco Company recently purchased screen rights on a number of the Myrtle Reed novels and their plans provide for the filming of these in the next several months, the first of which to be enacted for the celluloid will be "Lavender and Old Lace." Continuity of this play is now being written by Lee Royal, who has been retained as scenario editor and according to statements by President Reynolds work will be started early in July.

The Renco Company is a Delaware corporation which formerly had its headquarters in the National Light Building, Chicago. In addition to producing and distributing the "Birth of a Race" this company made and sold several other pictures. They have been organized more than two years and now plan to devote practically all of their attention to production work. Besides "Lavender and Old Lace," the company has screen rights for "Old Rose and Silver," "The Master Vineyard" and "The Sign of the Jack O' Lantern."

Abramson Calls Meeting of Independents

IVAN ABRAMSON has called a meeting of Independent exchange managers for the purpose of forming a co-operative film distributing corporation to exploit and produce bigger and better pictures.

The incorporators will be some of the early Independent Exchangers with a knowledge of the business, second to none, and with men of this calibre the organization is an assured success. The object of the organization is to encourage producers to make productions as it gives them an assured market for high class productions.

Articles of incorporation are about to be filed and the corporation is assured of unlimited capital. A call for a meeting at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago, on July 7th, has been made when permanent organization will be perfected and the names of the incorporators and exchanges will be made public.

Big Bookings Reported for Hallroom Series

The Colins report the booking of two of the Hallroom Boys comedies on the Marcus Loew New York circuit for a period of seventy-two days. "Tit for Tat" is the latest Hallroom comedy ready for release.

Second "Screen Snapshots" Ready

Jack Cohn, producer of "Screen Snapshots" the single reel bi-monthly reel which features shots of famous stars in their "off" moments, at sports and favorite hobbies, etc., announces that the second issue of his "animated photoplay column" is now completed and will shortly be ready for release.

Cast Memorizes Play's Lines for Screen

An innovation in screen technique was marked by the decision of Clara Kimball Young, and Director Harry Garson to have the entire cast of "Midchannel," Miss Young's latest starring vehicle, memorize the original play by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, and adapted to the screen with the author's supervision.

Hadley is Production Manager of Hallmark

Hopp Hadley, one of the best known executives in the motion picture industry, has just been made production manager of Hallmark. This accompanies the announcement of the release of six big features and two comedies a month which include important Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Norma Talmadge, Frank Keenan, Louise Glaum and Dorothy Dalton subjects recreated from among the big successes of these stars.

Jans Picture Is Given Premiere

Invitation Showing of "Madonnas and Men" on Broadway

A REPRESENTATIVE Broadway "show me" audience, that flocked to overflowing the 44th Street Theatre, attended the premier showing of the Jans Pictures, Inc., special feature production "Madonnas and Men," on Sunday evening, June 13th.

The audience was made up of men and women connected with all branches of the motion picture industry. They came to criticize and they left the theatre after the presentation full of praise of this latest box office sensation. The verdict of this audience was to the effect that "Madonnas and Men" was a fine picture, one that is destined to create a sensation wherever shown and a "big" picture in every sense of the word. The premiere of "Madonnas and Men" was one of the biggest successes in the history of filmdom.

One leading producer-distributor, the head of one of the industries' largest organizations, was heard to remark as he left the theatre, "It's a wonderful picture, a sure-fire box office attraction. I wish we'd made it." Critics of the trade press, the newspapers and everyone in the large audience are said to have voiced their appreciation in just as strong terms.

"Madonnas and Men" revealed a story of ancient Rome and modern New York with a series of highly dramatic scenes, with here and there a touch of humor to relieve the tenseness of the situations. It was written by Carey Wilson and Edmond Toulmond with the scenario by Victor Clark. They took as their theme the protection of womanhood and they revealed episodes of Rome at the time of Nero, they showed the sacrifice of the Christian martyrs, the lust for blood of ancient times and then brought their story up to modern times depicting that customs may have changed some, what but that the underlying principle of man's desire for revenge remains the same.

At the 44th Street Theatre Sunday evening the picture was preceded by an effectively staged and thrilling representation of a Roman chariot race. Real horses racing on a treadmill with men and women in the chariot provided a real thrill at the opening and then B. A. Rolfe stepped into the orchestra pit and conducted the augmented orchestra throughout the presentation. Mr. Rolfe was given enthusiastic applause, not only for the exceptional picture he had produced but for the manner in which he had staged its initial presentation.

Throughout the showing of the feature there were frequent outbursts of applause. Some of the scenes that called for highest praise were those showing the Roman emperor, the sacrifice of the Christian martyrs, the great Brooklyn character in the swine the home of the millionaires who sought revenge for an early wrong by a woman, and others too numerous to mention. Effective screen story telling was magnified by means of cleverly contrived fade-outs picturing the ancient and modern, thus keeping the story easy to follow and decidedly interesting.

David Warfield was one of the many interested spectators from the theatrical world, many who had attended the showing. Evan Huntington Fontaine, who plays one of the principal roles, Edmond Lowe, who enacted the leading male part, Anders Randolph, who played the villain to perfection, beautiful and delightful Raye Dean, Kate Bonney, in an excellent role, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, who did some of the most interesting of his career and many others of the large cast, were interested spectators and should have rich well reward for their efforts by the reception accorded them by the audience.

The advance notices of this special feature production of Jans Pictures, Inc., it is said, were lived up to in every particular. The officials of the organization and B. A. Rolfe who made the picture were the recipients of hearty congratulations in the lobby of the 44th Street Theatre at the conclusion of the showing.

National Serial to be Colored

Film Will Be Tinted in Places in "Son of Tarzan"

WHAT promises to be an innovation in serial films is forecasted in an announcement made by David P. Howells, international film distributor, that "The Son of Tarzan" animal jungle serial, which the National Film Corporation is now making, and for which he controls the world rights, will contain some "color" runs of a very unusual nature.

Lenwood Abbott, laboratory superintendent of National, has developed a special method of tinting and toning films, by which process unique "color" prints are made possible. After many tests the process has been perfected and it has been decided to make this new "color" film a feature of "The Son of Tarzan," on which National is concentrating its greatest endeavor.

A new method of lighting has also been evolved at the National studios by Jack Heints and it is claimed that the photographic artistry of the film will be greatly enhanced by its use.

Harry Reyer has engaged Arthur J. Flaven, himself a well known director, to assist him in the strenuous work of directing the fast moving jungle picture. Lee Hamilton, who photographed "Kentucky Colonel" and "Leahurst Brown" and Walter Bell, who during the war filmed the battlefronts for the Signal Corps, are operating the battery of cameras on "The Son of Tarzan" production.

Edgar Rice Burroughs, the author of the Tarzan books, Reyer, and Roy Somerville, the photo-dramatist, are co-operating in the cutting, editing and titling of the film. Wild tales of terrible goings-on are constantly coming from the National Studios. The lot is said to be harboring several hundred animals of the jungle including lions, tigers, monkeys of every variety and a host of other wild game, which are being used for "local color" in the serial. An unusual assemblage of near-ap "extras" makes the place a veritable "nightmare," it is said.

David Howells reports that the film of the completed first episode is expected in New York shortly and immediately after its receipt he will arrange a special showing of this initial "Son of Tarzan" instalment. Joe Brandt, director general of National, who is now at the coast, is waxing more enthusiastic over this chapter-picture every day. "Tell the trade for me," writes Brandt, "that 'The Son of Tarzan' is going to take the country by storm. It is a serial five years ahead of its time. It is replete with thrills, has tremendous punch and is going to mark Harry Reyer as one of the few director geni in moving-picture-turedom. It is going to play in theatres which never before can fared because it is magnificently staged and artistic throughout."

J. H. Edwards Finishing Sterling Picture

J. Harrison Edwards, author and director of the first Sterling Feature Pictures, Inc., production entitled "The Fighting Kentuckians," has arrived in New York and is now busily engaged in editing and putting the picture in shape to be shown.

The cast includes Thornton Blount, Irma Harrison, Adele Kelly, Myra Brooks, Cohen Chase, Tom Burroughs, Pete Raymond, May Wack, Thomas Swinton and Clifford Williams.

Distribution arrangements for "The Fighting Kentuckians" have not been consummated but Robert W. Priest, president The Film Market, Inc., is acting for The Sterling Feature Pictures. A series of six productions will be made under the direction of Mr. Edwards.

Canyon Producing Five-Reel Western Series

The Canyon Pictures Corporation, is now producing a series of five-reel Western, semi-Western and Canadian pictures featuring Franklyn Farnum, and produced at the Selig studios, announce that the title of the first picture will be "Riding The Winds," taken from an original story by William F. Wing.

Franklyn Farnum has just completed the final episodes of the serial "Vanishing Trails," which is being state righted by Canyon, and is now well under way on his first feature production.

Many inquiries regarding the Shirley Mason revivals have reached the offices of the Photo Products Export Company of 220 West 42nd Street, New York City. The entire series of these seven dramas are now offered to State Right buyers on a royalty basis, the entire series to be contracted for. The titles of the dramas are "The Apple Tree Girl," "Law of the North," "Cy Whittaker's Ward," "The Awakening of Ruth," "Light in Darkness," "The Tell Tale Step," "The Lady of the Photograph."

To Exploit British Films Newly Formed Company Will Distribute Hepworth Productions

A CORPORATION has just been organized under the name of Hepworth Pictures Plays, Inc., for the purpose of exploiting British made pictures in the American market. The new company will distribute the product of Hepworth Picture Plays, Ltd., of London, the oldest producing organization in Great Britain. The directors of the American company are Cecil Hepworth, and Captain Paul Kimbelby, O. B. F., both officials of the British company, and Reginald Warde, president of Reginald Warde, Inc., and Far East Film Corporation.

Reginald Warde, who has been identified with the film industry for many years as a buyer of foreign rights of American productions, will have charge of the distribution of the English product in this country. In making the announcement of the new venture yesterday, Mr. Warde stated that this is the first serious effort that has been made to introduce British pictures to American audiences. He added that while British producers were under a serious handicap during the five years of war, since the armistice they have made rapid strides and have absorbed the many American technical innovations introduced to the trade in the last two or three years.

Cecil Hepworth, the head of the English producing organization has been producing and directing pictures for twenty-one years and is the pioneer of the industry in England. The Hepworth product will be offered to American audiences in the knowledge that they are more than representative of British production and there are no apologies to offer for them.

The British film industry is watching the venture with much interest and other producers are preparing to follow the Hepworth entry into the American market.

Film Market to Grant Discount to Buyers

What Robert W. Priest terms "out in the open" proposition to all independent buyers is made this week by The Film Market, Inc., with regard to the final clean up on the unsold territory of Robert McLaughlin's sensational state rights feature, "The House Without Children."

The novelty in Mr. Priest's plan is to let buyers everywhere figure their own valuations without the usual secrecy of what the picture is scheduled at, and then allow a straight discount of 20 per cent during a period of thirty days—from June 15th to July 15th, 1920.

"Love or Justice" on June's Schedule

Louise Glauin in "Love or Justice," one of her best early successes, is on the list of June releases announced by Frank G. Hall, president of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, for the territory exclusively controlled on a special series of re-edited star productions. "Love or Justice" is a Thomas H. Ince production from a story by Lambert Hillyer, directed by Walter Edwards. Miss Glauin is supported by Jack Richardson, Charles Gunn, J. Barney Sherry, Dorcas Matthews and Charles K. French.

Reelcraft to Release Franey Comedies

Billy Franey in one reel Franey comedies are the latest release announced by the Reelcraft company. Having looked over the first ten comedies made by this comedian, the Reelcraft company contracted through Nat. H. Spitzer, their west coast representative, for fifty-two of these comedies, to be released one a week.

Re-Issue Prospects Good Hallmark Manager Believes That Exhibitors Will Demand Supply

GEORGE N. MONTGOMERY, general sales manager of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, who recently returned from a nationwide tour of exchanges, reviews the possibilities for a volume of business during the coming season. Having covered all of the Hallmark exchanges from Coast to Coast with a view towards getting a proper line on the requirements of exhibitors in all territories and in order to make recommendations for the issuing of product to best fulfill these requirements, he reports:

"The common demand of the exhibitor for 1920 seems to be for 'bigger' pictures to a far greater extent than in any year past. As a consequence a field is opened to the company who can offer the exhibitor, both large and small, a volume of big creations with stars of merit. This condition is of special benefit to Hallmark whose acquisition from Triangle of more than 800 negatives of star productions available for re-creations has recently been announced.

"Exhibitors everywhere are accepting with enthusiasm Hallmark's announcement of the release of fifty-two re-created Triangle star productions for the coming year. They feel that these pictures fill the gap obviously created by the recent announcements of other distributing companies of pictures calling for fewer and bigger pictures. The feeling also prevails that there will not be enough of the latter subjects on regular release to meet the requirements of the larger or first-run exhibitors alone, to say nothing of the second and subsequent runs of the small community exhibitor."

Albany Police Chief Passes on Picture

The Argus Enterprises people and Mr. Priest are elated over the verdict of chief of Police Hyatt of Albany who viewed "The House Without Children" to pass upon its fitness for exploitation in Albany.

It was unanimously agreed that the picture was free from any obscene features, and that Albany movie fans will in no manner be shocked when they see it.

Character Engages Art Title Exports

Something new in the way of art titles is promised for "The Isle of Destiny" by Character Pictures Corp. The company has engaged J. J. Martin, Ned McGuire and Warren A. Newcomb, three of the foremost title experts and formerly with Thomas H. Ince, to do special titles for the production.

METRO

THE big Metro production of the year is to be made at the west coast studios instead of in the East, according to change of plans announced this week from the West Coast offices. This will be "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and Rex Ingraham has been selected to direct the making of this superproduction adapted from the most talked of story of the war.

Information is given out at the metro studios that June Mathis is to return to the Hollywood studios at an early date to write the continuity for "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." At the present time Miss Mathis is in New York writing the script for "Polly With a Past" in which Ina Claire is to be starred. Upon the completion of this she will come West.

In West Coast circles the appointment of Ingraham to direct "The Four Horsemen" is considered a signal honor to this young director. It is understood that Metro officers expect this film to be one of their biggest productions of the year '20-'21 season, and it will be his third subject for this organization, he now being engaged in filming "Hearts Are Trumps" from the Drury Lane melodrama, and the appointment came as a result of work Ingraham did in the making of "Shore Acres" recently released.

The stage play, "Body and Soul," by William Hurburt, is to serve as the next vehicle for Alice Lake and screen version is now being written by Hayden Talbot, playwright, recently added to the Metro scenario staff. This play had a very successful run in New York, and is referred to as a psychological melodrama which gives Miss Lake the role of a girl who studies art in Paris, and because of an accident, her mind is affected. After serving as artists' model she comes to America, where she is wrongfully accused of a murder which is later found to have been committed by an erring nephew for his uncle's insurance. Forest Stanley, who has just completed playing opposite Miss Lake in "The Misfit Wife," has been chosen to continue as her leading man in this film, and Edmund Mortimer, of the Metro executive staff, will direct the production which is to be started next week upon the return of Miss Lake from a vacation trip at Coronado.

Viola Dana is working in the final scenes for the "Chorus Girl's Romance," and in these her past experience as a dancer is serving her well for she has several shimmy dances as well as an imitation of Pavlova's toe dances for this picture. This film is a screen version of the Fitzgerald story "Head and Shoulders" and is being directed by William C. Dowlan, from script prepared by Percy Heath.

Metro officers have selected "Blackmail" as the next play for Miss Dana and Albert Shelly Levine has been given an enormous bonus for completing the script in ten days, making it possible for the company to begin work immediately upon the completion of "Chorus Girl's Romance." Wyndham Standing, who has been on the West Coast for the past several months, playing in Goldwyn and Maurice Tourneur pictures, has been engaged as leading man for Miss Dana, and will play the role of Lawyer Harding. "Blackmail" is the first of a series of stories by Lucia Chamberlain to be filmed by Metro, and it is expected William C. Dowlan will direct the making of this picture. Edward Cecil has been placed under contract to play with Miss Dana.

Phil Rosen, who has for several years served as camera man with East and West Coast companies, and who gave up photography work to be a director for Universal several months ago, has been engaged by Metro, and his initial work for this organization will be to direct May Allison in "Are All Men Alike?" This story is an adaptation from the Arthur Stringer tale, "The Waffle Iron," and A. P. Younger is preparing the continuity which will be ready for filming in about a week. Wallace MacDonald, who just completed work in the special Vitagraph production, has been engaged as leading man for Miss Allison. Rosen's rise in the film world has been due to very close study of filming from the viewpoint of the camera man. He served as cinematographer for more than ten years, his last work being that of "The Miracle Man" for George Loan Tucker. He is president of the American Society of Cinematographers, and is one of the founders of the organization.

Rex Ingraham and all-star cast company are working at San Juan, Capistrano using the old mission melodrama "Hearts Are Trumps."

Continuity work is now being done on the second F. Scott Fitzgerald story, "An Offshore Pirate," but no star has been assigned to this play. The continuity will be ready for filming within a fortnight.

Hurlburt Footner, author and playwright, has been added to the Metro scenario staff. He is the author of a number of magazine stories and several plays.

The first Buster Keaton comedy to be made by director Eddie Cline is nearing completion, and will be ready for final editing by the end of the week. Sybil Sealey is playing opposite the athletic star.

GOLDWYN

NEARLY a thousand people in evening clothes, including the seventy-two members of the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra, and the cast for the Goldwyn picture,

"The Great Lover" participated in scenes made at Cline's Auditorium by Director Frank Lloyd several days this week. Two settings, representing those used for the first and second act of the opera, "Don Giovanni," were used on the sixty-foot stage, together with a complete company necessary for the staging of this opera. There were nearly eight hundred people in the audience in evening clothes. The Auditorium is the largest theatre in Los Angeles, and has more than 3,000 seats. It was necessary to run special electric trunks to the theatre in order to supply the 2,000 amps. necessary for the lighting effects, all of which were under the supervision of D. V. Jennings, camera man for the Lloyd company. Principals of the cast for this picture are John Sanborn, Claire Adams, Rose Dione, John Davison and Lionel Belmore.

Director E. Mason Hopper has filmed all scenes for Mary Robert Rhinehart's story, "Empire Builders," and Mrs. Rhinehart, who has been at the studio for several weeks, has personally written the subtitles for this play. Final title for the film has been selected, and it will be released under the name of "This Is the Life." With the completion of this Director Hopper will resume the making of the two-reel George Ade Edgar series plays featuring Johnny Jones, and during the coming week will commence the filming of "Edgar's Sunday Court- ing."

Mabel Normand is returning from New York the latter part of this week, and will immediately begin work in "Head Over Heels," under Director Victor Sirtzinger. This play was a stage success starring Mitza Hajos. Jack Pickford is starting work under the direction of Al Green on the George Ade play, "Just Out of College," and Tom Moore continues under the direction of Harry Beaumont on "Stop Thief." The Reginald Barker company, making "The Black Pawl," still continues on the marine scenes, working in the neighborhood of Catalina Islands on boats.

HAMPTON

THE mammoth J. D. Hampton studio stage, measuring 120x260 feet, is this week being converted into a prize fight arena, and will be used for the heavyweight bouts to be staged between Mahlon Hamilton and William West, for the Robert Thornby special production, "Half a Chance." West is a well-known athlete, and is the only actor of the West Coast film colony to enter the Western tryouts for the Olympic games. The tryouts are to be staged at Pasadena June 26th.

Change has been made with respect to the next H. B. Warner production, and this actor will next play in "The People Against Nancy Preston" instead of "The Brass Bottle." This new play is adapted from the John A. Morosco novel, and it has been given the working title of "Going Straight." Henry King is in charge of filming this subject, and the complete cast will be announced within a few days.

as "Fort O'Caprice" has been finished by Director Paul Scardon. It is from the story of the same name by Kenneth B. Clarke, and concerns a young actress who is forced to adopt a husband. Albert Roscoe, Edwin Stevens, George Kuwa and Jack Abbey are principals of the cast, and Victor Milner was in charge of photography. Miss Sweet will next work in "That Girl Montana," from the Marsh Ellis Ryan story.

BRUNTON

THE second anniversary of the founding of the Robert Brunton studios was celebrated during the past week by an elaborate banquet given by Robert Brunton to the heads of the departments of the big studio, their assistants, stars, directors and a number of Los Angeles business men. The entertainment was chosen to illustrate the completeness of the plant, the banquet being served in a cafe set erected on one of the stages and prepared by the organization of the studio cafe. Gold, purple and blue lighting effects were furnished by the studio electricians and the decoration was in charge of property department while music was furnished by the studio orchestra. Following the dinner a program was furnished, vocal solos by Roy Stewart, Robert McKin, dances by the chorus of the Henry Kolker Selznick company and after dinner speeches by Mr. Brunton, M. C. Levee, Thomas Little, J. Warren Kerrigan and others.

President Myron Selznick and Brother David who is the treasurer arrived in Los Angeles Sunday, June 6th for a stay of a week or more with general manager Harry Rapt of the Selznick producing organization working at the Robert Brunton studios. The visit of the Selznick brothers to the coast will not, it is said, alter the plans of making two more productions in the west before the units are returned to New York to work during the summer. These two pictures are now in the making and consist of "Nobody" starring Olive Thomas under the direction of Lawrence Trimble to be released as a Selznick production and the all star picture directed by Henry Kolker titled "Who Am I?" which is to be a National picture and Niles Welch plays the principal leading role in the latter.

Director Victor Herman, Owen Moore and Fred Almy, business manager of the Moore company are leaving this week for New York where the final scenes for "Stop That Man" are to be made.

Announcement made by R. W. McFarland, western manager of Mayflower Photoplay Corporation is to the effect that George Loan Tucker's second production featuring Betty Compson titled "Ladies Must Live" will shortly be ready for release and that Tucker is to follow this work in the making of the four other subjects for Mayflower.

Gertrude Claire one of the best known character women of the coast has been cast to take the part of grandmother in the Mayflower-Dwan production now in the making.

All scenes have been taken for the Benjamin B. Hampton production of the Zane Grey story "The U. P. Trail" and director Jack Conway, scenario writer W. H. Clifford are now editing and titling the film.

The Hampton editorial staff has continuity nearly prepared for filming the William Allen White novel "A Certain Rich Man" and this work will be started shortly.

The Betty Compson Productions, Inc., have extended their lease at the Brunton plant and are to make three more productions following the one recently completed which has been titled "Prisoners of Love." Work has been started on preparatory work for a few of the future productions.

The party of twenty-one members of the Drapers Chamber of Trade of United Kingdom, who were entertained three days by Los Angeles merchants, were honored guests at the Robert Brunton studio one day this week and witnessed the filming of a number of scenes. The twenty-one members represent mercantile establishments with a combined capital of $100,000,000 in London and nearby places.

Chester W. Babcock, superintendent of construction at the Robert Brunton studio was instantly killed June 6th, when he fell into a ravine in the rear of his home at Sawtelle, Calif. In the fall Babcock's neck was broken. Babcock is one of the oldest employees of the Brunton studios and under his supervision practically all of the building of this plant was carried forward. His most recent work was superintending the construction of the 300 foot stage, the property building and the new lumber mill.

FIRST NATIONAL

ALL the units of First National Exhibitors circuit are at work and particular significance is attached to the names of authors whose plays are now being made by the several companies at work on the west coast, this list including Margarite Mayo, author "Twin Beds" being directed by Lloyd Ingram and co-starring Mr. and Mrs. Carter de Haven; George M. Cohen whose "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" is to be Charles Ray's initial release; Robert Wagner who has written an original screen play for Ray; Booth Tarkington's "Ramsey Millholland;" Rita Weiman, author of "Curtain," Katherine MacDonald vehicle; Elinor Hollowell Abbot, author of "Old Dad," Mildred Harris Chaplin production; Kathleen Norris, author of "Harriett and the Piper" just finished with Anita Stewart starring and Sydney Grundy's "Sowing the Wind" which is to be this star's next vehicle; Ellis Parker Butler, author of the King Vidor production "The Jackknife Man;" Clara Kummer, author of the stage drama "A Successful Calamity" next to be filmed by Vidor; William Allen White, author of Dwan's "In the Heart of a Fool;" Robert W. Chambers, author of "Athalie" starring Sylvia Breamer and H. H. Van Loan, who is writing the continuity for the stage play "Curiosity" which is to be a Norma Talmadge vehicle.

The Marshall Neilan production which is a newspaper mystery story has been given the title "Go and Get It." This play which has a cast including Agnes Aires, Pat O'Malley, Walter Long and J. Barney Sherry, Bull Montana and Noah Beery has been edited by the producer and is now ready for release. The fourth Neilan production made under the direction of Jack McDermott and featuring Westley Barry with a cast including Colleen Moore, Marjorie Daw and Pat O'Malley is being completed and will be ready for laboratory work shortly.

Announcement is made that Charlie Chaplin's big special titled "The Kid" is now receiving the finishing touches.

The Sydney Grundy stage success "Sowing the Wind" is to be the next vehicle for Anita Stewart and this will be directed by John Stahl. Continuity for this play is being written by Monte M. Catterjohn. Another new play put in production at the Lewis B. Mayer studio is titled "Habit" and will star Mildred Harris Chaplin. Edwin Carew has been selected to direct the filming and the cast selected includes William Lawrence, Walter MacGrail, Ethel Gray Terry and Emit King.

The Mayflower Photoplay Corporation has two subjects ready for the First National. These are "Athalie" featuring Sylvia Breamer to be known as a Sidney Franklin production and "A Splendid Hazard" starring Henry Walthall supported by an all star cast.

Charles Ray continues at work on "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" which will be his first First National release and the Kathryn MacDonald company has made most of the scenes for the Rita Weiman play "Curtain" which has a cast made up of Charles Richmond, Florence Deshon and Lloyd Whitlock working under the direction of James Young. Carter de Haven has begun work on "Twin Beds" which is being directed by Lloyd Ingraham. Principals of this cast besides Carter are Mrs. de Haven and William Desmond.

UNIVERSAL

LYONS and Moran have taken the last scenes for their second farce comedy feature which will be entitled "La La Lucille" and after the first editing the picture was given a studio preview that caused the hard-boiled audience to make the claim that this film would be a knock-out.

Complete cast selected by Director Rollin Sturgeon for the initial Carmel Myers production "In Folly's Trail" is composed of Thomas Holding, Arthur Clayton, George B. Williams, Viola Lynd, Beth Evans, William Brainbridge and others. "Foolish Wives" is the where a replica of Monte Carlo title selected for the next Eric Von Stroheim Universal jewel production and the director is now at Catalina Islands to select a site may be erected. The scenario for this production has been about com-

Mrs. Chet Withey Made Guest of Honor

Mrs. Chet Withers was entertained as the guest of honor at the last meeting of the "The Woman Pays Club," which meets every Wednesday at Keen's chop-house to discuss matters of interest to scenario writers, editors, press-representatives, composers, playwrights, novelists, poets and musicians. Each week there is an honored guest at the head of the long T-shaped table on the third floor, which is especially reserved for the club. The membership is limited to forty, and each member must be self-supporting, whether married or single.

Mrs. Chet Withey is a successful scenario writer whose last photograph "Up In The Air About Jane," in which Dorothy Gish is starred, is now being cut and titled in the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck. Mrs. Withey is at present working on a new story for Dorothy, and she has also in preparation a scenario which is intended as a vehicle for Constance Talmadge.

Stanton to Make Two Pictures Abroad

Richard Stanton is the most recent of the big directors to announce that he is going to Europe. For some time it has been rumored that Mr. Stanton is to head his own producing company, and it now appears that at least two of his future pictures will be made abroad.

Mr. Stanton intends to leave this country next month upon the completion of his present Fox special feature. On his trip abroad he will be accompanied by a complete American producing organization, consisting of his principal players, two camera men and a small crew of technical experts. The outfit will work in France and Italy, where Mr. Stanton will use the actual locale required by the script.

Chester Franklin to Be Realart Director

Chester Franklin, well known for his direction of "Kid" pictures, has been added to the Realart staff of directors recently and will work at the company's studios in Hollywood. During the war his services were engaged by the Government to make propaganda pictures for Army Health Service.

Robert Vignola, Director

Twelve Years in Industry and with Only Three Producers in That Time

Robert G. Vignola, director of "The World and His Wife," a Cosmopolitan production

ROBERT G. VIGNOLA, who has just completed "The World and His Wife," his first production for Cosmopolitan Productions, and which is regarded as one of the big pictures of the year, is one of the most interesting and unique personalities in the motion-picture world.

Twelve years in the silent art and associated with but three producers during that time, Director Vignola probably holds the record for long-distance, fancy, and catch-as-catch-can stability. He has made fewer changes in his affiliations than any other director, and yet he has the record for having directed most of the big stars. Among the famous people who have taken orders from him through the megaphone are Pauline Frederick, Marguerite Clark, Ethel Clayton, Clara Kimball Young, Billie Burke, Alice Brady, Alice Joyce, Tom Moore, Mary Pickford, Vivian Martin, Constance Talmadge, and Alma Rubens.

Born in Trivigno, Italy, thirty-eight years ago and coming to this country at the age of three, Robert G. Vignola was reared and educated in Albany. At the age of seventeen he joined a local stock company where he played everything from omnes to heavies and character leads.

In 1908 Sidney Olcott inveigled him into motion pictures, and he joined Kalem. He remained with Kalem for seven years during which he went to the Holy Land, England, Ireland, Scotland, etc., with Sidney Olcott, where they made "From The Manger To The Cross," a huge and spectacular production in those days. Kalem gave him his first chance at directing. It was against his wishes, for he wanted to remain an actor. But they insisted, and he gave in.

In 1915 he joined Famous Players-Lasky where he remained until January of this year when he associated himself with Cosmopolitan Productions.

Among the big productions which Vignola has directed are "Audrey," "The Moment Before," "The Spider," "The Knife," "Seventeen," "Great Expectations," "The Reason Why," "The Claw," "Experimental Marriage," "The Third Kiss," "The Official Fiancee," "Woman's Weapons," "The Thirtieth Commandment," and "The Fortunes of Fi-Fi."

pleted and the players so far selected are Sandy Grass who appeared in both "Blind Husbands" and "The Devil's Passkey" together with Maud George and Mae Busch.

Tod Browning with a cast composed of Lon Chaney, Wheeler Oatman, Ralph Lewis, E. A. Warren in support of Priscilla Dean are now at work on "Outside the Law" from scenario written by Lucian Hubbard and story by Browning. Following this it has been decided Miss Dean will be starred in "The Cat That Walked Alone." This story is said to have been written by John Colton for Geraldine Farrar and was to have been produced by Goldwyn.

Hugh Hoffman who has been in the East for the past eighteen months has been returned to the coast studios by Universal to write continuity for the next Eddie Polo serial which will be titled "Circus Life." Polo was formerly with a number of the leading circuses and has just spent several weeks with Ringling Brothers in tour. He has returned to Universal studios with a great quantity of new material for the next serial. The Universal is having a special story written to cast for Rudolph Christians and Lee Kohlmar. Christians is a former leading man and director of Irving Palace theatre, New York, and Kohlmar has been featured in a number of comedy roles in Broadway productions. Director Jack Ford is now using one of the latest sets ever erected at Universal City for scenes for "Hitchin' Posts." This setting represents a southern estate with colonial mansion, grounds, servants quarters and all other buildings necessary for such a scene. Edward Cull has been retained by Universal to direct a serial from the novel by Jacques Futrelle "The Diamond Master" which will feature Eileen Sedgwick and James B. Warren. Continuity for this is now being prepared by Hope Loring head of the serial and western department and filming is to be started within a week.

George Hull of the Universal scenario staff has received a check for $1,000 from President Carl Laemmle as a prize for the best story that fits the title "Broken Promises."

CHRISTIE

PRACTICALLY everything is in readiness for filming of "So Long Letty" by the Christies for Robertson-Cole and director Al Christie will probably start the making of this within the next two weeks. At the present time director Al is busy with the making of a two reel comedy which will introduce Harry Gibbon in this brand of straight comedy.

James Clements is serving as assistant to Al Christie following the directing of a number of Christie comedies.

Reggie Morris, who has been giving his attention to the making of the "Bringing Up Father" series is now at work on a Christie comedy many scenes of which were taken in a chewing gum Bill Wrigley's sunken garden in Pasadena. This film will introduce a number of new faces among the Christie follies and prize fights in which four main event boxers from the Vernon Athletic Club take part.

Jacques d'Auray has been added to the Christie staff to serve as technical director of the French scenes and atmosphere for the Robertson-Cole series of French detective stories the first of which is "813." d'Auray is a world traveler formerly with the secret and diplomatic service of the French government who served as stage director before the big war. Since coming to America he has played in a number of pictures opposite Elsie Ferguson, Walker Whiteside, and Valentine Grant. Wallace Beery and Kathryn Adams have been added to the cast for "813."

READ

A TOTAL of ten attractions are to be made during the coming year by J. Parker Read, Jr., five of which will star Louise Glaum, five Hobart Bosworth and two others will be made with all star casts. The work of producing the first of the all star features is progressing satisfactorily and filming is expected to be started by the middle of June.

Producer Read has script now prepared for the next Louise Glaum production which will be started within a week under the direction of Westley Ruggles and the final scenes are now being taken for the Hobart Bosworth subject titled "Bucko MacAllister." The latter has Anna Q. Nilsson and William Conklin in the principal roles supporting Bosworth.

Director Arthur Rosson, who has just completed the first release of the Betty Compson Photoplays, Inc. The title is "Prisoners of Love"

Director Rosson a Busy Bee These Days

Arthur Rosson, director of Betty Compson photoplays, is now doing three tasks at one time in an effort to keep things moving with the greatest speed possible for the featured star of the George Loan Tucker's success "The Miracle Man." The young director has just recently completed the filming of the final scenes for the initial Betty Compson photoplay "Prisoners of Love" and is at work on editing the thousands of feet of film used to make five hundred odd scenes. At the same time he is working on continuity for Miss Compson's next production which will be in production within the next two weeks. The third task that confronts him is that of selecting suitable players to support Miss Compson and daily he interviews a number of professionals. In summing up the work of the director no consideration is given to the many questions he is daily required to answer respecting technical work that must be considered in preparing for the making of the film.

Director Rosson has a number of very excellent subjects to his credit made in the past two years after he had served an apprenticeship of eight years in various positions in the film industry. Rosson directed Douglas Fairbanks in "Heading South" an Artaft, Louise Glaum in "Sahara" for J. Parker Reed, Jr., Tom Mix in "Rough Riding Romance" for Fox, Mildred Harris in "Polly of the Storm Country" for First National and Henry Walthall and all star cast in "A Splendid Hazard" for Mayflower Picture Corporation. In most of the subjects directed by Rosson he has had the assistance of his brother Dick and his brother Harold has served as photographer.

D. Powell Refused Stardom

Well-Known Actor Satisfied to Play Leads in Fitzmaurice Films

HAVE you heard of a motion picture player who refused an offer of stardom. Yes, he was feeling quite well, and knew exactly what he was doing. The player was Dave Powell. It happened this way.

Mr. Powell held a two year contract with Famous Players, during the first year of which he was to play leading parts, and during the second he had the option of starring. At the end of the first year, a week or so ago, Mr. Powell had an interview at the Lasky offices, and Mr. Zukor asked if he wished to exercise his option.

Mr. Powell recalled his undeniable success in "On With the Dance." He remembered George Fitzmaurice's superb sets, his capable direction, and the care that was to be lavished on his future productions. He decided that he would rather take part in the production of a Special Feature that was a special than have his name alone in electric lights over a less carefully produced program feature. He told Mr. Zukor that he was perfectly willing to continue playing leads in the Fitzmaurice Specials.

If only there were a few more actors like David Powell! How much it would mean to those who hope for fewer and better pictures. Mr. Powell is an artist—he wants to make good films.

"What does stardom mean," he commented, "unless it's proper stardom? What good would it do me to see announcements of 'David Powell in The Girls He Loved,' or some such title? If the public enjoy my performances, and prove it by going to see films in which I play, I am sincerely gratified. But that's the only sort of appreciation that means anything."

Coolidge and Pigot Unique Organization

"Scenarios while you wait" is the shingle that might well be hung out in front of a Los Angeles office recently established for buyers of custom made screen stories.

The unique project is well under way with William Pigott and Karl R. Coolidge as its sponsors.

Pigott was for many months head of the serial and short reel feature department at Universal City and is the author of many screen successes. Coolidge was a well known dramatic and magazine writer.

Under the name of "The Screen-krafters," Pigott and Coolidge will not only furnish scenarios to the producers but will act as consulting engineers, following the story from the script to the screen with continuous service.

Edmonde Company Back from Location

The Frances Edmonde Company returned to Los Angeles studios recently from San Francisco, where they have been the past two weeks with a company of thirty-five people taking a number of scenes in Chinatown, the residential district and the beach, for their forthcoming feature "Peggy Wise," in which Frances Edmonde, the popular "International Classic Girl" is starring.

George Larkin and an excellent cast, including Harry Van Meter, Katherine Lewis, Earl Shafer, Jeanne Poe and Dick Johnson support Miss Edmonde in her initial feature. Reggie Lyons is responsible for the photography and some novel lighting effects. Elsie La Maie is directing the production.

E. Griffith Returns Home

Director Promises Big Returns From American Exportation

PROBABLY never since the inception of foreign trade in the picture industry, have England and France been more ready and willing to look with favor upon American productions than at present, according to a statement given out at the Vitagraph studio a few days ago by Edward H. Griffith, who recently returned from an extended trip abroad, where he went to study conditions.

Mr. Griffith has long been identified in the motion picture industry as a rising and promising director. Commencing his picture career as a scenario writer at the Edison Studio, after spending several years in the newspaper game, he wrote pictures for most of that company's stars. Anxious to conquer new fields he then became a director.

"On every side I am asked for an opinion of the foreign trade and the part America will play in the great game of film exportation," said Mr. Griffith. "I think I may safely say that England and France have never been more interested or enthusiastic than at present. Naturally they are interested in developing the industry abroad, but they are looking to America for equipment of all sorts, and pictures of international interest."

Mr. Griffith has just completed "Bab's Candidate," featuring Corinne Griffith, and is at present at work upon "The Vice of Fools," featuring Alice Joyce.

"Sex" Breaks Records for Loew Theatres

J. Parker Read, Jr.'s Louise Glaum production, "Sex," proved a boom attraction at all Marcus Loew houses in Greater New York the past week, the Hodgkinson release smashing attendance marks at Loew's New York theatre and at the new Metropolitan, Brooklyn.

Louise Glaum Finishes Fourth for Read

After four months of concentrated effort on the part of star, director, cameraman and cast, Louise Glaum, J. Parke Read's star, has completed the tentatively titled story "The Girl Who Dared." Wesley Ruggles has filmed for Miss Glaum's latest film an automobile wreck that is said to be extremely realistic.

Violet Mesereau Will Remain in Features

Violet Mesereau, the Art-o-Graf star, is not making two-reel productions, according to a recent announcement. This corrects a statement that recently appeared in some papers, stating that Miss Mesereau would make a series of two-reel dramatic subjects. She will soon start on "Out of the Depths," a new production for Art-o-Graf Film Company.

Read the complete story of the Mercy Theatre on Pages 115 and 116

Motion Picture Architecture is passing through its crystallizing stage. There is individuality in houses now being built. The illustration on this page is presented in evidence of this statement. Here is a design that is different and yet strikingly attractive. And when the theatre is completed it will be found that the motif here indicated has been as well and thoroughly carried out in the interior. We are glad to credit this excellent piece of work to John B. Bayard, Architect, of Vincennes, Indiana

Owner's First Thought in Mercy Theatre Was Fire Protection

Yakima's Latest House Is Last Word in Fire-Proof Construction

By Carl W. Gross

IN the month of June, 1912, Frederick Mercy arrived in Yakima and purchased the Majestic theatre, then a 25-foot "store room show." Six months later he remodeled and redecorated it, making the Majestic the second largest motion picture house in the State of Washington at that time, being second only to the Clemmer in Seattle.

Today, Frederick Mercy has opened the largest and finest theatre not only in Washington, but in the entire Northwest.

Following the remodeling of the Majestic, Mr. Mercy acquired the lease of the Empire theatre in March, 1915. In 1916 he leased the Yakima theatre from John Cort and operated it till 1917. In 1916 he also acquired the business of the North Yakima Poster Advertising Company, which name was changed to the Mercy Poster Advertising Company. This plant he immediately enlarged and standardized, making extensive improvements.

In 1917 the Avenue theatre was added to Mr. Mercy's holding and was operated by him until it ceased to exist, being dismantled to make room for a store building. In 1918 he purchased the Dudely Building in Yakima, which he still owns and which will be razed in the future for an exclusive motion picture palace for which plans are being made.

When asked by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS for his secret of success, he said he had none but that any one could do what he did if they worked hard enough and gave the people what they wanted. If they picked out good pictures and were not afraid to spend a few cents more for the better types of pictures. Mercy had the entire support of Yakima, a city of 18,000, when he constructed the Mercy theatre, as no man could build such a theatre unless he had the city's unqualified support. Yakima expects big things from Mercy and they all expect to back him up.

Because of Yakima's fidelity and Mercy's business ability, the Mercy theatre was built and Yakima has the largest theatre in the United States playing a combination of Motion Pictures, Vaudeville and Road Shows. This seems a rather broad statement to make for a theatre in a city of 18,000 people, but comparison will show whether or not it is too broad.

"I guess Yakima is willing to help with this Mercy theatre," said Mr. Mercy, "because the people here like to see the big features of the screen played on the latest type of house screen, in a swell looking theatre, and they also like to see the Pan-tages Vaudeville here, which in order for them to see they know they must support it, and in order for them to get it here, I also leased a place in Walla Walla, so that Edie Milne of Seattle, who is a good fellow, would send us his best."

"Undoubtedly," said Mr. Mercy, "the first consideration in the construction of today is the fireproof provision. No building could be more fireproof than the Mercy theatre. Starting with a foundation and basement flooring of solid concrete many inches in thickness under the entire building, 100 by 140 feet in size, the concrete, brick and steel type of construction has been used throughout. The roofing is of the very best asbestos that could be purchased.

"The stage is, of course, equipped with a thick asbestos curtain. Also, the largest water main running into any building in the city enters the theatre and connects directly with numerous regulation hose lines, racked and ready for instant use."

To make doubly safe the Mercy theatre exits are more numerous and larger in size than specified for a much larger seating capacity. All doors are fitted with the latest patented fasteners that cause them to open with the slightest pressure from any angle from the inside. Cheaper fixtures could have been used, but Mr. Mercy does not think they pay.

Because of the many exits and seating arrangement the theatre can be emptied in three minutes, even though every seat were filled. Particular attention is called to the saucer or bowl-like shape of the auditorium floor, which is a new construction, more costly and more difficult of construction, but Mercy says it's better than the old way. This arrangement permits an uninterrupted view of the whole stage from any seat in the theatre and leaves but little choice in the matter of location.

Extending around the entire front of the balcony is a row of eleven loges, each containing eight Circassian walnut chairs. There is no gallery in the Mercy theatre—no benches. Every seat is a comfortable upholstered one and may be reserved. Better opera chairs are not made. This is wonderful for a motion picture house.

Wide aisles, well illuminated with Aisle-lites, mean quick and comfortable exits. That's why they were put in. The Aisle-lites are so constructed that the aisle is brightly illuminated to eliminate the danger of stumbling.

The latest improved system of ventilation has also been installed. In the front basement are two large batteries of steam-heated radiators and between them an improved high-pressure air washer. The air is drawn from the outside at the top of the theatre, through one battery of radiators, into the air washer, thence through another set of radiators, from whence it is propelled by a 13-foot high-speed fan into the plenum chamber. The plenum chamber is a sealed space under both the lower floor and the balcony through which the air circulates before entering the theatre proper through six-inch mushroom type ventilators located under each seat. On the roof of the theatre is located a large high-speed exhaust fan which draws the used air from around the ceiling.

Radiators of a special type are required for the purpose of rapidly and thoroughly heating the air as it is drawn from the outside. To secure the necessary water pressure for the air washer it was necessary to install a high-pressure tank and pump to augment the standard city water pressure. Countless nozzles throwing fine sprays under pressure make a perfect cloud of moisture through which the air is drawn and thoroughly cleansed before again passing around the radiators and into the plenum chamber.

In the summer time the chambers are shut off and ice placed in the air washer, insuring a temperature much cooler than the outside atmosphere.

A number of theatres recently constructed have plenum chamber features of ventilation but use large, unsightly registers located in the walls for the purpose of distributing the cooled or heated air. With the mushroom type registers or ventilators under each seat an absolutely uniform distribution of air is insured. This

When Tivoli Is Completed in Chattanooga South Will Have New Theatre Standard

Half-Million Dollar Theatre with Large Seating Capacity is Huge Undertaking for This City

ONE of the finest of the many new theatres now under construction by the Signal Amusement Co. is the Tivoli at Chattanooga. An architect's drawing of this house is shown in the accompanying drawing. But the picture does not begin to give a proper perspective of the size of the theatre. The front pictured extends back several hundred feet and what appears to be the theatre is merely the lobby. Running parallel with the street, and back of the opening pictured, is the auditorium, with a capacity of 2,500 seats. The auditorium towers four stories above the front shown in the photograph.

The architects for the Tivoli are Rapp Bros., of Chicago, who also designed the Riviera and Keith's Palace, Cincinnati. The Chattanooga house will be built on very similar lines to the Palace, Cincinnati—a house considered to be the last word in theatre construction in that section.

When completed the Tivoli will be the finest in the South, and, it is said, it will mark a new standard that will inspire ambition for newer theatre construction throughout the territory. The building of the Tivoli is a gigantic undertaking in a city the size of Chattanooga.

Besides the Tivoli in Chattanooga, construction also is under way in Knoxville of the Riviera theatre. This house will cost $150,000. Leases also have been signed and contracts let for the construction of the Rivoli, a building that will cost a half million. The Signal company's $80,000 theatre in South Pittsburgh, Tenn., will open within a month, and another new house is announced for Harman, Tenn.

Yakima's Latest Theatre The Mercy also means a uniform temperature throughout the building, which is not possible with the wall registers.

Sixteen weeks were required for the finishing of the inside plaster relief decorations. They are purely Italian Renaissance and the models, drawings, designs and casts for these decorations were all done on the job.

Each model was made with the style of architecture in mind as well as to correct measurements, curvature and contour. So well did these artists do their work that not a piece was made over; everything fitted perfectly well both from an artistic and mechanical standpoint.

Baskets of fruit, sheaves of grain, and grasses are prominent in the decorations as befitting the location of the theatre, as it is in the famous Yakima grain and apple valley. So perfect is the dome that it seems as if it must have been cast at once. There are apparently no joints, no separate pieces. The entire dome is set off with artistically arranged cove lighting, which reflects from the art glass in the center designed and colored to fit the general style and scheme of decoration.

Soft colors incorporated with the carved enrichments make a decorative scheme that blends perfectly with the architecture and completes the work of the relief decorators.

The painting in the Mercy theatre is proclaimed by connoisseurs to be a triumph in decorative art.

The warm gray color motif for the relief portions of the work is for the prime purpose of forming a frame and background for the figural murals and flat decorative panels wherein is incorporated the color and life. The panels of the spandrels between the curved lattice panels in the dome are done in an all-over flat decorative design in colors and the small panels in the brackets of the cornice are done in the neutral color of burnt orange. These with the addition of the murals add life to the general color scheme of warm gray and old rose.

To show the entire decorative scheme off to advantage, special lighting effects have been designed and incorporated into the construction. These consist of cove lighting for art glass, two sets of cove lights for the dome and especially selected fixtures throughout the theatre.

HIGHEST QUALITY • COATED FABRICS

Upholstery That Stays New

ONE of the really vital advantages of Duratex Better Upholstery is its permanence of beauty and wear.

Long after other upholstery has shown signs of shabbiness and depreciation, Duratex looks fresh and new. When ordinary upholstery is threadbare, stiff or cracked, Duratex is still good for years of service.

Duratex retains its freshness and newness longer because of the toughness of Duratex fabrics and the scientific process by which these fabrics are coated and protected.

This patented coating makes Duratex wear resisting and water-proof. It keeps the finish new.

Duratex is made in a variety of rich colors. It will not fade, crack or stretch out of shape. In appearance Duratex cannot be told from the finest grained leather. But unlike leather it can be frequently washed and kept permanently clean.

Let us send you samples of this longer wearing and more beautiful upholstery. And let us estimate cost of equipping your theatre. Duratex durability and lasting beauty are things you'll appreciate during a period of many years.

As the Mercy theatre is also equipped for vaudeville and stock companies, the stage equipment is complete. A wide variety of settings, painted by the best scenic artists, with special drops and other scenic equipment go to make what is undoubtedly the most complete set of scenery carried by any theatre of this order in the entire West.

All the hanging material on the stage is installed with a special counterweight system requiring 60,000 feet of wire rope and cable and almost a carload of stage hardware. With this system all scenery, border lights and other hanging fixtures and curtains can be handled with ease, only the slightest pull being required to send the desired piece up or down.

Just off the stage on the left is an animal room, with ample quarters for such animals as may from time to time form a part of some legitimate or vaudeville show. On this same idea is also located a large property room close at hand, where any of the numerous properties are instantly available.

Large batteries of specially built bunch lights augment the numerous sets of border lights that go to make the Mercy theatre stage a blaze of light. Three special switch board panels control the different lighting effects. A special set of dimming switches has also been installed, by the use of which the lights can so gradually be dimmed from brilliant light to complete darkness that the change from one degree of light to another is not noticeable.

Everything on the stage, 100 feet by 40 feet wide, is so arranged as to permit quick and easy changes with a minimum amount of work. Beneath the stage in fireproof quarters are located fourteen large dressing rooms, the musicians' room, the musical library, stage workers' room and two large chorus rooms, all well lighted and hot and cold running water in each room.

Mr. Mercy will provide the very best music for his theatre. That is part of his policy. "I do not believe good pictures 'take' as well with poor music as they do with good music. That is why I believe in employing and have an artistic orchestra."

Ornamental Theatre Fixtures

An excellent ticket booth

Just to prove that there are ways of making commonplace things as beautiful as desired, the Stanley Frame Company has brought out a number of theatre fixtures that combine good design with utility. As it is, this combination that the wide-awake exhibitor is always seeking we are showing a number of the articles in the illustrations on this page.

The lamps are seven feet high and hand-carved. They are especially suited for prosceniums, foyers, balcony alcoves and lobbies. The light shines through opalescent glass of different colors and the whole lamp is finished in colors to match the general effect. These lamps come all wired and ready for connection to the lighting circuits.

One of the illustrations show the "booth that is a booth." This was designed to take the place of the many cheap looking, unornamental booths found in so many first-class theatres. It is made of solid hardwood ornamented with unbreakable carving. It is equipped with ventilators, ticket machine, electric lights, electric heaters and fan. The booth is portable, being on roller bearings. It is finished in antique gold although special colors may be had on order.

Mr. Libman of the Stanley Frame Co. reports a large number of these booths sold within the last few weeks.

The proper decorating of a theatre is a profession in itself.

It is a proposition which cannot be handled properly as a department in a separate business. Because theatre decorating is a profession we are viewing it from that standpoint and are in a position not only to decorate your theatre to your complete satisfaction—but to actually save you money on the job. From an artistic, practical and service standpoint we should be your logical choice.

As a typical illustration of our ability in this field we are showing our Beauty Carnation Fernery No. 48 at a price way below today's market. It measures 36 in. long, 18 in. high and 10 in. wide.

The Beauty Carnation Fernery is filled with imported ferns, 18 genuine cloth carnations in pink, white and red, and real Spagnosa Moss. It will fit along your walls on either side of the stage, over your proscenium—in fact in a hundred and one places, and prove an important adjunct to the bright cheery atmosphere you want to dispense.

Because the price on this item is cut to the bone we are compelled to ask for your protection, that check accompany order. Price each, packed in patented individual carton, $6.50. Your money refunded unless you are satisfied.

Gentlemen:

As I am about to begin the construction of two additional theaters in this City, I am most naturally concerned as to whether or not I will be able to get six of your latest model machines. I will not require them for four or five months, but, knowing the demand for your machine, want to get my order in early.

I have, as you know, been using your machines for the past 15 years, during which time I have of course tried about every machine manufactured, with the result that I have always had to replace such other makes with Powers to be sure I had the best. I am taking no chances of further experimenting—hence the above order.

I look upon your concern as not only having the best and the most reliable machine on the market, but the matter of personal service and attention that follows the sale of your machines is one that gains for you full confidence of the purchaser. Your accomplishments in the direction of putting a perfect picture on the screen and in the durability of your outfit are especially deserving of my high praise.

No. 1—Tom Moore Places An Order for Power's Projectors

As I am about to begin the construction of two additional theatres in this City, I am most naturally concerned as to whether or not I will be able to get six of your latest model machines. I will not require them for four or five months, but, knowing the demand for your machine, want to get my order in early.

put with a normal discharge rate for 5 hours and a charge for 7 hours.

The voltage change per cell for charge and discharge at normal rates is shown by Fig. 44. The average discharge voltage per cell being 1.2 volts.

A comparison of ampere hour output and voltage drop at normal rate and 6 times normal rate is shown by Fig. 45.

FIG. 46. CONNECTION DIAGRAM OF INDEPENDANT POWER PLANT

The storage battery is used extensively to supply electrical energy. It may be used as an auxiliary source of power for lights and lamp operation in case of failure of the electrical supply lines. The battery is also used with a generator for isolated installations to reduce the fluctuations of load on the generator.

A storage battery is sometimes made use of in reducing the line voltage in that, batteries in series may be charged at a high voltage and for discharge may be connected in parallel by convenient throw over switches.

Fig. 47—Five Cell Tray Edison Portable Battery

Isolated Lighting Plants—In districts where supply lines from the power station are not available, the isolated lighting plant has solved the problem of electric current. In connection with these plants the storage battery plays a large part. The battery is connected across the line as shown by Fig. 46 with a cut out relay to connect in the generator when the proper voltage is attained. The battery may be used to assist the generator in carrying the peak load, or when only light loads are required may be supplied by the battery alone, the generator being run for only a few hours to charge the battery.

Wiring Diagram and Dowser Connections

I am enclosing a sketch of the wiring of my two Powers 6 "A" machines, the wires designated by the heavy line are an addition to the simple multiple used in many places.

I use only one rheostat for the two machines.

To operate lamphouse "A": Push in switch as on regular multiple wiring and break arc, to light lamp "B" with lamp "A" burning, close carbons together on lamp "B" and pull out switch on machine "A," break arc on "B" and you have both lamps burning in series.

To make change with machines "A" running and both lights burning, start motor on "B," as soon as picture "doubles," throw in switch on "B" which will kill lamp "A" and make a good dissolve.

Another Change-over

In changing back operations are reversed. Be careful not to allow both switches in at the same time as this will cause a "short."

I have used this system for two years and find that it is the only way I can burn two arcs at once with one rheostat.

A look at the dowser diagram will convince one of its simplicity. Hooks are provided for the release of dowser in building a spot.

There may be dozens using these methods, but there are some that have never seen them.

Wiring Diagram for two machines

I feel it my duty to give something in return for the good I receive from the projection department.

The "fellow" that will cut up a "title" is worse than the "punch-mark-man."

Yours truly,

CHAS. F. JONES,

Motor Generator Runs Hot

A. T. Worthington of the Star Theatre, Pluffton, Ohio, is having trouble with his motor generating equipment.

He says: I have a motor generator set consisting of a Peerless Repulsion Induction Motor, 3 h. p., 60 cycle, 104-208 volts, 34. 8-17-4 amps. Speed 1750 r. p. m., single phase. The generator is of 2 k. w. capacity, 50 volts, 40 amps., speed 1600 r. p. m.

My supply line is 220 volts a. c. I use 50 volts and 35 amps. at the arc.

The set is not giving satisfaction on account of both the motor and generator becoming overheated. The generator sparks badly. The light bill is too large. Connections are good all around the projector and lamp house. Some-

Problem Answers

"E. M., Brooklyn Operator," writes: This is my answer to problem 29: A 40-watt lamp requires .36 amperes; 15 lamps burning 4 hours at the rate of 6 cents is equal to $1.44. Please let me know if my answer is correct.

Reply: The correct cost for the operation of the lamps is .144 cents. You evidently have made a mistake of a decimal point in your calculation.

one has told me that the motor is too small.

Can you advise me what size wire should be used when we connect on 220 a. c. as we think the wire used by the lighting company is too small.

Reply: As usual in trouble of this sort there are several possible causes. We will take them up in order.

First, your motor is operating on over-voltage of about 9 per cent. This would cause some heating of the machine. Next, the generator motor which was designed to run at 1600 r. p. m. is being turned at a rate of 1750 to 1800 r. p. m. The over-voltage thus generated would act to cause heating as well as to affect the commutation. Your arc is drawing very nearly the entire capacity of the generator and possibly due to poor connections, undersized wires, etc., it may be taking more than 40 amps. from the generator. Running a machine thus for hours at a time would most certainly tend to heat it up beyond the point allowed.

There is also the possibility of a short in the field coils of the generator. This trouble would raise the temperature as well as cause unusual sparking at the brushes, this latter of course being predicated on the assumption that the brushes have already been adjusted to the point of least sparking when under full load.

The fact that your light bill is too large indicates that the motor is drawing too hard on the supply. Too small lead in wires would not have anything to do with the size of your light bill. In such a case the lighting company would be the loser. A No. 12 wire is large enough for your purposes.

Booklet Describes Screen

IN a little booklet titled "Making Crystal Gazing a Reality" the Argus Enterprises, Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio, sets forth the advantages of their Crystal Bead Screen. The booklet is lavishly prepared and is somewhat above the ordinary run of booklets in quality. Evidently considerable expense was incurred in order to carry through to the exhibitor the big idea behind the Bead Screen. They have succeeded without question.

De Hart Talks to Advertising Men

E. E. de Hart, assistant sales manager of the Nicholas Power Company, has just returned from Indianapolis, where he represented the company at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. Power's projectors were used at the convention and Mr. de Hart states that advertisers and advertising men were greatly interested in several more or less technical talks which he gave them in reference to motion picture projectors. Advertising men in common with most people outside of the motion picture field are rather ignorant regarding the machine which throws the picture on the screen. With the increasing demand for films for advertising purposes has come an increased desire to know more about the machine which is becoming a fair rival of the printing press. The Nicholas Power Company has been one of the pioneers in the advertising field and the film industry will benefit from its activities in this direction.

Cohan Buys Genter Screen

George Cohan as president of the United Mirroroid Manufacturing Company has recently acquired the rights and property of the J. H. Genter Screen Co., former makers of the Genter line of projection screens. Mr. Cohan is an exhibitor of note, owning six theatres in Poughkeepsie and vicinity and it was his success with the Mirroroid screens that caused him to become interested in it.

To manufacture the screen he has purchased a building on West 46th Street, New York, and is installing the special machinery there. One of the machines designed especially for the coating of these screens has a capacity of 60,000 sq. ft. per hour. This makes it possible for the new firm to make up and ship any size orders within a few hours after their receipt.

Argus Purchases Western Stores

The Argus Enterprises, Inc., with general offices in Cleveland, Ohio, and branches in New York, Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles, announce the purchase of the Swanson Theatre Equipment Company's stores in Denver, Omaha, Salt Lake City and Des Moines.

It is the Argus intention to establish branch offices in all important centers just as quickly as possible and so increase their service to their customers by the ease and quickness with which they will be able to secure supplies, no matter where located.

Either manufacturing or having the sales rights for practically everything needed by the theatre owner, the Argus Company is in position to furnish theatres completely, from the entrance equipment right through to the rear entrance.

A New Arc Controller of Simple Design Causes Discussion Amongst Projectionists

Peerless Control Passes Examination of This Department With Flying Colors

ON seeing what appeared to be a new arc control in a photograph of a projection room published in our issue of May 7 many projectionists wrote in for the name of the device. Accordingly we take pleasure in printing here a description of the new control with drawings and photographs of its details.

Peerless arc control installed in projection room

The arc control known as the Peerless is manufactured by the J. M. McAnley Mfg. Co., of Chicago. It is the single motored type such as has been used in other arc controls, but its method of operation is somewhat different.

The Peerless consists essentially of a magnetically operated relay connected across the arc terminals and actuated by any increase of potential at the arc. When the armature of the relay is brought into action by a change of contact is made which starts the small motor which in turn adjusts the carbons to their proper positions.

From the drawing the reader can see how the various connections are made. A special switch-box (R) is provided so that if it becomes necessary to change the arc current to alternating instead of direct, the arc control may be disconnected from the circuit as this device will not work on a.c.

The armature can be adjusted for any arc distance by manipulating a knurled screw (A) which increases or decreases the tension of a compensating spring. When the pull of the spring becomes greater than the tension of the spring the light armature is drawn toward the magnet core and in so doing makes contact with the motor circuit. The motor turns and shortens the arc distance to the predetermined amount at which time the tension of the spring becomes greater than the pull exerted by the magnetic field and the motor circuit is broken.

It is an extremely simple device, in fact the simplest arc control this department has ever been asked to examine. It is well made and gives an excellent appearance when installed in a projection room. There are a minimum of parts to need replacing and even these would cost but little.

The Peerless Arc Control has already been installed in a large number of theatres, including many of Loew's houses and the new Stone theatres in Brooklyn, N. Y. "Joe" Hornstein, manager of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., who is handling the new device, reports an additional large number of theatre managers who have become interested in the machine and intend to install them in their projection room.

Is Getting Near Mazda Limit

C. A. Luke, Sylvester, Ga., says:

Have been reading the News and not saying much. But I am tired of everybody trying to put everything off on the "small town." I am sending you a few samples of film I have saved. Looks like our man with the heart punch is awake again. We get film with heart punches in them very often. But what about the other two? I think he needs a pair of glasses to be put out of the projection room.

Last Friday we received a film from Chattanooga, Tenn. Now everyone knows that Chattanooga is no small town. The film was a new print. I cut out ten patches that he has made with pins. Found five misframes. None of the patches had been scraped.

Several Sundays ago I went down in South Georgia to see a friend. The town has a population of 20,000. Of course I wanted to see the theatre, so we went around to the first one and found the manager around there. I introduced myself and asked him if I could see the projection room. He said sure. So we went up. I was expecting to see a nice up-to-date projection room, as it was a nice theatre. But when he opened the door I saw two Simplex machines covered in dust. You could not step on the floor without stepping on a piece of film. Pieces of carbons were scattered around the floor. I asked him who was his Operator. He said "My Kid Brother."

What I really wanted was some N. A. M. L. labels, I only have a few left. And you never did send me a button, so send these at once and if there are any charges I'll only be too glad to pay them.

We have two Powers 6B machines with Mazda lamp equipment. Get a good picture at a 60-foot throw. We are going to enlarge the building, making the throw 90 feet. Will the Mazda hold up at that? Please send button and labels at once.

Comment: When you increase your throw to 90 feet and your picture size somewhere near the same proportion, you are drawing near to the maximum limit of Mazda possibilities. We have seen incandescent projection that was fairly good and no worse than some theaters are putting on continually at 120 feet with a 12 x 16 screen, but it is not to be advised. The lamp manufacturers are saying very little concerning their new developments, but it is hoped that the new lamps will be able to fill the conditions of your own enlarged theatre.

Without knowing the surface of your screen, the size of picture you intend to have when the alterations are complete, we cannot even guess as to the possibility of getting good results with your same outfit. Take it up with the lamp people and give them the data we have mentioned here.

Your N. A. M. L. material has already gone out.

Motion Pictures in Natural Colors

Recent Developments of French Process Soon to Be Demonstrated Here

By GEORGE M. RECLUS, Ingenieur des Arts et Manufactures

Let us take these three positives in black and white and place them side by side, and then lighting the first with a red light, the second with a blue, and the third with a yellow light, let us project them on the screen, by means of a system of lenses, in such a way that the three projections will be exactly superimposed, one upon the other. We shall see the American flag and the field of golden-rod appear on the screen in their exact natural colors. If, instead of simple colors, we had compound tints, the pieces of colored glass would have drawn out the rays capable of passing through them, and the elementary colors when projected on the screen, would blend, so as to form the most subtle combinations.

In this way then, the problem is solved for simple photography. In turning to the motion picture, it was necessary to take three pictures of the same scene, simultaneously, with the same camera, and at the usual rate of speed—one through a red lens, one through a blue, and a third through a yellow lens.

The machine invented by Mr. Gaumont comprises three dark boxes, placed one upon the other, as close together as possible, so that the three lenses will take the same scene from angles which are practically the same. A small disk of greenish-yellow glass is placed behind the upper lens, a disk of red glass behind the middle lens, and a disk of blue glass behind the lowest lens. It will be seen that this arrangement presents the advantage of calling for only one ordinary film, upon which the three elementary images will be simultaneously printed, one upon the other. The camera, therefore, permits the use of the usual system of rolling and unrolling the film on the spools.

Let us here point out that with this arrangement, the length of the film which unrolls between the two successive openings of the shutter must be much longer than it is in the ordinary motion picture, since it must correspond to the height of the three pictures instead of one. The great difficulty which existed here was, however, finally solved.

In order to project scenes a positive was taken from the first negative by the ordinary processes; then this positive was projected by means of the projector. This machine has only a single source of light, but like the camera, it has three superimposed lenses. Each lens is separated from the film by a colored glass and the result is the same as though the upper picture were lighted with a yellowish-green light, the middle one, with a red light, and the lower one, with a blue light. These three lenses are so arranged that the three pictures are exactly superimposed in the projection. Consequently, all the conditions are met, in order to insure the exact reproduction of natural colors in the picture reproduced on the screen.

These then in general are the clever innovations of the Gaumont process which have made the perfected color motion picture possible. In bringing this process to perfection, however, constant difficulties were encountered, which infinite patience alone could surmount. To give an example of some of these difficulties, let us mention the most obvious ones.

The first was a question of chemistry. The three elementary films remain exposed to the light for approximately one-fiftieth of a second, and it is necessary that during this time, which is so short that we can scarcely conceive of it, the three films should receive respectively a yellow, a red, and a blue light, and that these impressions made upon them should be of equal strength. But since films take the impression of the blue light much more rapidly than they do that of the red, the Gaumont chemical laboratories had to find a way of treating the film so that it would be equally sensitive to all light rays and would take impressions with the great rapidity which is indispensable in a motion picture.

Another difficulty was of a mechanical nature; we have already said that between two successive openings of the shutter, which occur about sixteen times a second, it was necessary to pass, behind the lens, a film sufficiently long to receive the three images. In order to maintain the usual height of the pictures, it would have been necessary to increase the speed of rolling the film to three times the ordinary speed. Experience has shown that this is not possible, since the celluloid does not offer sufficient resistance. It was necessary, therefore, to reduce the height a little; whereas that of ordinary films is nineteen millimeters, that of colored films is fourteen millimeters.

The exact register of the three images, one upon the other, gave rise to the third difficulty. The picture on the film is enlarged fifteen thousand times when it is projected on the screen; it is therefore easy to understand that, however accurate the camera may be and however great care is put into the manufacture of the films, a slight shifting in the relation of the colors may always result. Even when it is very small, this becomes a serious matter when it is multiplied fifteen thousand times upon the screen, where it completely destroys the clearness and the finesse of the picture. It was necessary, therefore, to find the means of constantly re-establishing perfect accuracy.

The "corrector" is an exceedingly clever invention which greatly facilitates the attaining of accuracy in the picture.

In order to accomplish this accuracy, the camera lenses are so constructed that the middle one is rigid and the other two can be moved from side to side and up and down, by means of a regulating screw. The final step which Mr. Gaumont made had to do with the adjustment of the lenses. It rendered the Gaumont process definitely practical and brought about the essential difference between the results of today and those which were obtained in 1913. At that time corrections were made in the following way: Since it was not possible for the operator of the camera to see what was going on on the screen, a man was placed in the hall, whose business it was to keep up a constant communication with the operator. Whenever the film was blurred, he indicated the necessary correction; for example, he would say: "Lower the yellow," or "Blue to the right," and the operator would then turn the corresponding regulating screws. But it is easy to see that this system of correction by telephone was somewhat slow and not very efficient. Today, the correction is made in an extremely ingenious manner, by means of a device called a "corrector," which permits a man in the hall, who is watching the picture, to act upon the lenses himself. This "corrector," which he holds on his knees, is a little box with two movable levers, one of which controls, by electricity, the upper lens, the other, the lower lens. Every movement of a lever brings about a corresponding shifting of the lens. With a little practice, the operating of these levers becomes absolutely instinctive and instantaneous.

This brief description can give only an approximate idea of the Gaumont process of color motion pictures, and of the difficulties which the inventor had to surmount; in order to judge the perfection of the results attained, and in order to measure, exactly, the great progress which the films, thus obtained, have brought about in the art of the motion picture.

After having shown his magnificent discovery to the Académie des Sciences in Paris, and to the French public, Mr. Gaumont, himself, is coming to show it to the American people, since they are connoisseurs on the subject of artistic motion pictures.

The historic spectacle of the Victory Parade will live, once more, before our eyes, and we shall see the uniforms and the flags of the Allied Nations under the warm light of the July sun in all their splendid color. Mr. Gaumont is also bringing scenes, in natural colors, of different parts of France, which will permit us to enjoy the delightful color harmony of her woods and fields, the magnificent color in her works of art, and the exquisite softness of her skies.

6. We now come to the aberration known as Distortion. The cause of this aberration lies in the inability of the lens to give images of equal magnification according to whether they are produced by rays parallel to the axis of the lens or obliquely to it. Generally speaking there are two kinds of distortion—one is called pincushion-shape and the other barrel-shaped distortion the name itself explains the effect on the picture. The first is caused by the oblique rays giving a larger magnification than the axis parallel rays, and the other by the oblique rays giving a smaller magnification. Both types are found in photographic lenses of the ordinary type, while lenses of the Telecentric type, that is long-focus lenses with short-camera extension, are always affected with the pincushion type of distortion. A first-rate lens of the usual character should, however, be free from distortion within very small limits indeed.

7. The consideration of the six classes of aberration and their effect on the picture depend upon the aperture of the lens one desires to construct and also the length of focus for which such apertures are going to be employed. In the ideally corrected lens, all aberrations would be nil, and consequently nil whether we make the lens 6-in. focus or 36-in. focus, but as I have already said, perfection does not exist, and we must reckon with certain aberrations. Therefore you find that some types of lenses are of an aperture of $f/4.5$ for, say, foci up to 10 in., $f/5$ from 10 in. to 15 in., $f/5.6$ from 15 in. to 20 in., and so forth. This is due to the magnitudes of the aberration being of such an order for a given aperture that their numerical values would become too great for the longer foci; hence the reduced aperture.

Arrangement of glasses in the complete Ross Xpres lens

At first sight it appears a simple matter to make an $f/6.3$ lens when you have made the same type for $f/4.5$, by merely cutting down the lens to the smaller aperture—but that will not do, because we would get a lens so long for its aperture that the corners of the plate would be seriously affected in illumination, also the spherical correction would not be correct for the aperture required. There is no alternative—a new design must be made, and I want you to realize what that means. We are sometimes hard at work calculating for six or nine months before we get a result. Frequently months of work are completely lost because we started wrongly and it is a great disappointment when one realizes that no proper lens can result from the premises laid down, and one has to start afresh.

But there is one great satisfaction in calculating photographic lenses on exact scientific principles, and that is this—when we have finished the calculation we can give the lens data into the workshop and expect and get a perfect lens, such as we anticipated from the calculation. No playing with the lens, experimenting with altered separations or altered curves. The lens must be right, and if it is not, then the glass of which it is made does not correspond to the data laid down in the calculation. This is the only element that can introduce errors in a lens if the manufacture is carried out on scientific lines throughout, as is done at Ross's.

Having given you now a fairly clear view of the theoretical difficulties in the making of a good photographic lens, I should like to briefly touch upon the actual manufacture.

The optical glass is being supplied to us by the glass maker. It is our raw material; it comes in slabs of all sizes and thicknesses, from 4 in. square and over by 1 in. thick, to little pieces 1 in. square by $\frac{1}{2}$ in. thick. This stuff we slice up on a diamond saw into pieces large enough for the lens to be made. The pieces are then roughly trued and ground with coarse emery to the approximate shape of the lens. Then they are passed to another shop where they are ground with finer and finer emery, until they are ready for polishing. Meantime, at each stage they are carefully measured for curvature and thickness. The polishing is done on pitch with oxide of iron (rouge) as polishing medium. This takes anything from three to eight hours, according to the size of the lens. During this process, the true spherical shape is repeatedly verified, and particularly on completion of the polishing. This is very simple, but very accurately, done by placing on the lens a glass test plate, in which is ground and polished the exact opposite curve of the lens being tested. If they fit, a series of Newton's rings will be seen. The correct lens should show two color bands—no more. It is possible to show no color, but great pressure is required to press out the thin film of air causing the colors, and great danger exists of scratching or damaging the lens.

If passed, the lens is then edged. That is, the edge of the lens is ground accurately to size, taking care that the lens is properly centered.

The lens is now ready to be put into its mount, which has been made in another shop, which only deals with photographic lens mounts, and undertakes the burnishing of the lenses into the cells. Here again great accuracy is required to get the different parts of the mounts perfectly true, and a series of accurate measurements are required to see that the various components of the objective are at their proper distances from one another.

We now have the completed lens, and all that is required is the final test.

We have made it a practice at our works, to strictly test each lens before despatch, and to verify that the lens is up to standard. We can say that it would be a miracle for a bad lens to slip through. But this is not only due to the final test we give each lens, it is primarily due to the stringent methods in the manufacture all along the line, by which we prevent a doubtful lens ever reaching the testing-room. The uniform quality of the Xpres lens and the $f/3.5$ kinema-taking lens, is ample evidence of the great care taken, the more intimate details of which I have had the pleasure of describing to you.

Music For Your Theatre

By Charles D. Isaacson

(Author "Face to Face with Great Musicians")

Better Harness the Music Craze

WHEN an individual becomes famous, they put him in the movies. When another becomes notorious, they put him on the screen. If it's only to satisfy public curiosity, the wise producer and exhibitor combine to turn that interest into money. The man whose exploits have filled the first pages of the newspapers for a season has created a name which, plastered outside the motion picture theatre, is a magnet to the crowds.

So far so good! Nothing wrong in my argument so far, is there?

The wise showman takes everything as grist to his mill. He uses and adapts and builds on everything which he can. He is awake to possibilities and won't pass up anything which he can put to work for him.

I suppose, considering the vast, national interest in baseball, that if it were possible some theatre managers would have baseball going on inside their houses—not film representatives, but the real thing. If it were possible. Imagine how the crowds would flock to a real live baseball game in a theatre!

I suppose, that considering the world-wide interest in the big political convention, enterprising theatre managers would gladly turn their houses over to the event, if it were possible.

Anything the public wants, which fits into the general scheme of the theatre, is good meat for the box-office. Anything which won't hurt the further reputation of the theatre, makes a splendid added attraction.

Hence, I say—Harness the Music Craze!

Make it make money for you!

Put it to work!

Turn the music-going crowds into your theatre. Be as wise as the drug-store man who made people drink their sodas at his fountain, and buy their candy at his counters.

I take the attitude in writing these articles in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, that it makes not the slightest particle of difference to you that music is an art for art's sake. I assume that you have no use for art, except as it affects your business. (Of course I know that many of my readers have as keen an appreciation of fine things as any art patrons in the world—that their sympathetic interest in beautiful music, painting, sculpture, acting, is amazingly active.) But for the purposes of my point, I wish to emphasize the idea that I seek no converts to art through these talks. I am not trying to win new lovers of music among the theatre managers and their staffs.

My sole purpose, so far as the theatre heads are concerned, is this:

Music can be capitalized for the motion picture theatre; the craze for fine music can be harnessed to your box office.

In order to acquaint my readers with the development of musical interest in America, I shall briefly sketch the conditions as they are being shaped by the trend of the times. How do you know there is a growing music craze? Let me show you.

In the city of New York, this season just ending had a record of more concerts given than five years ago had been recorder for an entire ten-year period! In other words, the musical concert season of 1919-1920 was as big as the combined seasons from 1908-1913.

I can hear you saying, "But New York City is not an example of national conditions."

But Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Seattle have a record almost exactly the same as New York City.

Cities of the rank of Cleveland, Detroit, Akron, Minneapolis, Los Angeles,

Dallas, New Orleans, Buffalo, Omaha, are causing intense agitation for music. The business and professional interests are combining to create a city symphony orchestra. Indeed, most of the cities I have named so far have either brought the orchestras into existence or have gone far toward doing so.

Towns of the smallest sort are booking concert tours. I find that a town like Bisbee, Arizona, has engaged a group of great musicians to give concerts—in fact the first Bisbee series is over, successfully, and a second already subscribed for. (Bisbee is near the border line of Mexico—it is in a ravine between great mountains. Its principal population, is a pretty tough element, but Bisbee is a specimen of the kind of unbelievable town which is quite, quite music mad.) I look over the route sheets of the famous musicians of my acquaintance, the great violinists, pianists, singers—and I find the names of towns I never heard of, and I am not by any means unacquainted with the major towns of my country. When my friends the great musicians return, I chat with them over luncheon or supper, and they tell me such reports, such glowing reports of the vast interest in their concerts. They say, "I went into the town and my heart sank. It looked so unmusical. But when I saw the crowds at night, and heard the enthusiasm over my classical program, I was amazed. Truly America is in the midst of a great artistic upheaval."

But this is nothing. For the first time in our American history, several grand opera tours are covering the country. Why, ten years ago anybody who attempted such a thing seriously would have been laughed off the stage. All of the great symphony orchestras have a long route of cities in their visiting plans. I estimate very conservatively that at least three hundred cities this coming fall will listen to visiting and home symphony orchestras. I estimate very conservatively, that at least seven hundred cities will have a very fixed plan of high class concerts.

All over the United States, the newspapers are turning new editorial attention to music—making music pages for popular consumption. The leading magazines are carrying a deluge of stories and articles about the classics.

The big idea in business today is the introduction of music as a cure for industrial unrest. Some of the biggest factories have introduced bands, choruses, high class concerts. Imagine a place like Swift Packing Company, where music is given the employees every day! Imagine the Bethlehem Steel Works with a band, a daily concert, a chorus and other musical procedure. A list of the concerns which have indicated their continued application of music because it pays them to give it to their workers would take more space than all that I have written so far.

The hospitals are beginning to use music as a curative—hospital orchestras and musicians are not a joke. Prisons, asylums, all public institutions are adopting musical measures as part of the corrective systems; they know that music will prove a regenerative force.

The better cities are agitating for municipal music. A municipal music school—a municipal opera house and concert hall—a municipal band-stand for summer music. Where is the good city where music is not part of the summer plans?

Have you heard of the community chorus? A group of people get together and sing songs. Sounds silly? Maybe, until you get into one, and realize it is the greatest cure for the blues or grouch or—even indigestion! It started in the war, you know, when it was particularly necessary to keep people happy. But since the war ended, it's been growing into a great national movement. Actual statistics show that over twelve million people joined in community singing during the last nine months of 1919.

The boards of education are putting music on a different plane in the studies. The vast importance of the phonographs in millions of homes must be recognized. How the phonograph has awakened people to an interest in music, is an important page in history. So, too, with the player piano and all the other instruments.

Some of the biggest motion picture theatres, as you know, have won their big prestige on music—have been capitalizing the idea. The vaudeville theatre managers know that when they put on high class music acts with good artists, they always go "big." What the big vaudeville managers are planning to do with music is a state secret but you can guess it if you put two and two together.

This is a very brief, sketchy, diffuse idea of what is happening in America today with music. You cannot deny the existence of something new in America's attitude on music. You cannot deny the great spread of art interest. I can tell you that America is in the throes of a powerful art-revolution. The war and the times which follow are crystallizing a great longing for the beautiful. American people are getting music-mad. Nothing like

How Did George Wylie Increase His Business

Mr. Wylie decided he was giving about half a show. The best of pictures, but poor music. So he set out to investigate.

Mr. Wylie was prejudiced because he said organs grew tiresome. We showed Mr. Wylie the Barton Organ and explained the Divided Manual—how it multiplied the combinations by thousands and actually produced new and never before heard tones of great beauty; also how any organist could play the Barton Organ because it has standard construction familiar to every organist.

Mr. Wylie was convinced and now he says business has increased and his patrons are all talking about the wonderful organ and new patrons coming every day. To use his own words: "You sure took some worry off my mind."

Are you giving half a show?

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Tree Magic"

(Robertson-Cole Scenic—One Reel)

FANCY and imagination may come to the spectator who is under the spell of "Tree Magic," a scenic of the woodlands offered by Robertson-Cole. It is the magic of the woods, the witchery of bending branches, the enchantment of solitude gained among the trees which gives one who loves nature a true sense of companionship. The fleecy clouds which pass by overhead, the sun and moon shining through the leafy tops—the effect of this magic brings contentment. The picture is enhanced by excellent tinting.

To lend a spiritual note to the scenic an artist is painting landscapes and he seems to hear the call of the soul of the trees. A vision walks out of the giant oak and transports him. When he would touch her she is gone. And the spell of enchantment is broken. It strikes us that a seeker—a wanderer in quest of nature's grandeur accompanied by a faithful dog would have created a better effect. It is almost too fanciful to awaken response except in those endowed with poetic feeling. One can dismiss the artist, however, and look for the beauty in the landscape.—LAURENCE REID.

(Four Christie and Gayety Comedies—One Reel Each)

THERE is a spontaneity, a "snap and go" to the latest Christie and Gayety releases which gives them a better batting average than some previous pieces issued from these comedy plots. The ideas have always been there, but the treatment of a good many of them has not worked to their advantage. Simple little plots—all of them—they had to be deftly directed and played. And occasionally the tiny threads snapped through inability of the players to emphasize the lights and shadings. The newest pieces carry ideas too but they are more ridiculously worked out. The result is they score because the comic values do not place such a heavy burden on the part of the principals.

The two Christies are "Home James," and "Biff! Bang!! Bomb!!!" The former carries on a favorite idea with the producers—which is that of the two young people endeavoring to win the consent of their guardian. Earl Rodney is an idler, and uncle, played by Eddie Barry, conceives the plan to test his resourcefulness as a breadwinner by assuming the disguise of a valet. The comedy points are furnished through uncle's trick moustaches. He is eventually caught at his bewhiskered game and forced to capitulate. This one is only mildly amusing.

"Biff! Bang!! Bomb!!!" strikes a higher level and capitalizes the cub reporter who is fired for having "no nose for news." In love with the editor's daughter he wins his job back by manufacturing "copy" about the I. W. W. The sweethearts disguise themselves as Bolsheviks and succeed in capturing some desperate bomb-throwers. Trick-whiskers, bomb-heaving and a bit of the chase provide the action. And it scores because it is confined to one reel.

The two Gayeties carry more humorous incident and the work of the directors shows a deal of invention. "Fireman—Save My Gal" is one of the best short burlesques that ever came from their studio. The action is snappy, the titles are good, and the "take-off" on the fire scene is cleverly done. George Ovey is the funmaker here and Craig Hutchinson, the director. Ovey has another opportunity to show his skill as a burlesque dancer who is hired as a "hooper" through his ability to interpret the classical as well as the modern steps. The Gayety girls provide the background and wifey furnishes the conflict. When he is discovered she makes him pay the penalty by dancing with her at home. "Ladies Must Dance" is a good filler.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Figurehead"

(Selznick—Five Reels)

TWO great American sports are emphasized in this feature—golf and politics. Eugene O'Brien, the star, turns deftly from the former to the latter, and is successful in both.

It is an average political drama, filled with outworn types of cigar-chewing bosses and their backboneless lackeys, and talking about the "political rings and puppet mayors." The star plays Sherry Dow, a member of the idle rich, and a perfect magnet for debutantes. After some good golf scenes in the opening reel, he accepts the nomination for mayor, the understanding being, among everybody except himself, that he is to be only a figurehead in the race. But Sherry, inspired by a girl who wants to see him be of some use to the world, is not satisfied with being a figurehead, and starts to put up an honest-to-goodness fight against the bosses and their corrupt methods. In order to force him to withdraw, his opponents try to involve his sweetheart in a scandal and almost succeed in doing so. Dow wins the election by a small margin, and the girl in a walkaway.

They have some big scenes in the exteriors of the political meetings, and the climax involves a surging throng of several hundred people. But there isn't sufficient story to last five reels, and there is a mass of irrelevant padding—some of it cute stuff, and bits of it a secondary romance. Its chief fault is that it has a hackneyed and timeworn plot, which is noticeable despite the gloss of elaborate production that surrounds it. The figure of the "saloon-and-dance-hall ward-healer" is too familiar to be of much interest. And the young dandy, addressing crowds of voters in evening dress, is not a natural touch.

The star is satisfactory, and he is supported very well by Anna Neilson and Ora Carew. The climax, the hundreds of men fighting at the political meeting, and the mounted police charging upon them, makes an effective scene, and is good for a life-sized thrill.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"A WORLD OF FOLLY"

(Fox)

Hackneyed Story Fails to Create Interest

HERE is nothing to recommend this picture as an outstanding entertainment. On the contrary, it is constructed from a hackneyed plot and stereotyped characterization so that the action is anticipated from the introductory flash. The figure of the social parasite who would intrigue the neglected, but trusting wife of a selfish husband has become shopworn. He has lost his power to fascinate unless his attentions are reciprocated. And in "A World of Folly" he plays a lone hand. The picture is the eternal triangle at its weakest and because there is no dramatic punch or any semblance of incident, but a host of preachy subtitles, there is nothing left that carries any sustaining value.

The mechanical plot really expires before the conclusion, which enables the director to resort to padding and the title editor to lengthy platitudes. The motive of the fashionable idler is to serve his own lustful desires, unmindful of the fact that the wife doesn't give him any response. Every scene is cut to order. One knows before the action gets started that the husband will be the last to hear of the affair. When he does a separation occurs. This is the opportunity to emphasize the moral. And it is certainly taken advantage of in the captions. When husband and wife have suffered enough a reconciliation is effected through the good offices of a friend of the family. And Mr. Villain is turned over to the great Dane to be chewed to pieces.

The husband, who is engrossed in business and who is unkempt in appearance, the wife, who endeavors to make him see the light, and the handsome idler, who thinks he sees a chance to add another conquest—these are the conventional figures in this mechanical story. They move throughout the action strictly according to Hoyle. The merest tyro can solve the scheme once the characters are introduced. The idea has been worked out so often that any attempt to point a moral is eliminated. The director has given the story a fair production, his atmosphere being entirely appropriate in some instances, while at other times he has shot wide of the mark. Vivian Rich as the neglected wife plays the part in a conventional manner as if realizing that it carried no color. Aaron Edwards and Philo McCullough seemed to be more in character.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"A World of Folly" is the title of the second picture in which Vivian Rich appears as a Fox star. It is coming to the theatre on the same week with Miss Rich appearing in a role written around the eternal triangle. The star is seen as Helene Blair, wife of a prominent business man who neglects to give her much attention. He is thoroughly engrossed in business and social parasite. And taking advantage of her husband's absence he attempts to assert his personality upon her impressionable heart.

The result is society starts to gossip with the husband he attempts affair. He loses faith in his wife for a time, but she shows herself eventually as above reproach. So a reconciliation takes place, but not until the trespasser is punished. The picture carries a host of moving moments which are calculated to ment and heart appeal. And there is sufficient drama to give it an adequate balance. Jane Grogan wrote the story which was scenarioried by Louis Stevens. Frank Beal, the director, has given it a good production besides seeing to it that the scenes and situations are well handled.

PROGRAM READER

A society drama based upon the eternal triangle is coming to the theatre next week entitled "A World of Folly." The Fox star, Vivian Rich, than whom there is no better actress on the screen for the interpretation of the conventional grove so that the familiar pattern is never made obvious. The temptress to intrigue her—these are the principals in this moving drama. The picture carries a well established moral which is never made preachy because of the amount of incident. Miss Rich is supported by Aaron Edwards and Philo McCullough. The backgrounds are thoroughly in harmony with the story.

SUGGESTIONS

Present this picture as a moving drama of the eternal triangle. Tell that it carries a good moral and that the action is full of suspense, child interest, romance and pathos. There are no situations to link up with in exploitation so it would be well to emphasize the character of the story and the personality of the star. Bring out that she is an actress of the story and the personality of the star. Goog angle and these can give an inkling of the plot without going into detail and the backgrounds of the story. Tell that the picture was taken at Del Monte, one of the most fashionable resorts on the Pacific coast. Tell that Frank Beal is the director. His name is familiar to your steady patrons.

"DOUBLE DYED DECEIVER"

(Goldwyn)

Pickford Acts as Well as O. Henry Writes

HERE is a photodrama—not a moving picture—of the better class. Jack Pickford and O. Henry are chiefly responsible for the distinction. The author, who, although he wrote in a pre-movie era, has nevertheless given to the screen a human-interest story eminently fitted for it, and the star, by his perfect shading of emotion, and his infinite care for detail in his performance, have together made a picture that is strong in drama despite its simplicity; laden with pathos, and beautiful in its character development. And the cast, especially Edythe Chapman, and the direction, are of the highest order.

They have stayed close to the original short story in developing the continuity, only enlarging upon it by bringing in a romance, which fits naturally into the story. Even to the incident of the indolent American consul and his loquacious parrot, is O. Henry recognizable, and most of the dialogue is taken from the short story. While this, like most of the author's works, has a surprise ending, the plot is not built up around, and based upon, the punch at the end. The original twist is secondary to the human story—an added delight, like an unexpected desert after dinner.

Most of the scenes are laid in a parrot-and-monkey country in South America—a land where "it is always after dinner." The Llano Kid, a Texas bad man, flees there from justice. The consul persuades him to play the long-lost son of a Castilian family, and tattoos a coat of arms on the back of the Kid's hand to make the deception complete. The Kid is taken into the household, trusted and loved by the gladdened mother. For the first time he has a home. The romance develops. And when the time comes to rob and flee he has too much manhood to break the loving mother's heart. The surprise comes when it is revealed that the man the Kid killed in Texas was the real son.

There is nothing spectacular about the production. It doesn't need it. Perhaps some sub-titles are a little blunt. Suggestion and Pickford's art might have done just as well.—Length, 5 reels.—Mathew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

On "Double Dyed Deceiver," one of O. Henry's most popular stories in picture form, will be the attraction at the theatre. Jack Pickford is the star and fits into the role of "Llano Kid" as if this story, written a score of years ago by America's greatest short story writer, had been conceived with him in mind.

The Kid, is only twenty-one, but has already gained the reputation of being a "bad man" and a "killer." In a row over a gambling table there is some quick gun play, but the Kid is a little faster than his adversary. So he is obliged to flee to a South American republic, a land of parrots, monkeys, bananas and a siesta-loving population.

There he meets the American consul, who takes his ease and drinks his rum, good getaway. What if two women's hearts are broken, and a man crushed in thing that will be a "killer." And then, for the first time in his life, the youthful "bad man" knew what it meant to have a mother's love; a father's trust; a real home; a true sweetheart. Sound interesting? How could it be otherwise, when O. Henry, acknowledged to be America's greatest short story writer, was the author; and Jack Pickford, a talented youthful actor, is in the stellar role? Its title is "Double Dyed Deceiver" and it will be shown here on a twelvemonth.

PROGRAM READER

The Llano Kid was a killer! Only twenty-one years old and the reputation of being a "bad man!" You couldn't blame him much, for the good reason that he was in fled to South America. And then, for the first time in his life, the youthful "bad man" knew what it meant to have a mother's love; a father's trust; a real home; a true sweetheart. Sound interesting? How could it be otherwise, when O. Henry, acknowledged to be America's greatest short story writer, was the author; and Jack Pickford, a talented youthful actor, is in the stellar role? Its title is "Double Dyed Deceiver" and it will be shown here on a twelvemonth.

SUGGESTIONS

Jack Pickford and O. Henry can be boosted to the limit, without fear of any disappointments. The title of the short story has not been changed, it will help you all the more—there are many who will remember it. Don't let them think it is an O. Henry two-reeler. This author's works are now sufficiently classical to be written about in public schools, and you might arrange a "Criticism of O. Henry" competition. Describe it as a typical O. Henry story with the role for the star. You can judge from the character of your audience whether to show stills of him in evening dress or "bad man" outfit.

CATCH LINES

O. Henry and Jack Pickford! Could you beat this combination? See "Double Dyed Deceiver," the most human story of America's greatest short story writer at the theatre.

"MISS HOBBS"

(Realart)

Frail Story with a Single-Track Idea Presents Wanda Hawley as a Star

A PICTURE of ancient vintage is presented in the adaptation of Jerome K. Jerome's "Miss Hobbs." Were it not for the fact that it is ornamented with the appealing personality of Wanda Hawley, who makes her debut as a star, there would be an absence of any note of interest. The idea of the modern girl, who is an extreme faddist and finds expression in being original and belittling the opposite sex goes back to a time when the three reelers were quite the vogue. "Miss Hobbs" is simply a frail little character study, which depends upon some cute mischief-making for its points. Though it must be said that the plot is dressed up with acceptable atmosphere and carries considerable tone and quality in its appropriate backgrounds.

The charming man-hater is ingratiating but possesses little depth. One knows that she will capitulate when the right man comes into her horizon. She piques him through her obstinacy, while he, on the other hand, plays the game according to the accepted theory. He will not be a cave-man. No indeed. She is prepared for that disguise. So he plays on her sympathy by masquerading as an invalid. There is the tiny germ of this story. The spectator knows three scenes in advance just what is coming, for there is nothing presented in the shape of surprise. The impressionable hero is caught in his deception, but by that time the strong-minded young woman is lost in the throes of love to live up to her theories. And it is all over.

We, for one, can't see the object in adapting the subjects of famous authors when these same subjects have become moss-covered. Better to experiment with new and untried talent for the sake of discovering, if possible, a spark of originality. "Miss Hobbs" was evidently selected because Mr. Jerome has a name in the literary world. But we are of the opinion that the average picture patron doesn't care a "hip-hurrah" for celebrated authors. Unless they have something to offer. This picture is comparable to a palatable desert after a heavy portion of roast beef. And those moviegoers who have been fed up on emotional stuff are certainly going to like it. It is well scenarized and directed and certain scenes are executed in a deft and captivating manner. Its spirit of "give and take" will undoubtedly please the majority. Miss Hawley carries out the demands of the role with adequate color and charm and Harrison Ford, as the young man who brings the heroine back to her senses, plays with the proper dash and spirit. There are evidences of padding in certain scenes. Which is natural considering the frailness of the idea.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Wanda Hawley, newest Realart star, makes her local debut in the theatre in "Miss Hobbs," adapted by Elmer Harris from the Jerome K. Jerome stage success. Miss Hawley was secured as a star by Realart after who has unquestioned ability as well as personal charm and appeal. Mr. Jerome, remembered as the author of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," has written a story which makes ideal screen material.

"Miss Hobbs" is a tale which details a most amusing sketch of a girl who is a "man-hater," takes to smart smocks, barefoot dancing futtlet and other advanced ideas as a substitute for the ordinary interests of womankind. She is an extreme faddist. But love conquers. Wolff Kingscarl comes into her life and proceeds to tame her. She hated him at first but woman-like she had the privilege of changing her mind. She becomes the most docile of sweethearts. "Miss Hobbs" is capital entertainment. It has a sparkle and dash about it that will appeal to everyone. The role provides Miss Hawley with delightful comedy opportunity and she is supported by Harrison Ford as her leading man. Donald Crisp is the director, and he has packed it full of quaint and humorous touches in addition to giving it a most appropriate production.

PROGRAM READER

She was a very modern young woman—was Miss Hobbs. Her ideas were about fifty years ahead of time. For one thing she hated men—thought them all brutes. But love has a way of smashing such an idea. Then she went in for barfoot dancing, futuristic art and other advanced notions. Well, the upshot of it was the YOUNG MAN took upon himself to tame her—to make her a regular girl. How he succeeded is told in five reels of enlivened action—action which sparkles with comedy and rare sentiment. The picture is artistic in every way. It presents Wanda Hawley in her first appearance as a star in a position she is entitled to. Her seasons of faithful service on the screen. Acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful and talented actresses in film land, she makes a decided appeal as Miss Hobbs. It is a Jerome K. Jerome story, directed by Donald Crisp and will come to the next

SUGGESTIONS

There are a number of angles to exploit here. First bring out that it introduces Wanda Hawley as a star. Use stills of her and write copy about her past successes and tell that she is one of the most beautiful actresses in pictures. Tell that the photoplay is an adaptation by Elmer Harris of Jerome K. Jerome's play, "Miss Hobbs," and that it was directed by Donald Crisp. Use program teasers. Use your imagination in phrasing attractive words written in a humorous style. Tie up with high school clubs and girls' clubs. Go after the young ladies by telling them that they have a chance to see a beautiful "man-hater." Most girls at some time in their life love to pose as "man-haters." This will appeal to them. If you stage prologues you might get hold of some classical dancers and have them execute their art along this direction. Feature the other members of the cast.

"THE MOLLYCODDLE"

(United Artists)

Action, Adventure and Thrills Are Packed in Fairbanks' Latest

EVER since "The Americano" the palpitating public has waited anxiously for Douglas Fairbanks to duplicate it insofar as enlivened action and incident are concerned. And he has come through with plenty to spare in "The Mollycoddle." While most of his pictures are identical in characterization, since they present him fighting his way to the top, his latest feature is so different in treatment of its theme and central figure, that it really carries marked originality. In dissecting the plot one will find that it belongs to the hackneyed brand. But the majority don't search for plots in a Fairbanks picture because they are too busy keeping track of the athletic star.

It is going to surprise many to see Doug sport a mustache and give life to a spineless individual who is called a mollycoddle, through his desire to be at the height of fashion and taste insult after insult. The forepart of the feature is straight comedy-drama with the star scoring, easily and surely and vividly as a comedian as when he gives emphasis to the punch in the concluding reels. A descendant of fighting Americans, he has been brought up in the environment of Monte Carlo for so long that there isn't a red corpuscle left in him. But the GIRL awakens the manhood in him. And then the fun begins. Great incident accompanies the action which transpires before he reaches the Painted Desert of Arizona where the Hopi Indians live. And all of it is sure-fire. For example, his attempt to fire the boilers on the yacht and his adventure with a school of fish.

Make up your mind that the thrills are running neck and neck even before the terrific finish. Once he sets foot in Arizona he reverts to type and becomes a fighting Marshall. Humor dominates the action during the scenes on the Indian reservation. He shimmy with the squaws and cuts up high-jinks with the braves. And the spectator is wondering what is coming next. Yes indeed, the subject is rich in surprises. The big punch packs a tremendous wallop when he is seen fighting with the villain on the top of a mountain. Together they roll down the side, shoot through the walls of a shack and end up in a pond at the bottom. They are even propelled over a waterfall. And Wallace Beery deserves mention for risking his life in such a realistic manner. This scene is the biggest thrill that ever came out of a Fairbanks picture, and it will be hard to duplicate in the future. The scenic backgrounds of Arizona are truly picturesque. In fact the camera-work is excellent. Victor Fleming has turned out a production which entitles him to the highest praise.—Laurence Reid.

Scenario by Tom Geraghty.
Directed by Victor Fleming.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Douglas Fairbanks, considered by many the most popular player on the screen, is coming to the theatre beginning in the third of his United Artists productions, "The Mollycoddle," which is an adaptation by Tom Geraghty of Harold MacGrath's story. The picture patrons know what to expect from a Fairbanks offering. They know that the star will be the center of unbounded action which carries thrill after thrill. They will know that he is in there taking care of himself as well as the girl who comes into his life. "The Mollycoddle" is ideal material since it enables him to assert his vivid personality in the most ingratiating manner possible.

The star appears as an American who is called a mollycoddle during his sojourn in England where he spent most of his youth. His environment grates on him to such an extent that he comes back to his native land. He is not much of a success at first but in the end he forges to the front and fights like a true cavalier. The action takes the star through the most redblooded scene of his screen career. He fights with the villain on the top of a mountain cliff and before he emerges the victor, the both of them have tumbled down the slide, into the water below. His support includes a newcomer in Ruth Renick, who graces the opposite role, Betty Bouton, and Wallace Beery. Victor Fleming, who directed "When the Clouds Roll By," is in charge of the picture and he has given another clever contribution to the screen.

PROGRAM READER

What is considered Douglas Fairbanks' biggest picture is coming to the theatre beginning in "The Mollycoddle," an adaptation of Harold MacGrath's story. Our patrons may rest assured that the picture offers bang-up entertainment. We don't want to go into particulars concerning "The Mollycoddle." That would be spoiling the interest. But suffice to state that he rescues damsels in distress and punishes villains like they were never punished before. The picture is rich in expenditures and action. "The Mollycoddle" was scenarized by Tom Geraghty and directed by Victor Fleming, the same man responsible for the excellent "When the Clouds Roll By." Don't miss this picture—it is the treat of the season.

"MADONNAS AND MEN"

(B. A. Rolfe-Jans)

If You Want a Spectacular Production, Here It Is

"MADONNAS AND MEN" starts off at a mile a minute clip. They don't even stop to introduce the characters, but just make you sit bold upright and take notice by flashing some wonderful shots of the Coliseum of Rome during a pagan holiday in the year 27 A.D. There is a lustful, narrow-eyed emperor and a mass of savage humanity roaring their approval as two gladiators fight to the death in the sand of the arena. It is a vividly impressive scene and your patrons will not forget this scene of lordly and corrupt Rome taking its savage pleasure in the martyrdom of Christian girls and defeated gladiators.

The scene shifts to the present day, and for the most part remains there to the end to tell a tale of a twentieth century emperor whose sceptre is the dollar mark. The same characters play in both stories. The wealthy broker is seeking revenge upon the woman who jilted him years ago. He kidnaps her daughter in an effort to make his former sweetheart unhappy, and the girl's father, finding oil on his land and becoming rich, endeavors to find her. How he finds her proves rather a stretch of probability. The ancient and modern story are co-ordinated by means of flashbacks, which are well done with the exception of one case, which is somewhat crude. Cabaret scenes, elaborate and well produced, help to give the modern story a box-office value. There are a number of these, all of which contribute to its interest. The production ends with the ancient story once more.

The picture runs to eight reels. Speaking from a standpoint of drama, it is too long, and if it were not for the elaborate production the interest would lag. The cast is an exceptional one. Gustav von Seyffertitz, in his role of the Nebraskan farmer, gives a natural and dramatic characterization. Anders Randolph as the Roman emperor is noteworthy. Miss Evan-Burrows Fontaine dances well and Raye Dean and Faire Binney supply some of the feminine beauty with which the picture abounds. You can book it as a big, spectacular and well-acted production.—Length 8 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

On _____ at the _____ theatre, "Madonnas and Men," an eight reel super-feature, will be the screen attraction. This is a drama that carries you back to the days of corrupt and licentious Rome as well as providing a gripping and thrilling story of modern times. The cast is an exceptional one, every member being an experienced screen and stage player.

A number of the scenes are the most spectacular that have reached the screen since the day of "Intolerance." Fully five hundred people are crowded before the camera in a scene in the Roman Coliseum in the year 27 A. D., where a Roman holiday is in progress. Two gladiators fight to a death and the blood-hungry crowd point their thumbs down as a sign for the defeated one to be slain. It is an impressive scene that will remain in your memory for a long time to come. In the modern story there is a delightful love story running through, which will satisfy the romance loving fans.

PROGRAM READER

For gorgeous scenes and elaborate settings, no picture that has been seen on the stage since "Intolerance" can equal "Madonnas and Men," which will be shown at this theatre on _____. There are views of the Roman Coliseum, with an angry crowd of the savage population watching the death battle of two gladiators, that will positively startle you by its magnificence. The scene shifts to New York City of the present day, and a gripping tale of the twentieth century is unfolded. You will witness the dancing in a Broadway cabaret that rivals in its exotic splendor the dance of the emperor's favorite on the blood-stained sand of the Coliseum. You can not afford to miss "Madonnas and Men," for it is one of the biggest productions of the year.

SUGGESTIONS

This has box office values because of its spectacular sets and big scenes, and there is no use to boost anything but this angle. Don't go into the details of the story, for it is far too involved, and will only do harm. Show stills of the Coliseum scenes, the dancing, and the cabaret shots. If you played "The Wonder Man," you might mention Faire Binney. You can arrange a stage setting such as a chariot race on a revolving stage and have a doorman dressed as a Roman soldier. Bill it as the most spectacular offerings of many seasons, and get over the idea of great magnitude in all your catch lines.

CATCH LINES

A story of pagan Rome, and modern New York, excellently blended in a thrilling drama.

An exceptional all-star cast in a picture that rivals "Intolerance" for its spectacular grandeur.

"LET'S BE FASHIONABLE"

(Ince-Paramount-Artcraft)

Mild But Pleasing Picture with Ince's Co-Stars

THOMAS H. INCE's co-stars, Douglas MacLean and Doris May, shot at a pretty high mark in "Twenty-Three and a Half Hour's Leave" so high in fact that each successive picture was compared to it and found wanting. That's the penalty of making something extraordinarily good. The stars are a perfect combination for the expression of newly-wedded life. They are young enough and spirited enough to play at love bound with matrimonial ties. The good points of their pieces, the story interest are found in the cross-currents of their domesticated lives. Will they agree or not? Will they live in harmony or not?

"Let's Be Fashionable" pokes gentle fun at suburban life and shows the careless indifference of husbands for their wives and vice versa. It isn't fashionable to be a family man or woman. And our newly-weds are ostracized until they play at flirting. The action is extremely mild and always obvious. But, even though it doesn't carry any weight it satisfies after a fashion. It conquers for its satire, its domesticated antagonism, its good-nature and because it's reasonably true to life. The picture hardly suffices for feature length, but so carefully are the scenes executed to get every ounce of strength from them, and so easy do the players conduct themselves, and so pithy and pointed the subtitles, that it gets by with very few draggy moments.

Hubby is compromised with a gay bachelor girl and a vampish wife. He must live up to the speed limit. The result is he stays out 'til four A. M. And wifey is provoked into running away with a flirtatious husband who is as serious as she is playful. She has lost faith in her spouse. The fact that she is the trusting, clinging ivy type sort of heliotrope truth. But the subsequent scene is ample compensation, for hubby, catching the express, pokes his head into the berth of the sleeper looking for his "Lovin'." And he finds her in a compartment. The villain is hurled off the train and the moral is brought out that "a couple shouldn't toss love out the window for the sake of being fashionable." A good finish to a mild comedy-drama. "Let's Be Fashionable" is a polite, drawing room entertainment and as gentle as a night in June. Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.
Photographed by Bert Cann.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The Ince co-stars, Douglas MacLean and Doris May, who created such a sensation in "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave," and "Mary's Ankles," will appear at the _____ theatre next _____ in their latest picture, "Let's Be Fashionable." These stars are the exponents of the habit of happiness and both have built up a large following through their personalities and talents. They come to the screen in Mildred Considine's story, adapted by Luther Reed and directed by Lloyd Ingraham, in another slice of domestic life.

They are a couple of newly-weds who take up residence in a modest bungalow in an ultra-fashionable summer resort. Their efforts to keep abreast of society's whirl results in a series of amusing complications. Eventually they decide that it is better to be happy than to be fashionable and settle down to a more in keeping with their pocketbooks. The picture is declared to be fully as hilarious as the three previous releases of these youthful co-stars, who have established themselves in popular esteem everywhere. They have a high mark to shoot at in this picture judging from the excellence of its forerunners but from all accounts they have another winner to their credit. Mr. Ingraham pilots the stars through a number of rich situations and the supporting cast is up to requirements.

PROGRAM READER

Douglas MacLean and Doris May will be the attraction at the _____ theatre next _____ in their latest screen comedy, "Let's Be Fashionable." This picture is declared to be fully as amusing as "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave," which entitles it to be called a genuine hit. The Ince co-stars are fully established in the film firmament as dispensers of happiness. And what an interest the average picturegoer better than a story based upon the joys of a newly-wedded life. The young newly-weds are ambitious to be fashionable, but after a host of amusing complications they realize that happiness is the greatest ambition to be achieved. We guarantee sixty minutes of most enjoyable entertainment.

SUGGESTIONS

It would be advisable in exploiting these stars to lay special stress upon their previous releases. Call attention to "Mary's Ankles," "What's Your Husband Doing?" and "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave." These pictures were gems of sentiment and humor, and the latest keeps up to the mark. The title is a delightful comedy of newly-wedded life and social exploitation. Tell that the picture personalities of MacLean and May. Make a bid to get the patronage of the younger set. Decorate your lobby in white ribbons and flowers suggestive of the marriage ceremony. Use catch lines. Use posters and a teaser campaign. The big idea is to compare it with the three previous releases. This will attract patronage.

"OUT OF THE STORM"

(Goldwyn)

A Good Feature which Should Interest and Excite

THE Goldwyn company needn't be ashamed of this one for it contains the necessary elements to make it a first class production.

It has a good story which was written by Gertrude Atherton, and which is rich in love interest, suspense, thrills and dramatic moments. Coupled with this it runs along very smoothly and requires little effort to follow.

The dramatic moments, when they come along, are strong, one in particular being a shipwreck which for vividness could not be excelled.

Capable direction and a splendid cast also add to the picture's success. The story tells of Margaret Hill, a factory girl, who contemplates suicide because she believes the world is turned against her. As she is about to accomplish her object, she is prevented by a woman, who takes her to a dive where she secures a position for her as a singer and dancer.

Margaret does not remain here very long, for she is discovered by Albert Lovering, who becomes interested in her and arranges for her instruction in music, but a crash comes suddenly and without warning, for her benefactor is arrested as an embezzler.

Fate now guides her steps and she meets a prominent English lord whom she promises to marry. But all does not go well, for Lovering escapes from jail; seeks her out in London where she is a well known singer, and determines to win her back again.

He accomplishes his object but is discovered by detectives and in a running fight is killed. Thus circumstances bring hero and heroine together.

The final scenes are very exciting.—Length, 6 reels.—Frank Leonard.

Story by Gertrude Atherton.
Scenario by J. E. Nash.
Directed by William Parke.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Gertrude Atherton's famous story, "Out of the Storm," pictured by Goldwyn, will appear at this theatre on _____ of next _____.

In book form this story was known under the title of "The Tower of Ivory" and is said to be one of Miss Atherton's best.

The story tells of a young girl, Margaret Hill, who discharged from a factory and in poverty seeks oblivion in suicide.

But fate made her decision and sent her messenger in the person of Teddy Shale to save Margaret from her meditated death.

Teddy takes Margaret to a Barbary Coast dive, where the latter sings and dances to an audience of rough and hardened men.

Here she is discovered by Albert Levering, a young man who becomes interested in her and arranges for her instruction in music.

But a crash came suddenly and without warning, for her benefactor is arrested as an embezzler.

Fate now guides her steps and she meets a prominent English lord. But all does not go well, for Levering seeks her out and is determined that she go back with him.

He accomplishes his object but is discovered by detectives and in a running fight is killed. Thus circumstances bring hero and heroine together.

PROGRAM READER

"Out of the Storm," a Goldwyn production from the pen of Gertrude Atherton will be the attraction at this house next _____.

The story is taken from the novel written under the title of "The Tower of Ivory," which is said to be one of Miss Atherton's best.

It tells the story of Margaret Hill, a factory girl who contemplates suicide because she believes the world is turned against her.

As she is about to accomplish her object, she is prevented by a woman who takes her to a low down dive and secures a position for her as singer and dancer.

Margaret does not remain here very long, for she is discovered by Albert Levering, who sends her to a school of voice training.

But a crash comes and without warning for Levering is arrested as an embezzler. Fate now guides her steps and she meets a prominent English lord. But all does not go well, for Levering seeks her out and is determined that she go back with him.

He accomplishes his object but is discovered by detectives and in a running fight is killed. Thus circumstances bring hero and heroine together.

SUGGESTIONS

Do not be afraid to book this feature for it surely should give your patrons all they want in thrills, love interest and dramatic moments.

You best bet in exploitation is Gertrude Atherton's name which is well known through the country for the wonderful books she has written.

If you can tie up with a book store it would be a splendid way to exploit the feature, as many of your patrons must have read the book under the title of "The Tower of Ivory."

And do not forget to exploit the shipwreck scenes for they are thrilling and exciting to the tension point.

Last but not least, do not forget the cast which is an excellent one.

CATCH LINES

Why did the wealthy man take such an interest in her when he found her singing in a low down cafe? See "Out of the Storm," it will tell you.

What did her sweetheart do when she told him of her past? See "Out of the Storm," it will tell you.

"HUMAN STUFF"

(Universal)

THIS feature won't excite any undue interest in the minds of the patrons who witness it, for it is of the ordinary Western variety.

The story is its weakest part and with the exception of two killings, the dramatic moments and thrills are very few.

The locale is laid in the East among the elite and in the West in the ranch section. In the latter scenes the director has secured some beautiful shots of the country, one in particular showing a very large flock of sheep feeding upon the hills and plains a very pretty scene which is worked into the story.

But pretty scenes and beautiful exterior shots do not make a picture complete, unless it has story backing. And herein lies the fault with "Human Stuff."

It has good actors, for this kind of picture where the principal scenes require performers who are good riders and quick with the gun, but there is no new twist or character development to take it out of the rut of the ordinary variety of Western melodrama.

Harry Carey is his usual self, both in acting, shooting and riding, and it must be said that he makes a very pleasing hero in this combination.

He is seen as the son of a wealthy manufacturer in the East who is dissatisfied with his position in life because he finds "business" distasteful to him. He decides to go West and operate a ranch which is owned by his parent. He is fairly successful at the start but runs into opposition in the form of a Mexican foreman, his sister and a neighboring rancher.

A crisis is reached when a young lady who is a friend of his sister's arrives from the East to buy a ranch. The villain plot to secure her confidence and turn her against the hero. In a series of rather thrilling moments, he outwits his enemies and proves to the girl that he is not so bad as he has been painted.—Length, 5 reels. Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Harry Carey in his latest Universal feature, "Human Stuff," will appear at this theatre on _____ of next _____.

This production shows the daring star as the son of James "Washboard" Pierce, who has amassed a large fortune in the manufacture of the humble household article, responsible for his nickname.

Carey finds his father's business distasteful to him and goes West to take charge of a large ranch, which is owned by his father.

The ranch had never been a financial success and our hero finds opposition from the start in the form of a Mexican foreman and "Bull" Elkins, owner of a neighboring ranch.

A young Eastern girl, who is a friend of Carey's sister, arrives at the ranch at this time, her purpose being to homestead some government land.

Through the machinations of the villain and his sister, who scheme to drive the girl away, our hero is placed in an unfortunate position and he sees both his business plans and love affair about to be destroyed.

However, fortune favors him, he outwits his enemies, secures the love of the girl and wins the confidence of his father.

PROGRAM READER

"Human Stuff" featuring Harry Carey, Universal's favorite star will appear at this theatre on _____ of next _____.

It is a story of the West versus the east and shows Carey in a role that is said to be one of his best.

His father was known as James "Washboard" Pierce, who had accumulated a fortune in the manufacture of that necessary article to householders and which was responsible for his nickname. Jim, the son, feeling that he had no desire for a business life, betook himself to his father's ranch in the west, which had never been a financial success.

Here he meet with underhanded opposition from the ranch foreman and a neighboring rancher, "Bull Elkins." And to make matters worse, the villains, with the aid of the foreman's sister scheme to turn a young lady and friend of Jim's sister, who has arrived at the ranch from the east, against our hero.

They are almost successful in their efforts, when fortune favors him, and he outwits his enemies, thus winning the young lady and his father's confidence.

SUGGESTIONS

This feature might be called an average Western by those who are given to this sort of entertainment. It won't excite your patrons and give them the thrills that are called for in this type of picture, but it will entertain and probably please them.

Bill Harry Carey as strong as you like, for he is your one best bet, but do not go too strong on the story.

Tell them that it is a Western story with the opening scenes laid in the East and that Harry Carey plays a romantic part mixed with thrills.

Mention the fact that the picture contains many beautiful and fascinating scenes of the West around which the plot of the story is woven.

You might also mention the cast, which is a good one for this type of picture.

CATCH LINES

Why did they call him "Washboard" Pierce? See "Human Stuff" with Harry Carey as the star. It will tell you.

He loved her with all his heart and yet she did not return his love. Why? See "Human Stuff."

"A TOKIO SIREN"

(Universal)

Story with Japanese Star Lacking in Punch

TO mention the best things about "A Tokio Siren" first, it has some artistic photography, beautiful exterior shots of rugged grandeur, and the colorful settings that a story of flowery Japan affords. But to break the sad news gently—it has a slight and inactive story and a climax that is patently artificial, the conflict being far too weak to make the drama really gripping. The feminine appeal to an American audience must surely be slight. The standards of American beauty and Japanese beauty are widely divergent, and while Tsuru Aoki may be a true Oriental belle and a good actress, she cannot make her role sympathetic to an Occidental audience.

There are American characters in the play, of course, but the troubles of the little Japanese girl are the main thing. Dr. Niblock is traveling in the Flowery Isle on a tour of research. Asuti is about to be forced into a marriage with a Jap "heavy." She meets the Doctor, feigns illness at the betrothal ceremony and flees to him in disguise. In order to permit her to safely leave the country, the chivalrous doctor agrees to marry her in name only, the divorce to be obtained as soon as she reaches San Francisco. They leave Japan and the pursuing villain behind, and with them are left most of the interest of the story. In America the Doctor continues his romance with an American girl, and Asuti finds a young Japanese-American to love. There is an attempt to recreate the interest by causing a misunderstanding between these four, but it cannot make a climax worthy of a feature.

There are also the usual number of "most honorables" and "most unworthy selfs" injected into the sub-titles, but the picture is not overburdened with them. Two spoken titles are inserted between two long shots, with the characters far in the background. A sudden attempt at comedy does not get over. Tsuru Aoki shows some real ability to "emote" and the cast is average. The Japanese marriage ceremony and the street scenes prove picturesque.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"A Tokio Siren," an unusual story blending the atmosphere of old and new Japan and America, is scheduled to appear at the _____ theatre on _____ Tsuru Aoki, wife of Sessue Hayakawa, and star in her own right, plays the leading role in this picture, which is full of dramatic interest that it keeps up the interest throughout the five reels. Tsuru Aoki is probably the only Japanese female star on the screen to-day and her work in previous Oriental pictures, such as "The Breath of the Gods" and "Locked Lips" has placed her firmly in the ranks of screen favorites.

"A Tokio Siren" opens in Japan where an American doctor is touring the island. Asuti, played by the star, is a Japanese of noble family and is about to be betrothed against her will, according to the Japanese custom. In despair, she runs away and appeals to her American friend. In order to facilitate her departure from the island, the doctor marries the frightened little girl with the understanding that the marriage is to be dissolved as soon as they reach America. What happens in San Francisco when the doctor's American fiancée sees the Japanese wife, and Asuti falls in love with a young Japanese-American secretary provides interesting and gripping drama.

Besides the star there is an excellent cast in the picture, and some of the scenes of Japan are wonderful examples of the art of motion picture photography. There is beautiful scenery as a background for this colorful picture, and with the clever, interesting story it guarantees an evening's entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

Tsuru Aoki, the Japanese actress, in her latest screen production, "A Tokio Siren," will be the attraction at this theatre on _____. She plays the part of Asuti, a young Japanese girl, who is to be betrothed against her will to a man whom she despises. Her one desire is to escape from him before it is too late. She meets an American doctor in Japan and appeals to him for aid. Can you foresee the interesting drama that follows all this? The story shifts to America and as the complications ensue you will find a picture that is bound to hold your interest. There is some wonderful scenery and the atmosphere of old Japan, picturesque island of flowers, has been faithfully represented on the screen, while the cameraman has enhanced the production with some wonderfully artistic Oriental scenes.

SUGGESTIONS

Make the most of the Japanese star and the Japanese setting. Show stills with both the American and the Japanese characters in them. Dress your ushers up as Japanese if you wish, but bizarre or cheap costuming would tend to be ludicrous. Try to get the atmosphere across and never mind so much about the plot. You can do this by lobby decorations—such as lanterns and Japanese curtains, or you can dress up the stage. A soloist could sing a Japanese song as an introduction with an appropriate setting. If you have an overture use the "Aïra" from "Madame Butterfly."

CATCH LINES

A story of old Japan and modern America, with Tsuru Aoki, the dainty Japanese star, in the leading role.

A love tale of the Orient with a young American doctor as the hero.

"THE RESTLESS SEX"

(Cosmopolitan-Paramount-Artcraft)

Lavish Production Given Chambers Story Which Carries Interesting Moments

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS is difficult to translate for the screen. His skill at painting feminine whims and fancies may be brought out in striking colors on the printed page, but given life on the silver sheet his ideas lack dramatic substance. Robert Z. Leonard, however, has done better by the author than his predecessors. There will be no question that he has made Marion Davies look like an "honest to goodness" actress. She is a typical Chambers heroine in "The Restless Sex." She plays with considerable charm and feeling the character of Stephanie, who is restless, excitable and adventurous, and who comes into an awakening of womanhood undecided in matters of love.

Chambers' figures are more interesting than his plots. Once again he draws his favorite character, the one who commits suicide like Malcolm in "The Firing Line," and once again he scores by creating sympathy for the tragic study. The picture builds easily and consistently to the rich and lavish sequence which presents a masque ball, but the subsequent action is draggy and the climax loses its punch because of its irrelevant detail. The plot is based on the conflict of romance, with the heroine led by propinquity into marrying a man she respects but doesn't love. Her foster brother, who is her ideal, is forced by circumstances to leave for several years. When he learns of the marriage he hastens back to find her still a playgirl. But the husband—one in name only—realizing the turn of affairs, commits the supreme sacrifice.

This is making a bid for sympathy even though it is exaggerated heroics. The action departs from the story in several instances. Which is perfectly proper to establish moving moments. It strikes us that certain scenes are held too long, particularly the one presenting the masque ball. It is a riot of color and lavishness, but carries very little action. By dispensing with it the situations might be knit closer, although the picture would lose its tone and quality. The story itself is a perfectly obvious creation, but it will hold the interest until the closing sequences because of its notes of sentiment, pathos and sympathy. The backgrounds are truly atmospheric and artistic and money has been expended with disregard for expense. Carlyle Blackwell and Ralph Kellard play the heroes, but the former doesn't seem to be the right choice for the self-sacrificing lover. One feels sympathetic for the manner in which he is drawn rather than in the interpretation. Mr. Kellard is acceptable. Vivian Osborne plays a small bit in a spirited manner.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The newest Marion Davies picture to play the _____ theatre next _____ is a Cosmopolitan production which is an adaptation of Robert W. Chambers' "The Restless Sex." The author has a secure place in American fiction and his following may be counted close to a million. "The Restless Sex" may be considered one of his most entertaining novels. His character here is Stephanie, who belongs to the restless sex because of her love of excitement—her quest of adventure. Comes a time when she reaches womanhood undecided as to whom she loves the most, Jim Cleland or Oswald Grismer.

The former has been reared with Stephanie, and on reaching maturity he goes abroad to pursue a literary career, while Grismer remains to dabble in the arts. She is compromised into marrying the artist which brings Cleland back to America. But the marriage is one in name only and a time arrives when she gives herself to her foster-brother. But not until Grismer commits the supreme sacrifice. The picture carries scenes of tense dramatic force which are excellently balanced with touches of romance and pathos. The characters are typically Chambers and his points are excellently brought out by Robert Z. Leonard, the director. Miss Davies contributes a performance marked for its sympathy and understanding. And her support is of the best.

PROGRAM READER

She was a member of the restless sex, and reached maturity undetermined whom she loved the most, her foster-brother or a certain struggling artist. Her boyhood chum left for Europe and propinquity placed her close to his rival. How she solved the problem of her life—how she placed honor above the call of her heart—how the many artist committed the supreme sacrifice in order to release her from an unsatisfactory marriage is told in a host of dramatic scenes and situations—action which holds the spectator in complete sympathy and suspense. Miss Davies contributes acting of the highest order and her support is capable. Robert Z. Leonard directed this artistic production. "The Restless Sex," by Robert W. Chambers and it will come here _____.

"UNCHARTED CHANNELS"

(Robertson-Cole)

Theme Is Timely and H. B. Warner Puts It Across

BOLSHEVISM and "red" propaganda are given severe wallops right between the eyes in "Uncharted Channels," in a satirical, humorous sort of fashion, without one bomb making its appearance. It is a comedy drama, with H. B. Warner and the sub-titles furnishing the comedy and the drama being furnished not at all. But even if the picture did not have the dry humor and pleasing personality of the star, it would probably sail along as an average picture despite the lack of a dramatic story, for its theme—the right of workers to strike and the capital and labor struggle—is receiving a great amount of discussion to-day.

The "reds" introduced are all good types—a malignant assortment of evildoers. They are held up to ridicule and made the target for deft sword thrusts of sarcasm. For instance, the naive star attends one of their receptions in evening dress. "You are like a gentleman," they roar. "It is an insult!" Comedy touches such as this put over the propaganda in a subtle, delicate manner, and the only preaching is done by the star when, at the end, he re-enters the capital class after working as a plumber. Some sound advice on the labor question is then flashed on as part of an after-dinner speech.

Warner plays an idle, rich man's son, disinherited by his dying father and forced to become a plumber. The "red" agents try to corrupt him and he meets an heiress who has been ensnared by their glib Russian tongues. He induces her to leave her home and live with the poor, and she offers him $50,000 for the "Cause." This is the weak part of the story. With the money he obtains control of his father's business, marries the heiress and sets about to adjust labor difficulties and eject the disturbers. There is some fast action when half a dozen strikers attack Warner and his pal in a hallway. The picture is well directed, but footage is wasted with some cabaret scenes which are unnecessary, but enlivening. The cast is average, but H. B. Warner is the big thing in the picture.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

An old favorite in a new role! Such is H. B. Warner, appearing in "Uncharted Channels," a Jesse B. Hampton production, which will be shown at the ——— of ———. For this celebrated actor, known for his immaculate habits of dress, appears in this latest production in the plebeian role of a plumber, who becomes involved in insidious "red" propaganda and who eventually defeats the scheming of the trouble makers.

Although dealing with a heavy subject, "Uncharted Channels" is not a melodrama. It is a pleasing and wholesome comedy drama, and good for more laughs than any slapstick comedy, in addition to its dramatic interest. There is also a love story running through it and Kathryn Adams plays opposite the star.

The picture deals in a vivid manner with some of the most vital economic subjects of the day. The insidious influence of the radical element on the American working man; the uncalled for strikes instituted by selfish labor leaders; and the honest working man, seeking to understand and appreciate his employer's stand, forced to strike by these same leaders. H. B. Warner will surprise you in overalls, but he is the same wonderful actor whether in broadcloth or denim.

PROGRAM READER

In the afternoon he was a plumber, clad in cheapest overalls. In the evening he attended a reception, staged by radicals, in immaculate and resplendent evening dress. But the Bolsheviks, red-eyed and roaring, voiced their disapproval. "You dress like a gentleman," they roared. "It is an insult!"

This is only one of the humorous, satirical moments in "Uncharted Channels," which will be shown at this theatre on ———. The former rich man's son, transformed into a plumber, is none other than H. B. Warner. Yes, the Beau Brummel of the screen and stage assumes the role of a hard-working laboring man—and you will find that he is the same inimitable actor, the same enchanting Warner, whether he is in broadcloth or rags.

So come here on the ——— and have the "Cause" explained to you. Its aim is that "golden day when nobody shall do anything." Perhaps you will agree with this ruby-hued philosophy, but then again you may prefer Warner's staunch Americanism and approve of his method of exterminating the "reds." It is a picture worth seeing.

SUGGESTIONS

In featuring the Bolshevik element in the story, do not give the idea that it is straight propaganda clothed in a melodramatic, hectic story, but get over the idea that it is a wholesome picture of the capital and labor struggle and is a light comedy drama. H. B. Warner is the big bet. It would be well to show some stills of him in evening dress. If you can get the local plumbers' union interested, even, if necessary, giving them free tickets, you probably could get a news story in the local paper if you are in a laboring man's town. An ad. such as this might help: "Do you need a plumber? H. B. Warner, noted actor, has entered the plumbing business temporarily. He will be at the ——— theatre on ——— to show you how he fixes a leak."

"BUBBLES"

(Pioneer)

As Light and Transparent as a Bubble Itself

THERE will be no question about this picture carrying the most appropriate title of the season. It is light—it is airy—it is transparent, and it carries no more substance than a soap bubble that is blown through a clay pipe. A marshmallowy little recipe is "Bubbles," which would be especially appropriate for children's matinees and chautauques. It merely presents a series of high jinks indulged in by a girl who wants to be a boy. But Mary Anderson is quite a matured bit of femininity to interpret the pre-adolescent age of childhood.

One cannot accept her as a natural tomboy because there is no spontaneity in her efforts. Her conversation is the vernacular of the tough kid who delights in showing off, and she is always out of character—partly through the labored subtitles—partly through faulty direction—and partly through her own inability to catch the spirit of irrepressible youth. The picture never leaves a beaten track and the didoes interspersed with silly snatches of sentiment don't offer any more nourishment than a glass of barley water. Uncle packs her off to the country, motor-cycle, et al, and upon her efforts to tease aunty and the boys rests the inoffensive action. One thing in its favor—it is consistently developed. Even the romantic conflict for her heart is transparent.

The director showed good sense in making the melodramatic flourish a breath of hehum and he displayed good judgment in having her disguise easily penetrated by the boys. To present them completely hoodwinked over her masquerade would have insulted their intelligence as well as that of the audience. On the other hand, his scenes are mainly amateurish, principally because he had nothing to work with. The idea is so brittle and episodic and the character study so commonplace that the adult mind will wonder if the "Rollo" series have finally reached the screen. "Bubbles" might have been made interesting had the "tomboyish" heroine provoked her relatives by wanting to be a boy and running away and encountering romance through good incident. But the sponsors treated it as if the character was playing charades. However, the children should like it.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Bubbles	Mary Anderson
Jack Corrigan	Jack Connolly
Professor Van Saynt	Bert Woodruff
Adelaide Van Saynt	Amelia Elliot
Stanley Durham	Jack Mower
James Dorrance	Arthur Millet
Directed by Wayne Mack.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

Mary Anderson, the piquant star, will appear at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in "Bubbles," a story of a girl who wanted to be a boy. This may be defined as a character study since the action revolves around the figure of Bubbles. The role furnishes the star with opportunities to express her versatility. It is a difficult assignment—one that taxes the histrionic power of the actress, but she interprets the part in spirited fashion. Bubbles is permitted by her uncle, Professor Van Saynt, to cultivate her desire to appear as a boy and he is in collusion with her in her efforts to provoke her aunt.

She is such a troublesome young person that the elderly woman is unable to manage her. Bubbles is always resourceful. She always finds a way to express herself. But beneath her masculine disguise her feminine charm and mannerisms make her quite a delectable creature with the boys. She doesn't fool them; she doesn't attempt to, but she is such a good fellow that they permit her to think they are deceived. A time comes when she accepts the advances of Jack Corrigan, and so Bubbles gives up her tomboyish expressions. The picture conquers because of its charm and wholesomeness. Miss Anderson is supported by Jack Connolly and Jack Mower. These players furnish the romantic interest in an acceptable manner.

PROGRAM READER

Most every girl at some time in her youth has wanted to be a boy. And when she makes up her mind to be a member of the sterner sex, her parents had better let her go through with it. If fathers and mothers would be kindly disposed to their daughters who are temperamental in this respect, the desire would soon be a thing of the past. The patrons of the ——— theatre will have the opportunity to see one of these girls when Mary Anderson appears in "Bubbles" on ——— of ——— week. The heroine is encouraged in her desire, her guardians realizing that she will eventually outgrow it. The picture is enlivened with sentimental and humorous touches. And Miss Anderson makes a good study of the irrepressible tomboy.

SUGGESTIONS

There are no outstanding points in this story to capitalize in your exploitation. It carries little drama and relies simply on its characterization. So it would be best to advertise the star. She is well-known to your patrons, even though she hasn't appeared much of late. Bring out that the picture is a little journey into the land of make-believe. Tell that it features a girl who wants to be a boy. Use catch lines and stills of the star in her several disguises. The title is attractive and might be used to advantage. Make a bid for the patronage of the children. It would be money in your pocket if you conducted a series of matinees for them. You could give souvenirs away in the shape of cakes of soap and clay pipes and tell the children to make bubbles with them.

CATCH LINES

They scolded her—they forbade her to be a tomboy, but it didn't do them any good. She wanted to be a boy. See "Bubbles," the fascinating story of an irrepressible girl.

AS Lady Rose—impetuous and unconventional, Elsie Ferguson creates a genuine and appealing character.

And then as Lady Rose's daughter, a poor governess, suffering ostracism because of her mother's sin, she reaches the greatest heights of her career.

Mrs. Humphry Ward's famous novel is an ideal vehicle for this great artist, and it is another directorial triumph for Hugh Ford.

Follow this Clue! It Leads to Big Business

H IRED man? Sure, in his spare time. But really—a detective! And the best since Sherlock Holmes. Disguises, footprints and everything!

He learned it all by correspondence. And when any one tries anything crooked—he'd better look out for Charlie!

A picture like those that made Charlie Ray famous, the kind the people will love, and the funniest in a long while.

in "Civilian"

HE met her near the trenches and he looked just like a god. And so they were married, just before he got wounded and was given up for lost.

But when he turned up at her Fifth Avenue home she wasn't so ready to be clasped in the arms of a ready-made suit nor to bury her head next to a flashy necktie. In fact she was a snob!

So he turned butler in her father's house and then her lesson began—until one night she crept into his room and—well there's a great story in "Civilian Clothes," funny and entertaining and true. It's a great big picture with a great big lot of money in it for exhibitors.

MEIGHAN Clothes"

THOMAS MEIGHAN, the good-luck star! Leading man for every great feminine star who ever appeared in pictures, he brought to every production in which he appeared success for the exhibitor.

Then came "The Miracle Man." No need to recount his success in that. And "Male and Female." Male and female both thought he was just about all a star should be in that great picture. And he was!

There followed "The Prince Chap," destined to be one of the great productions of 1920. And now a star in his own right, Thomas Meighan brings all that good luck for exhibitors that his popularity and his ability deserve. He is the big bet of the new year and in "Civilian Clothes" he's there!

"HUMORESQUE" is already famous.
It has taken its place with the undying masterpieces of the screen art.

Not more than three pictures in history have won the critical enthusiasm that was accorded to "Humoresque" when it was first shown in New York.

A story that plays all the melodies of life on the strings of the heart, a story that resolves into harmony all the discords of existence, "Humoresque" gets deep into the soul—and stays there.

All the heart appeal of "The Music Master" the comedy of "Potash and Perlmutter" and the mother-love of "Madame X" rolled into one supreme photoplay.

It is destined to be one of the biggest money-makers of the year.

THE WORLD: FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1920.
 The World herewith presents, with President Wilson's full approval, the following interview which its staff correspondent Louis Seibold, had with him at the White House this week.
By Louis Seibold.
 Copyright, 1920, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York World).

Enjoys Movie Show Immensely; Then Attends to More Office Duties

Only Three Spectators.
 The President, Mrs. Wilson and one other man were the only spectators at the movie show which occupied the front and only seats. Back of us, in the dim recesses of the windows, and peering through the doors, were members of the White House staff, while the movie showed Mr. Bill Hart at his best. The title of the play was "Sand." Guess it was Mr. Hart's latest picture, because I, who am a Bill Hart fan, never saw it before. One of the two movie operators daily entertain the President and his guests as he invited said it was the picture that laid Mr. Bill up in the hospital because the horse he was riding threw him.

The President likes Mr. Hart's picture. The three-year-old son of the Admiral, who sits in the President's lap four or five times a week and moves on the screen. The Mr. Bill Hart movie Tuesday was in five reels. There were a couple of thrills and punches in every one of them, with a satisfactory love story woven in between the acts.

Mrs. Wilson and the President seemed to enjoy "Sand" immensely. On one occasion that seemed to be unusually "strong stuff" even for Mrs. Hart. At one period in the action the interpreter script made Mr. Bill express the opinion that his job as train despatcher was "not a bed of roses."

The President laughed heartily when he read this announcement, and said, with a dry chuckle: "He should have had my job once in a while. There were times when I would have been perfectly willing to have traded with him."

After the movie the audience separated. The President got into a wheel chair, which was propelled by the elevator, and, accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, went to dispose of some matters before luncheon. The third member of the audience (meaning the writer) roamed out onto the rear portico with a newspaper in hand to feast his eyes on the drowsy, tranquil scene, which was in striking contrast to the rush and murmur of the baking streets in front, where the asphalt was hot enough to fry an egg. Here from the south portico indolent sheep were the only animate figures in the landscape: the whir and piping of

LET the Cumberland breezes blow patrons into your house. The very name "Cumberland" is cooling these days; and who wouldn't rather see romance than tragedy when the thermometer hops upward! So the very title would be a guarantee of good business at this time of year, even without the tremendous pulling power of America's greatest star, who plays the leading role. Adapted and directed by Charles Maigne.

"A CUMBERLAND ROMANCE"

A satisfied customer is the best customer. We know you'll be satisfied with everyone of the five Minter-Realart releases to date. The other four are:

"JENNY BE GOOD" based on Wilbur Finley Fauley's celebrated book, adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers and directed by William D. Taylor; "NURSE MARJORIE," from the Israel Zangwill play, adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers and directed by Mr. Taylor; "JUDY OF ROGUES' HARBOR," from the famous novel by Grace Miller White (author of "Tess of the Storm Country,") adapted by Clara Beranger and directed by Mr. Taylor; and "ANNE OF GREEN GABLES," from the popular "Anne" books by L. M. Montgomery, adapted by Frances Marion and also directed by Mr. Taylor.

REPEATED BECAUSE OF ITS VITAL IMPORTANCE

To Executives and Advertising Managers:

I am bringing before you, somewhat bluntly, the following facts because they seem worthy of your very serious consideration:

The subscription circulation of the NEWS, issue of May 29th, was guaranteed, every single subscription.

Subscription circulation is the only circulation test. If a paper includes newsstand circulation in its circulation figures you can subtract just that amount.

If, therefore, any other paper is lower in subscription circulation by 20% or 30% or 50% your advertising in that paper, compared with the "NEWS," is just 20% or 30% or 50% less effective.

If, furthermore, a paper has not selected its subscriptions and confined them strictly to trade prospects (as the NEWS has, returning over a thousand non-trade subscriptions), then you can subtract another 10%, at least, from the effectiveness of your advertising.

Do you think it fair to yourself, or fair to us, then, to put all papers in this field upon the same basis of advertising effectiveness—by giving to each the same amount of copy either by duplication or alternation?

You would not expect pictures to be rented on such a basis.

We are not asking you a higher advertising rate—higher by 20% or 30% or 50%, because of our greater circulation.

We simply ask that, in your own business interest, you place your advertising upon a basis pro rata with circulation quantity and quality——And to arrive at this, that you ask all trade papers for an analysis of circulation—by subscriptions.

Sincerely,

P. S.—An A. B. C. audit report will shortly verify and analyze the above figures

THE CHURCH

The CHURCH and the MOTION PICTURE THEATRE are working hand in hand.

The CHURCH is today showing pictures.

Will it compete with the same pictures shown in the theatre, or, will it cooperate with the specially selected "Safety Standard" pictures?

People who have looked down on "Movies" are rapidly becoming regular theatre patrons—fans—through this church activity.

To protect these CHURCH AUDIENCES non-inflammable—"Safety Standard" film should be used.

This means no direct competition with the theatre as the newest film are not available in "Safety Standard."

It also means an added revenue to the producer.

Money from a by-product which has been going to waste on his shelf.

"SAFETY STANDARD"—Means Larger Audiences for the Exhibitor.

—Increased Revenue for the Producer.

Notice to Film Salesmen

We have not employed a single salesman to sell Franchises. We will not do so.

Our regular salesmen on their rounds selling film are explaining the Franchise Plan to exhibitors whom we want to have with us. The Circuit had grown powerful before Franchises were thought of and we are content to let the Franchise Proposition take care of itself. Business is good.

"You fellows are slow—you ought to wake up," said an exhibitor who has just joined up with First National. "You ought to put a lot of salesmen in the field and sell out your Franchises quick." He said he would have bought a month ago if he had been urged. But the point is—he came in and joined of his own accord.

The fact is that we're in no wild rush to sell Franchises. We don't want any theatre owner to join us until he is convinced it will be for his own good and we are convinced that he is the man we want. It is for our mutual benefit and we do not want any man to act hastily. We know our proposition is sound. We are giving exhibitors more than they are giving us.

Our Franchises are a lot like sugar—the demand is sure to exceed the supply.

There'll be a Franchise everywhere

Unprofitable Compliments!

IMITATION may be the highest form of flattery, but imitating RITCHEY posters is not practiced in order to flatter the exhibitor. It is done to deceive him. It results in defrauding him. The imitations referred to lack any lithographic trade-mark and are distributed as genuine RITCHEY posters. The exhibitor is not likely to realize the deception until after he uses them, but by that time the damage is done.

One can always tell whether an egg is good, bad, or indifferent by eating it. It's a perfectly good way only if the egg happens to be perfectly fresh. Otherwise not. In much the same way the exhibitor can surely tell whether a poster was a RITCHEY poster or not by using it. If it gets maximum box-office results it was a RITCHEY poster. Otherwise not!

If the result is negative the exhibitor can pocket both his loss and his anger for all the good it will do him.

The RITCHEY trade mark is his one sure protection, and his only one. He should insist upon that mark being on every poster that he uses, and HE SHOULD RAISE HELL WHEN IT IS NOT THERE!

The Year's Big Problem

IF any film company were to make a house to house canvass of the picture theatres in this country today we believe they would decide the most pressing problem presented to be the case of the small town theatre.

The situation, in general, is serious—so serious that in many a town, and many a good town, too, the very existence of the motion picture as an entertainment hangs in the balance. This is particularly true of the Eastern states.

The causes undoubtedly are many.

Bad management is mostly at fault. Competent chain ownership introducing music, exploitation, good projection, may come along and solve this problem. It probably will.

But some points are decidedly up to the producer and distributor—if the "eighty per cent" house is to continue to be a good customer, or a customer at all.

FIRST and foremost there's the condition of the film. It is deplorable. We actually believe that more people are kept away from small town theatres today by scratched and dirty film than by poor subject matter in the pictures. You hear these complaints on all sides from small town patrons. We are told, in this connection, that the exchanges want equipment with which to renovate the film but the home office cannot see the necessity. We would respectfully suggest that the home office take a trip afield.

Not enough good pictures are shown. There is too much altogether of a disposition to rely upon mediocre pictures and so appeal to the youth and less exacting adult taste—to the dried and comparatively small "movie" audience which comes anyway. The better element in every town wants good entertainment. Witness the fact that the Chautauqua comes along each Summer to these same communities and sells thousands of admissions.

If better pictures are withheld from these thousands of houses because the rental asked forces the exhibitor to ask an admission which the motion picture pocket-book cannot continuously stand—then something is radically wrong with the selling policy on better pictures.

SOMETHING is wrong; and we hope and believe that in the formation of selling policies for the coming season the cause of the small house will be conscientiously considered, and that some one will show the way. It will pay that some one.

The film rental of the small theatre runs upward of thirty per cent of its gross receipts. That is entirely disproportionate with the big theatre and its pro rata film rental. There's a decided inequality here.

We believe in and to the best of our ability we promote the slogan of good management, good pictures, good exploitation—and higher admissions; but in a small town with a fixed population and a fixed amusement purse there is a danger point in admission prices.

The issue of the small town house is a serious one. It concerns heavily the gross income of every producer and the general status and future of the picture as the modern day entertainment of the millions.

In advocating the general policy of percentage we have thought that some scheme might be evolved whereby the larger theatres would play percentage with publicity cooperation from the producer; that increased box-office receipts would result and add to the producer's income so that a smaller and flat rental could be fixed on better pictures in favor of the small and late run theatre. In other words that the rental burden on the small house could be lightened in this way and a much larger distribution secured for the picture.

The small house is feeling the big economic troubles of the business. And the situation will be more acute this year than ever.

We have an idea that many a small theatre owner today is wondering mightily over the fuss about first runs and all the thunder of the business as it revolves about Broadway and the key cities; and we can hear him exclaiming: "For heaven's sake, gentlemen, forget your politics for a while and lend a hand!"

W. A. Johnston

DEALING IN PERSONALITIES

Honest, it's the same page back again in the old position. Thanks for the cheers. But don't take this as a sign that the white paper shortage is waning. It's just typical of the summer season, when reissues are popular and the big ones are shelved for the Fall.

One of the real reasons for the return of "PERSONALITIES" to life might be found in the necessity of providing some material to drape around this cut of the dinner to JOSEPH "LONDON" PLUNKITT. And to provide a spot to tell about that jolly affair.

Keen's Chop House was the scene; and we might as well say at the outset, it was SOME affair. Not so much for what happened—what could happen in these arid hours?—but for the spirit that was manifest. We'll say that JOE PLUNKITT has a thought to cherish for the balance of his days.

We shouldn't cast any slighting remarks on what happened and we didn't intend to—for HARRY REICHENBACH surely acquitted himself in ace high style as toastmaster. We even heard WALT HILL remark afterwards, "He's better than Ren Wolff." Which is considerable of a bouquet.

Those whose remarks added to the pleasure of the evening included J. D. WILLIAMS, ARTHUR KANE, JACK WOODY, JOE LEE, W. STEPHEN BUSH, JESSIE GOLDBURG, NATHAN BURKAN, TOMMY GRAY, BERT ADLER, "Doc" J. VICTOR WILSON, "Wid" GUNNING, RAOUL WALSH, and GEORGE W. NEUGASS, vice-president of the Inter-Ocean Company.

After listening to all the praise for JOE PLUNKITT we wondered how the Republicans had overlooked him in selecting a candidate for the policemen's vote.

Escaping from such dry subjects as banquets we come to a spot where we can mention the fact that H. H. VAN LOAN is still in the midst and still selling stories as fast as the producers can make stars.

You have to think fast and twice, boys.

So VIVIAN MOSES is to be the new Fox executive in advertising matters. Vivian seems quite cheerful over the thought. We met him at the Plunkitt dinner and absorbed quite a bit of his optimistic chatter. We're with you, Vivian, from the ground up.

A left-over impression of the Cleveland convention is that of E. M. PORTER holding reunion sessions with the boys who used to help him sell film back in the days when Famous Players first broke the ice in Chicago. "E. M." and "E. S." stand so strongly for Simplex nowadays that we almost forget the days when "E. S." was supervising production and "E. M." was telling the exhibitor how good they were.

Social note: "Mr. WILLIAM YEARSLEY and Mr. EARL HUDSON were at home Tuesday afternoon to Mr. FRED J. BEECROFT and yours truly. A pleasant time was had by all."

We just flit from one subject to another on this page—and get paid for it. Speaking of FRED BEECROFT reminds us that RALPH BLOCK, of the Goldwyn Company, should receive a leather medal or some other token of valor and heroic deeds accomplished. He actually induced FRED BEECROFT to go and see a motion picture this week! It's true! Ralph said he was looking for advice—which is such an unusual statement in this picture world that FRED probably went out of curiosity.

After the experience was over we reached the conclusion that Fred should do all the reviewing for the paper. We don't know just what an advertising man's verdict is worth but Fred is still raving over "Madame X," and the emotional acting contributed by PAULINE FREDERICK.

PETE SMITH has gone and left us. Pete has flitted to the Coast, there to expand his publicity career. We're sending you a good fellow—boys on the Coast.

FRED WARREN breaks loose with the announcement of his exchange managers this week—which would indicate that soon the dust will be flying. This causes us to add that recent meetings with SID vinced us that Fred is still the same good picker.

Dropped in on JACK MEADOR for a chat this week and accidentally stumbled upon an exhibit of some three hundred letters from exchanges and exhibitors telling Metro what wonderful publicity and exploitation matter is being turned out under the parrot trade-mark.

There comes to our scandal-loving ears the information that HARRY MOREY has started his own producing company. It's an epidemic, boys. MAE MURRAY has gone and done it—under good auspices, too—TOM MIX is reported flirting with the spotlight. The Johnstown dam has busted!

Some one just placed a copy of the Famous Players insert of the week on our desk. We'll say it's a nifty piece of work, well handled from both the sales and the printing angle. We understand that Jerome Beatty shares the credit with A. M. Botsford, Pat Kearney and Vincent Trotta.

Dame Rumor brought a good one to light just as we prepared to say "Finis" to this week's page with the whisper that Harry Levey was going to buy his department of Universal.

Confirmation comes Thursday with the statement that LEVEY and staff have started their own company.

The publicists are shifting. DIETRICH and BRILANT step out of International; CRAWFORD from Fox, and KUGEL from Select.

Opposing Forces Are Being Lined Up for War in Southwest

First National Completes Program of Action for Lynch-Hulsey Battle

ORGANIZATION of the independent exhibitor forces which, it is stated, will carry to a finish the contest between them and the Lynch-Hulsey interests of Dallas, Texas, was completed in New York this week when four prominent exhibitors, representing more than four hundred independents in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, joined hands in accepting leadership as holders of Associated First National Pictures franchise for the three states.

Custodianship of the franchise was given to Tom H. Boland, of the Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Ross D. Rogers, of Dye, Ford and Rogers, owning and operating theatres in Amarilla, Wichita Falls, Plainview and Canyon, Texas; Saul S. Harris, who operates the Royal, Kempner, Crystal and Gem theatres of Little Rock, Ark., and Claude J. Musselman, owner of the Grand theatre in Paris, Texas, and who is building a new house in Corsicana, Texas.

Immediately upon their return to the Southwest the latter part of this week these four independent exhibitors will perfect the organization of the new territorial enterprise for First National, to be known as Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of Texas. The new cooperative body will maintain offices in Dallas, Oklahoma City and Little Rock.

The first step in the activities of the exhibitor opponents in the controversy which has occupied the major attention of independents throughout the three states for months past, will be the extension of sub-franchises in the territory for the independent feature attractions for which Associated First National Pictures has contracted with fifteen independent stars, producers and directors. This action brings to a focus the real problem that has faced the four hundred and more independent exhibitors whose present franchises in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchange of Dallas, controlled by E. H. Hulsey, will expire in December of this year.

In a statement issued recently from its headquarters, First National describes the situation as follows:

"It was the general opinion throughout the territory that because of his affiliation with S. A. Lynch, to whom he is said to have sold his theatre properties, Mr. Hulsey would be constrained to make numerous changes in the present alignment of franchised exhibitors when the time arrived for renewals and consideration of other applications. This opinion gained strength and plausible verification when it became known, shortly after the Lynch-Hulsey affiliation was confirmed, that Mr. Lynch's theatre-acquiring activities in the

Exhibitors Organize in Central Pennsylvania

THE Keystone Exhibitors' Association, composed of picture-theatre owners in Central Pennsylvania, including Blair and eight adjoining cities, was formed at a meeting in the Strand, Altoona, Pa., last week. More than fifty exhibitors have already become affiliated with the organization. The purpose of the new association is to band the exhibitors of the district together for their mutual protection and benefit within their area. Active co-operation with kindred associations throughout the state and the recently formed national organization is being planned.

The following officers have been elected: Jacob Silverman of Altoona, president; L. W. Barclay of Johnstown vice-president; C. O. Baird of Portage, secretary, and A. Notopoulos, treasurer.

Southeast were to be extended to the Southwest, and on a supposedly larger scale, especially in view of the impetus he gained through ownership of Mr. Hulsey's houses in Dallas and other important key cities in the territory.

"The hundreds of rumors afloat in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas concerning the future disposition of First National franchises gained fresh force when it became generally known that Mr. Hulsey had not signed the new Associated First National Pictures agreements, together with the other original owners of First National franchises. This implied a definite termination of his association with Circuit members, and led to radical action among the four hundred independent exhibitors whose theatre interests were deeply concerned in the matter. The special committee, appointed from among their numbers, went to Chicago to confer with the Executive Committee of First National while that organization held its annual convention at the Hotel Congress. Following this several important exhibitor-officials of the Circuit made a special trip to Dallas and met more than one hundred independent theatre owners from the three states, who made formal pledges of support to the proposal for a new main franchise grant to the entire territory by Associated First National Pictures. This was agreed to, with the understanding that the entire independent exhibitor body involved decide upon its own leaders to head the organization and conduct of such an undertaking.

"A formal statement, issued jointly by Mr. Boland, Mr. Harris, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Musselman, outlines the policy and course they have adopted as the guide to their activity in directing the affairs of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of Texas. It reads, in part:

"With our fellow independent exhibitors in the Southwest we have obtained definite and lasting assurances, through the new main franchise award, of permanent and representative sources of film supply with all which that implies. This divides the Southwest territory into two distinct factions, and it remains to be seen to just what extent a united opposition from independent exhibitors, thoroughly entrenched with guaranteed production sources, will be able to more than hold its own in maintaining individualism among the theatre owners.

"The sentiment among the members of First National is unanimous in its determination to assist us with every means and agency at its command to remain independent and to preserve individual ownership of theatres in the Southwest. This is a sincere application of the principle which actuated First National members in extending the protection and safety of the franchise to other exhibitors throughout the country. The Southwest exhibitors may now consider themselves as bona fide, representative members of the big national cooperative body, with official voice in its affairs and policies."

Ascher Opens New House in Dayton, Ohio

Ascher's New Auditorium, the sumptuous motion-picture theatre which the Chicago firm has built in Dayton, Ohio, was formally opened Wednesday of last week.

The New Auditorium seats 1,500 patrons, which makes it one of the largest in any of the smaller cities. It has an orchestra of twenty pieces, which is unusual in a city of this size.

Bert Gottlieb, coming here from Ascher's Lane-Court theatre in Chicago, was placed in charge and will conduct the theatre along the lines that have made the Aschers so successful in Chicago.

Denies Mayflower Tie-Up with Isaac Wolper

In a recent statement to the trade, Benjamin A. Prager, president of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, vigorously denies the published report that his company is to be affiliated with a contemplated producing-distributing organization sponsored by Isaac Wolper, formerly president of Mayflower. Mr. Prager brands the rumor as absolutely untrue and without foundation insofar as it involves Mayflower.

Recent Incorporations in the State of New York

With a total of $1,125,000, seventeen concerns were incorporated in New York state during last week, for the purpose of entering the motion-picture industry. These include the following, together with the amount of the capitalization and the directors:

Terhune, Conrad Milliken, New York.

Strictly Canadian Films Plan of New Company

In line with the agitation in some quarters for the production and release of strictly Canadian moving-picture subjects is the organization of a new producing company in Montreal, Quebec, which has the backing of a number of prominent Canadian financiers, it is stated. This enterprise is the Patricia Photoplays, Limited, with headquarters in Montreal. This company is said to be strictly Canadian from stem to stern and is financed with Canadian capital. The capital of $1,500,000 has all been subscribed, it has been officially announced, and the directors have been selected.

Arrangements have been made for the erection of a studio at Point-aux-Trembles, it is declared. This location is only a short distance from Montreal. Work on the first picture will start in the near future.

Sydney Cohen Is Guest of Honor at Hotel Astor

The executive committee of Sydney Cohen's New York theatres gave a dinner at the Hotel Astor on Thursday evening, June 17th, at which Mr. Cohen was the guest of honor. The recently elected president of the exhibitors' national organization was presented with a handsome cigarette case.

Vivian M. Moses, new Director of Publicity and Advertising for William Fox

Vivian Moses Heads Fox Publicity Department

Mr. Vivian M. Moses has been appointed to the position of Supervisor of Publicity and Advertising of Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Moses has entered at once upon the duties of his new position at the Fox Film Studios in New York.

Vivian M. Moses entered motion-picture work through the scenario department of Goldwyn & Company during the early days of its organization and later transferred his activities to the publicity department of Goldwyn.

When Select Pictures Corporation was formed, in the summer of 1917, he started with the new company, having charge of the publicity, advertising and exhibitors' service. Mr. Moses' work at Select was noteworthy. He built up a compact and efficient department which gained a reputation for hard work and results achieved, and which gradually expanded and grew as the new corporation forged ahead.

Two and a half years later Mr. Moses resigned from the Select organization and accepted the position of General Manager of Guy Empey's enterprises, which post he is relinquishing in order to assume the executive position at the head of the Fox Publicity and Advertising Departments.

St. Louis Will Become a Producing Center

St. Louis will be the site of a $1,000,000 motion-picture studio within the next twelve months, according to the plans of the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, which was recently organized for the production of first-class pictures.

Norman J. Sadler, former associate city-counselor for St. Louis, who recently became associated with the new organization, has been sent to California for the sole purpose of investigating existing conditions in the motion-picture studios with a view of gaining contracts from many of the well-known stars to appear in the St. Louis productions.

Five Dollars for Seat to See "The Wonder Man"

At the price of five dollars a seat, the social colony at Westbury, L. I., one of the most exclusive country seats near New York, showed "The Wonder Man," starring Georges Carpentier, and released by Robertson-Cole, and made a profit of several thousands of dollars for the Country Home for Convalescent Babies, one of the leading New York charities, last week.

"The Wonder Man," says Robertson-Cole, "is being received everywhere with great enthusiasm and the social world is just as much attracted by him, and his picture, as is the man in the street, who thinks of him chiefly as the pugilistic champion of Europe, and the fighter who is likely to meet Jack Dempsey to battle out the world's heavyweight championship."

The Long Island showing of "The Wonder Man" took place in the skating rink on the private estate of W. J. Whalen, near Westbury. Most of those who attended it came in their own machines.

Buffalo Company Selects New Site for Studios

The Buffalo Motion Picture Company will shortly move its studios from New York to Buffalo. Negotiations are nearing completion for the purchase of the former German-American building at Main and High Streets, where in the fall it is planned to open one of the finest equipped studios in the country.

The officers of the Buffalo Company are; president, Frank D. Caldwell; vice-president, Eugene E. Person; secretary, J. William Prouse; treasurer, J. W. Lansing; assistant treasurer, Peter Ernst. These, with John J. Roesch, William J. Simon, George P. Spohr, Andrew J. Keller, Louis E. Moschel and Edward A. Jones, form the board of directors. The Buffalo office of the company is at 338 Ellicott square.

Publishers' Association Elects Fred L. Collins

At the annual meeting of the Periodical Publishers' Association, held at the Yale Club on the evening of June 16th, Mr. Frederick L. Collins, president of McClure's Magazine, Inc., and a well-known motion-picture producer, was elected president of the Periodical Publishers' Association.

Maurice Barr Appointed as Saenger Manager

A TELEGRAM from New Orleans announces that Maurice Barr has been appointed manager of the Saenger Amusement Co. in this city. In his new capacity he will take over the personal management of both the Strand and Liberty Theatres, thus succeeding Foster Oloyed at the former house. Mr. Barr has been managing the Liberty Theatre.

Harold Lloyd Signs Contract with Associated Exhibitors

More Than Million and a Half Dollars Involved During the First Year

IN a deal that is said by Pathé to establish him as the highest-priced actor in the world, Harold Lloyd has just been signed as an Associated Exhibitors, Inc., star. More than a million and a half dollars are involved during the first year of the contract in the arrangement whereby Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., has released Lloyd from his contractual obligations to Pathé, in order that he might sign with the Associated Exhibitors. Fred C. Quimby, general manager of the Associated Exhibitors, engineered the three cornered deal, with Lloyd and Hale E. Roach, the producer, forming one side of the triangle, and Mr. Brunet and Mr. Quimby the others.

Mr. Quimby went to Los Angeles two months ago, after an understanding with Mr. Brunet, and he did not return to New York until he brought Lloyd and Roach with him, to complete the details of the greatest deal that has been made in the motion picture industry in years. Lloyd will begin his career for Associated Exhibitors after the release of three more of his comedy special productions under the Pathé banner. "High and Dizzy," which inaugurates the second series for Pathé, will be released July 11th. With the completion of the two comedies following, Lloyd will be free to enter into his Associated Exhibitors contract. Hal Roach, who has developed Lloyd to his present commanding status, will continue to direct all his pictures.

Under the arrangements made when the Associated Exhibitors was formed, Pathé will distribute all of its product, and therefore Lloyd is not to leave the fold of the Golden Rooster entirely. His comedies for Associated Exhibitors will go through the Pathé Exchanges, as will Geraldine Farrar's massive production, "The Riddle Woman," now being filmed under the direction of Edward José.

The signing of Lloyd is another step in the Associated Exhibitors plans to become established as the greatest organization of its kind in the realm of the silent drama. The young comedian has developed into such a powerful box office attraction that his acquisition advances the new combination to the forefront of exhibitor owned organizations.

By signing with the Associated Exhibitors Lloyd is assured of bookings in 350 cities of the leading theatres of the United States, controlled by the thirty-two regional franchise holders. In addition, judging by the number of applications already made to Associated Exhibitors for sub-franchises, nearly 8,000 other exhibitors will be playing the Lloyd comedies within the year.

Harold Lloyd, the Rolin comedian and star of the many good laughs of the past year which Pathé has released. Now signed by Associated Exhibitors

Between the release of "Bumping Into Broadway," which inaugurated the Lloyd two reel specials for Pathé, and "An Eastern Westerner" which concluded the first series, the comedian appeared in more than 5,500 theatres. To the assured patronage of exhibitors he will gain through his signing with Associated Exhibitors, Lloyd will retain practically all of the 5,500 showmen who, through their box offices, have learned the powerful hold he has won upon the public.

The rise of Harold Lloyd is one of the impressive achievements in the "industry of rapid-fire changes." Six years ago, virtually unknown to the world at large, except for a comparatively few thousands, who had seen him perform in stock, Harold Lloyd began his motion picture career under the direction of Hal E. Roach. During the period he was starred in one reelers, Lloyd produced approximately three hundred, which were shown in an average of at least 5,000 theatres. Lloyd has thus made more screen appearances than any other actor.

Figuring that at least 1,000 persons saw Lloyd perform in each of these 5,000 theatres, fully 5,000,000 persons were amused by each one of his single reelers. All told, 1,500,000,000 admissions were taken in at the box offices of theatres throughout the country, which have played the 300 comedies Lloyd has produced since he first began his film career.

No official estimate can be made of the number of persons who have seen Lloyd disport on the screen in the six two reelers Pathé has thus far released, but their number runs into many millions. A noteworthy fact in connection with the career of Lloyd, is that he has never received a single set-back. He has continually pushed forward, making every comedy a little better, or at least, equal, to its predecessor. And the big exhibitors composing the foundation of the organization that has signed him for his record breaking contract—consider that they are dealing with a proposition, the value of which has been more than abundantly demonstrated throughout his singularly successful career. As Harry Crandall, of Washington, tersely has put it, "Lloyd needs no selling talk. He comes to us completely sold."

Hal E. Roach expressed enthusiastic appreciation of the new arrangement. "The relation of Pathé to the Associated Exhibitors make for a perfectly functioned plan," he said. "We feel that the Associated body, in the capital represented and in the wide-spread strength of its physical holdings can do more for us than any of the similar organizations that have made tempting offers, and we realize that the enormous amount of money involved will mean, more than ever—as determined in our original and successfully demonstrated purpose—increasingly better pictures."

"I am gratified by the testimonies of first run exhibitors all over the country, East, West, North and South—and am especially pleased that—New York has had 'more and better laughter' since Lloyd first branched out as a star in two reelers, slightly less than a year ago, in the opinion of such a dignified newspaper as the New York Times."

"This 'more and better laughter' began when 'Bumping Into Broadway' first was shown in the Rivoli and Strand theatres on Broadway. And it never had a chance to deteriorate, so long as Lloyd held sway in these houses; for, in succession he was shown such productions as 'Captain Kidd's Kids,' 'From Hand to Mouth,' 'His Royal Snylness,' 'Haunted Spooks' and 'An Eastern Westerner.' The new special productions I can say, are even better than the first of the two reel features."

"Haunted Spooks" and "An Eastern Westerner" were by far the best of the first series of Lloyds, and they showed the results in the continued better efforts put forward by Hal Roach to make these pretentious comedy innovations, as he expressed "The big and worthwhile things in the realm of happy hearts—for both the public and the exhibitor."

Five-Million Dollar Company Is Formed

American Theatres Corporation Will Operate Houses Throughout the South

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the formation of a five-million dollar motion-picture corporation which will operate throughout the South. The new organization to be known as the American Theatres Corporation, is headed by Arthur Lucas, who is the supervisor of Goldwyn's Southern exchanges. It is stated that complete plans for the operation of motion-picture theatres in the principal cities of the South have been determined upon.

The officers elected comprise the following: Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta, president; Shepard Bryan, also of Atlanta, secretary and treasurer. The directors are: James Hamilton Lewis, former United States Senator, of Chicago; W. E.

Kay, of Jacksonville; W. G. Neal, Richmond; F. L. Woodruff, Atlanta; Arthur Lucas and Shepard Bryan, Atlanta; John Evans, Savannah; A. O. Blalock, Atlanta; Marion Lucas, Savannah.

Mr. Blalock was elected a director to succeed the late Mr. W. W. Osborn, prominent lawyer and banker of Savannah, who died a few days ago.

It was announced that the American Theatres Corporation has adopted an ambitious plan for the fall. It will purchase, lease and build theatres throughout the South. It has taken over the Odeon and Folly theatres in Savannah and the Rex theatre in Sumter, S. C. It will build and operate the new theatre to be built in Savannah, and will take over and operate the new theatre now nearing completion in Americus. Other theatres in the larger cities of the South are to be taken over as rapidly as possible, or new theatres built.

Arthur Lucas, president of the corporation, is a pioneer in the moving-picture world, being identified with both the producing and exhibiting ends of the business. His success in this field has been phenomenal. Besides his theatrical interests, he is the publisher of the Americus Times-Recorder and a director in the Exchange Bank of Savannah. Shepard Bryan, the secretary and treasurer, is one of Atlanta's leading lawyers.

Two Alleged Film Thieves Held for Jury

Both, Arrested Through Activity of Theft Committee, Are Under $1,000 Bail

ON June 15th, Magistrate Simpson, sitting in the West Side Magistrate's Court, held for the Grand Jury two men who had been arrested through the efforts of the film-theft committee of the N. A. M. P. I. for theft of film. These two cases were separate cases, and the arrests were made at separate times.

The first to be held was Joseph Brooks. He was the picker-up of shows for the Atlantic Garden theatre on the Bowery. W. C. Hawkins, special representative of the committee, had suspected for some time that Joseph Brooks had been stealing various films from the different companies. During the month of May, the Robertson-Cole feature, entitled "The White Dove"; the Pathe feature, "Smouldering Embers"; the Metro feature, "The Winding Trail"; a Pathe comedy, "All Lit Up"; a Realart feature, "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," and a United Artists production, "Down on the Farm," had mysteriously disappeared, at least three of these during their delivery by the Prudential Film Delivery Co. All these films have been recovered, several as a result of the arrest of Joseph Brooks, states the National Association's film-theft committee.

On the morning of June 4th, while the operatives employed by Mr. Hawkins, together with Detective-Sergeants Ferguson and Brady of the 47th street police station, were watching the neighborhood in which Brooks was supposed to operate, Brooks, it is said, was seen to leave the film building at 130 West 46th street hastily, with a package of film in his possession, and he was closely trailed from that time on.

According to the report of the theft committee, further investigation proved that before leaving the building, he had been hanging about the Realart Exchange, located in that building, and, watching for his opportunity, had picked up one of a number of cases of film lying at the freight elevator entrance and run down stairs with this feature, which was appropriately entitled "Sinners." Murray Rader, the shipping clerk for Realart, being wide awake, heard a rattling of the cans and the opening and closing of the door at the head of the stairs, and proceeded at once to investigate the cause of the unusual noises. He saw at once that one of the film cans was missing from a pile of cases that Prudential Film Delivery had just checked out of the Realart Exchange, and immediately grasping the situation, rushed to the head of the stairs, whence, it is alleged, he saw Brooks taking French leave with the missing can in his hand.

Fearing to trail the culprit with his usual operatives, Mr. Hawkins at once borrowed a bright office boy, Eddie Wallace, from the Home Office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Hawkins assigned to the office boy the job of trailing Brooks, and when, according to the declarations of the chairman of the theft committee, the film was planted in a Bowery news-stand, the "shadow" at once informed Hawkins of its location. Mr. Hawkins with Officers Ferguson and Brady immediately proceeded to the Bowery to await Brooks. Late in the afternoon Brooks picked up the film from the news-stand, it is said, and was arrested as he started to go up-town on the "L" with the case of film.

Brooks is reported to have confessed to the theft of film following his arrest. He is now being held under $1,000 bail for a hearing before the Grand Jury.

In the afternoon of the same day, the case against Angelo Birnunzio, which had been postponed several times, also came before Magistrate Simpson for a hearing, with the result that Angelo was also held in $1,000 bail.

It appears that on May 29th, "The Beauty Market," a First National feature, had been mailed back by parcels-post from Washingtonville, N. Y., and had been delivered by the postal clerk, Joseph Cohen, of the 51st street post office, to Jack's Express for delivery to the First National Exchange at 729 Seventh avenue. Mr. Cohen remembered the delivery of this particular film on account of the unusual character of the can in which it was delivered.

On the same day, according to the report of the theft committee, Angelo, the elevator man on the freight elevator at 729 Seventh avenue, endeavored to sell this feature to a man, who was hanging about the building.

This man, declares the committee's statement, was taken by Angelo into the cellar of 729 Seventh avenue, where, it is alleged, the accused party fished out the missing feature from a place of concealment. He was given $10 at the time for the picture, it is said, with a promise of $40 more on the following day.

On June 1st, the man who had bought the feature was given $40 in marked money by Mr. Hawkins, in the presence of Detective Sergeant Ferguson. Angelo was arrested shortly after, the money, it is alleged, being found on him.

Union Official Discounts Talk of Strike in Laboratories

Says Spirit in which Union Presents Demands Has Been Misinterpreted

THE recent announcement in one of the theatrical publications that a strike on the part of the Motion Picture Craftsmen, Local No. 614 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators of the United States and Canada, was likely to break September 1st, was discounted by George G. Woodruff, secretary of Local No. 614, during the course of an interview with a NEWS representative this week.

The Craftsmen's Local, which comprises the different branches of laboratory employees, have presented to the film manufacturers a statement of the conditions and terms which are considered by the workers to be fair and reasonable in every respect. "The press and certain manufacturers have greatly misinterpreted the spirit in which this statement was tendered to the employers," says Mr. Woodruff. "We are anxious to cooperate with the manufacturer and are not seeking to embarrass him. There are differences to be ironed out, but we will exhaust every possible effort to settle our differences amicably before resorting to any such emergency measure as a strike. One has only to read the letter which accompanied our statement to the manufacturers and to peruse the preamble to the presentation of our demands to realize fully that we are not approaching the problem with a hostile attitude but stand ready to lend ourselves to mediation in the amicable settlement of these differences."

In support of his assertions, Mr. Woodruff submitted to the NEWS' representative a copy of the letter, which accompanied the presentation of the Union's demands to the manufacturers, and also a copy of the Union's statement of its terms and conditions, including the preamble. The accompanying letter and the preamble, Mr. Woodruff declared, had been completely ignored by one of the theatrical journals in presenting the story of the Union's issue, and their omission had left open to doubt the conciliatory spirit in which the Union was approaching the situation.

The letter, which follows, has been addressed to "The Manufacturers of Motion Picture Film of the United States and Canada," by Local No. 614, of the I. A. T. S. E.:

"Gentlemen:

"Acting upon the suggestion of several manufacturers of motion picture film, we are presenting, at this time, the terms and conditions under which we hope to elevate the position of those persons engaged in the laboratory production of motion-picture film, to the standard, as set by other progressive industries, and

Work Begins on Screen Education Bill

CHARLES F. HUNT, of 41 North Capital avenue, Indianapolis, is at work upon a bill to be presented to a Senate committee in Washington which would provide for motion pictures in grade and high schools throughout America. Mr. Hunt is preparing his plan at the suggestion of the committee considering a bill which would create a department of education, before which he testified some time ago.

Mr. Hunt proposes the introduction of a new and separate bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the purchase and installation of picture machines, films and books where states and counties contribute one-half toward the investment. The measure is entitled "A Visual Education Bill for the Promotion of Schools, Agriculture, Animal Husbandry, Americanization of Citizens of Foreign Birth, Education of Illiterate Adults and other Purposes." It would make the buildings and picture machines of such schools free for the use of county agricultural agents, instructors of vocational training and teachers of home economics and domestic science.

we would appreciate your thorough consideration of same.

"We fully realize that the manufacturer has been subject to the same conditions that we have and, in the spirit of fairness, we do not wish to subject him to any embarrassing conditions or changes, without first giving him an opportunity to adjust his affairs accordingly. We do not desire the domination of labor; nor do we wish to subjugate the employer to the employee, but we do desire and demand an equal basis for bargaining for that, to which, by every law of justice and fair-play, we are entitled; namely, a just recompense for our labor.

"We hope through cooperative bargaining, to determine a course that will prove of mutual benefit and we are confident that you will find the aims and objects of our organization, when fully developed and materialized, will be highly productive of a more friendly and cordial relationship between the manufacturer and his employee.

"Should the manufacturers decide to meet, we will be pleased to appear and verbally amplify our requests at your convenience, and our executive board, or members thereof, would appreciate an opportunity for the exchange of ideas."

The preamble to the statement of the Union's terms and conditions is submitted as follows. The document is addressed again to "The Manufacturers of Motion-Picture Films of the United States and Canada." It reads:

"We, the Motion-Picture Craftsmen, Local No. 614, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, in order to develop and improve our condition; to insure the maintenance of a fair rate of wages; to better the working conditions of our members; to assure the employment in Motion Picture Laboratories and other places where Motion Pictures are made, throughout the United States and Canada, of competent persons, members of this organization; and that equity may be maintained, do hereby signify willingness, in all difficulties, to accept any wise and honorable mediation, to secure the benefits of such unity of ourselves and posterity.

"WHEREAS:

"We, the men and women employed in Motion Picture Laboratories throughout the United States and Canada, desire the same social position as those men and women engaged in other industries, and find it difficult to maintain such position because of the fact that our labor is not sufficiently appreciated, in a financial way, to enable us to live according to the standard as set by the persons engaged in other and more progressive industries, and

"WHEREAS:

"There has been a gradual but steady increase in the wages of those persons engaged in other industries, during the past five years, in which the men and women engaged in the laboratory production of motion picture film have not shared but have been subject to the ever-increasing cost of living, as standardized by prosperity in other industries, and

"WHEREAS:

"The Motion Picture Industry has developed into the third largest industry in the world, and we, as an essential part of that industry, have contributed to the development and elevation of same, we now feel that we should receive recognition of our services, and

"THEREFORE:

"We, the Motion Picture Craftsmen, Local No. 614, I. A. T. S. E., have deemed it just and proper to present for the consideration of the manufacturers of film, such conditions and terms as we have determined as a fair and reasonable consideration for our labor and it is under the following conditions that we are willing to continue to perform such labor and contribute to the further development of the industry."

Following this preamble, the Union submits for the manufacturers' consideration

Resents Statements About Frank Rembusch

Robert Eichelsdoerfer of Indianapolis Makes Reply to Articles in Billboard

ROBERT EICHELSDOERFER, a well-known exhibitor of Indianapolis, feels that the Billboard has maligned Frank Rembusch of Indiana and has issued the following statement in answer to the article objected to, which appeared in the Billboard issue of June 19, 1920. Mr. Eichelsdoerfer says:

"Anyone reading the account of the Cleveland Convention of Exhibitors in the Billboard of June 19, 1920, must be impressed that the whole story is written in a way that is misquoted and belittling and maliciously slandering to Mr. Frank Rembusch of Indiana. His many friends are up in arms over the article, and insist that the Billboard either retract or a libel suit of $10,000 be instituted.

"The screen section of the Billboard is edited by Stephan Bush, one-time editor of the Trade Review, which paper was brought into being by the Motion-Picture Exhibitors' League about four years ago.

"For several weeks past the Billboard screen section has contained one-sided articles, and the one, 'Van Praag Repudiates Rembusch,' was the start of much of the pre-convention misunderstanding.

"Stephan Bush, while editor of the Motion-Picture World, assisted in launching the Trade Review, and at that time he made a vicious attack on Rembusch. Mr. Rembusch was against the idea of the national organization of exhibitors owning a trade journal for reasons that are obvious. He is always interested in policies and not politics.

"Here is an inside story never told before. Just at the start of the Trade Review, Mr. Rembusch wrote an article which was published by the Motion Picture News against a certain class of pictures being produced at that time. The article would probably never have caused more than ordinary attention, but it happened that Mr. D. W. Griffith read it and was impressed sufficiently to call the larger producers together and read it to them, with the result that certain production changes were agreed upon.

"Probably it was on account of the article and the importance given to it by Mr. Griffith, and because Mr. Griffith stood out against the national exhibitors' organization going into the journal business, that the Trade Review, edited at that time by Stephan Bush, came out with the famous article which caused the Motion Picture News to bring suit for $50,000 against the Trade Review. Mr. Rembusch did not join in the suit although solicited by an attorney. He laughed it off.

"However, the present case is so offensive that it cannot be passed by so lightly. If this slandering is sanctioned by the new exhibitors' organization and if suit is brought, there will be a world of things brought to light that were kept quiet by Rembusch for the sake of harmony at Cleveland. In fact, as the case stands, there seems to be only one thing to do except to answer the Billboard.

"It was an open secret at Cleveland that the new organization was asked to launch another trade journal and Mr. Bush probably hoped to again be the editor, and therefore it is easy to guess the reason for the opposition of the Billboard screen editor to Rembusch. Mr. Rembusch is in a position to know more about the various angles of this industry than any one just at this time. The Patterson movement put him in direct touch with every great producer and distributor of motion pictures in America.

"He has a lot of interesting facts in his possession that would be interesting reading for all who attended the Cleveland meeting. Mr. Rembusch feels that he has contributed his share of labor to exhibitors' organization activities and rather be let alone. However, the Billboard has seen fit to go out of its way to take a slap at him and the chances are that he will take good care of himself.

"An account of the Cleveland and Chicago Conventions by Rembusch would make illuminating reading."

Crawford Leaves Fox for Independent Plans

Merritt Crawford, director of publicity for Fox Film Corporation and widely known in the industry as an editor, publisher and exploitation expert, according to an announcement just made has resigned. He will leave the Fox organization as soon as his successor can be appointed.

Mr. Crawford is said to be leaving Fox in accordance with plans which he has been developing for some months past and which were only delayed by reason of the absence of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager, in Europe. Upon the severance of his connections with Fox, Mr. Crawford will complete the organization of a publicity, advertising and exploitation service along entirely new lines.

He has allied himself with powerful publishing interests and will specialize in the organization of publicity departments for independent motion picture concerns and the handling of publicity for individual stars and directors along lines totally different from present methods. A detailed announcement of these plans will be made later.

Lynn F. Reynolds Is Back on Coast Directing

After an absence of more than a year, during which time he has staged many successful pictures, Lynn F. Reynolds has returned to the William Fox studios in Hollywood to direct a series of Western films.

Should Have Been "Seider"

A typographical error in THE NEWS last week printed the name of "J. M. Seider," the prominent New Jersey exhibitor, as "J. M. Reider." Let it be known here and now that it was Mr. Seider who was a member of the Committee on Rules and Resolutions at the Cleveland convention.

Sydney Cohen Issues Statement to Nation's Exhibitors

Proposes to Move Quickly but Not Without Due Deliberation

THE following statement is addressed by Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion-Picture Theatre Owners of America, to the exhibitors of the United States:

"As president of your national organization, I am receiving enthusiastic assurances of support from every section. The tenor of most letters is optimistic, but there is an undercurrent which makes it plain that the great exhibiting body of the country demands action against the aggression of certain producers.

"The great responsibility that the convention has laid upon my shoulders makes it imperative for me to consult with the executive committee. We propose to move and move quickly, but we do not propose to move without due deliberation. I have received many suggestions and we will consider them carefully.

"If certain offending elements persist in their mistaken policy of seeking to undermine our investments, they must be prepared to meet the consequences. One concern engaged in distributing has intimated a desire to cooperate with the exhibitors, and we have assurances from one of the big producing companies that they want to discuss the situation with us in a spirit of reason and amity. The men who will see the light first and accede to the just demands of the organized exhibitors of the country will show good business sense.

"The executive committee of the organization is preparing a complete printed record of the proceedings and all the official documents which played a part in the deliberations at Cleveland. The bulletin will be published under the seal of the organization and will constitute the official record.

"The exhibitors, big and small, throughout the country realize that the one reliable source of insurance for protection of their investments is a powerful national organization. No time is being lost in providing adequate quarters properly equipped, where data may be gathered from all over the country as to conditions existing and if any inroads are being made by producer-exhibitors, so this organization can meet the attack.

"In a very short time organizers will be sent out in order to bring the organization to the exhibitors throughout all parts of the country so that every exhibitor, no matter how small his investment may be, will be given an opportunity to join with his fellow exhibitor in bringing about a one hundred per cent national organization, an organization that will prove its motto, 'An Injury to One Is the Concern of All.'"

Contributors to National Organization

Following is a list of the moneys contributed to defray the preliminary expenses for the maintenance of the national exhibitors' organization. Contributors are requested to send in notices of corrections or other communications to the Temporary Headquarters, 706 Times Building, New York City. Owing to unavoidable haste in making up the list, errors may have crept in. It is desirable to correct any discrepancies at once.

Ruben and Finkelstein Plan Expansion

Have Taken Over Entire Floor of Loeb Arcade in Minneapolis for Offices

REPRESENTING the outcome of eight years of faithful service to exhibitors and the public of Minneapolis and vicinity, announcement this week from the Ruben and Finkelstein Theatre Enterprises, holders of the Associated First National Pictures franchise for that territory, climaxes a consistent expansion of activity with the taking over of the entire fourth floor of the Loeb Arcade, one of the most centrally located and prominent office buildings of Minneapolis. With this announcement is given an insight into the present intentions of the Ruben and Finkelstein interests as regards theatre construction, especially in view of the prevailing high cost of labor and material.

The new offices will provide quarters for the executives, a large developing room, projection room, accounting department and a section for the press department. One end of the floor will contain quarters for the northwestern branch of the Educational Films Corporation of America, of which M. S. Finkelstein, I. H. Ruben, Theodore L. Hays, of the firm, and J. F. Cubberley, manager of the Minneapolis First National Exchange, are officers. At the other end of the building are the offices occupied by First National. Finkelstein and Ruben will begin moving their new offices in the next few days.

Messrs. Ruben and Finkelstein have just completed the New Astor, one of the finest motion picture houses in St. Paul. In addition, they now have under construction the New Capitol, St. Paul, and the New Capitol, Blue Mouse and Nicolet theatres in Minneapolis. These additions bring their theatre holdings in the Twin Cities past the thirty mark.

The development of the firm's activities in the Northwest is considered one of the most interesting and illuminating chapters in the history of motion pictures. Coming into the Minneapolis field when the theatre situation in Minneapolis and St. Paul was in a state of utter confusion, they set out to unify the industry and place pictures on a par with other commodities being vended in the cities. How well they have pleased the public is attested by the figures of the United States Internal Revenue Department, which show that more than $770,000 worth of business clicked through the turnstiles of Minneapolis motion picture houses in 1919. Records of the first five months of business, show that this mark will be shattered in 1920.

Uncertain labor conditions alone have been responsible for delays in christening the New Capitol in St. Paul. However, present indications show that its doors will be thrown open in September. This theatre, which, in architectural beauty will probably be the equal of any theatre in the country, will cost approximately

New Orleans Rumor Has Lynch Buying Into Saenger

A WIRE from New Orleans informs that it is strongly rumored that S. A. Lynch, head of the Southern Enterprise Co. of Texas, which is reputed to be the largest owners of motion picture theatres, having control of 148 houses in the Southern territory, is likely to become the largest individual owner in the Saenger Amusement Co. through the purchase of the 40 per cent interest of Herman Fichtenberg in the Saenger corporation.

Mr. Fichtenberg was one of the pioneers in the exhibiting field in New Orleans. The Globe, the Plaza and the Almo Theatres of Vicksburg, Pensacola and Houston were operated by Mr. Fichtenberg. When he merged with the Saenger organization on June 4, 1917, he is said to have received forty-six per cent of the consolidated interests. It is understood that he still owns outright forty per cent of the Saenger stock, being the largest individual stockholder in the corporation. A desire to retire from the more active phases of theatrical business and take things easier is the reason ascribed by friends for his present action.

It is stated that the Saengers have the first right to purchase the Fichtenberg holding, but the terms of the sale-option given to Mr. Lynch are so favorable that it seems a foregone conclusion that Lynch will become the owner of the Fichtenberg stock. The transaction is reported to involve nearly a million dollars.

$2,000,000 and will seat 2,500. The Minneapolis New Capitol, which will be a fit mate for its companion theatre across the river, will probably be opened late this year. Operating plans and personnel of the directing staffs are now being worked out and are expected to be made public within a few weeks.

Work on the other two Minneapolis theatres is progressing. The Blue Mouse—in the heart of the loop district—is rapidly nearing completion. The new building enterprises will give the firm an increased seating capacity of more than 7,000 for the Twin Cities.

The firm set out in the beginning of its career to give the public the best possible entertainment at minimum prices. No motion picture house controlled by Finkelstein & Ruben charges more than 35 cents as an admission price. In the majority of their houses the admission is much less.

Increased operating expenses have not been allowed to interfere with a minimum price. Nor has outside influence progressed far with the argument that the public would willingly meet any and all advances. On the contrary Ruben & Finkelstein have even shouldered the responsibility of the war tax.

Years of experience have taught the men and women of the Twin Cities to lean on Finkelstein & Ruben in all civic and national movements. If a woman's club wishes to give a special performance either for its own financial reward or for the benefit and pleasure of children or dependents, Finkelstein & Ruben place their theatres at its disposal with no thought of breaking even; if an orphanage needs entertainment, Finkelstein & Ruben send cabs to bring the urchins to their theatres, or dispatch an operator with special films for their amusement, or, if the school authorities want their children to celebrate a national holiday en masse, Finkelstein & Ruben extend them the liberties of all their theatres and then calmly go out and buy several thousand street car tickets, that no needy child may lack means of transportation!

Does it pay to place motion picture houses on a pedestal higher than mere vendors of amusements? To make them civic institutions?

The value of this policy was obvious in the recent unsuccessful invasion of the Minneapolis field by a producer, when the public rallied to the colors of Finkelstein & Ruben and netted that firm the biggest business in its history.

"We do not discourage competition, neither do we fear it," said a member of the firm recently. "We stand confidently on our record in the Twin Cities, knowing that our relations with the public have always been such that we have become a distinct and definite part of the Northwest's development."

Not the least of the firm's accomplishments has been its long, hard fight in St. Paul, which is just now beginning to produce results. St. Paul has been notoriously mediocre as a "show town," but Finkelstein & Ruben did not allow this reputation to discourage its efforts.

Bert St. John Is Managing California Theatre

Bert St. John, well-known showman and for several years manager for Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles, has resigned and accepted the managing directorship of the California theatre in that city.

Mr. St. John has been connected with amusement enterprises for a great many years and was for a long time with the B. C. Whitney enterprises in the East and helped stage many of their biggest successes, such as "The Three Twins," "Isle of Bong Bong" and other Princess theatre light comedy and musical comedy hits.

Morris Hoffman, of Universal's Chicago Exchange, is enjoying a vacation in the East, including a sojourn at Atlantic City. He expects to be back at his desk in about three weeks.

Manager Lesserman is planning to start for the woods of Northern Wisconsin on July 5, where he will do some fishing and get a good rest after the extremely busy winter and spring he has undergone.

Captain Paul Kimberley, director and manager of Hepworth Picture Plays, Ltd., of London, was a Chicago visitor last week, having made a special trip from New York to look over Rothacker's Chicago plant. While here he extended an invitation to Watterson R. Rothacker to visit the Hepworth studios when in London during July.

Bobby Ascher, young son of Nathan Ascher, celebrated his birthday at his father's estate at Homewood, Ill., last week, and was the recipient of a unique gift from Watterson R. Rothacker, who sent out a camera man and had Bobby filmed, so that when he grows up he may see himself as others see him now.

Miss Alice Howell, the Reelcraft comedian, who has been working for many months under the direction of Frederick J. Ireland at the company's Chicago studio, is about to leave for the West Coast where she will continue making comedies for Reelcraft. Mr. Ireland is preparing to start work with a new producing unit at the Chicago studio.

Eddy Eckels is ashamed. That's why he has been avoiding the Winter Garden Restaurant and walking on side streets to dodge meeting his friends and it's all because his partner Jack Willis is arrested. This disgrace which has cast a pall of gloom over the quarters of Willis & Eckels, can be attributed to the fair sex. Jack is the proud possessor of a four and one-half pound Pomeranian, Miss Chin Chin, and forgot to buy a license. His friends hope he will be able to explain it to the judge and escape the hoosegow.

Joe Friedman of Celebrated Players now has an assortment of short subjects to offer exhibitors which he claims is the largest and most diversified controlled by any exchange in the United States. Included in the list are: Eleven Briggs comedies of one and two reels; twenty-six Screen Snapshots; twelve Muriel Ostreich comedies which will be released one a month; twenty-six Polly Moran comedies, Urban Chats and twenty-six Bill Jones comedies.

H. P. Wolfberg has arrived from Cincinnati to take temporary charge as district manager for Famous Players-Lasky, following the transfer of F. O. Cresswell to New York. No announcement has yet been made as to the successor to Ralph Bradford, whose resignation as manager of the Chicago Exchange recently was announced in these columns.

Charles E. Ward, who formerly owned and operated a house at Fairberry, Illinois, has purchased the Lyric Theatre at Odell, Illinois, and will take possession of the latter house on July 21st.

Ralph Kettering, general press representative for Jones, Linick and Schaefer, states that "The Gumps" have resolved themselves not into mere animated cartoons but into clever photoplays in capsule-cartoon form, and as such they are a valuable asset to McVicker's big weekly comedy bill. "I never saw anyone in the theatre get up and walk out on 'The Gumps,' and that's saying something," is the way Mr. Kettering expresses himself on the pictures.

Miss Fay Bernstein of Merit Film Company in Minneapolis, stopped over in Chicago on her way back from New York, where she has secured the rights to a number of important pictures.

M. A. Dodge expects to leave for the Coast within a few days to resume production work. On his return from New York he was in Chicago for a few days conferring with officials of the Capital Film Company and will stop in Milwaukee and Kansas City before going to the Coast.

Workers are busy reconstructing the old Kunst-Rommeler Building on Wabash Avenue near Van Buren, making it ready to be occupied by the Chicago Exchange of Pathé. Manager Aschmann hopes to be in the new quarters by September 1st at the latest, and is planning to make the Wabash Avenue building a model exchange and one of the show places of Chicago.

The heat of G. O. P. Convention week coming after the long continued cold spell proved too much for Max Cutler, formerly connected with Superior Screen Service, Inc., and he was one of the year's first sunstroke victims. It is reported he is doing well.

I. Gettleman has been promoted to manager of Universal's Exchange at Minneapolis and J. J. Sampson will take his place as manager of Universal's feature sales department at Chicago, according to an announcement just made by Louis Baum, district manager. Mr. Gettleman has been connected with the Chicago and Milwaukee branches of Universal for the past three years and his successful record during that time indicates that he will more than make good in his new position. Mr. Sampson, his successor at Chicago, has been working for Universal for some time and his promotion comes as a recognition of his good work. During the war he was an organizer of the War Camp and Community Service.

Rantan, one of the smaller Ill. noise cities, shortly is to have a picture theatre, as up to date electrical fixtures and wiring is being installed in the opera house, which will open with pictures soon after the 1st of July.

Harry Spanuth, president of Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, has completed arrangements with Ricord Gradwell of Producer's Security Corporation, New York, to look after the sales of the Billy Whiskers series of comedies in the United States, Canada and abroad. The new arrangements will leave Mr. Spanuth free to concentrate on the production of the series as well as Spanuth's Vodal-Vil Movies, which Commonwealth will continue to distribute direct.

Al Brandt of Universal's industrial department was in Chicago for a few days last week before leaving for San Francisco and Los Angeles on business connected with his department. Mr. Brandt is much interested in the development of the educational films which he believes are destined to have a place in the industry of paramount importance.

Miss Theodora Bruske, who for the past ten years has been connected with Essanay, has left that company to become assistant to President Harry Spanuth of Commonwealth, and will take the place recently made vacant by the resignation of A. L. Busse.

B. A. Lucas, recently manager of United Artists' Exchange at Detroit, has arrived in Chicago to assume the duties as manager of Robertson-Cole's Exchange here. He formerly was assistant manager for United Artists in Chicago and has a very wide acquaintance among exchange men and exhibitors of this district. Max Levy, whose resignation as manager of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office became effective this week, has not as yet announced his future plans. It is reported, however, that he is considering several good offers, two of which are from producing companies operating in California.

The traditional June slump in business has no terrors for Harry Weiss of Superior Screen Service, Inc., who reports that his exchange broke all records for business during the week ending June 19th and that indications for a continuance of big business are favorable.

Tom Callery, of Chicago, who jumped from a reporter's desk into the ranks of motion picture actors as leading man to Za Sue Pitts, is visiting the old home town and expects to remain in Chicago for ten days or two weeks before returning to the coast to resume work in the Nolan picture, "Dinty," featuring the boy actor, Wesley Barry.

Tremendous Welcome for Mary and Doug Abroad

LONDON, June 22.—Another "Queen" and another "King" have arrived in England. The liner Lapland brought them here and landed them at Southampton, and a few moments later they were at the mercy of thousands of women, children and men.

The arrival of these two outstanding figures of public life proved to be an event such as has only been evidenced on occasions like those when President Wilson and General Pershing came here. But even these two memorable events have been overshadowed now and the glory, and it is a great glory, falls to none other than Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. Today "Queen" Mary and "King" Douglas rule alone.

No greater or more enthusiastic crowd ever awaited with such anxiety and anticipation as that which watched and cheered as the huge liner was brought alongside, and never was there such a wild rush and the shrieking as when Douglas Fairbanks with his tiny smiling bride perched on his right shoulder ran down the gangway and into the thick of the waiting thousands.

There must have been thousands of people who wanted autographs. But this was impossible. There was a mail sack containing close to five thousand letters already received for either Mary or Doug. Functions of every character have been arranged for the newlyweds.

With the Fairbanks couple is Mr. Bennie Zeidman, a close personal friend of the two, and Edmund Guebel, classed as the Major Domo of the Fairbanks estate.

Reformers Put Crimp in Fashion Show But Result is Beneficial

"Why Change Your Wife?" Publicity Secured From Unusual Source

"TOUGH luck! And yet not so tough, either."

That's what Al. G. Birch, exploitation representative of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation said when church people, W. C. T. U. organizers and other guardians of the city's morals got together and stopped an elaborately planned fashion show to be staged in connection with the run of Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount super-special, "Why Change Your Wife?" at the Rialto theatre, Pueblo, Col.

Birch called it hard luck and the manager of the theatre agreed with him because both had spent a lot of time and money in preparing a costume stunt that was to dazzle Pueblo. A series of coincidences figured in the breaks. When Birch arrived at Pueblo he had decided to revive the "Bathing Girl" exploitation for the picture which already had been such a success in Denver.

Arrangements were completed with the Pueblo Star-Journal, the leading paper of the community, to handle the news end of the stunt. Sumptuous display streamers and posters, such as "Rialto Theatre Gets Great Fashion Show," with the name and cast of the picture, had been prepared. These were exhibited in the newspaper, on billboards and on the street cars. All was set for the fashion show, to be staged by "bathing girls" on the stage of the low billboard structure in the central business section, and which was to be held on the Saturday afternoon preceding the first day of the picture's run.

At this juncture George Greaves, of Denver, the owner of the Rialto theatre, died, and out of respect for him the show was cancelled. Later, however, his relatives, feeling that his intense interest in the business would have ordered it to be carried through, had he been able to say the word, asked that the original plans be adhered to. It was then too late for the show on Saturday, so it was announced for the following Monday.

The delay meant two extra front page stories in the Star-Journal, but it also gave the opposition time to horn in. The rival paper, incensed at the "scoop" the Star-Journal had secured, began to stir up a "moral" war against the fashion show. On Sunday several ministers took it upon themselves to preach from the pulpit on what they termed a "lewd and obscene display of femininity." At the most fashionable church, the First Presbyterian, the minister called for a rising vote of his congregation on a resolution that they would not attend such an "immoral" exhibition. Mrs. Mahlon D. Thatcher, wife of the leading banker, amazed the communicants

The Sir Ernest Shackleton's Antarctic picture, "The Bottom of the World," was exploited in a dignified way in San Francisco, where it played at the Kinema theatre, by means of a tie-up with a leading haberdashery.

In this window was placed a large frame upon which was pasted an attractive cut-out showing Shackleton's ship, "The Endurance," as it was caught in the great south ice. Around the edge of the frame was a heavy piece of dark colored velvet which set off the picture very attractively.

by being the only one who did not rise. She explained frankly that she wanted to see the "stunt" and refused to be moved from her position.

However, the church people and W. C. T. U. and kindred organizations were so active in their efforts to prevent the perpetration of a great moral blot on the community that they finally persuaded the commissioner of public safety to order the show cancelled. In fact, he not only prevented the show from being held but he had two willing policemen guard the "bathing girls" from the moment they reached the city till they departed, to be sure that some ruse would not be resorted to to circumvent his order.

Tough luck—wasn't it?

But—a crowd of at least 10,000, unaware that the stunt had been cancelled, gathered at the square to watch the display. After the cancellation was announced they were given enough information about "Why Change Your Wife?" so that they would talk about the picture to every one they met. And the Star-Journal, in a front page article, as well as the voices of 15,000 disappointed people, arraigned the misdirected zeal of certain people of Pueblo for the better part of the week.

Then—to cap the climax and keep the story running the Star-Journal disclosed in a front page article the fact that the young ladies who had been described as "bathing girls" through the overzealousness of a local scribe, were members of the choir of St. Mark's Episcopal Church (the second largest church in Denver) and had been brought to Pueblo for an entirely proper display of conventional, even if new, styles and costumes. As a result, although the stunt itself was never executed, "Why Change Your Wife?" got more notice than it would have had through a dozen shows, and the ridiculous position in which the church people had placed themselves made the picture a subject for favorable raillery.

"Not so tough, either"—when the picture played to capacity.

Mr. Birch, in describing the week, regrets having had to pit himself against the religious element of the city. However, he feels that the blind manner in which he was attacked before being given an opportunity to explain the nature of his stunt, justified him, this once, in placing the so-called reform element at a disadvantage.

Uses Big Scene of "Shore Acres" for Prologue

By means of a novel use of a particularly effective strip of film among other presentation features, H. M. Rouda, manager of Ascher's Merrill theatre in Milwaukee, brought his engagement of "Shore Acres" unusual attention. Mr. Rouda cut the storm scene showing the schooner "Liddy Ann" wrecked at sea from the sixth reel of the feature, and ran it as a prologue number with special lighting effects.

Then followed a quartet number, the Singers rendering "Your Eyes Have Told Me So," using this song for the theme of the feature and starting the picture in the midst of the chorus of the ballad.

The storm scene used as the prologue was, of course, again inserted in the picture in its proper place and shown as part of the complete production. In the sixth reel scene where the young lovers are washed ashore a bass soloist sang "Asleep in the Deep," imparting impressive atmosphere to the action transpiring on the screen.

Real Idea for "Virgin of Stamboul"

HARRY GOLDBERG, manager of the Sun theatre in Omaha, took the exploitation cake recently by his novel presentation of "The Virgin of Stamboul."

Goldberg built a miniature theatre on the body of a three-ton motor truck. He labelled this truck "the smallest motion picture theatre in the world," and equipped it with a small projection machine and screen.

On the back of the truck he arranged a shield with eight narrow slits in it through which pedestrians could peep. A big caption on the back and sides of the truck invited passers-by to "See What Sari Saw!"—the jazz line in "The Virgin of Stamboul" advertising.

This truck was driven around the streets of Omaha on two successive nights, stopping at various busy corners and giving a show every five minutes. The show consisted of a few hundred feet of the most exciting scenes in "The Virgin of Stamboul," and a short trailer advertising the Douglas truck upon which the "theatre" was mounted.

The outside of the truck and its projecting superimposed "theatre" were painted in bright yellow paint, which in no way camouflaged it from the attention of the throngs that filled the streets.

The only drawback to the show was the fact that it was run without a license. The third night of the unique run the police closed the show. At the time the truck had pulled up in front of the Moon theatre, operated by Mr. Ballentyne. The police, by error, thought Ballentyne was responsible. They would not permit the truck's removal from the front of the Moon theatre, and they also made Ballentyne take down his marques displays as punishment.

Ballentyne was a good sport and didn't tell them that the "smallest theatre in the world" was a Goldberg house. As a result the elaborate display for "The Virgin of Stamboul" in front of the Sun theatre was left untouched.

Arrow Advertising Novelty Makes Hit

One of the cleverest yet simplest exploitation stunts used at the CLEVELAND CONVENTION was distributed by members of the Arrow organization who attended there. This was in the form of a small six by three cardboard, on which was mounted two dice. Above the dice was the wording, "YOU CAN GAMBLE WITH THESE," and under the dice ran a line "BUT ARROW PRODUCTIONS ARE SURE WINNERS." On the back side of the cardboard was a list of the Arrow productions.

This was handed to the convention in an envelope and a number were placed in the letter-boxes at the hotels. According to the film officials and exhibitors there, this was one of the most unique advertising mediums ever put over at a film convention.

Window Display for "Up in Mary's Attic"

THE exploitation possibilities for "Up in Mary's Attic" are materializing in a very concrete form and exhibitors who already have, or who will in the future, book this production can see now how these exploitation tie-ups are being carried out in New York City.

Gray's Drug Store, on one of New York's busiest corners, Broadway and Forty-third street, carries a window display of beach needs, using as a background five large panels each sixty inches high, of the girls in "Up In Mary's Attic."

Other stores carrying bathing accessories are also planning to tie-up with the picture "Up In Mary's Attic" in a similar manner.

This is only one angle in an exploitation tie-up campaign which covers a variety of merchandise ranging from talcum powder to music records.

The Cosmopolitan Ladies' Shop on Broadway and Forty-first street, used a window display, linking up the lingerie worn by the girls in this production with the lingerie they manufacture. A prominent bathing suit manufacturer is linking up for window displays with his dealers throughout the country, featuring the bathing girls from "Up In Mary's Attic."

Dealers throughout the country who will handle the piano roll, record and song, "Up in Mary's Attic," which has been written directly around the picture, will also cooperate with exhibitors in every territory, in large window displays.

Franklin Ready for Summer Season

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN has begun to take a fall out of Old Man Hot Weather. In his advertising, stage settings, decorations, lobby, usher uniforms, orchestra uniforms, curtains and a thousand and one other things about Shea's Hippodrome, he has put over "that cool feeling."

It started this week with the ads in the local papers. The Sunday display had an ice-bound border around it, with the letters spelling Hippodrome looking like Alaskan type. Under the Shea Hippodrome caption Mr. Franklin declared the Hipp to be the "Coolest Place in Town." In the midweek ad preceding "Alias Jimmy Valentine" display, Mr. Franklin featured an ice scene from "The Bottom of the World," over his regular feature in a small but exceptionally attractive ad, an excellent illustration of much in little. In his daily ads he now used snow-covered HIPPODROME caption. The Program Hippodrome heading is also touched with a below zero design.

In his stage settings Mr. Franklin has also put the touch of coolness. This week he presented a setting, entitled "The City of Make-Believe," a fantasy in blue and silver, suggested by a large window display on "The City of Silvertown," in the local Goodrich window. The setting was exceptionally well lighted and as it was unveiled the flower baskets hanging at each side of the stage frame were illuminated with gray colored bulbs. Flower boxes have been placed around the orchestra pit and along the front of the stage, and cretonne curtains have replaced the heavy velvet hangings.

In place of the heavy glass doors at the exits, Mr. Franklin has placed white lattice work through which artificial vines have been woven. Attractive green lights have replaced the warm red bulbs throughout the house and a large number of specially designed electric fans sent their cooling breezes to all parts of the house. The girl ushers now wear their gray palm beach dresses and the members of the orchestra are also garbed in seashore styles.

This cooling process is one which has many worthwhile results, the principal one being that it aids patrons to forget that the mercury is soaring outside. It also helps greatly in keeping up attendance during the summer months, for patrons know that they will not sit and swelter at the Hippodrome no matter how hard the weather man tries to burn up the city. Visitors to the Hipp notice the change the moment they come near the big house. Atop the marquee, Mr. Franklin has installed a veritable fernery, and flower and fern baskets have been hung under the porte cochere. In the lobby large ferns have been hung and the clusters covered with an attractive green cretonne.

The coming of hot weather is welcomed at Shea's Hippodrome and business holds up throughout the season. Another thing at the Hipp which is an excellent thing for other exhibitors to note is that Mr. Franklin never cuts down his advertising during the warm weather, in fact he increases it, arguing that this chopping of summer display is an admission that you expect a slump in business. By increasing your advertising, Mr. Franklin says, you show that you have confidence in your public and that you expect to fill the house just the same—warm weather or not.

Transforms Lobby Into Scene from Picture

The engagement of "The Silver Horde" at the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia, one of the Stanley chain houses, was a model viewed from an exploitation standpoint.

Among the many unusual publicity stunts successfully consummated was the transforming of the Victoria lobby into a veritable scene from the play.

Logs covered the ticket booth, forming a cabin. At the entrance and the exit side were placed huge cut-outs depicting thrilling scenes from the important points in the story. A thirty-foot salmon hung over the electric sign. Special red-ink editions of a newspaper were issued and distributed throughout the city. Fish in nets and aquariums were used as window displays in sporting goods stores. Ushers dressed in keeping with the characters of the piece. Regular cafes had special dishes of salmon. A large automobile with the driver dressed in furs led the Barnum-Ringing parade. Cut-outs of every description were placed about the principal streets of the city and the book-stores co-operated with sales of "The Silver Horde."

Teaser Campaign for "A Woman's Business"

"A Woman's Business," the new Olive Tell picture, has been given a most successful showing at the Goodwin theatre, Newark, and Manager F. C. Cross is convinced that his methods of exploitation are ideal for this picture.

A teaser campaign based on the suggestions and using the catch lines of the press book was started several days in advance of the opening, which asked the public, "What is a woman's business?" Later the newspapers carried announcement that the answer to this question could be found at the Goodwin.

These display ads were generous in size and well worded to excite the curiosity of the Goodwin's patronage.

Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, begins getting the cool atmosphere into his theatre by his advertising. This is the display he used in exploiting "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and a Seamon comedy, "School Days."

Elaborate Exploitation Used by Plainfield Theatre

PROCTOR'S THEATRE, at Plainfield, N. J., a city accredited with a population of but a few more than 30,000, including the surrounding country, recently put over an exploitation campaign that in elaborateness compares with the best of those in cities of ten times the population and as a result established a house record for net profits. Teaser cards, window display tie-ups, moving billboards, and a fife and drum corps, in addition to newspaper space were the ingredients employed.

Plainfield, in common with the rest of the United States, is aware of the ouija craze, and just after "The River's End," had been booked for the theatre a bit of persiflage between two of the house employes, suggested the campaign.

"Hey, Tom, what is 'The River's End'?" asked one of the employes.

"Why don't you ask Ouija, I'm no spiritualist," was the retort.

Shortly after that small cards were distributed throughout the down-town section of Plainfield. They carried a picture of an ouija board with the wording, "Ask Ouija, where is 'The River's End.'" The following day, one of the windows of Woodbine and Martin's store on the main street blossomed out with a window display of ouija boards and numerous large duplicates of the small cards which had been distributed, but with no reference to the picture.

Two days later, however, the largest book store in the city, and a five and ten cent store, had a window devoted to the coming of the production to the Proctor theatre. The book store window was filled with copies of the Curwood novel, and the other store featured the song of the same title as the picture and based upon the story.

On the morning of the opening day of the three-day run at the theatre, a wagon, with a huge painted announcement, on each side was driven around the city. The banners read:

"Ouija has answered the mysterious question. 'The River's End' now showing at Proctor's theatre. The biggest photoplay sensation of the year. Special music. No advance in prices."

In the early evening of each day of the run the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, a popular local organization of twenty pieces, was used to parade about the business section of the city with announcements of the showing of the production at the theatre.

As is usual in tie-ups with window displays all three of the stores benefited greatly by their co-operation in the exploitation. The teaser cards re-awakened a waning interest in the ouija boards, and the picture itself created a strong demand not only for "The River's End" but others of the Curwood novels, and the music counter in the five and ten cent store reported a phenomenal demand for the music.

How Pearce Put Over "Evangeline"

Novelty exploitation works quite as well in the South as in New York, according to the reports from Pearce's Tudor theatre of New Orleans which recently put over something different in advertising "Evangeline."

There is in New Orleans a crippled negro who uses a team of goats hitched to a wagon as a means of transportation. He has been in the city some time and thousands know him by sight. When they saw the goat team they always saw the negro. When Mr. Pearce got hold of the outfit and fixed it up, pedestrians looked at the goats, looked for the negro driver, but didn't see him as they gazed on the same thing the reader does in the picture printed herewith, and the engagement of "Evangeline" at the Tudor profited accordingly.

Another of Mr. Pearce's exploitation ideas which brought good results was the printing of a special school children's ticket which at reduced prices allowed the pupils in the various schools to see the feature. Since "Evangeline" is a story which is used in teaching English the children were especially interested in the feature.

"Hoodlum" Matinee for Poor Children

A. J. Wood, manager of the Grand Opera House, Brunswick, Ga., recently extended an invitation to poor children residing in Brunswick to attend a special matinee of Mary Pickford in "The Hoodlum" which not only resulted in an editorial commending Mr. Wood in one of the newspapers but was so successful that the manager of the opera house has determined to make the plan a regular feature of his presentations when ever he books a picture with a particular appeal to children.

Mr. Wood's plan was to have the teachers of the public and Sunday Schools designate the children whose parents could not afford to buy tickets for the show and to distribute free tickets from this list.

In this manner he made certain that his audience would be one which deserved complimentary admittance and which also came from a source which would not otherwise have attended and paid their way.

Sends Newly-Weds Complimentary Tickets

E. L. Foy, president of Foy's Neighborhood Theatres, Inc., operating in Dallas, Texas, has originated a very successful plan whereby permanent customers for the Foy theatres are gained at small cost.

The names of all the newly married couples mentioned in the newspapers of Dallas are noted and a personal letter extending congratulations, in a pleasing style and inclosing a complimentary ticket for two is mailed to them.

The pass is good at any of the four theatres under the Foy management and the recipients may attend any performance.

Mr. Foy is authority for the statement that the idea has worked to perfection. When one of the passes shows up at the box office the house managers attention is called to it and he personally greets the newlyweds and makes them feel at home.

The plan commends itself to us since we believe that the personal element in operating a picture house is the most important factor in making for success and in calling attention to Mr. Foy's plan, we only suggest that it might be used to further advantage by devising a way of obtaining the names of all people who move to a house located near one of the theatres and extending the same courtesy and a "welcome to our city" message, to them.

It pays to make your patrons your friends.

School Kiddies Interested in "Virgin of Stamboul" Showing

A novel exploitation stunt in connection with the showing of "The Virgin of Stamboul" at the Sun theatre, Omaha, is being held in connection with Omaha News.

Two complicated problems are presented to the school children of Omaha by Miss Dean, who was a mathematical genius when in school.

Here are the problems:

The top of Trinity Church steeple in New York City is 288 feet from the ground. Three-fourths of the height of the steeple above the church, plus twelve feet, is equal to the height of the church. What is the height of the steeple above the church?

When will the minute and hour-hands of a watch be exactly together between the hour of four and five o'clock in the afternoon?

The problems have aroused great interest among Omaha school children. Thousands of answers have been received. The winners will be determined by the correctness and neatness of the solutions. Valuable awards will be made to the winning mathematicians, including season passes to the Sun theatre.

What Does He Think of Reviews?

"Every exhibitor that has ever read your paper knows that it is the only way to get an impartial and fair criticism on pictures.

"To be perfectly frank with you, we have sometimes been inclined to believe that your reviewers were very anxious not to hurt the producers' feelings.

"As for using your reviews to hammer down prices, that is the silliest 'rot' we ever heard of. Would not an exhibitor be the biggest chump in the world to book a picture that he knows to be rotten even if received as a free gift, charges paid? Say, wouldn't he? As for helping us in booking and advertising our show, this is the answer: We would not try to run a theatre without the help and assistance of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. That goes just like it says. As to how we feel in regard to the NEWS and the rest of the trade papers, here's our answer to that: At one time in our business career we subscribed and paid for the following papers, to wit: [Six papers are here listed.] (That's all we can remember.) Now we subscribe for and read MOTION PICTURE NEWS, that's all."

TONIE ZOELLER, Mgr.
Broadway theatre, Jackson, Ohio.

"Tell the truth in your opinion of pictures, for without the small exhibitors of the country you would not have anybody to sell your periodical to. Show no partiality. Give 'em all 'equality.' I don't think any exhibitors would use the reviews to break contracts, or hammer prices, but it would give them an idea of what to expect. In my opinion nobody could expect every picture issued to be a world beater anyhow."

WM. R. PATTIE
Grand theatre, Frankfort, Ky.
The Pattie Producing Co.

"I think reviews are absolutely necessary for the success of a trade paper."

O. C. HAUBER.
Hauber theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark.

"Permit us to congratulate you on the quality of your publication and your desire to see the exhibitors' rights respected. Every exhibitor has a warm spot for the NEWS."

H. G. SWEET, Pres.
Royal Theatre Co., Royal Center, Ind.

"We find that your magazine is very handy for exhibitors and that your criticisms are very fair. In cities located as this is, where we cannot personally see a screening of shows before we book them, we find that your reviews are of great value to us in making our selections."

THE SCHINE THEATRICAL CO.
New Hippodrome theatre,
Glouversville, N. Y.

"Cut all the advertising. Give us impartial reviews and you can double our subscription rates at once."

E. V. McGRATH.
Knickerbocker Amusement Co.,
Detroit, Mich.

"I use the MOTION PICTURE NEWS principally as a benefit to me in selecting and advertising my program, also that by it I can keep read up on each and all pictures, and a great many other things regarding picture show business, that I would not know otherwise."

J. V. KIRK.
Electric theatre, Windsor, Ill.

"No magazine in the country exemplifies a higher standard of conception and writing ability than yours."

PETER A. ADAMS.
U. S. Photo Play theatre, Paterson, N. J.

"Your attitude regarding reviews has been a great help to the exhibitors, your familiarity with the motion picture industry as a whole is a very valuable asset to the exhibitor."

SAMUEL HARDING, Managing Dir.
Liberty Theatre Company,
Kansas City, Mo.

"Needless to say, reliable reviews alone have value for us. Certainly we cannot take the word of the producer in his advertising, nor of his agent. We can only depend upon our own judgment of pictures, combined with the opinion of those whose business it is to treat the subject fairly and competently.

"It is untrue that unfavorable reviews are used as a means of reducing rentals. By virtue of the same argument, we would be compelled to pay unreasonable prices on the strength of what the producer or sales agent thought was good comment."

FINKELSTEIN & RUBEN.
Minneapolis, Minn.
G. N. Briggs.

"A trade paper without honest reviewing section is of little benefit to the exhibitor in the smaller towns."

H. W. POWELL.
Majestic theatre, Findlay, Ohio.

"Note what you state regarding a prominent producer withdrawing from the columns of the NEWS because of unfavorable reviews.

"Mr. Producer probably thinks he can get along without advertising in the NEWS. Nay, nay! If he could learn the amount of money he is losing by his stubbornness, he, no doubt, would swing around in his swivel chair and take particular care to continue with his advertising in the NEWS."

A. C. H. CHAMBERLAIN.
Madera Opera House,
Madera, Calif.

"I consider your reviewing service of inestimable value to the small exhibitors and consider your reviews as being truthful and reliable. The exhibitors in the small towns need your reviews and regardless of whether a picture is good or bad it should have a review according to its quality."

H. G. RAMSEY, Mgr.
Royal theatre, El Dorado, Kan.

"I want to compliment you on the good review service you give in your paper. I certainly like the NEWS and would not want to keep house without it."

W. H. HARDMAN.
Royal and Regent, Frankfort, Kan.

"We want and need honest reviews, because we cannot believe the distributing company. If we are deceived, in turn we deceive the public. Result: no business."

G. W. BAYS, Mgr.
Royal theatre, Newton, Kan.

"In reply to yours of March 25th will say that the MOTION PICTURE NEWS is the only paper that covers all that a small town exhibitor needs to successfully operate a show."

RAY TULLER, Mgr. and Owner.

Japan to Apply Strict Censorship to Screen

JAPAN is the latest country to put into effect a strict censorship of moving pictures, according to a report received last week by David P. Howells from Horace T. Clarke, his representative in the Orient, who is now in Japan. "Moving pictures in Yokohama," writes Mr. Clarke, "are to be subjected to much closer scrutiny in the future and moving picture theatres will have to make several changes in their seating arrangements to conform to a recent edict of the Kanagawa police authorities.

"The question of censoring the motion picture has been under investigation by the Japanese police for some considerable time and they have reached the conclusion that on account of the great effect which the pictures have upon the Japanese people that it is necessary that a strict censorship be put into effect.

"Likewise on the first of July another radical change is to be put into effect that will change the seating arrangements of every theatre in the city. The police will require that all women be seated in a separate section of the theatre irrespective of whether they are accompanied by male escorts or not. Notice has already been sent to the theatre owners apprising them of this new ruling and ordering them to make the change in their seating arrangements."

Little Em Gorman Has Her Own Company

Little Em Gorman, known in the old Biograph days as "The Child in Ruin," has just played her first ingenue role and heads her own producing company, Chopin Features, Inc., of which J. F. Futterer is president. Her new six-reel film, "The Waif at the Crossroads," is now about ready for release and is the first of a series of eight being written and directed by Paul Price. It is described to be a modern "Silas Marner." Alex Shannon, in the character of the village blacksmith, has given one of his greatest performances, and Tatjana Irrah, Gordon Standing, Joseph Marquis, Frances Eldridge, Emma Tansey, Robert Tansey, George Henry and Alexander Loftus play the important roles in the support.

"Evangeline" Exhibited in Clinton Prison

Following a novel entertainment bill arranged by inmates of Clinton Prison at Dannemora, N. Y., for which Fox Film Corporation furnished the feature—the Longfellow art classic "Evangeline"—N. L. Burdick, as correspondence clerk of the prison, has reported the affair a complete success. Sufficient funds were raised by the entertainment for the support of the prison baseball league.

Under the supervision of Harry M. Kaiser, Warden of Clinton, a splendid program was secured, including selections by the prison band, acrobatic acts, buck and wing dancing, black-face comedy skits, and song and dance specialties.

Albert Parker Directs Norma Talmadge

Albert Parker, who directed Clara Kimball Young in "Eyes of Youth," and several of the Douglas Fairbanks pictures, is now acting as director for Norma Talmadge. The first of Mr. Parker's features with Miss Talmadge is titled "The Branded Woman" from a scenario by Mr. Parker and Miss Anita Loos. The supporting cast, selected by Mr. Parker, includes George Fawcett, Percy Marmont and a number of other well-known players.

Live News From The Producers

L. Hiller Issues Statement Says Numerous Inquiries Have Been Received on "Up in Mary's Attic"

L. L. HILLER, state-right distributor and exclusive sales agent for "Up in Mary's Attic," the Fine Arts Pictures' six-reel comedy feature, states that he has received more bona fide offers from some of the largest state right exchanges in the country on this big production than on any other feature he has ever handled, and says that the offers on this production had been so lively that in some territories which had already been sold, competitors out-bid the price actually paid.

"There is a difference between an inquiry and a genuine offer on a production," says Mr. L. L. Hiller, "and I know that most every one of the various letters that come in from different sections of the country is an offer from exchangers, who are ready to buy distributing rights to their territory. Most of these offers are from showmen who have the reputation of picking box office winners.

"Every live showman recognizes immediately in this production an unsurpassed box office attraction.

The picture contains every element that makes itself felt at the box office. "Up in Mary's Attic" is a picture that exploits itself. Its innumerable angles for publicity create, for the theater hooking it, advertising values that no amount of paid advertising could duplicate. It is something new for the independent buyer, a picture that the state right market will not soon forget.

"Up in Mary's Attic" is a picture that is undoubtedly pre-destined for success. There is very little if any gamble. Every element is there. It is the highest type of comedy. It is more than a comedy. It is more than a drama. It is more than a farce. It is a combination of all these elements so cleverly interwoven as to make an entertainment that holds the interest from beginning to end and leaves its audiences with a "glad" feeling and a happy memory. "Up in Mary's Attic" is for this reason a repeat picture. It is the kind of picture that audiences can see over and over again and not tire of."

To Start "Twin Beds" Soon Extraordinary Interest Reported to Be Shown in De Havens' Picture

MR. and Mrs. Carter De Haven announce from their Los Angeles studios that production will begin shortly on "Twin Beds," the smashing Selwyn comedy hit, to be released through First National Exhibitors Circuit. The news of the beginning of their new production work follows closely upon the completion of negotiations with the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation with whom this pair will be identified henceforth in all their Eastern business interests.

Although negotiations with Selwyn & Co., producers of "Twin Beds," were concluded several weeks ago and news of the acquisition of the film rights by the De Havens was published briefly in the trade journals, the immediate interest that has been manifested in the picturization of the legitimate piece by this skilled pair of stage favorites, is declared by Arthur S. Kane to be very great. Inquiries are reported in great numbers at the new Eastern headquarters of the De Havens from exhibitors in all sections of the country.

The stage play, "Twin Beds," by Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo, has been written into theatrical history. Opening at the Fulton theatre, New York City, in August of 1914, "Twin Beds" achieved instantaneous success as a farce abounding in novel situations of rare comic value. The play was hailed by critics and public as an excruciatingly humorous version of modern life.

"Where Is My Husband" Released in Fall

One of the first of the early fall releases to be made by the Pioneer will be "Where Is My Husband," in which Miss Jose Collins and Godfrey Tearle appear as stars. The story is an adaptation of the very successful play "The Whirlpool," by George Edwardes Hall, who also directed the screen version. The scenes are laid in New York, the West Indies and in a South American Republic.

Oscar Jacobs Firm Has New York Office

The Oscar Jacobs Productions Company announces the opening of their offices at 1600 Broadway for the purpose of selling to independent buyers for world's rights their product now being filmed on the Coast. The company has just completed the third of a series of productions, featuring Joe Moore and Eileen Sedgwick.

New Comptroller for Universal Film

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has announced the appointment of H. L. Ohrt as comptroller of the Universal organization. Mr. Ohrt formerly was associated with the accounting department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. He will take over the work of G. M. Davidson, who recently resigned from the Universal accounting department.

Wanda Hawley Guest at Benefit

Wanda Hawley, Redartist, was the honor guest recently at a society benefit for Mills College, the largest woman's college on the Pacific Coast. Four thousand invitations were issued in Los Angeles for the affair, which was held in the Robert Marsh gardens, one of the showplaces in the Wilshire millionaire's district.

Announce Associated Managers

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Oscar A. Price, president, and F. B. Warren, general manager of Distribution of Associated Producers, Inc., of the managers of the branch office organizations of the big new producing and releasing affiliation of Thomas H. Luce, Mack Sennett, Marshall Neilan, Allen Dwan, George Loane Tucker, Maurice Tourneur and J. Parker Read, Jr.

Associated Producers, Inc., will operate and maintain branches in nineteen cities of the country with branch managers for three additional zones, three managers using the facilities of closely adjacent larger offices. The names of the newly appointed managers and their territories are:

Boston, William H. Jenner; Chicago, Sidney J. Goldman; Cleveland, Hubert A. Bandy; Cincinnati, Hubert A. Bandy and aide; Dallas, John C. Shannon; Denver, H. O. Bartels; Detroit, Edward A. Crane; Kansas City, Benjamin Bloicky; Los Angeles, F. A. Wagner; New Orleans, John C. Shannon and aide; New York, Marx S. Nathan; Newark, John G. Rohls; Philadelphia, Edgar Moss; Pittsburgh, J. J. stein; San Francisco, William A. Crank; Seattle, H. O. Lukan; Spokane, B. W. Copeland; St. Louis, C. D. Hill; Washington, Rudolph Berger. The managers of the Atlanta, Buffalo and Minneapolis offices are still to be named.

The managers named have a long time familiarity with the territories for which they have been named and are drawn from the top and representative film distributing and sales organizations of the motion picture industry. Applications for these important posts came from literally hundreds of men in the employ of the biggest distributing companies and the selections made for Associated Producers represent a careful sifting of men with records for delivering in their respective fields.

Of the territories named, Spokane, with its own manager, will give physical service out of the Seattle office; Newark out of the New York City exchange, New Orleans out of Dallas.

The entire Associated Producers managerial personnel goes on duty in the offices named on Monday, July 5, each manager being in his cities several days ahead of this date. Leases are being signed for branch office quarters in all cities and the new managers will take possession of them August 1 to 15. Meanwhile they are establishing temporary quarters in each city to meet the exhibitors of the territor-

Elmo Lincoln Release Set for July 6th

The many patrons who have seen Elmo Lincoln in serials will now have the opportunity of seeing him in a big Universal-Jewel production which will be released July 6. It is entitled, "Under Crimson Skies." It is described as a story full of gun-play and revolutions in our next door neighbor, Central America, and is an unusual picture of life at sea. Besides Mabel Balin and Harry Van Meter, who give the chief support to Mr. Lincoln, the cast includes Frank Brownlee, Paul Weigel, Dick La Reno and Ethelyn Irving.

Dwan Will Release in Fall

"In the Heart of a Fool" Said to Embody Good Story and Fine Sets

WITH Allan Dwan's "A Splendid Hazard" successfully launched through the First National Exhibitor's Circuit, the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation is now making arrangements for the presentation of "In the Heart of a Fool," Dwan's next big independent production scheduled for release through First National in the early fall. This production brings the total of Allan Dwan subjects presented by Mayflower to four, the others being "Soldiers of Fortune," "The Luck of the Irish" and "A Splendid Hazard."

According to a statement from Benjamin A. Prager, president of Mayflower, "In the Heart of a Fool" marks a radical departure in theme and treatment from the preceding Dwan productions. The story is based on the novel by William Allen White, former governor of Kansas, and proprietor of the Emporia Gazette.

Unlike the thrilling adventure stories with which Dwan's name has been associated in the past, "In the Heart of a Fool" is essentially a heart picture. Into the story are woven, three separate romances culminating in one of the most striking dramatic climaxes ever filmed, it is stated. The title is derived from the activities of one of the main characters, Tom Van Dorn, a debased libertine who de-bauches everything pure and noble in the relationship of man and woman and whose heart holds the blasphemous conviction that "There is no God."

Aside from the dramatic power of the story, the picture is noteworthy for its scenic investitures. Dwan's fine artistic perception is strongly evidenced in the many beautiful and lavishly mounted interior settings that provide a delectable feast for the eye and bespeak of an utter disregard of expense. The exterior scenes set in a woodland are idyllic in their beauty and provide some of the most attractive "shots" ever recorded by the camera, says the Mayflower president.

The principal feminine role is played by Mary Thurman. James Kirkwood is cast as Grant Adams whose life is blasted when he succumbs to the lure of a professional siren played with skill by Anna Q. Nilsson.

Lloyd's Next Is Titled "High and Dizzy"

Hal E. Roach has changed the name of Harold Lloyd's next two-reel comedy special from "High and Dry" to "High and Dizzy." Pathe will release the first of the new series of specials on July 11.

Emerson and Wife Off on Mission Abroad

Following a series of cabled negotiations, John Emerson, the new president of the Actors Equity Association, has set sail for France, accompanied by his wife, Anita Loos. Mr. Emerson refused to discuss his mission except to say that it had for its purpose a closer consolidation between the English Actors Association and a similar organization in Paris, and a study of the methods of these organizations. He will make the trip as speedily as possible and expects to be in New York again in about a month or six weeks.

Miss Loos (Mrs. Emerson), one of the best known of motion-picture authors, plans to investigate motion picture methods in European studios and to secure story material while on the trip. A third member of the party will be James A. Creelman, who heads Mr. Emerson's scenario department.

Commissioners Manage Universal Exchange

Organization management by commission, inaugurated early this spring in Universal City, Cal., and later adopted in the New York home-office of Universal, is being spread to the larger branch exchanges of the big film company. Chicago is the first exchange to be placed under the new type of management. The three commissioners are Louis Baum, district manager of the Middle West territory for Universal; Louis Laemmle, and I. L. Leserman, formerly the sole manager of the Chicago Exchange.

New Service Given by Chandlee and Laub

Harry Chandlee and William B. Laub, specialists in editing and the writing of sub-titles, are inaugurating a new service to producers without any charge for their time, largely in the interest of better pictures. They have set aside Monday afternoon of each week for the review of pictures, limiting each producer to one five-reel feature, for which they will offer suggestions embodying their own special technique of editing and titling.

Rothacker Has Prizma Rights

A DEAL whereby the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co. has the exclusive rights to the use of Prizma natural-color films in educational and industrial pictures, is announced by Waterson R. Rothacker. The introduction of natural colors into education and industrial pictures marks a milestone in the development in that field. To begin with, at least, no educational or industrial film will be entirely Prizma. Rather the natural-color film will be employed for the high spots, for the climaxes as it were.

For instance, in the production of a mining educational picture for use in schools and colleges. The larger part of this picture would be toned and tinted or black-and-white, but when the ore, containing the precious specks of yellow, is taken from the ground Prizma could be employed in order that the students might derive a true conception of the metal as it comes from nature's treasure chest. Then in the great smelting scenes Prizma could depict the furnaces in all their fiery splendor. In botanical pictures and animal studies, which the Rothacker Company from time to time is called upon to make, Prizma will be especially valuable.

Douglas D. Rothacker in accordance with plans already discussed and determined upon will in the near future undertake an extensive tour of the various industrial branch offices of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company. It is the aim of the Rothacker officials in inaugurating this trip on the part of Douglas D. Rothacker to acquaint the personnel of the various subsidiary branches of the big manufacturing company, whose headquarters is situated in Chicago, with the newly acquired Prizma product and to lay out the details of a campaign to be undertaken in behalf of the Prizma pictures.

The Rothacker Manufacturing Company secured the practical rights to Prizma only a fortnight ago, but a survey of the ground,

Will Use Natural Color in High Spots of Industrial Pictures

following the acquisition of these rights during the last two weeks, have led the Rothacker officials to the opinion that Prizma is due to exert a powerful influence in spreading the gospel of the efficiency and superiority of the American-made product. "It is already apparent," says the statement from the Rothacker headquarters, "that Prizma will be a vital factor in the fight that American manufacturers are putting up for Uncle Sam's share of the world trade."

The Rothacker company is official cinematographer of the Trade Expositions which United States manufacturers are to hold next year in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro. On the Exposition grounds there will be movie theatres in which American manufacturers may display films depicting the great industries of the United States. In view of the Latin temperament, which delights in brilliancy, Prizma scenes displaying finished American products in their natural colors will be especially effective below the equator.

From Poem, to Play, to Film

"The World and His Wife" Is Set for Release on July 25, Is Report

THE evolution of a dramatic verse, through the channels of playdom to its most complete form of expression, the screen, is marked in the Cosmopolitan Production, "The World and His Wife," which is scheduled for general release by Paramount July 25th.

Jose Echegaray, the illustrious Spanish poet, wrote the verse; Charles Frederic Nirdlinger did the play; and Frances Marion is responsible for the picture scenario—a trio of famous writers, each adding to and giving of himself to the other's work in their efforts to achieve perfection. Robert G. Fignala, one of the best known directors of the screen, directed the production.

"Great as was the success of both the verse and the play," says the Cosmopolitan Production Company, "the screen version is destined to enjoy an even greater popularity if the care with which the production has been made—from the standpoint of cast selection, settings, exteriors, properties and technical handling—is a criterion."

With Alma Rubens, who achieved such success in Cosmopolitan Production, "Humoresque," as the featured player, the cast is of the all-star variety, containing such eminent artists as Montagu Love, Pedro de Cordova, Charles Gerard, Gaston Glass, who also appears in "Humoresque," Byron Russell, Margaret Dale, Mrs. Allan Walker, Ray Allen, James Savold, Peter Barbier, Leon Gendron and Vincent R. Macchia.

The sets were all built from original drawings of actual places in Spain, where most of the action takes place, and the greatest care was taken to have the reproductions exact. Many of the exteriors were photographed in Florida.

"The World and His Wife" is described as one of the most lavish productions ever put on the screen. Many of the settings were designed by Joseph Urban. One rare old tapestry that is used in a scene is valued at many thousands of dollars. It is said to be over a hundred years old and was loaned personally to Cosmopolitan Productions by a New York collector. Old Spanish furniture, dating back to the sixteenth century, rare rugs, curtains and lamps lend unusual atmosphere to the scenes.

Allan Dwan's Next, Is Nearing Completion

Actual filming of Allan Dwan's sixth independent production to be presented by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation through First National is rapidly nearing completion. The working title is "Twisted Thoughts." The Dwan company has just returned from the mountains of Southern California, where the last of the exterior scenes was filmed. In "shooting" difficult mountain locations, invaluable aid was given the company by government forest rangers and Joseph Elliot, reputed to be the largest landholder in the California mountains. It is expected that final camera-work on the subject will be completed within the ensuing week.

Mayflower Has Engaged Louis F. Gottschalk

Recognizing the important part "played" by music in the successful presentation of motion pictures, Allan Dwan arranged for Louis F. Gottschalk to prepare the music score for "A Splendid Hazard," Dwan's first production to be presented through First National by Mayflower. Gottschalk is regarded as one of the highest-paid composers devoting his talents to synchronizing music to motion pictures. His engagement by Mayflower in connection with the Dwan production is directly in line with that organization's policy of sparing no expense in assisting exhibitors to present these independent productions properly, says the Mayflower Corporation.

Vignola Engages Miss Claire Whitney

Claire Whitney, star in "The Innocent Idea," a play now running at the Fulton Theatre, New York, has been engaged by director Robert G. Vignola for the role of "Esther Canter" in "The Passionate Pilgrim," the Samuel Merwin story which he is now directing for Cosmopolitan Productions at the International studios on Second avenue and 127th street, New York. Last season Miss Whitney had a prominent part in "The Net," a play that ran for many weeks at a Broadway theatre.

Robert C. Bruce on a Motor Jaunt Abroad

Robert C. Bruce, creator of "Scenes Beautiful," has left London for his motor jaunts through England and Scotland, according to advices received by Educational Films Corporation. After making a number of pictures in those countries and in Wales, Mr. Bruce will go to the Continent. In Scotland he will have an opportunity which probably has never fallen to the lot of another scenic artist—that of picturing the haunts of a national hero whose name he bears. Of course, reference is made to Robert Bruce, famed in song and history.

Levey Opens Remodeling Department

A "re-modelling department" has been opened by Harry Levey, general manager of the Industrial and Educational Department of the Universal Film Company. In this department, old industrial and educational films will be cut, have new captions written for them, new scenes interpolated, and be re-assembled and brought up to date generally, Mr. Levey announces.

What Makes For Stardom?

Realart Submits Question to Jury of Notable Persons for Opinions

Scene at "Romona's Home," San Diego Cal., where Wanda Hawley is taking scenes for her second Realart picture

REALART Pictures Corporation announces that it has submitted the question, "What constitutes motion-picture stardom?" to a jury of twelve persons well-known in the artistic and professional fields. This was done, says Realart, to determine the selection of the company's sixth star. The names of these judges as submitted by the Realart Corporation are as follows:

"Hugo Riesenfeld, composer, conductor and manager of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres,

New York City; Madam Frances, America's youngest and considered its greatest creator of gowns and fashion; Charles Hanson Towne, distinguished poet and editor of McClure's magazine; Harrison Rhodes, essayist, novelist and short story writer for the Saturday Evening Post; Robert W. Chambers, America's foremost novelist; Penrhyn Stanlaws, artist, whose portrayal of beautiful women for magazine covers is famous the world over; Cosmo Hamilton, playwright and author of international fame; Paul Chalfin, architect and connoisseur; F. Lynn Jenkins, renowned English sculptor; Arnold Genthe, artist photographer; Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair, considered one of the country's best judges of beautiful women; E. R. Thomas, president, The Morning Telegraph Company.

"Although all twelve agreed," says the Realart report, "that beauty, intelligence and personality were the primary requisites, the interpretation which each one put upon these qualities varied so greatly it was considered remarkable that they were able to reach a unanimous verdict.

"A number of candidates who in the opinion of Realart officials were exceptionally qualified for stardom, were submitted to the jury with the request that an agreement be reached on one or that all be rejected in case it was found that none was ideally equipped. After a short deliberation, a verdict was reached and this is to be announced next week by Realart."

"Bonnie May" Is Completed

Bessie Love's Second Independent Starring Vehicle Has Good Cast

BESSIE LOVE has just completed in Los Angeles the production of "Bonnie May" the second of her new, specially produced photoplays for the Andrew J. Callaghan Pictures Corporation. The film has been adapted to the screen from the popular novel of theatrical life by Louis Dodge and carries out the advertised policy of Andrew J. Callaghan, head of the western concern to feature this young actress in well known novels and plays.

Supporting Miss Love in her latest Callaghan offering is a distinguished cast of picture players, foremost among them being Charles Gordon, the well-known English leading man, who has recently transferred his film activities to this country. Mr. Gordon plays opposite the star and is declared to have created a distinctive and appealing role as his first important contribution to motion pictures in America. As a leading man Mr. Gordon has to his credit a long and varied list of cinema achievements abroad.

Joseph de Grasse, who collaborated with Ida May Park in the direction of Miss Love's initial Callaghan photoplay, "The Midlanders" has repeated his first success in directing "Bonnie May" according to reports from the Bessie Love studios. Mr. de Grasse is now directing the cutting and titling of the film, and upon its completion will be in a position to add another high standard photoplay adaptation to the other quality contributions which have earned for him a serious and intelligent position among leaders of this art.

The producer, Andrew J. Callaghan, in announcing the news of the completion of his second Bessie Love, photoplay laid considerable stress on the fact that its theme was so close to contemporary American life, and as such contained not only a powerful appeal from the entertainment and story angle, but likewise from the point of view of exploitation was abundant in advertising elements.

Play Is Purchased for Norma Talmadge

"The Sign On the Door," by Channing Pollock, in which Marjorie Rambeau is now appearing at the Republic Theatre, has been sold to Norma Talmadge.

Big Houses Are Booking "The Deep Purple"

Following its successful run at the Capitol theatre, New York, R. A. Walsh's initial independent production, "The Deep Purple," presented by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation through Realart, has been booked for runs extending from one to two weeks by many of the largest houses in the country, it is stated. Sales reports together with the large volume of advance bookings already received by John W. McKay, General Manager of Mayflower, indicate that Walsh's debut as an independent producer will, from a financial standpoint, prove a decidedly auspicious one.

Among the advance bookings that show the calibre of the theatres, seeking the Walsh production, are the Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio; the Grand, Cincinnati; the Temple, Toledo, Ohio; the Doric, Kansas City, Mo., and the Rialto, Washington, D. C.

Censors Change Title of "Sex" Feature

The Hodgkinson Corporation has just been informed that the Board of Censorship in Pennsylvania has changed the title of J. Parker Reed's production of "Sex." They are reported to have requested several changes in the film, and also that the title be changed to "Sex Crushed to Earth."

In New Jersey, at Bloomfield, the local Board of Censorship has asked for a private showing of "Sex" before it can be shown in Bloomfield, and this is being arranged by the Hodgkinson representative, George Fowler, of Newark.

Universal-Holubar Controversy Settled

CERTAIN disputes arose some time ago between the Universal Film Manufacturing Company on the one side, and Allen J. Holubar and Dorothy Phillips on the other side, as to the performance of the obligations of the parties under certain agreements previously executed between them, and as to the rights and certain options of the respective parties under the terms of these agreements.

These disputes have been settled, and an amicable disposition of the contentions of the respective parties has been accomplished, it is stated.

Harry C. Balance Has Been Promoted

Harry G. Balance, who for two years has served as manager of the Los Angeles branch of Famous Players-Lasky, has been promoted to the position of special representative of the New England territory, embracing three big exchanges. He leaves for the East shortly to spend two weeks at the New York office before taking up the new position. Mr. Balance has been engaged as exchange manager in the West for a number of years. Previous to his present position he served as manager for Metro in Los Angeles after conducting independent exchanges at Denver and Seattle.

Dorothy Orth Engaged by Christie Staff

A new beauty has been added to the forces making Christie Comedies for release through Educational Exchanges. Miss Dorothy Orth is the young lady who has just started work at the Los Angeles studios, leaving a prominent part in the Nora Bayes company. Miss Orth attracted much newspaper attention with the expression of her demand to "danth inethanantly." She is like to get the opportunity as one of the Follies Girls.

Al Lichtman Issues Statement

THE recent announcement of production and distribution plans of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has struck a responsive chord among Paramount exhibitors everywhere, according to Al Lichtman, general manager of the department of distribution, who states that more than two hundred telegrams of approval from representative theatre owners and managers have been received.

"Many of these telegrams were received by me in Cleveland during the exhibitors' meetings and indicate that their senders believe firmly in the Famous Players-Lasky policy and are looking forward to the coming year and succeeding years with optimism and with confidence in our organization."

"Without a single exception, these messages voiced the keenest satisfaction with and praise of the productions and service furnished by Paramount and a desire and purpose to continue and in most cases to broaden their business relations with our organization. These exhibitors plainly recognize that we are in a position to furnish them an ample supply of the best pictures that unlimited artistic and financial resources can provide. They are getting what they want and they are making money with what they are getting. Consequently they are both contented and prosperous."

"This feeling of satisfaction is characteristically reflected in a message from R. E. Hicks, of the Cabrillo theatre, San Diego, Cal., who wired: 'It is with great pleasure that I have perused Paramount's list of releases for the coming year—a list which is the equal or better than that of last year which enabled me to play forty-five weeks of high class material with you. This means another year of prosperity for me and I trust many more years of the pleasant relations with your company."

"Andrew Karzas, of the Woodlawn theatre, Chicago, wired: 'After looking over the list of productions for the coming year and the announced policy for bookings, I feel that the success of exhibitors who play these pictures will exceed all expectations. Congratulations and best wishes for continued success.'"

"Ed C. Paul, of the Fairbanks theatre, Springfield, O., registers his satisfaction as follows: 'Just received Motion Picture News. Congratulations on September, October and November releases. Have used all Paramount and Arcraft pictures with few exceptions and Cincinnati manager advises we will be able to do business with you this year as in the past. Best wishes.'"

"You have a wonderful lineup for next year. Wish you and Paramount success," wired Louis Marcus, of the Majestic theatre, Council Bluffs, Ia.

"Decidedly to the point is the following from Peterman & Klein, of the Palace theatre, Ardmore, Pa.: 'Your productions have shown, through box-office receipts, that the independent exhibitor makes no mistake in tying up with Paramount.'"

"Louis R. Greenfield, of Kahn & Greenfield, San Francisco and Santa Cruz, Cal., wired at considerable length, and I will quote only a part of his telegram: 'It is product such as yours that has caused exhibitors to build bigger and better theatres each year. In laying the foundation stones of the New Mission, New Fillmore, Realart and Progress theatres, San Francisco, and New Santa Cruz theatre, Santa Cruz, we were encouraged by the fact that we would receive the support of this company. Their present policy of entering in a slight degree the exhibition field we believe is justified and it is not their intention to put any exhibitor out of business.'"

"We have seen the list of releases for the coming year and we believe that the product which this company will release will be even bigger and better than in the past."

"I could go on indefinitely, quoting messages such as these. Here they are, more than two hundred of them, and every one voicing satisfaction and reflecting prosperity. Moreover, they serve still further to strengthen our own confidence in the wisdom and stability of our policies of production, distribution and exploitation."

Special Celebrates Anniversary

ON the twenty-eighth of June the Special Picture Corporation will celebrate its third "birthday," not the third year of its existence, but the third month, and in that time the baby organization has grown from the germ of an idea in the minds of four enterprising members of the film industry to a goodly sized corporation with four releases a week, and more to come later.

The Special Pictures Corporation was formed about March 28 with Louis W. Thompson, former special representative of Mary Pickford, as president; H. J. Roberts, general sales manager; Earl D. Shanks, business manager, and Ward Lascelle, director general of production. It was financed by the Aronson and Hellman interests representing the largest bankers of the West.

Starting with one release a week, termed "Comedyart," which was made up of a 1,400-foot comedy, a 400-foot scenic and a 200-foot novelty, the Special Pictures Corporation will by July have four distinct short reel offerings each week. According to Sales Manager Roberts, more prints are made of each week's "Comedyart" release than any other short reel subjects.

Negotiations were recently concluded for the Sunset-Burrod scenics made and released in combination with Special Pictures. An expedition is being sent to Alaska via the Inside Passage to film picturesque bits of scenery never caught by the camera before, all presented to the public in the form of a scenic serial. Wallace Irwin and Stewart Edward White, the two well known writers, will accompany the expedition.

The third release will be an Animated Mud Cartoon, presented in a new and distinctive manner. The reel will be entirely different from anything previously shown along this line, and original scenarios for real characters in mud will be prepared before the cameraman and the putty sculptor starts his work. These are being specially made for Special Pictures by Jack Dawn and his organization.

A fourth release, which for the present is being kept secret, will be announced within two weeks, according to President Thompson. The Special Pictures has practically taken entire possession of the Balboa studios at Long Beach, and have four comedies there under the direction of Ward Lascelle producing four comedies each month or one a week for their part in the "Comedyart" release.

In addition to the Alaskan trip Special Pictures has sent a cameraman to Norway and Sweden to secure scenes of the twin lands of the midnight sun.

Under the direction of Sales Manager Roberts, an exceptionally efficient exchange organization has been built up all over the country, while a general exploitation bureau has been organized in Los Angeles to furnish exhibitor aids in putting over the products of Special Pictures.

Good Cast for Miss Daniels

Star's Initial Attempt for Real-art Marked by Excellent Support

THE following statement has been issued by the Realart Corporation regarding the principal members of the cast selected to support Bebe Daniels in her initial starring vehicle under the Realart banner, "You Never Can Tell." The production is now under way at the Hollywood studios under the direction of Chester Franklin.

"Realart's policy of surrounding its stars with casts of consistent and balanced excellence and providing its productions with perfectly appointed settings is to be demonstrated emphatically in 'You Never Can Tell,' the initial starring vehicle for Bebe Daniels.

"Jack Mulhall has been chosen as the first leading man for 'The Good Little Bad Girl,' a name given Miss Daniels to fit a style of role she will interpret as a Realartist. He is an actor of much experience, having played as leading man for many of the country's screen stars and as a featured player in a number of special productions.

"Harold Goodwin has also been assigned to an important role. He comes to the Bebe Daniels' company from a part in the production which Mary Miles Minter has completed recently for Realart at the Hollywood studios.

"For a character 'sport' type Nelly Edwards has been obtained. Edward Martindale and Leo White, both well known players, have also been cast in the production. Mr. Martindale came to motion pictures after prolonged success on Broadway in middle-aged roles. He was under contract to the Frohman's for many years in many of their productions. Leo White is widely known for his French and 'wop' characterizations, particularly as the amorous barber in 'Mrs. Temple's Telegram.'"

Editing "Trumpet Island"

Despite Call for Prints at Once
Its Release Is Set for September

ALTHOUGH "Trumpet Island," the next big special production, will not be released until September, Vitagraph reports extraordinary interest and eagerness among exhibitors throughout the United States and Canada. Inquiries from exhibitors have caused several of the Vitagraph exchange managers to wire the executive offices for early prints of the special, but the same care which characterized the production of the picture is being given it by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester in their final editing, says Vitagraph. Mr. and Mrs. Chester wrote the scenario on this feature, and announce that it will still be a couple of weeks before the final picture will be seen by Vitagraph's managers. About one-half of Vitagraph's key-city men have taken trips to New York to see the film, even before its final editing, and representatives from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland and Salt Lake City saw the film in Hollywood, before the final Eastern scenes were taken. All have pronounced it the best Vitagraph film to date, and predict that it will be the big feature of the year.

"Even better than 'The Courage of Marge O'Doone,' has been the verdict. The latter picture was the first of the Vitagraph specials to be released, and was greeted with praise wherever it was shown.

Cameraman Describes Trip

Letter from Martin Johnson Tells About His Experiences in Borneo

MARTIN JOHNSON'S present trip into the wilds of Borneo is his most successful expedition, according to a letter just received by Roderick Ross of Chicago and written by the noted explorer and camera man at Sandakan, British North Borneo, May 10th.

In the letter Mr. Johnson says in part:

"We are getting our equipment in shape to start up the Kinetabangan River, one of the largest rivers in Borneo, a trip that I am confident will be the biggest thing we have ever done.

"We leave in a few days with twenty police boys, and a white officer, twenty coolies and a number of camp boys. We do the first hundred and forty miles in a steam launch, then we take to canoes and travel for fourteen days in canoes. Then we will have a walk of about five days, when we will come into the country of the most primitive people in Borneo, who use blow guns, and who are living in such an out of the way place that they have only been visited once—by a government party several years ago.

"We pass through the best animal country in Borneo and I am expecting some great material for the movies.

"About a week ago we caught a crocodile alive, measuring twelve feet seven inches. We have caught a wild cat, several monkeys and many birds and reptiles, and I have photographed hundreds of wild monkeys in the trees, and have a fine pet orang-outang."

Mr. Johnson also says that he knows that his new film, "Wild

Mrs. Martin Johnson and her pet orang snapped by Martin Johnson at Borneo

Men of Makekula," is going to be enjoyed more than anything he has ever turned out.

Word also has reached Chicago to the effect that an Universal Camera, which he took into the wilds with him on a previous trip, is still in service and getting splendid results and that a new Universal supplied to him by Burke & James with the latest built-in dissolve, is producing wonderful pictures despite adverse conditions of work in the tropics.

Screen "Inside of the Cup"

Cosmopolitan Executives Witness
Showing and Express Satisfaction

THE latest Cosmopolitan Production to be finished is "The Inside of the Cup," a picturization of Winston Churchill's famous novel of the same name. The first showing of this picture, for the benefit of the officials of the company, took place last week. It was most enthusiastically received, the opinion being general that "The Inside of the Cup" is as strong in its appeal as Cosmopolitan's wonderfully successful "Humoresque" now enjoying a sensational pre-release New York run.

The picture was directed by Albert Capellani, who has utilized to the fullest extent the splendid material provided in the famous novel.

The theme of the story—that practical Christianity, belief in the brotherhood of man and the practice of that belief, will remedy the ills of modern civilization—is even more topical today than it was when Winston Churchill wrote the book.

"One does not have to turn to hysterical methods to straighten out the tangle in which the world admittedly finds itself today," said Mr. Capellani, in talking of the picture he directed. "The remedy is found in this production—a remedy whose effectiveness is even now beginning to make itself felt throughout the world.

"And this all-embracing theme," continued Mr. Capellani, "is developed in a tensely dramatic story. Never have I seen five characters, so big and at once so human woven into a single story. The character of Eldon Parr, the dominating financier, who ruins the lives of his son and his daughter in his blundering, stubborn way, is one of the strongest in fiction. No less interesting are the careers of Elison Parr, the daughter, and Preston Parr, the son. Kate Marcey, the girl whom the son loves is the most human of heroines. John Hodder, the young minister, who is first aligned on Parr's side till the tremendous awakening comes, is as virile a man as can be imagined. In short, every one of the characters is a real person whom all will understand, and I look upon this production as the great achievement of my many years as a producer for the screen."

Simplex Notes

Among the Simplex Distributors that are going along on "high" as far as the Michigan sales is concerned, is the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Company, 63 East Elizabeth Street, Detroit, Mich. Mr. Bert Weddige, the head of this enterprising theatre supply house, is surely planting the Simplex Standard throughout the automobile stage, judging from the reports received at the Simplex factory.

Among the recent Simplex installations in the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Company's territory, are the following: St. Stanislaus Church, Detroit, Mich.; St. Albertus Church, Detroit, Mich.; Linwood Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; Family Theatre, Jackson, Mich.; Rex Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; Kramer Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; White Eagle Theatre, Flint, Mich.; Koberger Furniture Co., Flint, Mich.; Orpheum Theatre, Lansing, Mich.; Gargen Theatre, Lansing, Mich.; Majestic Theatre, Jackson, Mich.; J. L. Hudson Co., Detroit, Mich.; Delphine Theatre, Vassar, Mich.; Lyric Theatre, St. Charles, Mich.; D. & G. Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; Fitzpatrick & McElroy, St. Joseph, Mich.; Mr. White, Detroit, Mich.; Dr. H. N. Torrey, Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich.; Medbury Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, Mich.; Star Theatre, Flint, Mich.; Ludwick Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; Warfield Theatre, Detroit, Mich.; Martha Washington Theatre, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Rev. Francis Gzella, Detroit, Mich.

The five-story factory building at 327-329 East 34th Street, New York City, belonging to the Simplex factory group, and which was destroyed by fire on January 31st last, is again quite ready for occupancy, according to Mr. E. M. Porter, General Manager of the Precision Machine Company.

"The trade will remember," says Mr. Porter, "the many wild rumors that were sent in action all over the country concerning our manufacturing conditions immediately following the fire, which destroyed only one building, the loss of which could not possibly put us out of business, as our main factory is located in the twelve-story building. The fire did, however, slow us down somewhat, which was quite natural.

We are pleased to announce that the roof and new floors in the burned building is now completed, and within another week some of the departments that were temporarily housed in the main factory building will again occupy their former locations in the new building. The new building plans afforded us an opportunity of embracing new ideas for introducing systems that could not have been worked out in this building previous to the fire. We will now be enabled to transfer our Shipping Department from its present location on the twelfth floor to the ground floor of the new structure, allowing us to entirely re-design our offices and executive departments, which will, when complete, occupy the entire top floor of our main factory building."

"Skirts" Chosen as Sunshine

AFTER failing to find a satisfactory title for its new Sunshine six-reel comedy in the thousands of suggestions reported to have been submitted by exhibitors, the heads of the several Fox departments were called upon to give their ideas, and from the various titles recommended that of "Skirts" was finally selected. The Fox Film Corporation has the following to say about its new Sunshine release.

"'Skirts' is a comedy spectacle,—something entirely novel and original, with an appeal that will reach alike men, women and children. Everybody will find what they like, and lots of it in 'Skirts.'"

"This picture was presented as a screen revue. That is, it combines comedy and spectacle, beauty and girls, dancing and thrills, and all those features—and many more—that make revues the most popular form of entertainment at present on the speaking stage.

"There never was a revue, however, that contained so much entertainment as 'Skirts,' or had anything like the number of persons in it, or one-twentieth part of the features that make this motion picture comedy spectacle—according to the producer's assurance. All the most celebrated revues that go around the country charging double prices, and sometimes more, for seats wouldn't make an episode in 'Skirts.' They wouldn't be big enough.

"Hampton Del Ruth wrote and directed 'Skirts.' It took a little more than five months to make the picture, and then two months were devoted by Mr. Del Ruth and his staff of experts to the polishing and finishing process.

"Three thousand persons appear in the comedy spectacle. These include seventy-five famous Sunshine Widows and one thousand comedy girls. The girls in 'Skirts' supply one of the big features. Never, it is asserted, were so many beautiful young women seen at one time and in one place as are shown in this picture.

"Many of the girls who appear in 'Skirts' are socially prominent, not only on the Pacific coast, but elsewhere. Also, a number of young women from the East who were visiting in California went into 'Skirts' as a lark. Perhaps those who see the picture may recognize an acquaintance.

"How the girls were chosen by Mr. Del Ruth, and the process of selection and elimination, make another story.

"And the costumes they wear! Nothing so costly and rich has ever before been employed in a photograph. There are ball and dinner gowns, dancing frocks, bathing suits and other varieties of feminine adornment all of a kind to make women and men sit up and take notice. This display of girls and costumes alone would provide an unusual entertainment but it forms only a part of 'Skirts.'"

"A highly amusing story is capably acted by the entire comedy organization at the Fox Hollywood studio. Among the funmakers are Chester Conklin, Jack Cooper, Harry Booker, Alta Allen, Laura La Vame, Ethel Teare, Alice Davenport, Glen Cavender, Bobbie Dunn, Ed Kennedy, Dorothy Lee, Dave Morris, Jim Donnelly and Harry Gribbon. All these artists are popular with the public.

"Also there are the famous Singer Midgents. William Fox engaged this entire company of gifted little folk to participate in 'Skirts.' There are nineteen of them. They introduce their clever antics and many novelties, and use their entire managerial in their share of the performance. All the Midgents' elephants and dogs and ponies and lions and deer and monkeys contribute liberally to the comedy as well as to the spectacular element of 'Skirts.'"

"As to thrills, there are tense scenes that hold spectators breathless. There is a daring rescue of a girl from a runaway horse by a naval officer in a motor car. There is a rescue from the top of a speeding railway train by a hero in an airship, and a parachute drop from an airship into the water to save lives of people on a train that has plunged through a burning bridge. And other scenes are scarcely less exciting."

Enlarging Film City Studios

EXPANSION of the leasing department of Universal Film Manufacturing Company's Pacific coast studios at Universal City, California, has made necessary a number of additions in order to accommodate the leasing producers and the fourteen companies of the Universal working at the big plant, according to Sigmund Moos, manager of the leasing department at Universal City. The improvements include additional enclosed stages, offices, dressing rooms, projecting rooms and cutting rooms.

"In the last twelve months sixteen of the leading west coast producing firms have taken advantage of facilities offered by Universal City. Mr. Moos told a News representative this week. This list includes Famous Players Lasky, Goldwyn, Vitaphone, Metro, Robert Brunton, Brentwood, Katherine MacDonald, Jesse D. Hampton, Hayworth, Christie, Fox, Ben Wilson, McCarthy, Numa, B. B. Hampton and producing units of other companies."

At the present time leasing companies working at Universal City include Maurice Tourneur productions which has a separate studio and have entered into a long term contract to make subjects with two companies at this plant; Kosmic Film Company; A-scher Enterprises, Inc.; Mack Swaine Comedies; James Oliver McLeod Productions; Hyams-McIntyre Productions and others."

"Universal City offers many opportunities to producers that make production at this plant more economical than at an individual studio for the reason that a number of permanent sets are maintained which include those representing New York, Western, Spanish, Japanese, Canadian, Mexican, Moorish, Turkish and colonial streets. Then Universal City has a small lake, canyons surrounded by big pine trees with a background of high mountains; a big zoo is maintained and leasing producers have the use of a mammoth theatre recently constructed at the cost of $30,000 and hundreds of other settings that can be erected at a moment's notice."

"The Universal company are paying particular attention to leasing space to producers, according to Manager Sigmund Moos of the leasing department at Universal City and they plan to expand this department during the next few months."

Salisbury Company Starts

New Producing Unit Is Now Well-Organized; Good Array of Talent

FULL details were given out on the West Coast this last week concerning the organization that is backing Monroe Salisbury, the former Universal star, in his first independently produced feature, "The Barbarian." The company is known as the Monroe Salisbury Players, and is capitalized at $150,000, with all the stock paid for in cash. There has been no promotion stock, and no salaries are permitted to be paid to the officials.

S. I. Monarch is president; Monroe Salisbury, vice-president; Harrison Post, second vice-president; Eugene Butler, treasurer; Jack Cudahy, assistant treasurer; and other incorporators are Mrs. Jack Cudahy, Alexander M. Silver, and Mrs. John Cudahy of Chicago.

Mr. Monarch, Mr. Butler and Mr. Silver are Los Angeles capitalists; Mr. Post is a brother of Guy Bates Post, and a ward of W. A. Clark, jr., well known millionaire, while Mrs. John Cudahy owns a $13,000,000 ranch in Imperial Valley, California.

It will be the policy of the organization to feature the Monroe Salisbury Players, rather than any one star or stars. Those who have joined the organization so far are Jane Novak, Alan Hale, Lillian Leighton, Eleanor Hancock, Barney Sherry, Guy Milham, Larry Steers, Sydney Dean, Milton Markwell, Harrison Post and Marcelle Daly.

In addition Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cudahy are permitting their children, Miss Ann and Master Michael, to appear in the pictures. The company is now on location at Castle Lake, in northern California, a road having been built from Sonoma to Castle Lake by the residents in order that it might be used as the exterior locals for the big punch scenes of "The Barbarian."

Donald Crisp is directing. The story was written by Theodore Solomons, the well-known magazine writer. Two cameras are used, one for black and white, the other securing a negative for color purposes.

Diggs is Made Manager

Will Take Charge of Advertising for Hallmark Pictures Corporation

Harry P. Diggs, advertising manager of Hallmark Pictures Corporation

HARRY P. DIGGS, for the past three years, handling special exploitation for Frank G. Hall, president of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, has been made advertising manager to succeed Hopp Hadley, recently promoted to production manager of Hallmark Pictures. Mr. Diggs takes office immediately assuming all the duties in connection with the advertising of Hallmark Productions and a series of 52 recreated Triangle productions. One of Mr.

Diggs' first duties in assuming the responsibility as advertising manager for Hallmark is writing copy for a 14-page insert for the motion picture trade papers.

Mr. Diggs' association with the motion picture industry has included the handling of executive and creative work in connection with nearly every one of its phases. Prior to his connection with Frank G. Hall he was a prominent theatre manager, operating some of the biggest and best houses throughout the South, his activities in this capacity being confined in a greater degree to the State of Georgia. Before his entry into the motion picture business, Mr. Diggs was prominently connected with the speaking stage, acting in the capacity of advance-man and manager of many of the prominent road shows which played through the southern states. He also acted in the capacity of manager and promoter of a number of champion wrestling bouts.

Mr. Diggs' duties in his new office as advertising manager for Frank G. Hall will include the writing of all copies in connection with Hallmark releases. Joseph L. Kelley will handle the daily, trade and fan-paper publicity, holding the office of director of publicity.

Marie Shaffer Is Cast in Metro Special

Miss Marie Shaffer is playing "Lady Margaret" in the "Metro Special," "Marriages of Mayfair," a Drury Lane production by Cecil Raleigh. George Terwilliger is the director.

"La La Lucille" Completed

Now in Editing Stage; Strong Cast Engaged to Support Lyons and Moran

UNIVERSAL reports the completion of Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran's second comedy feature, "La La Lucille." After the first cut the film was viewed by Isadore Bernstein and a number of invited newspaper critics, and although it was in nine reels it is said to have kept the "hard boiled" audience laughing, continually. When it is edited down to 5,000 feet and supplied with the completed art titles, the opinion is that it will firmly establish Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran among the most important of the comedy stars.

"La La Lucille" is from the pen of Fred Jackson, author of "A Full House," "The Naughty Wife," "The Velvet Lady," and other stage successes. Philip Hurn made the screen adaptation of the farce, planning a comedy of rapid fire action, containing twice the number of scenes to be found in the usual five reeler.

Lyons and Moran engaged a strong company to support them in "La La Lucille." Little Anne Cornwell, star of several Universal successes, is the feminine lead, playing opposite Eddie Lyons, while Gladys Walton, a fascinating ingenue, appears as the bride of Lee Moran. The vaudeville juggler is portrayed by Burton Halbert; Henry Meyers and Frank Earle play the parts of the opposing lawyers; Rosa Gore and Charles McHugh are the Amazonian wife and her henpecked husband; Arthur Thalasso and Dorothy Wolbert enact the roles of the huge janitor and his unprepossessing wife; Fred Gamble has the role of a fire-eating Southern colonel; Sam Appel plays the hotel detective; Marion Skinner appears as the puritanical aunt, and there are many other characters cleverly played.

Big Publicity for Picture

"Don't Ever Marry" Movement Helps Advertise Marshall Neilan Feature

A "Don't Ever Marry" movement started by Marjorie Daw is spreading over the country. The newspapers are featuring publicity stories on the idea which, of course, are direct advertisements for the Marshall Neilan picture of the same title by Edgar Franklyn.

Stories and pictures advising young girls to join the movement which will insure real bliss for those who do finally marry, have hit the fancy of newspaper editors everywhere and front page display is being given the idea. In the stories the phrase, "Don't Ever Marry" is being conducted by the is repeated frequently, no reference being made to the picture.

The "Don't Ever Marry" movement publicity department of Marshall Neilan Productions and many feature displays and layouts are being supplied newspapers on request, in addition to news announcements heralding the progress of the movement from day to day.

It is stated that already many thousands of dollars worth of advertising has been realized for the picture on this idea and exhibitors are tying up to this publicity by announcing the presentation of the Neilan film a few days after the stories have appeared, playing up the clippings on the subject originally printed in the text pages of the newspapers.

Mazda Company Sends Author on Tour

Arrangements have now been completed by the Mazda Productions, Inc., whereby Miss Margaret Montgomery will visit many countries of the world in quest of true color and life-character studies for a number of picture plays she has contracted to supply the productions company this year. The date set for Miss Montgomery's embarkation for Europe is July 1st, her itinerary taking her through Naples, Florence, Rome and other places of interest in Italy, Switzerland and France, where she will spend some time at work on her first picture scenario, "The Aftermath." From there Miss Montgomery and party will proceed to the British Isles, visiting England, Scotland, Ireland, and then on to Norway and Sweden, seeking at all places inspiration for other stories of her series.

The Mazda Productions, Inc., is a new independent producing concern with studios and laboratory at Provo, Utah. The first production of the Mazda concern will be a nine-reel feature, titled "The Call of the Unknown." This will be ready for distribution in September or October.

Press-Book Issued for "Li Ting Lang"

The campaign and exploitation book which Robertson-Cole is issuing this week on "Li Ting Lang," Sessue Hayakawa's newest picture, will be quite the most pretentious in connection with a Hayakawa picture, it is stated by that organization.

"Li Ting Lang" is an unusual study of race problems as related to love and inter-marriage, founded on "Li Ting Lang, Chinese Gentleman," the Green Book magazine story by Howard P. Rocky. Inter-racial marriages is the exploitation angle followed.

The exhibitor is urged to push the question of whether or not it is proper for a Chinese Prince to marry a white girl, and whether such a marriage should it take place, would result happily. To this end the exploitation book suggests that in all cities where there is a Chinese colony that the exhibitor have his publicity man inquire into the results of any inter-racial marriages which have taken place.

Goldwyn Publishes a Release Catalogue

For the benefit of exhibitors who may have missed some strong productions on the program of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation during its first and second years, a complete catalogue has been prepared covering the entire output of Goldwyn. The catalogue is in sixteen pages, and gives a convenient survey of the feature photoplays that carry the stamp of Goldwyn, starting with Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," and continuing up to the current releases.

The catalogue is conveniently arranged so that an exhibitor may learn at a glance the general nature of the pictures available.

Equity Reviews Achievements

Issues a Statement to Answer Inquiries on Point of Policy

"THE growth of the Equity Pictures Corporation, under the guiding hand of Joe Schnitzer, its president, who sets its policy at few but great productions, has made another leap to the forefront by the release of two special features that toe the mark of perfection and excellence of its Clara Kimball Young pictures," announces a statement just issued from the headquarters of the Equity Pictures Corporation. "On the heels of the success of Equity's first venture, 'Silk Husbands and Calico Wives,'" continues the Equity statement, "comes 'Keep to the Right,' with the fascinating Edith Talaferro, in her screen debut and 'Whispering Devils,' with Conway Tearle and Rosemary Theby.

"This expansion of Equity's output sets at rest the inquiries of many interested friends who could not understand how Equity's nineteen exchanges could be kept busy with the product of Clara Kimball Young alone. Up to recently, Equity's answer to this unprecedented concentration on a single star has been that one genuine pearl is worth a hundred pieces of polished glass. That is why Equity has spent more on its 'one and only' Clara Kimball Young than other producers have spent on a dozen stars—and only three of the series of ten Young pictures have been released as yet. Producer after producer besieged the Equity stronghold with requests to market their pictures through its solidly organized exchanges, but Equity held off till the right picture came. If anything passed the test it must match up to the Young calibre.

"So when 'Keep to the Right' appeared starring the irresistible Edith Talaferro, Equity decided that here at last was a production that paralleled the quality standard of Young. It cost a small fortune, but the 'class' was all there—it was a picture that was 'different.' And then to cap the climax of quality came 'Whispering Devils,' with Conway Tearle and Rosemary Theby, making the good news complete, and adding two 'sure fire' features to the 100 per cent Equity banner."

The "Mollycoddle" Acclaimed

THE receptions accorded the initial showing of the new Fairbanks' picture, "The Mollycoddle," at Cleveland during the sessions of the exhibitors' convention in that city and later at the various big cities throughout the country when the picture was given its first-run screenings, are made the subject of an enthusiastic statement just issued from the headquarters of the United Artists. The statement follows in part:

"The preview of this picture at Cleveland was given for the benefit of the Independent Exhibitors who had gathered there in convention. It was a hot night and a sticky night, such as only Cleveland knows. Yet the Stillman Theatre was jammed to the doors and as each exhibitor entered the picture house he did so through curiosity and not desire. A shower bath would have been much more inviting, so it was thought.

"Two hours later these same critics and curiosity seekers ventured forth into the night. It was just as hot and just as sticky.

But they didn't know it, they had forgotten all about the heat and everything. They were chilled to the bone. They had seen a hot weather picture, one that made the cold chills run up and down every fevered spine, and they were happy. 'The Mollycoddle' was declared a winner. Advance bookings had even been surpassed.

"In Cleveland the anvil had been struck. A great chance had been taken, so it seemed, but the sparks of approval flew forth like the welcome sprays from a garden hose in July. Doug scored.

"Last week 'The Mollycoddle' was thrown on the screens of theatres throughout the entire nation, and in less than a day after it had had its initial showing for public approval it was declared the greatest picture ever offered by Fairbanks.

"There was speculation about releasing this latest Fairbanks' 'Big Four' production at this time because of the hot weather. But not so now. Heat has been knocked into the land of the forgotten, and the crowds are elbowing every box office holding this attraction.

"Even particular New York swarmed out on one of its very hot days and nights to watch 'The Mollycoddle.' The Strand Theatre's opening of 'The Mollycoddle' was just as enthusiastic as any mid-winter offering. Between the two important evening shows Broadway was blocked by the eager thousand who sought to enter the Strand. Six of Father Knickerbocker's burly policemen were summoned at eight-thirty to clear a passage wide enough to permit pedestrians to walk along Broadway for a half a block each side of the theatre.

Hart in "Hell's Hinges"; Louise Glaum in "Love or Justice."

The "Gumps" Regularly Seen at Big Houses

Joe Friedman points with pride to the list of big houses which have made Sid Smith's cartoons, the "Gumps," a part of their program.

In Chicago, Andy and Min Gump are appearing at McVicker's, one of the biggest theatres in the heart of the loop, and at the Riviera, the theatre beautiful with a city wide drawing power; New York's Strand is likewise an habitual exhibitor of the Gumps; the patrons of the sumpinous Valentine at Toledo now look upon the Gumps as a fixture at that theatre; in Louisville the Majestic is Gump headquarters; the Alhambra, Mall and Stillman, three of Cleveland's leading movie palaces are regular exhibitors of the cartoons.

Many Letters Received Laud "Miss Hobbs"

As an indication of the great personal success Wanda Hawley has scored in "Miss Hobbs," her first starring vehicle for Realart, the flood of congratulatory telegrams and letters showered upon the new star by exhibitors in every part of the country is convincing proof, says Realart.

Demand for prints is heavy.

Comedy Stars on Hall List

Schedule of Releases Announced by President of Hallmark Corp.

FRANK G. HALL, president of Hallmark Pictures Corporation will release during the year twenty-six Mack Sennett two-reel comedies, one release every two weeks. The first scheduled for immediate release is "Dodging His Doom" featuring Chester Conklin and Dora Rogers. Following in release, Mr. Hall announces, "Madcap Ambrose" with Mack Swain and Polly Moran; "Thirst" with Mack Swain and Ethel Tearle and "The Betrayal of Maggie" with Charles Murray, Louise Fazenda and Chester Conklin.

In the series of twenty-six Sennett comedies, Mr. Hall believes he has the greatest list of stellar comedy lights of the screen. The list includes in addition to those mentioned above, Wahn Trask, Bobby Vernon, now starring in Christie comedies; Gloria Swanson who has since become a De Mille star; J. Hanson, R. Milliken, M. Trick, F. Dwiggins, F. Shade, Ford Sterling, Wayland Trask, Slim Summerville, B. Armstrong, Geo. Bums, Blanche Payson, Harry Gribbon, Fay Tincher, Mary Thurman, Ben Turpin, Glen Cavender, Peggy Pearce, Ethel Tearle and Al St. John.

As announced last week, Mr. Hall is also releasing a series of fifty-two Triangle star productions including five-reel features with Douglas Fairbanks, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, Charles Ray, Frank Keenan, Bessie Barriscale, William S. Hart, Dorothy Dalton, Louise Glaum, Bessie Love and others.

Title-Artists Open Up New York's Office

Irvin J. Martin, Neil McGuire and Warren A. Newcombe have opened studios at 727 Seventh Avenue, New York, and will engage in the handling of art-titles and special effects. Owing to their former associations with Thomas H. Ince, William S. Hart and the Triangle Film Corporation, the partners in this new venture are not newcomers in this particular field and expect to have a well-going business organized in a short time.

"Checkers" Is Lauded by Visiting Showman

"It is motion pictures like 'Checkers' that will build up for the exhibitor a business which is both a pleasure and a profit." So said Arthur L. McGrory, president of the Orpheum Circuit, which operates a chain of six picture theatres in and around Boston, while on a visit to New York City last week in search of decorative material and ideas for the ornamentation of the seventh Orpheum Theatre, now in course of construction in East Weymouth, Mass.

Mr. McGrory while in New York visited the new Fox Building in West 55th Street and incidentally met the directors now engaged in making special productions there. Among those was Richard Stanton, who staged "Checkers" for William Fox.

Story for Universal by Beranger and Halsey

Clara Beranger and Forrest Halsey, co-authors of the popular Broadway stage success, "His Chinese Wife," have written an original story for Universal. It is called "White Youth," and is a comedy-drama, said to be filled with highly amusing situations.

Scenes from "Moon Madness," a Hawthorth special feature to be released by Robertson-Cole, and in which Edith Storey and Wallace McDonald have the leading roles

"The Wonder Man" Gets Special Showing

The Robertson-Cole special, "The Wonder Man," starring Georges Carpentier, was given a special showing in Missoula, Montana, at which officials, including the mayor and chiefs of different departments, and leading citizens attended. The showing was arranged by the local Robertson-Cole sales representative and the Northwest Theaters Company which controls a string of theatres in Montana and Idaho.

Capitol Booking Said to Add to Demand

The increased demand for contracts on "Passers-By," the J. Stuart Blackton production of C. Haddon Chambers story which Pathe is distributing is ascribed to the engagement of the picture as the main attraction at the Capitol theatre, New York, for the week of June 20.

Conway Tearle and Rosemary Theby in "Whispering Devils," a new six-reel Equity production

"Moon Madness" Issued Soon

Romantic Story with Desert and Paris as Backgrounds

THE next big special production which Robertson-Cole will give to exhibitors, for distribution is "Moon Madness," which is scheduled for release in the early future. Robertson-Cole has the following to say regarding this release:

"The glamorous Latin Quarter of Paris, and the fascinating and mysterious border-line where desert and jungle meet, are two of the chief backgrounds for 'Moon Madness,' which was produced by Hawthorth. In this picture there appears an all-star cast which includes Edith Storey (who has two distinct roles at different times) Same De Grass, Josef Swickard, Wallace McDonald, William Courtleigh, Irene Hunt, Frankie Lee and Fred Starr.

"The picture is one which will appeal to the exhibitor by reason of the certainty of its interest to the picture-goer. Its backgrounds as named above hold out an alluring promise, which is fully kept by the action of the picture. The story combines a dramatic love theme, with another of even greater intensity: the tale of a man who waited for years to revenge himself upon the intruder who despoiled his home.

"There is great box-office value in exploiting the very incident about which the name 'Moon Madness' is built. It is a custom among the Bedouins, who brought up the heroine of 'Moon Madness' (played by Miss Storey) that each time when a new moon appears the young men of the tribe may ride a wild race on horseback, the winner being allowed the privilege of selecting from the girls of the tribe his choice as fiancée.

"Won in this manner by the son of a chief, the central character in 'Moon Madness' finds that, although she has a certain affection for the young man, she does not love him well enough to marry. There is in her soul a strange longing, which she cannot fathom. She realizes what this is when a Parisian artist, a man somewhat older than herself, comes to the desert and woos her. She wants to go to Paris, and does go, only to find that the man is a profligate. Then enter into the story several other forces which bring about a most startling climax.

"'Moon Madness' has, in addition to its dramatic love story, and its rich background, a wealth of scenic effects. It starts off, for example, with a most thrilling rain storm, which destroys a tree, and causes a violent death. After this come interesting scenes showing the interior and exterior of the tents of the Arabs, and life along the edge of the jungle. When the scene shifts to Paris, and the climax of the picture pushes in, other sumptuous sets appear. The highest moment of the story takes place in an artist's studio in the Latin Quarter.

"It was necessary in order to carry out the theme of the story to make the apartment suggest the character of the occupant. Furniture, rugs, hangings and pictures of the type seen in ancient Florentine castles were decided upon as the most suitable, and there is a living room furnished in this style. Then there is the 'piece de resistance': a circular room with huge marble columns and gold tops, the artist's private sanctum.

"The walls of this room are divided into hollow panels some five and a half feet in height, and in each of these is a life-sized statue. In the centre of the room is a pool filled with floating lily pods, over which water is constantly sprayed from an artistic little fountain in the middle of the pool. This unusual setting was designed by Robert Ellis, art director of the Haworth Studios, and is typical of the ultra smart and unique settings which characterize the entire production.

"'Moon Madness' is from the pen of J. Grubb Alexander. In a setting of exquisite interiors and outdoor scenes rivaling in beauty films of scenic wonders, Miss Storey is seen as Zora, a French girl which has been reared from childhood by a family of wealthy Bedouins on the African desert. Although ignorant of the tragedy surrounding her birth and her parentage, there is in her blood the call of her own people, a longing for the lights, music and gaiety of another world. When Adrien Fleuret, a noted French artist comes to Africa and Zora poses as his model for his masterpiece 'Love,' he fans into a flame her desire to leave behind her the dry monotony of desert life.

"From this point scene after scene of dramatic intensity follows, and in a startling climax Zora learns of her birth and parentage, and is reunited with her lover Jan, whom she finds returning eagerly to the desert once more, forever cured of her longing for the sham and hypocrisy of a tinsel world."

Garsson Believes He Can Beat the Heat

Murray W. Garsson, president of the Fine Arts, Inc., announces that during the months of July and August an intensive campaign will be conducted for "Up in Mary's Attic." One of the special objects of this drive at this particular time will be to counteract the depressing effect of the hot-weather season on the exhibitor's box-office. The character of the comedy itself is designed to make people forget the heat, in the opinion of the Fine Arts executive, his theory being that when people are vastly amused they forget about the weather.

G. Selmer Fougner

Noted Correspondent Joins Hemmer Co.

G. Selmer Fougner, author and publicity expert, who was in complete charge of all direct newspaper publicity for the liberty loans in New York, has been appointed publicity director for the Hemmer Superior Productions, Inc.

An active newspaper career, both here and abroad covering a period of upwards of twelve years, taken together with his career as head of the United States Treasury Press Bureau in New York during the Liberty Loans, has established G. Selmer Fougner, senior member of the G. Selmer Fougner Syndicate, as perhaps one of the best trained publicity experts in the field.

During the war, Mr. Fougner served in the fighting zone on the western front as the correspondent of the Sun and was also a contributor to the London Daily Mail and the London Evening News. He has also translated "Private Gaspard," one of the best-known books of the war period. The publicity campaigns for the Boy Scouts of America and the Actors National Memorial Fund were also handled by Mr. Fougner.

Song Publication to Aid Exploitation

The Henry Burr Music Company, which is publishing the "Tillie" song, written by Byron Gay, author of "The Vamp," is now arranging a national publicity campaign for this number.

Lines to Be Read by Cast

Recitation of Lines with Full Voice to Mark the "Mid-Channel"

A NOVEL development in the staging of a motion-picture was marked in the picturization of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's greatest drama of domestic life, "Mid-Channel," in which Clara Kimball Young is to take the feminine lead. Instead of the occasional outbursts of speech, mostly unstudied and spontaneous, that a film-actor gives vent to in the crucial moments of a photoplay, the lines of Pinero's play are to be memorized in full, and spoken outright with full dramatic force before the camera, it is stated.

In connection with this innovation, Equity has issued the following statement:

"This is an unusual procedure in the production of a photodrama, in view of the fact that the camera does not record speech. The circumstances explaining this innovation in the 'silent' drama, however, fully justify the step. Those who recall the play, either from reading or from its presentation on the legitimate stage with Ethel Barrymore in the leading role in 1910, know that the terse dialogue and insinuating repartee which runs throughout the play form some of its chief charms. It was while Miss Young, in the role of Zoe, the abused and neglected wife of Theodore Blundell, was about to 'register' indignation at the merciless accusations of her husband by expression of feature and appropriate gesture, that the enthusiasm and heat of the scene seized her, and a volley of violent protest shot out in a torrent at the astonished 'husband,' played by Mr. J. Frank Glendon.

"The effect of Miss Young's interpretation was so marked in the added strength of emotion and naturalness of action displayed, that she, in conjunction with the director, Harry Garson, decided then and there to have the entire play done over orally, with every member of the cast memorizing his respective role, and uttering the lines with full vocal force."

Two New Goldwyn Films

Tom Moore and Will Rogers, Stars of New Features, on Summer Schedule

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION'S list of feature attractions to be placed on the market during the early summer, was augmented this week by the addition of Tom Moore in "Stop Thief!" and Will Rogers in "Cupid, the Cowpuncher." These productions have been included on the schedule that already numbers Tom Moore in "The Great Accident," Pauline Frederick in "Roads of Destiny," Mabel Normand in "The Slim Princess," Madge Kennedy in "The Truth," Rex Beach's "Going Some," and other productions, such as Rupert Hughes' successful comedy, "Scratch My Back," that is now going the rounds of first-run theatres.

In "Stop Thief!" the Cohan & Harris stage success, written by Carlyle Moore, Goldwyn has one of the hits of the past decade. After a prolonged Broadway run, this mystery farce was taken to all the principal cities and towns of the country by road companies. Harry Baumont directed a company including Hazel Daly, Irene Rich, Kate Lester, Molly Malone, Otto Hoffman and Raymond Hatton, in support of Tom Moore.

Will Rogers has a role after his own heart in Eleanor Gates' story of the West, "Cupid, the Cowpuncher." He has plenty of opportunity to ride and throw a rope and to be his natural self in the interpretation of the cowboy, who is dubbed "Cupid" by his fellows because of his success as a promoter of romance among his friends. The story hinges upon Cupid's efforts to unite the daughter of his boss and his closest friend, the "Doc."

Clarence Badger, who has been so successful with earlier Rogers pictures, directed this one. The beautiful Helene Chadwick is the heroine who wins the heart of Cupid, while others in the cast are: Andrew Robson, Lloyd Whitlock, Roy Laidlaw, Gwynn Williams, Catherine Wallace and Nelson McDowell.

Educational Announces

Its New Exchanges

EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORPORATION announces that its exchanges at St. Louis and Kansas City will be opened shortly as a result of a contract signed with S. P. Skouras, a leading exhibitor of St. Louis, who will participate in the ownership of the exchanges. Mr. Skouras owns the New Grand Central theatre and a number of other houses and has the First National franchise for his territory. Separate Educational Exchanges will be opened in both St. Louis and Kansas City just as soon as it is physically possible.

All arrangements have also been completed with Jensen and von Herberg for the Seattle Exchange. Jensen and von Herberg are the dominating exhibitor interests in the Pacific northwest, assuring a large number of first runs for all of the Educational releases.

Educational expects all of its offices in the twenty-four principal exchange centers to be in operation within thirty days, many of them having already been opened.

"The Tiger's Coat" Is Well Under Way

The Dial Film Company telegraphs W. W. Hodkinson that the next production following "King Spruce" is "The Tiger's Coat." This is now well under way at the Brunton Studios in Los Angeles. Lawson Butt and Myrtle Stedman have two of the principal roles in "The Tiger's Coat," and the cast also includes Tina Modotti, Helene Sullivan, Jiguel Lanoc, Myles McCarthy and Charles Spere. The production is being made under the direction of Roy Clements.

Many Offers Made for Van Siclen Serial

Alvin Wortham of the foreign sales department for Bech Van Siclen & Co., Inc., says that he has had many offers for the serial, "The Mystery of the Hope Diamond," but has not closed as yet for any foreign territory pending the arrival this coming week of "Jack" Wheeler with the completed print. The serial was made under the exclusive supervision of "Jack" Wheeler with Stewart Paton as director.

Fannie Ward in "She Played and Paid," a French production released by Aeolian Film Sales Co.

To State-Right Fannie Ward Picture

From the offices of the new Aeolian Film Sales Co. comes the announcement of Fannie Ward's latest motion-picture, "She Played and Paid"—a six-reel feature taken in Paris, with all the exquisite coloring and gay romance of Parisian life. From scenario to studio, "She Played and Paid" is French and teems with spice and spirit that only France possesses. The picture will be state-righted.

It will be remembered that Miss Ward left Los Angeles last year for Paris. At the time her object was a mystery. "She Played and Paid" solves that mystery. This "teasing" photodrama is declared to be the greatest emotional drama of Miss Ward's career.

Big 'Territories Sold on 'The Lone Hand'

The Alexander Film Corporation have closed contracts on the following territory for the Roy Stewart "Lone Hand" picture: Upper New York State to the Robbins Film Co., of Utica, N. Y.; Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas to the Specialty Film Company, of Dallas, Texas; Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina and Tennessee to the Criterion Film Service of Atlanta, Georgia.

Washburn Plans Own Company

BRYANT Washburn is now completing the details for the formation of his own producing company to make four or five special productions annually. Lee A. Ochs will be associated with Mr. Washburn in the production of these special features. Under the Washburn-Ochs arrangement all of the four or more features to be made each year will be given a particularly strong exploitation and advertising campaign. It is planned to make this far reaching in its scope and to conduct it in such a way as to not only give each separate picture the finest kind of publicity but at the same time have the combined campaigns add to the already great popularity of Bryant Washburn himself.

Both of the men most concerned in the latest independent producing agreement have entered into the undertaking with their whole hearts and souls. Mr. Washburn is most enthusiastic and is determined to spare no money to make available for the exhibitors of the country the finest series of box office attractions that it is possible to produce. He will overlook no detail insofar as the production end is concerned and both he and Mr. Ochs will give very careful attention to the matter of stories, direction and supporting cast.

Bryant Washburn is now completing his last picture for the Famous Players-Lasky company. This it is expected he will finish work on by June 29th. He will immediately leave for a tour of Texas, later coming to New York and then sailing for Europe. Washburn will arrive in San Antonio on July 1st, where he will be the guest of the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce and W. J. Lytle of the Lytle Circuit of theatres. Mrs. Washburn will accompany her husband and will be entertained by the various women's clubs en route.

Bryant Washburn

The following statement has been issued in connection with the new venture:

"On the evening of July 1st, Mr. and Mrs. Washburn will leave for Dallas, where the star will address the Exhibitors' League of Texas, being the guest of E. T. Peter, National Treasurer, and M. H. Gwynn of Terrell, Texas. He will leave Dallas so as to arrive in New York city on July 5th, and while in town will stop at the Hotel Biltmore with Mrs. Washburn.

"Mr. Washburn will spend a short time in the city while he is completing the various details of his producing company and on July 10th, he and Mrs. Washburn will sail for the other side on board the "Kronland." The trip abroad is for the two-fold purpose of giving the star a much needed rest and to permit him to film some scenes for his first independent production.

"Mr. Washburn has decided on an English story for his first feature under the new arrangement. A point worthy of note in this connection is the fact that it will be the first story of this nature to be filmed in England with an American star, an American director and an American company. It will, therefore, permit of the presentation to the American public of locations that have not previously been seen in pictures offering them fresh backgrounds for the exterior action.

"Bryant Washburn has acquired a following second to none during his career as a screen star. Lee A. Ochs is, of course, an experienced exhibitor and producer. This combination of men seems to indicate that Messrs. Washburn and Ochs will turn out pictures of the kind that will win favor with the public, bring them into the theatres and so put money into the pockets of the exhibitors.

"As yet Mr. Ochs has made no arrangements as regards distribution. An announcement relative to this will be forthcoming later at which time further details of the producing arrangement will also be given out."

Y. W. C. A. in Exchange Tie-Up

MOTION-PICTURES made by and for the Young Women's Christian Association will hereafter be distributed by Educational Films Corporation through its own exchange system as the result of a contract just signed with the association's National Board. The exact date at which distribution will begin and the detailed plans will be announced later.

This agreement adds another powerful organization to the list cooperating with Educational and which includes the American Red Cross, the world survey of the Interchurch World Movement, the New York State Conservation Commission, the Alaskan pictures of the National Geographic Society and a number of others. Additional organizations are now seeking the same methods of distributing their pictures and other announcements may be expected in a short time.

The Y. W. C. A. has already produced a number of pictures which show the various phases of the organization's work and many others are planned for the immediate future. Their range is a wide one, from the outdoor camps of the young women to the work that they do among the tenements of the cities. All of the pictures have a decided educational value and unusual interest not only to members of the association but the public generally. This latter appeal will be developed greatly, under the present plans.

Started largely as a social organization for young women in the cities, the work of the Y. W. C. A. has expanded until it includes the widest variety of activities. In practically every city of importance the association has either a building of its own or rented quarters with gymnasiums, often schools in the domestic sciences, in nursing and in some of the cities many branches of instruction in industries which up to a few years ago were dominated by men. Many of the motion pictures therefore are decidedly instructional in their effects.

Cooperation in publicity for these pictures will be afforded by the Blue Triangle, the national Y. W. C. A. publication.

Work will be started in a few days in putting in the proper shape all of the material ready and the various committees will then outline the scope of future productions. The association will have the benefit of the expert advice of the entire Educational staff in preparing its material and affording aids in its exhibition.

"We appreciate the confidence in us that is shown by the Y. W. C. A. contract," says a statement from Educational. The organization had many other offers to distribute these pictures, some of them without charge, and the members of the National Board made their final selection because they believed that this was the one organization equipped to distribute the pictures and the one with the past record of perfect cooperation with national organizations of the highest class.

"We believe, too, that this is another very strong evidence of the vital uses of motion pictures in our national life. When such organizations as the Y. W. C. A. take an interest in distributing through the nation the benefit of their works, it is a decidedly healthy sign. We are pleased to be associated in a movement which has such apparent benefits."

Noted Publisher Enters Producing Field

Summer Charles Britton, well-known producer of "best-sellers," has become the head of a new picture producing company to be known as the Summer Charles Britton, Inc. It is a New York corporation with an authorized capital of $200,000, and present plans anticipate early production. This firm will produce only superfeatures, it is stated, and each picture will synchronize with the publication of the story in book form, the company announces. This, it is pointed out, will effect a tie-up between the picture, the book and newspaper syndication field. Mr. Britton has been associated with prominent publication organizations, and has been intimately engaged in the publishing of many popular novels, and was for a long time associated with the sale and exploitation of the works of Harold Bell Wright.

"The Money Changers" Is Completed

Benjamin B. Hampton's latest all-star production of famous novels, "The Money Changers," was completed this week at the producer's studio in Hollywood. It is an adaptation of Upton Sinclair's novel of the same title.

Jack Conway directed the production, which was photomatized by William H. Chiford. An unusually fine cast consisting of Robert Mc Kim, Claire Adams, Roy Stewart, George Webb, Audrey Chapman, Betty Brice, Stanton Heck, and a number of other noted screen artists take the leading roles.

Myrtle Stedman Comes Back to Screen

Myrtle Stedman's sincere liking for motion pictures has brought her back to the silver sheet after an absence of two years, spent in light opera. According to Miss Stedman, who is now supporting Mildred Harris Chaplin in the Louis B. Mayer-First National production, "Old Dad," the legitimate stage has not the appeal of the studio.

Special to Open Big Houses

Alice Joyce's Vehicle, "The Prey," Will Be Given National Campaign

VITAGRAPH announces that it intends to make the Alice Joyce special, "The Prey," known throughout the country by the beginning of the fall by carrying on a national campaign in behalf of the picture. It will be released in September. A Broadway New York house has already expressed its intention of running it during the first week of September, and Vitagraph says it will be used to open several new houses at the beginning of autumn.

Harry Benham appears in the role opposite the star, and L. Rogers Lytton, the best known polished villain on the screen, has the "heavy."

"The Prey" is made up practically all of interiors, the opening scene showing a massive ballroom set. Helen Reardon (played by Alice Joyce) is having her engagement announced, and a big society dance, in honor of the event, is in progress. Her betrothed, James Calvin, is called aside by her father, Robert Reardon, a financier who has specu-lated with a trust fund placed in his care—and lost it. Helen goes to her room, cooing over her engagement ring.

Reardon asks Calvin, whom he has aided in his career as a successful attorney, to lend him money to enable him to form a partnership with an unscrupulous promoter. Calvin, a reform candidate for district attorney, refuses, declaring the promoter to be a crook, and that he intends to prosecute him.

Helen, in her boudoir, hears the voices raised in anger and creeps down the stairway in time to hear her father upbraid her fiancé. She asks her lover to explain, and he refuses, being unwilling to denounce the father of the girl he loves.

Reardon takes his own life, and in the midst of Helen's grief she discovers that her brother committed forgery and is in the power of the promoter. To save her brother she marries the promoter, although disliking him, and comes to loathe him.

"Pay on a Royalty Basis"

Richard Stanton Suggests This to Eliminate the Mediocre Elements

FOLLOWING the lead of the Federal Reserve Board which has ordered the banks to call in their loans as a protection against gambling on the national productive-ness, Richard Stanton suggests that the same principle of risk elimination be followed in the moving picture industry.

Speaking of this Mr. Stanton declares, "Now that competition among the producers has greatly strengthened the quality of the whole output of motion picture features, it is high time that the people of the industry turn their attention to the eradicating of all gambling in production. This subject is the least thought of and at the same time one of the greatest obstacles in the path of motion picture achievement.

"For instance, the loss on every mediocre feature that is released is paid by the profits of the real successes, thereby being a tangible draw-back in the business of satisfying the entertainment requirements of the general public. The failures may be traced to the deadwood in the production organization. It is the mediocre director, the mediocre star and the scenario writer of the same classification who are responsible for the vast number of poor pictures. Eliminate them and the mediocre picture will vanish with them, for it is the people of average ability who are responsible for the greatest gamble in the manufacturing of pictures.

"To do this I suggest that the directors, the stars and the scenario writers be paid on a royalty basis.

"Humoresque" Is Still Bringing 'Em In

"Humoresque," the Cosmopolitan Productions' picturization of Fannie Hurst's great mother love story, is now in the fourth week of its pre-release run at the Criterion Theatre, New York, and the record-breaking crowds that have attended this theatre since the picture's opening remain undiminished. Every seat at every performance is taken and many are the unfortunate ones who are turned away.

The picture's general release, throughout the country, is scheduled for September and, from present indications, it seems extremely likely that the pre-release showing at the Criterion in New York will continue until that time.

Betty Ross Clark Cast as Arbuckle's Lead

Betty Ross Clark has been specially engaged to enact the leading feminine role for Roscoe Arbuckle in "The Traveling Salesman," a new Paramount Picture to be directed by Joseph Henabery, which starts at the Lasky studio this week. Walter Woods wrote the scenario. Miss Clark recently appeared in the cast with Doris Keene in "Romance."

Joe Kelley Rejoins the Hallmark Forces

Joseph L. Kelley has resumed the office of director of publicity for Frank G. Hall enterprises. Mr. Kelley's duties will include the preparation of press books and exploitation matter on the 52 Triangle recreated productions and 26 Mack Sennett produced comedies, which Mr. Hall has acquired for distribution.

Tests Made to Select Strong Support

In order to secure a cast of qualified talent, photographic tests are being recorded by Arthur Rosson, who will direct Betty Compson's second starring picture. The members of the supporting cast, it is stated, will be required to play unusually difficult roles, which will portray characters of different periods.

His sister drove away the woman he really loved, the mother of his child.

Bored in his gilded social circle, a whim moved him to call into his mansion denizens of the street who sought shelter from the storm.

Fate brought in with the miserable crowd the mother of his child, the guardian of his flesh and blood. What did he do? What would you do?

In building this most remarkable of all his great productions, J. Stuart Blackton has created the finest "type" picture of the screen.

He has achieved an amazing analysis of the human heart in all its emotions. Truth dominates the picture's joys and emotions.

Leila Valentine, Ellen Cassidy, Pauline Coffin, Tom Lewis, W. J. Ferguson, and Dick Lee are among the reasons for this distinct success.

Warner's Pathe Dubut Set for August 1

H. B. Warner is to make his debut as a Pathe star on August 1, when "One Hour Before Dawn," the Jesse D. Hampton production of "Behind Red Curtains," the novel by Mansfield Scott, will be released, it was announced this week by Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Warner's formal introduction to the public as a Pathe attraction is to be an auspicious occasion according to the Pathe officials, who have extreme confidence in the production in which he will appear, and who predict "One Hour Before Dawn" will prove one of the most sensational successes of the year.

The cast includes Anna Q. Nilsson, Dorothy Hagan, Thomas Guise, Augustus Phillips, Ralph McCullough, Lillian Rich, Adele Farrington, Frank Leigh, Howard Davies and Winton Taylor.

Hopp Hadley Tackles Big Tinting Job

Hopp Hadley, who recently was made manager of productions for Frank G. Hall, is engaged in re-editing and tinting a series of 52 Triangle productions and 26 Mack Sennett produced two-reel comedies, recently acquired by Hallmark Pictures Corporation for distribution. Harry P. Diggs succeeded Mr. Hadley as advertising manager for Hallmark.

Pictures Judged by Records in Other Houses

An example of co-operation between two exhibitors is illustrated by a letter received by Manager Jack Johnson of Pantages theatre, Portland, from Eugene Levy, of the Orpheum theatre, Seattle. Mr. Levy tells his fellow showman the records made by the Pathe serial, "Trailed by Three," in his house.

Realart Releases for July

"You Never Can Tell" and "A Cumberland Romance" Listed

THE Realart Pictures Corporation announces two of its releases for July to be "A Dark Lantern," in which Alice Brady plays the stellar role, and "A Cumberland Romance," featuring Mary Miles Minter. The former is now nearing completion and will be available for exhibitors about the middle of July, says Realart; the latter is already finished and is due for release in the early part of the month. The following paragraphs have been selected from the statements issued by the Realart headquarters in connection with these releases:

"A Dark Lantern," Alice Brady's forthcoming production for Realart, is nearing completion in New York City and will be available for exhibitors about the middle of July. The picture is said to contain a variety of architecture in its sets, in strict accordance with the scenes depicted in Elizabeth Robins' novel from which it was adapted.

"Miss Brady completed camera work on the production recently in Chicago, simultaneously with the closing of her stage engagement there in 'Forever After.' The star is now taking a thorough rest before starting work in a few weeks on another picture in New York City.

"The locale of 'A Dark Lantern' is in three countries—Italy, England and Argentina. The characters range from an Austrian Prince to titled Englishmen and the action moves from a small English country home to a coronation ball in Argentina. A number of elaborate sets were necessary to make the production.

"Robert M. Haas, art director, faced a difficult research and persistent effort were necessary to obtain the desired results. It was finally decided to reproduce several famous examples of European architecture which suited the requirements of the story.

"John S. Robertson was Miss Brady's director in this picture. James Crane, who was Miss Brady's leading man in her former Realart pictures, 'The Fear Market' and 'Sinners,' plays the leading male again in this production. A large cast of capable players was engaged in New York and taken to Chicago to make the picture.

"A Cumberland Romance," in which Mary Miles Minter is starred, has been completed and is announced by Realart Pictures Corporation as available early in July. It is an adaptation of John Fox, Jr.'s novel of the Cumberland Mountains published under the name of 'A Mountain Europa.'

"Charles Maigne, who recently won considerable recognition as the director of 'The Copperhead,' directed the new Minter picture. He is a Virginian by birth and his intimate knowledge of the scenes and people that are depicted in 'A Cumberland Romance' is said to have given it many human touches.

"J. S. Woody, general manager of Realart, declared, after viewing the picture, that it was, in his opinion, the greatest piece of work that Mary Miles Minter had ever made. Emphasizing his opinion strongly, Mr. Woody immediately used wires to urge exhibitors to increase their playing dates on the pictures as they did on the star's last picture, 'Jenny Be Good.'

"A cast that approaches all-star proportions supports the star, Monte Blue, who had the leading male role in 'Pettigrew's Girl,' 'Love' and 'Everywoman,' is Miss Minter's leading man. John Bowers, who has played with Geraldine Farrar, Madge Kennedy and Pauline Frederick as leading man, has an important role. Others in the cast include Guy Oliver, Martha Mattox and Robert Brower."

Pathe's Cartoons Popular Comic Strip Exploiting Harold Lloyd Is Praised by Exhibitors

"UNQUESTIONABLY the most effective exploitation material furnished the exhibitor," is the way a group of the most prominent exhibitors of the Harold Lloyd comedies characterized the cartoon strip which Pathe's Exploitation Department issued for each release of the comedian's productions.

The strip of cartoons spoken of thus highly by showmen are designed for general purposes of advertising. In order that they may recommend themselves to the editors of the biggest newspapers, Pathe has them sketched by the cartoonist of the Hearst publications, Merle Johnson. Mr. Johnson, whose cartoon illustrations of humorous articles and comic verse are familiar to millions, views the Lloyd comedies and then illustrates the high lights. Thus the cartoons are suitable also for use in advertisements in newspapers, handbills and lobby frames.

The cartoon service, inaugurated by the Pathe Exploitation Department some time ago, proved its value immediately the exhibitors experimented with it and ever since these pictures have been appearing in newspapers all over the country.

British Firm to Sell Our Films Abroad

Gustave A. Rogers, representative in America of the Alliance Film Corporation, Ltd., announces that this company will be placing on the American market, via the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, in September films made in Great Britain, "directed by American technicians who have been drafted into the service of the company from their former positions." The literary and dramatic effect will be British in character, according to the Rogers announcement, but the production, direction and photography will be under the supervision of American experts.

The British company, it is stated, will also purchase the foreign rights on American-made pictures for distribution in European countries. A separate organization will be formed to take care of this activity, Mr. Rogers announces. More definite information is to be published later, concerning this new organization.

Goldwyn Goes to Coast for Conference

Samuel Goldwyn, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, left on June 17 for the Goldwyn Studios in Culver City, where he will confer with Vice-President Abraham L. Ehr, manager of the studios, who has a long list of elaborate productions scheduled for the coming season. Before leaving for the Coast, Mr. Goldwyn, in consultation with other officials at the home office, prepared a detailed plan of operation which will be followed by the company.

During the past few months, the Goldwyn Corporation has secured the rights to a large number of famous stage successes and novels by world-renowned authors, a number of which will be adapted into super-features.

Hodkinson Business on Rise

Reported Increase Due to Exhibitor Endorsement Is the Belief

SPEAKING on this subject, Mr. Hodkinson said:

"I am delighted to find that the exhibitors are beginning to find out in a practical way, how the mechanism and the selective machinery which I have been at pains to build up is coming to their aid, at what may be described as a very critical moment in their existence.

"Personally I have always strongly opposed producer control. It was my opposition to producer control which caused the severance of my relations with Paramount. I have attempted to set my case simply and clearly before the exhibitors of the country in a little booklet called 'An Appeal to Common Sense,' which will be forwarded free of charge and post-paid to any exhibitor who is interested in the subject.

"The Hodkinson organization has no stock to sell, no franchise plan to promote, and does not present to the exhibitor any complicated scheme of so-called cooperative booking. Our plan is exceedingly simple. I have no doubt of its ultimate success, and the decided increase in the volume of our business in the days immediately following the Convention at Cleveland convinces me that the methods and policies of our organization are beginning to be understood generally and what is more important are beginning to be used by the exhibitors in a definite and practical way."

Frank L. Shellabarger Joins Arthur Kane

The Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation announces this week the addition of Frank L. Shellabarger to its publicity staff. Mr. Shellabarger, former editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, and a well known newspaper and publicity man, will succeed Silas F. Seadler, who has been handling the advertising and publicity for the young concern since its inception, several months ago. Mr. Seadler has secured a leave of absence from the Kane company during July and August.

Mr. Shellabarger comes to the Kane corporation with a long record of achievement in journalism, and at the same time renews an old acquaintance with President Arthur S. Kane.

With an educational background gained at Washburn College and the University of Kansas, Mr. Shellabarger turned immediately to newspaper work as a chosen profession and was on the staff of the Topeka Capital, and later the Kansas City Journal.

Prize Beauty for Universal

Winner of Elks Contest in Chicago Will Be Given a Trial at Studios

Gertrude Olmstead of La Salle, Ill., winner of the Chicago Elks-Herald Examiner beauty contest and who has been signed to appear in Universal pictures

THE most beautiful girl in Illinois has been signed to appear in Universal pictures, Mr. Carl Laemmle has just announced. She is Miss Gertrude Olmstead, a school girl of La Salle, Ill. She was picked in a beauty contest, held by the Chicago Elks lodge in conjunction with the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Mr. Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was present in Chicago during the concluding days of the beauty contest, and as soon as the young LaSalle girl had been definitely selected, he offered a place in Universal's galaxy of stars and near-stars.

As a result of the arrangement, she and her mother will be sent to Universal City, California, very soon, it is stated. After a brief period of preliminary training, Miss Olmstead will be cast in a Universal production. If it develops that she can act as well as she looks, she will be signed for a year at $10,000. If not, she will have her expenses paid home, and draw a handsome salary for the time of her stay at the Universal studios.

Before she goes to California Miss Olmstead will be kept busy with one round of entertainments. First, however, she will be graduated from high school. That will not delay her long, however, as she was passing through her final examinations at the same time she was being chosen as the representative beauty of the middle west. She is only 17 years old.

The beauty contest was primarily for the purpose of choosing the "Queen of the Elks"—the most beautiful girl to be found, for the coming Elks' convention in Chicago early in July.

New Site Is Purchased for Rothacker Studio

In order not to delay actual construction on the Rothacker Coast laboratories another site has been purchased at Melrose and Gower streets in Hollywood. The site originally intended for the laboratories was at Sunset Boulevard and Van Ness street, but the Los Angeles city council looked upon this property and found it good in their eyes for a park site. Watterson R. Rothacker did not want to wait for the council to make a definite decision so the other site was purchased. The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company now owns two of the choicest properties in Hollywood.

H. J. Aldous, treasurer of the Rothacker Company, who negotiated purchase of the new site, has just let contracts for the construction and equipment of the laboratories. He leaves for Chicago next Wednesday.

The Rothacker laboratories, being on the Melrose-Gower site, will adjoin the big Brunton Studios and will be next-door neighbor to the million dollar studio units now being erected by Robertson-Cole.

It is expected that the formal opening of the Coast Laboratories will take place about November. Watterson R. Rothacker, accompanied by officers and executives of the home office in Chicago will make a pilgrimage to attend the opening.

Geo. B. Seitz Will Go Abroad for Scenes

George B. Seitz has completed the serial, "Velvet Fingers," in which he will star with Marguerite Courtot. On Monday, June 14, he commenced production of "Rogues and Romances," the feature in which Pathe will star him with June Caprice. Mr. Seitz intends filming, but few of the scenes, interiors of "Rogues and Romances" in his New York studio, for on July 6 he will sail with a company to Algiercas, Spain, where the major portion of the scenes will be taken.

The first feature in which he will appear is to be a picturization of his own play, "The Golden Senorita." Marguerite Courtot has been cast for a leading part, and Harry Semels is another member of the company, assembled for the trip to Spain.

King Seeks to Better National Relations

Basil King, the Goldwyn "Eminent Author," whose "Street Called Straight," is one of the most inspiring photoplays ever made, and who soon will be represented on the Goldwyn program by a production of even greater magnitude, "Earthbound," has found time to write a scenario calculated to strengthen the friendship between the United States and England. Under the title of "The Ultimate Aim," the scenario is dedicated to the Anglo-American Unity League, Inc., an organization for the purpose of promoting, fostering and maintaining good will and comradeship between the American and British peoples.

Two scenes from the forthcoming Pathe feature, "A Broadway Cowboy," in which William Desmond is starred

Pathe Features on July List

THE two feature productions for July release by Pathe are "A Broadway Cowboy," a farce produced by Hampton, with William Desmond in the name role, and "Man and His Woman," a powerful dramatic offering produced and directed by J. Stuart Blackton. The release dates are July 4 for "A Broadway Cowboy," and July 11 for "Man and His Woman."

Pathe has issued the following statement in connection with these two forthcoming releases:

"The pictures offer widely differing subjects and are both up to an especially high standard. The sponsors of these pictures are so deeply impressed with their excellence that they are confidently expected to be important factors in realizing Pathe's plans for a total during July that will set new records for summer business."

"The Blackton picture will present an eminent cast. Headed by Herbert Rawlinson, the cast of 'Man and His Woman' has in an important role a comparative newcomer to the Blackton forces, May McAvoy. Miss McAvoy has the role of the heroine. The other principals are familiar figures in

Hampton and Blackton Contribute to Next Month's Schedule

Blackton productions. Among them are Warren Chandler, Eulalie Jensen, Charles Kent and Louis Dean.

"Mr. Chandler plays a heavy role. He appears as Hugh Conway, a wealthy intriguer, whose deception and dishonorable dealings with women brings the hero to the brink of destruction."

"Mr. Rawlinson's part gives him excellent opportunities for powerful dramatic characterization. He is cast as Dr. John Worthing, a young physician, who is about to succeed in the aim of his scientific pursuits, to which he applies himself with such ardor that for a time he neglects the dictates of his heart when he learns that a base intriguer has wrecked the life of the woman he loves. His descent to the very gutter, from which he is rescued through the influence of another woman, gives Rawlinson some exceptional scenes in which he appears as a drug addict deliberately welcoming the destruction toward which he is headed.

"May McAvoy's performance in 'My Husband's Other Wife,' the Blackton production in which Sylvia Bremer and Robert Gordon are featured, won her the role given her in 'Man and His Woman.' It is an exacting part and Miss McAvoy's performance is a surprising revelation of histrionic ability."

"Man and His Woman" is an original story by Shannon Fife, whose contributions to the screen have been numerous, and among them are some of the most distinguished successes.

"In contrast to 'Man and His Woman' in subject, while equal to it in expressiveness, is William Desmond in 'A Broadway Cowboy.' This is a rollicking farce, telling a thoroughly diverting story in which humorous situations and melodramatic incidents are compactly done up in a picture which has something doing for every minute it holds the screen. Desmond's leading lady is Betty Francisco, who won a reputation on the stage as a beauty and whose qualifications to play in the pictures are evident in every gesture she puts forth. Miss Francisco's accomplishments in the saddle promise to give her a place with the screen's famous cow-girls, while her comedy and love scenes register with equal effectiveness."

Executive Committee Is Pleased with Result

At a special meeting of the executive committee of the board of directors of Sterling Feature Pictures, Inc., held in the offices of The Film Market, Inc., in The Times Building, New York, last Thursday, extensive plans for future productions were approved, and a large appropriation made for advertising "The Fighting Kentuckians" and productions to be made by J. Harrison Edwards, director general of the company.

The committee reviewed "The Fighting Kentuckians" at a private screening and expressed keen delight with the story and unanimous approval of the production. Robert W. Priest, who has been appointed exclusive sales agent for the entire world's rights to Sterling Feature Pictures output, stated also that he was delighted with the production.

Real Rural-Drama Promise

Irvin Willat Picturizing Frank N. Westcott's Novel, "Dabney Todd"

RURAL New England and New York drama on the screen will be approached from a new angle in Irvin V. Willat's first production under his own banner, Willat Productions, Inc. It is promised by the Hodgkinson organization. Mr. Willat selected Frank N. Westcott's novel, "Dabney Todd," to introduce himself to motion picture fans as an independent producer. Mr. Willat, however, has long been known to the public as one of the talented motion-picture directors through his work for Thomas H. Ince among others.

Mr. Willat is now at work on the picturization of "Dabney Todd" and has made arrangements for the W. W. Hodgkinson Corporation to release his productions. The chief character in the novel has been called a blood relation to "David Harum" in the book of that name which was written by Mr. Westcott's brother, Edward Naves Westcott.

"The rural drama," said Mr. Willat in commenting on his first production for his own company, "has been produced both in pictures and on the stage so many times and under so many guises that it has become stereotyped and fails to succeed because all but a very few of the versions have missed the keynote of true rural drama by not giving a faithful insight into the life of this great class of the American people."

"'Dabney Todd' is a blood relation to the famous American literary character, 'David Harum,' and his droll, human and humorous philosophy will find its way into the hearts and minds of all persons who either read the book or see the picturized version which I am making. The novel lends itself ideally to picture interpretation. I am producing the book as it was written with very few minor changes. It was not necessary to go outside the story for action and scene."

Tarkington Here to Confer To Discuss with Goldwyn Chiefs Future Original Screen Stories

FOLLOWING the announcement that Booth Tarkington has agreed to write long feature photoplays to be released by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, the well-known Indianan arrived in New York to confer with officials of the corporation respecting the projected pictures.

Mr. Tarkington, who has declared himself as eminently satisfied with the short-reel productions which Goldwyn has made of the "Edgar" themes which he wrote for the screen, said that he was preparing a statement dealing with his decision to apply himself to the screen as a medium for serious expression.

While no definite announcement of the nature of the new photoplays has as yet been made, it is known that they will be predicated on American life and developed much in the manner which has brought Mr. Tarkington the reputation of being one of the excellent literary craftsmen of the age. The author of "Edgar" recognizes, however, that the screen, as a vehicle of expression, is peculiar to itself and needs certain original elements of creation aside from those commonly used in a novel or play. He has already shown in "Edgar" his comprehension of film problems, and what is rarer among screen writers, he has shown how to meet them.

The rights to the long photoplays on which he will now begin work were secured some time ago by Tarkington Baker, a cousin of the author. Mr. Baker was recently called to India on business, and through his attorney, Henry Hertzbrun, arranged for the production by Goldwyn, giving as the reason for the selection of that company the artistic and financial results from "Edgar."

Paramount Releases June 20

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and
"The City of Masks" are Available

JUNE 20 was selected for the release of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the Artacraft feature starring Mary Pickford, which is now issued for the second time by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Robert Warwick in "The City of Masks," a Paramount picture, was also scheduled for the same date.

A story of romantic adventure is "The City of Masks," which is described as something quite unique among photoplay adaptations. In it the author, George Barr McCutcheon, who wrote "Graustark," "Brewster's Millions" and a score of other world known stories, has brought to light in a delightful manner a little known corner of New York life. On the screen it has no mission except to furnish a wholesome evening of entertainment. Nothing like it has ever been screened before, it is declared, and the chief characters are the queerest, most likable lot imaginable.

According to the picture, New York is a veritable "city of masks." There are chauffeurs and governesses and dressmakers in the big city who are really of noble rank and are masquerading in humble occupations for various reasons. The plot concerns the romance of two of the masqueraders and their adventures with politicians and the police and the bouncer-son of a rich family who tries to upset their affair.

Robert Warwick plays the role of a chauffeur who is in reality a nobleman. He is in love with a young woman who, to all intents and purposes, is a governess. This part is played by Lois Wilson and the large cast includes, among others, Theodore Kosloff, Edward Jobson, J. M. Dumont, Robert Dunbar, Helen Dunbar, Anne Schaefer and Richard Cummings.

Dempsey Exoneration Brings New Demand

Bookings on "Daredevil Jack," the Pathe Serial starring Jack Dempsey, have received a tremendous impetus as a result of the verdict by a jury in the United States District Court in Los Angeles, which acquitted Dempsey of the charge of evading the Selective Draft. Following the verdict, the second indictment charging Dempsey and Jack Kearns, his manager, with conspiracy to evade the Selective Draft Act, was dismissed. Therefore Dempsey has been cleared of all the charges held against him, and his war record given a clear bill.

George Melford Starts New Production

Work on George Melford's big Paramount production, "The Juke-lins," started when the entire company took leave of Hollywood last week for a location in Northern California, where a large street scene is to be built and where much of the important action will transpire. A complete lighting equipment was taken along, as it otherwise would have been necessary, it is stated, to string lights over a number of miles to secure the proper illumination.

Opposes Haphazard Producing

FRANK E. WOODS, supervising-director of Famous Players-Lasky's West Coast studios, who in his long connection with the motion-picture industry has been an intimate witness of all the ups and downs of the producing business, has placed himself on record as opposed to the indiscriminate formation of so-called producing companies without further warrant than the fact that they are built around some star, director or author of more or less prominence.

Mr. Woods, while declaring that he has no desire to discourage any individual who believes he has something worth while to contribute to the development of motion picture art, believes that the production of pictures has emerged from its pioneer stage, and that the most effective and lasting contributions can be made through one or another of the time-tested organizations. He says:

"It is interesting and in a sense amusing to note the efforts of various elements of the motion picture industry either to attempt the production of pictures individually or else insist upon an interest in the products of others by reason of their essentiality.

"Stars, in many instances have formed their own companies with various degrees of success; directors have undertaken to become producers; exhibitors have had a try at production; eminent authors have had their fingers in the pie; business managers have frequently endeavored to go it alone; continuity writers are organizing independently, and are demanding an interest in the productions and will possibly organize to produce for themselves. I recall at least one costume designer who thought he could produce and there are two or three instances of technical directors and press agents taking a fling at the business. It only remains for the film cutters and the stage managers to get busy and the cycle will be complete.

"Now, why all this?

"Each of these component parts of the great film producing industry maintains that it is of greater importance than the others, when as a matter of fact, there is scarcely any difference. Certainly without any one of these elements it would be virtually impossible to produce or exhibit a picture. But individually and without the help of the others they are unable to accomplish anything like satisfactory results. It requires a union of all the forces, co-ordinating, working smoothly in a bath of oil, to produce the final achievement, i. e., perfect pictures for the screen.

"What does it prove? That, indubitably, a complete and comprehensive organization is essential. The otherwise there is waste, false motion, and lost effort. It takes three years of experience and a commingling of artistic instinct and business acumen to create an organization such as Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, for example. It is patent, or should be, that only by such complete and efficient organization can worth while results be achieved and the industry be made a practical one.

"If every unit would admit its own importance but realize that it is valueless without the co-operation of all the other units, there would be less time and money wasted on endeavors to form rival companies headed by one element or another. It should be evident that as the lobster grows a claw when the old one is broken off, so the dismembered organization will merely repair its loss by defections and go merily on. The organization has to build up itself by starting with the claw and gaining an entire body with all the other members essential to its success. This takes time and is sometimes a fatal experiment.

"Better let the man who knows the business do the organizing and like the shoemaker, 'stick to your last.'"

The Scenarist of the Future

IN a statement just issued J. Parker Read, Jr., producer of the Louise Glaum and Hobart Bosworth features, discusses the prevalent vogue of adapting popular books and plays to the screen and predicts that a new type of scenarist will emerge from the present period. The statement follows in full:

"The expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars by motion picture producers for stage and literary successes for screen adaptation is neither a passing fad on the part of the screen magnates nor a permanent condition, for that matter.

"It is my belief that while the vogue of the novel and the play is at its height; while plays like 'Polyanna,' 'Mary's Ankle,' 'Way Down East,' 'Romance' and the like, are commanding extravagant figures, this period is just an interim during which the scenario writer—that is, the original writer—is girding his loins for the final test.

"However, I draw to your attention another condition with a pointed bearing on the motion picture industry. Manuscripts like 'Twenty-three and a Half Hour's Leave,' 'Gouverneur Morris' 'Behind the Door' and other magazine stories have brought more on the cinematic mart than through literary publication.

"I believe that these stories would have been purchased at approximately the same figures paid after publication, had they been presented to the several purchasing film producers before appearance in magazine form and that this fact is exerting a tremendous influence in weaning authors away from writing for literary publication to create especially, if not exclusively, for the screen.

"It means that a newer and better type of screen author is being brought to the service of the motion picture in its progressive battle for better entertainment, more effective drama.

"I have heard the opinion expressed that the hegira of stage and literary writers to the studios might prove detrimental to the stage, but I disagree with this.

"Take Louis Joseph Vance for example. He wrote 'The Lone Wolf's Daughter' for me. I produced it as a vehicle for Miss Louise Glaum. It was the first Vance story written especially for the screen and produced antecedent to its appearance in print. Now Vance is making up his 'defection' by writing a novel from 'The Lone Wolf's Daughter.'

"The confidence I place in the original screen-writer certainly is evidenced in the use I have made of C. Gardner Sullivan's stories. Miss Louise Glaum made 'Sahara' and 'Sex' for me from Mr. Sullivan's stories and has just completed 'Love Madness,' another Sullivan script. And I have another Vance story in production—an idea created expressly for the silversheet."

"I also have Bayard Veiller's first made-for-the-screen story as a vehicle for Miss Glaum and shall always favor the writer whose talents and efforts are directed primarily and dominantly toward the screen.

"To sum up briefly: Good drama is always in demand. The screen must have it and would rather get it from its own particular devotees, I am sure, than from the cullings of another craft."

Ray Studio Is Completed Of Attractive Architecture and Has New Features in Equipment

WHAT is declared to be the last word in coming picture studio construction has been written with the completion, this week, of the Charles Ray studios at Hollywood, Los Angeles. The building is not only admirably adapted to the purposes of production by the young star, but is distinctly an ornament to a neighborhood in which attention to artistic effects is the invariable rule.

Before letting the contract Mr. Ray is said to have had his commissioned architect to inspect the finest existing studios. This study yielded many ideas worthy of adaptation, but in the main the design finally selected was entirely original, the features incorporated being suggested by the latest demands of high-class film production.

Despite the high costs of labor and of materials and the inevitable perils of labor unrest, the building was completed just three months from the day on which Mr. Ray, in the presence of other officials of his company, turned the first shovel of earth. While the work proceeded the star himself did not disdain to shed his collar and coat and lend a helping hand occasionally, while Whiskers, his faithful terrier, was on constant volunteer duty as inspector and overseer.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the studios is the glass-enclosed stage, topped by a glass roof. The sides may be removed to permit openings when the shooting of street scenes is required, and with comparatively little additional construction the stage itself may be enlarged indefinitely. A number of columns supporting the roof of the building may be taken down without imperiling the stability of the structure, and the open space within the walls thus increased.

The placing of a tank beneath the stage was a unique arrangement, tanks in most instances being outside the studios. This pool may be drained and utilized as a cellar, a trap-door in the movable floor of the stage affording access. Though the glass walls insure a wealth of California sunshine for daylight effects, the complete electrical equipment fits the stage for use in interior night scenes when the windows are curtained. The installation includes a brilliant array of new and artistic lamps, twins and spots, and a 300 kilowatt K. C. generator.

Stroheim Is Back at Studio Vacation Over, Star-Director Is Preparing Details of New Film

AFTER enjoying a six weeks' visit to New York, where his latest Universal-Jewel production, "The Devil's Passkey," was shown to the critics and declared even a greater achievement than his first creation, "Blind Husbands," Erich Von Stroheim is back at his desk at Universal City.

He took only sufficient time to shake hands with his co-workers at the huge studio before setting to the task of making elaborate preparations for the filming of his next super-feature, which will be a story of Continental Europe, tentatively called "Foolish Wives."

The scenes of Von Stroheim's story will be laid in Southern France, with the most important sequence at Monte Carlo. The famous casino at this world-renowned resort, it is stated, will be duplicated in every detail both in interior and exterior, and for greater realism the Universal technical department will probably erect the sets on Catalina Island within sight of the Pacific.

One of the important announcements in connection with Von Stroheim's next production is the fact that he will enact one of the important roles himself—a Russian prince. He has already selected for his cast Sam De Grasse, who played the leading male roles in both his former successes, "Blind Husbands" and "The Devil's Passkey." Maude George, who played the Parisian modiste; and Mae Busch, who had the role of the Spanish dancer in "The Devil's Passkey," will also have splendid parts in the forthcoming production.

Von Stroheim is now combing the theatrical field for the type of leading woman he has in mind. She must be young, stately, beautiful, a blonde, and must be capable of the highest flights of emotion.

President Sees "Sand" at White House

At the conclusion of the long interview with Louis Seibold, which was published in the New York World on June 18, President Wilson, accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and the interviewer, went into the East Room of the White House to see William S. Hart in his new Paramount picture, "Sand!" The President, impressed by the glowing editorial indorsement by Dr. Frank Crane, of "Humoresque," the Paramount feature now being shown at the Criterion theatre in New York, has requested his private secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, to procure the picture for a White House showing.

"Old Dad" for Fall Release Print Is Now on Way East to Be Inspected by Mayer Organization

AFTER five months spent in preparation, "shooting," cutting, titling and assembling, Mildred Harris Chaplin's Mayer-made special, "Old Dad," is now complete and a print is on its way to New York for inspection by Mr. Mayer's Eastern organization. The story, which has had tremendous circulation through its appearance serially in the Woman's Home Companion and in book form, was written by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott and adapted to the screen by J. Grubb Alexander and Madge Tyrone.

It concerns a wife wedded to art, a husband wedded to business, and a daughter practically an orphan thereby.

Mr. Mayer has used the utmost care in selecting a supporting cast for Mrs. Chaplin and that he has succeeded will readily be seen by a glance over the list, which includes John Sainpolis, who assumes the title role, Myrtle Stedman, Irving Cummings, star of many photoplays, George Stewart, a brother of Anita Stewart, Hazel Howell, Edwin Brown, Loyola O'Connor, Bess Mitchell and Tula Belle.

The picture was directed by Lloyd Ingraham, who jumped into fame through his wonderful work in the Douglas MacLean and Doris May series.

The settings are said to exemplify to the "nth" degree the Mayer policy of lavishness. Newspaper critics of Los Angeles who viewed the production before it was shipped East, are unanimous in declaring it the best thing Mrs. Chaplin has yet done and some go so far as to predict that it will prove one of the really big specials of the year.

It will be released early in the fall through First National, the distributor of all of the Mayer-made Mildred Harris Chaplin productions.

"Movie Chats" Meeting with Big Demand

Mr. Charles Urban announced last week that his "Movie Chats" have been meeting with such demand that Messrs. Butcher, of England, have increased their order fifty per cent. David P. Howells' office, according to Mr. Urban, is meeting with equal success in the foreign distribution of this product and the Kineto Reviews, in other parts of the world. In the United States, the Empire State Film Corp., A. G. Whyte, manager, (covering New York State and Northern New Jersey); the Celebrated Players Film Corp., J. L. Friedman, president, (covering Illinois and Indiana); the Standard Film Service Co., Harry Charnas, president, (covering Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky); the Elliott Film Corp., (covering Minnesota and the Dakotas); and with several other distributors, the contracts with whom have already been drawn, the business on these subjects is said to be excellent.

T. Roy Barnes Engaged by Christie Film

T. Roy Barnes has arrived in Los Angeles to do "So Long Letty" with the Christie Film Company. Work is to start within a week under Al Christie's direction. Barnes, who is assigned to one of the biggest parts in the screen version of "Letty," changed his plans in order to come West again for another picture. After completing his work in the recent Goldwyn picture, "Scratch My Back," Barnes went East and was to have started rehearsals for another stage play, when negotiations were started by Christie to secure him for the important role which Walter Catlett played in the stage version.

American Cinema Will Conduct Campaign

American Cinema Corporation, through its president, Walter Niebuhr, promises an interesting announcement shortly relative to reorganization and plans for the distribution of its screen productions. Extensive advertising has been arranged for, the campaign on the E. K. Lincoln feature, "The Inner Voice," and the Mollie King Film, "Women Men Forget," being already well under way. Two new productions are now practically ready for release—"Stolen Moments," and "His Brother's Keeper."

Lakeside Studio Ready Soon

Plant of the Yellowstone Productions, Inc., Is Elaborately Fitted

THE new Lakeside Studio of Yellowstone Productions, Inc., recently organized with a capitalization of $300,000, is rapidly nearing completion. Machinery of all sorts is being installed, and indications give grounds for the assertion that when finished it will be one of the most adequately equipped photoplay plants to be found among the independent companies.

The main stage, built entirely of matched hardwood polished as smooth as a ballroom floor, measures 90 by 200 feet. The company has installed its own motor-generating plant to supply a heavy flow of direct current to the lighting equipment, which is sufficient to flood the stage to the farthest corner. The stage is surrounded by twenty-four well-furnished dressing-rooms, and several larger dressing-rooms for extra talent and lounging rooms for the screen workers are located upon a balcony above which also affords a place for spectators and guests of members of the company to observe the making of photoplays.

A laboratory of great capacity and with every modern improvement has been installed under the direction of an expert, formerly superintendent of a big Los Angeles commercial laboratory. The Yellowstone corporation is prepared not only to finish its own productions, but those of other companies who are less qualified in the matter of equipment and chemical staff.

Officers of the corporation are: George W. Plummer, president and treasurer; Sam M. Thompson, secretary; and Charles E. Bartlett, a photoplay-producer of broad experience, vice-president and director of productions. Had Hoadley, formerly of Universal's writing staff, has been engaged as scenario editor, and already has the continuity of the company's first production well on its way to completion. The Yellowstone Corporation plans to produce only Western features taken from popular books.

Brandt to Enlarge His Field

Anticipates an Expansion of His Sales and Producing Activities

ON the eve of his leaving for the East, Joe Brandt announces that he will materially broaden the field of his sales and producing operations. It will be remembered that Brandt, at a recent convention of the Independent Exchange-men and Producers at Chicago, laid the foundation for a plan whereby the independent producers would be assured of a ready market for their productions. This plan has since worked out in a most practical way and the first evidence of its feasibility is the completion of the organization of the Federated Film Exchanges.

Brandt has been busy on the Coast supervising "The Son of Tarzan"—a serial which is being directed by Harry Revier and produced by the National Film Corporation. Brandt is enthusiastic about the progress of the serial to date and had no hesitancy in saying that it would, without doubt, be the best serial that he had ever supervised. Although "Lightning Bryce," which was the first serial made by the National under Brandt's supervision, proved to be an international success, Brandt predicts that "The Son of Tarzan" will eclipse the records of any serials that ever have been made.

"While each episode," says the Brandt statement, "will be replete with thrills, nevertheless, each situation will be consistent and the general outline of the story, as it was written by Edgar Rice Burroughs, will be followed. Just enough license has been taken with the original manuscript to inject dramatic situations and exciting scenes wherever necessary in order to make it a fast-moving production. Roy Somerville, the best available scenario writer in the East, arranged the continuity."

Namara to Start New Production Soon

Namara, star of the operatic stage, and remembered for her stage success in "Alone At Last," is shortly to start work on her second screen production for American Cinema Corporation. Her first appearance for the cinema, "Stolen Moments," has been completed under the direction of James Vincent, and is to be given an invitational showing in the near future.

Second Release Out for "Screen Snapshots"

Jack Cohn reports that the second issue of the single-reel bi-monthly, "Screen Snapshots," which has just been released, is made up of shots of sixteen different stars, a combination, he claims, which has never been equalled in his long experience in turning out single-reel features.

Critics who have viewed this film agree, according to Cohn, that it is a very live number and a big improvement over the first issue.

A. L. Miller Completes New Comic Series

Word has been received by the Radin Pictures from A. Lincoln Miller, the West Coast humorist, that he has shipped three new releases of "The Weekly Indigestion" to New York. This series of single reels are said to be the only ones of their kind on the market.

Reports Territories Sold

"His Pajama Girl," Starring Billie Rhodes, Sold for Big Territories

M R. C. A. MEADE, sales manager of the C. B. Price Co., Inc., has returned from his trip through the Central West. While in the various exchange centers, Mr. Meade screened Billie Rhodes in "His Pajama Girl," the C. B. Price Co. state-right feature, which they are now marketing. In practically every center which he visited Mr. Meade succeeded in disposing of the picture. New York State was purchased by the First National Exchange. In Chicago, the Superior Screen Service, Inc., Harry Weiss, president, bought the production for Illinois and Indiana. The Clune Film Service bought it for the territory of California, Arizona and Nevada. In Kansas, City, Mr. Meade sold the picture to the N. & N Film Exchange for Kansas, Missouri, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. In Detroit he disposed of it to Hennessey & Moross for Michigan. North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee were secured by Wassman & Stephens of Atlanta, Ga., Louisiana and Mississippi were secured by the S. T. Stephens Distributing Corporation.

In addition to these sales, some of the foreign territory has been disposed of, and other domestic sales are about to be closed. Mr. Meade within the next ten days or two weeks will visit other buyers in the territory for whom he will screen the production.

Canada has also been sold on this production to the Canadian Exhibitors Exchange of Toronto for the entire Dominion of Canada. This sale was recently effected when Mr. Price made a trip through Canada in the interest of this production, and the other subjects which are handled by his company.

Some of those who have purchased this production already report splendid bookings on it. Mr. Weiss in Chicago stated that he has never had a picture in his exchange that has caused such immediate demand as "His Pajama Girl" has. He has asked for extra prints of the production.

"Rich Slave" State-Righted

MABEL TALIAFERRO is starred by the Jaxon Film Corporation in a six-part production entitled "The Rich Slave," offered on the state right market. The Photo Products Export Co., of 220 West 42d street, New York, which is releasing the picture, has issued the following statement:

"This is a remarkable picture in very many ways—especially for the wealth of well known names identified with the production. The authorship is ascribed to Lloyd Lonergan; and Romaine Fielding plays the lead and also has the credit of directing the picture. In the cast are the names of June Day, Joseph Smiley, Edgar Veller, Ira M. Hards, Barney Gillmore, Ben Hendricks, Herbert Standing, Emile Le Croix, Robert Forsythe, Morgan Thorpe, Joseph Webber, A. H. Brady and Master Bert Hopkins.

"This is not a fashion-plate, silk stocking, kimono, pink-nelice story of The Cosmopolitan Magazine and Saturday Evening Post variety. Lord bless you, no. It's a thriller and no mistake. The story of a lost heiress gives rise to innumerable adventures, sensations, surprises, plots, and counter-plots; and the picture is so stuffed with action that your attention must never relax if you want to keep track of what is going on in the drama."

Famous "Sleuth" on Screen

First of Nick Carter Series is Nearing Completion in the East

THOMAS JAY CARRIGAN will be starred as "Nick Carter" in the "100,000 Kiss," the first of the "Nick Carter" series of two-reel productions to be produced by the Broadwell Productions, Inc. The "100,000 Kiss" was started on June 3rd at the studios located at Filmland City, Medford, Mass., and is now nearing completion. In the supporting cast Colin Chase plays the part of "Chiek," and Mae Gaston is given the role of "Peggy."

In the story, based on "The 100,000 Kiss," Carter aids the Customs Inspectors to trap a clever diamond smuggler who has outwitted them for years. The smuggler swears revenge on Carter, and his methods to obtain it, combined with the operations of his gang of smugglers, to defraud the Government, and the consequent outwitting of them by Carter and his two assistants, makes one of the greatest two-reel detective dramas that has ever been staged.

In its statement just issued, the Broadwell organization devotes considerable attention to the career of Tom Carrigan, the star. Following is the statement in part:

"Carrigan was educated in the schools of Lapeer, Mich., attended the University of Michigan and took a post-graduate course at Stanhope, and by a peculiar coincidence, played his first professional stage engagement in 'Brown of Harvard.' Since then he has had a wide and varied experience in both stage and screen work, having played in such famous plays as 'Monte Cristo,' 'Mother Carey's Chickens,' 'The Copperhead,' etc., etc. The larger appeal of the motion-pictures attracted his to screen work, its progress artistically and also educationally combined with the varied interest and fascination of the work itself, tempted him from the footlights, and he has been shining resplendently in the glare of the Kleg's ever since.

Pioneer Has Strong Array

Well-Known Screen Players Cast in Coming Releases for Autumn

IN the list of productions which the Pioneer has scheduled for release during the coming fall, there will appear a notable assemblage of well-known screen players.

Marie Doro will make her first appearance under the Pioneer banner in "Midnight Gambols." She will be followed by Louise Huff who will have the stellar honors in the new Pioneer production "What Women Want." Following this, Miss Jose Collins will return to the screen in a new emotional drama in which Godfrey Tearle will appear as co-star. Following Miss Collins, Alma Rubens who has scored such a brilliant success in "Humoresque," now playing an extended engagement at the Criterion theatre in New York, will be seen in Daniel Carson Goodman's production "Thoughtless Women."

One of the biggest fall releases of the Pioneer will be the appearance of Emily Stevens in the picturization of Harold McGrath's novel "The Place of Honeymoons." In this picture Montagu Love will appear with Miss Stevens. The "Place of Honeymoons," which is now rapidly nearing completion at the studios of the Atlas Film Corporation, will be one of the most pretentious screen productions to be offered during the forthcoming season. The story gives Emily Stevens full opportunity for the display of her emotional abilities.

Hallmark Mgr. Entertains Exhibitors

G. N. Montgomery, general sales manager, Hallmark Pictures Corporation, while present at the convention in Cleveland, received a wire from Harry P. Diggs, home office, suggesting that a print of the Willard-Dempsey fight pictures was available for exhibition. Mr. Montgomery got an idea. It was hot in Cleveland, some of the boats operating up and down the river could accommodate 1,200 people. He chartered one for a moonlight excursion, rigged on deck a projection apparatus and screen, invited every exhibitor at the convention to be present and to the strains of a brass band and the light of a full moon, gave more than a thousand visiting exhibitors their first glimpse of the championship battle.

Some stunt was the unanimous acclaim.

The pictures were also shown at the Strand Theatre, admission free.

Hank Mann Stages Big Thrills in Comedy

In his latest two-reel comedy for Arrow, Hank Mann, who is heading his own company, has incorporated a number of thrilling situations which are declared to be equally as interesting and exciting as those seen in the average Western serial.

Quoted among the thrilling scenes in the story is Hank's daring leap from one aeroplane to another, while both machines are traveling at a high altitude. Another exciting incident in the picture is seen in Hank's dangerous climb up the side of an eight-story building. Reaching the top of the structure he makes a thrilling jump eight feet across to the roof of an adjoining building, thus performing two hair-raising stunts in succession.

Reelcraft Makes Big Changes

INCREASED production activities of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation have necessitated several important changes in the Production department. Up to the present time the comedy-producing units have been widely scattered, using three separate studios and organizations, one in Los Angeles, one in Hollywood and another in Chicago at the Reelcraft Studio.

Under the new arrangement the comedy units are to be centralized and unified under the direct supervision of Western Coast Production Manager Nat Spitzer at the Hollywood Studio of Reelcraft, which up to the present time has housed the Billy Franey single-reel comedy unit under the direction of George Jeske, and the Texas Guinan Western unit, under the direction of Jay Hunt. Commencing July first the comedy units will all be at Hollywood.

Alice Howell, the comedienne, who has been making her series of two-reel comedies at the Chicago Studio of Reelcraft, will at the completion of her present picture, titled "Lunatics in Politics," be transferred to the Hollywood Studio with the principals of her staff. Dick Smith, who has been chief director for Alice Howell will also be on the directorial staff at Hollywood.

Reelcraft has several other important announcements to be made shortly in connection with its forthcoming releases for its exclusive short-subject program. At the present time, it is chiefly concerned with the inauguration of another series of two-reel comedies to be known as the "Royal Comedies." The Reelcraft statement on its new brand of comedy-releases follows:

"In response to the demands for more two-reel comedies from the distributors of its exclusive short-subject program throughout the United States and the principal foreign countries, the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation announces the completion of plans for the distribution of another series of two-reel comedies to be added to its rapidly growing list of releases. The new series will be known as the Royal Comedies and released on a weekly schedule.

"Reelcraft plans to feature the brand name rather than the names of the individual stars who may appear in the series from time to time. Leon Errol is announced as the star in one of the first pictures to be released.

"Leon Errol has a world-wide reputation in vaudeville and the varieties and is said to have made more people laugh than any other comedian with his satire of the good humored 'Souse,' a character in which he has appeared in nearly every vaudeville house of prominence in the United States.

"Errol makes his motion picture debut in a two-reel farce comedy titled 'Buggins,' a story that has been closely related to and along the lines of his famous vaudeville act. The screen version is said to contain even more laughs on account of the time provided in its screen length.

"With Leon Errol as a criterion of what is to be offered in this Royal Comedy series, the exhibitors may expect a complete program of excellent comedies. Reelcraft has set a standard of quality which every release must surpass before being distributed to the exhibitors.

"In establishing a standard of excellence for the Royal Comedy Series, Reelcraft insists that the production shall have received the same individual attention as that given to the best of features, from the selection of the story to the finished advertising of the individual release to the exhibitors."

ANNOUNCEMENT is made from the Hollywood studios that Doralinda, the eccentric dancer, who has appeared in several Shubert Broadway productions and played in films, has been engaged by Metro to be starred in a series of productions from stories especially written to suit her talents. The first of the series will be "The Passion Flower" and expectations are that filming will be started by July 1st. Doralinda was featured in "Naulahaka" with Antonio Moreno and since produced "The Charm of Nasoni," which has not been released. For the past season she has been in New York.

An all star production is to be made of "Someone in the House" from the stage play of the same name and Lois Zellner is now writing continuity for the subject which will be directed by John E. Ince.

Cast for "Blackmail" from the Lucia Chamberlain story and scenario by A. S. LaVino, which is to star Viola Dana, has been selected and includes Wyndham Standing as leading man. Alfred Allan, who recently completed an important role in "Burning Daylight," has been cast for the role of leader of the band of crooks. Dallas M. Fitzgerald will direct the making of the production.

Arthur Stringer's story, "Are All Men Alike," starring vehicle for May Allison, is now in production under the direction of Phillip Rosen. Ruth Stonehouse plays one of the leading roles in this and John Elliott has been cast to appear as the uncle of the harum scarum heroine taken by May Allison. Others in the cast are Winifred Greenwood and Emanuel Turner. This story originally appeared under the title of "The Waffle Iron" and is laid principally in New York and particularly in the Greenwich Village, where situations produce a series of highly melodramatic thrills.

Although all scenes have been filmed for the initial Buster Keaton two-reel Metro comedy no title has been selected for this by Director Eddie Cline. The subject will be ready for preview by studio officials within the next week and at this time the title will be decided upon.

The new building for the Metro scenario department will be ready for occupancy within the next week and will afford the persons of literary mind ideal environment. The department is located in the secluded part of the Hollywood plant and arbors of vines completely enclose gardens which surround the L shaped structure.

Hayden Talbot is a new member of the Metro staff of scenario writers and the first work assigned to him by Bayard Veiller, head of the Metro scenario department, is that of preparing script for "Body and Soul," which is to be Alice Lake's next starring vehicle. Talbot recently returned from Europe, where he served the Northcliffe papers as special writer during the late war and wrote a book which has been published under the title of "After 'the Day.'"

News Notes from the West Coast

By J. C. JESSEN

Previously he wrote a number of plays which were produced on Broadway, the number including "The Truth Wagon," "The Lesser Evil," "Hail Columbia" and during the coming season George Tyler will produce "Her Bachelor Husband." He is author of the original film plays, "Matrimony" and "The Married Virgin."

Sarah Y. Mason of the Metro scenario department is writing continuity for the Irving S. Cobb story, "The Five Dollar Baby," and Albert S. LaVino is at work on the script for the third of the Jack London stories series, which will be "The Star Rover." Mitchell Lewis is continuing as star of this series being made under the supervision of C. E. Shurtleff.

SELIG

COLONEL WILLIAM N. SELIG is shortly to produce the B. N. Bower story, "Andy of the Flying U Ranch," which will be a comedy-drama directed by Nat Watt. At the present time the Selig activities include the making of the final scenes for "Riding the Wind," by William E. Wing, which is the first of a series of features

Colonel Selig is producing with Franklyn Farnum as star. Genevieve Berte is playing the opposite lead.

The six-reel animal comedy special, "In for the Night," is nearing completion and the only scenes yet to be made are those with wild animals. Irene Wallace is playing the featured role in this subject, but reports from the cast are to the effect that there are more animals than people, the script requiring tigers, lions, pumas, bears and a number of other species.

J. D. HAMPTON

THE Jesse D. Hampton production for Pathe starring H. B. Warner, which is adapted from the John A. Morosoff novel, "The People Against Nancy Preston," is to be titled "Going Straight." Complete cast has been named for this subject which has Lillian Rich playing opposite Warner and a supporting cast including Harvey Clarke, Howard Davies, Claude Payton, Frederick Huntly and Fred Kohler, which will be directed by Henry King. To this organization was added this week Eliot Howe, who will serve as assistant director with King. Howe recently directed four Frank Keenan productions and more recently finished one starring Dustin Farnum.

The last scene for "Half a Chance" consisted of a knock out as the final of a twenty round fight between Maylon Hamilton and William Lyon West. The big fight was staged in specially constructed arena occupying the entire Hampton stage and was directed by Robert Thornby. This film is now being edited by K. F. Anderson. With this work completed Thornby is to direct the filming of "That Girl Montana," starring Blanche Sweet.

Jesse D. Hampton is having a series of three publicity films made under the direction of Penny Wright, featuring Blanche Sweet, H. B. Warner and William Desmond, which will be used in connection with an exploitation campaign shortly to be launched by Pathe.

UNIVERSAL

UNIVERSAL production staff was increased by two units this week, both of which are to make special productions with all star casts. One is to be in charge of J. P. McGowan, who was formerly with the Universal, but for the past six months has been playing in special features. Director McGowan's first work will be "Below the Dead Line," and the cast selected in part includes Bob Anderson, Bert Sprotte, James Warner and Lillian Biron. This production will be from an original story and scenario by Arthur Henry Gooden.

The other special feature being made is of a story dealing with the conflict continually going on between the upper and under worlds. William Craft has been selected to direct this and the cast includes Joe Moore, Eileen Sedgwick, Ed Brady and a number of other very well known players.

Everything is in readiness for the filming of the Priscilla Dean picture, "Outside the Law," by Director Tod Browning, and the first scenes will be taken June 21st. The cast for this as previously announced includes Wheeler Oatman, Lon Chaney, Ralph Lewis and E. A. Warren. Miss Dean has just returned from San Francisco, where she spent a week in Chinatown familiarizing herself with people and conditions preparatory to playing in this production. While this picture is being made preparations will go forward for the making of "The Cat That Walked Alone," an original story by John Colton of the Universal scenario department, so that filming can be started on this picture immediately upon completion of the present one.

The work of filming "The Watchmaker," a story laid in New York, was begun by Director George Hull this week, and it will costar Rudolph Christians and Lee Kohlmar, recently placed under contract by Universal. Harry Franklyn has been selected to direct this subject and the supporting cast includes a number of well known players. They are Gladys Walton, Carl Gerard, Frederick Gamble, Carl Ullman, Jennie Lee and Verne Winters.

Jack Jacard and company, headed by Leonard Clapham, are in Bear Valley this week securing the final Canadian Northwoods scenes for "Under Northern Lights." Virginia Faire is playing opposite Clapham and other numbers are William Buckley, Herbert Bethew, Charles Brimley and a number of others. Upon completion of work in this picture Clapham is to go in training to be in condition to enter the Olympic games tryout at Pasadena at an early date. Director Jacard will next film "When the Devil Laughs," with Miss Faire and Clapham, and this week the Universal purchased a story titled "The Timber Wolf," which will be filmed later.

The two additional stories have been purchased for Carmel Myers, one of these being "Kate of Crime Street," by Edgar Wallace, which will be made immediately following the completion of the play Miss Myers is now working in under the direction of Rollin Sturges titled "In Folly's Trail." The other story purchased is at present titled "The Orchid" and is a story by Marguerite C. Storms. "In Folly's Trail" was a magazine story by Katherine Leiser Robbins and in it Miss Myers is supported by Thomas Holding and a cast of well known Universal players.

Harry Carey, under the direction of Reeves Eason, has completed work for "Fightin' Job" and the present plans of the Universal provide that he shall next play in "The Hooh Hound," which is an original play by John Colton.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are giving their attention to the editing and titling of their second release, "La La Lucille," and while this is being done continuity is being prepared for their next attraction, which will be an adaptation of the Edgar Franklyn story, "Once a Plumber." They will probably not be ready for filming this for another two weeks.

While playing in a wrestling scene this week Frank Mayo dislocated his wrist. This scene is for the story laid in the south during the reconstruction period titled "Hitchin' Post," which is being directed by J. R. Ford. The cast is composed of Beatrice Burnham, Dagmar Godowsky, Joe Harris, J. Farrell McDonald, Mark Fenton and others.

CHRISTIE

THE first announcement of the Christie Film Company concerning the series of twenty-six two-reel comedies to be released through the educational film exchanges was made this week and gives a list of the first four films for this new distribution system. The first will be "Kiss Me, Caroline," with a cast made up of Bobby Vernon, Teddy Sampson, Niel Burns and Charlotte Merriam, which will be ready for the exhibitors on Sunday, July 4th. The second release for July will feature Fay Tincher and is titled "A Seaside Siren." This is a typical Christie beach picture with a big bevy of bathing beauties. For August the first release will be "Out for a Night," now being finished by Director Reggie Morris, with a cast that includes Eddie Barry, Niel Burns, Margaret Fitzroy and Charlotte Merriam. Al Christie is making the second August release as yet untitled which will have Harry Gribbon, Helen Darling and Teddy Sampson as principals. The first Al Christie special, "So Long Letty," will be in production during the next week. T. Roy Barnes, who is to play one of the leading roles in this comedy from the stage musical farce, arrived from New York this week. The cast is now all completed and consists of Grace Darmonth, Walter Hires, and Colcen Moore as principals, with important parts taken by Harry Gribbon, Vera Stedman, Niel Burns and others.

The first of the Arsene Lupin Robertson-Cole series starring Wedgewood Nowell has been completely filmed by Director Scott Sidney and continuity for others of this series is now being prepared. The entire series will be made at the Christie plant. The first has a remarkable cast of well known players, the principals in support of Nowell being Wallace Beery, Ralph Lewis, William V. Mong, J. P. Lockney, Colin Kenny, Kathryn Adams, Marguerite La Plante, Vera Stedman and others.

GOLDWYN

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, who recently returned from Europe, is expected in Los Angeles early during the coming week. The rumors that Goldwyn is to have a London or Paris studio have preceded the president of the company to the coast and it is expected a volume of applications will be made by members of the producing staff for transfer to the new European plant. Mr. Goldwyn plans to be on the coast about two weeks.

Simultaneously with the arrival of Mr. Goldwyn production work will be started by three companies. Casts are now being selected for the George Ade play, "Just Out of College," which will be filmed by Al Green and star Jack Pickford. Victor Schirzinger is to continue as director of Mabel Normand in "Head Over Heels," and E. Mason Hopper will begin the making of the fifth of the Edgar series.

The Reginald Barker production making "The Black Pawl," with Russell Simpson, Helene Chadwick, John Bowers and James Mason has returned to the Culver City studios after five weeks at work on boats and cliffs at Catalina.

F. P.-LASKY

CECIL B. DE MILLE in completing plans for his next production has placed Forest Stanley under contract to appear as leading man following his very successful career on both speaking stage and in films and a very persistent rumor has it that Ann Forest, who scored such a decided hit in "Dangerous Days," the Goldwyn Mary Roberts Rinehart production, will be the featured leading woman. The latter report could not be verified at the Hollywood studios. The cast selected to support Wallace Reid in "The Charm School" is headed by Lila Lee and other principals are Adele Farrington, Beulah Baines, Edwin Stevens and Lincoln Stedman. Work was started by the Reid company under the direction of James Cruze Monday this week, when Reid returned from a six weeks' vacation. The continuity was written by Tom Geraghty.

Mountain and lake scenes in the vicinity of Truckee, California, will serve as exterior location for the George Melford production of the Opie Reed novel, "The Jucklins," and this film will have one of the biggest casts of any of the recent releases of the Paramount-Artcraft program. The company left for Truckee this week and party consisted of almost fifty people. The principal players are Mabel Julian Scott, Ruth Renick, Monte Blue, C. Ogle, F. Medgley, Vell Covington, Winter Hall, J. M. Dumont, Clarence Burton, Guy Oliver, Robert Brower, Jack Herbert, Jack Hull, William Scott, Arthur Treboal, Jack Byon, Frank Weatherway, Charles Weldash and George Perry.

The little town of Jamestown, in Tuolumne County, California, has all the atmosphere required for the exteriors of the Roscoe Arbuckle production, "The Traveling Salesman," which was the starring vehicle for Frank McIntyre on the stage and screen and which is now being produced from script by Walter Woods under the direction of Joseph Henabery. Betty Ross Clarke is playing the leading feminine role.

Ethel Clayton is to depart for the east and Europe early next week where she is to make two pictures at the new studios of Famous Players-Lasky and for this reason Director Tom Forman is making all scenes in which Miss Clayton appears this week. The subject now in the making is tentatively titled "Rosane Ozanc," written for the screen by Mary H. O'Connor, the editor of the Lasky studio's scenario department.

Several mammoth bulls were used in scenes for the Bryant Washburn production being directed by Major Maurice Campbell at the Morosco studio this week and the animals injected a number of thrills that were not in the script written by Douglas Bronson for the screen production at present titled "Wanted a Blemish." The star and director both qualified as toreadors and all the members of the company escaped without injury. With the completion of this picture Washburn leaves Famous Players Lasky and reports have it that he will make a trip to New York and possibly Europe before resuming work.

Script now being prepared by Genevieve Daniels from the Cosmo Hamilton story "His Friend and His Wife" will be ready for production the latter part of June and is to be made by William C. deMille.

TOURNEUR

THE first subject to be put in production for the Big Six Productions of the newly organized Associated Producers is that for which plans were made this week by Maurice Tournour. This producer expects to begin work on the first release by July 1st but no information is given out by his organization other than Barbara Bedford will play a featured if not the leading featured part. Miss Bedford is a recent discovery by Tournour.

Clarke Irvine who for the past year has been associated with Goldwyn in the publicity and film library departments has been added to the Tournour organization and will serve as director of publicity. Irvine has been identified with the film industry for the past five years.

At the present time Mr. Tournour is making final scenes for "The Tiger Lady" from the stage play by Sidney Toler which will star Hope Hampton. This will be the last production for Mr. Tournour's present contract. He intends to remain at Universal City for the filming of Big Six productions.

VITAGRAPH

commenced this week when grounds were cleared for the erection of an enclosed glass stage which is to be built during July and August. Other improvements totaling a cost of $100,000 are included in the expansion plans and they consist of additional dressing room buildings and office buildings for the staff.

William Duncan completed the last scenes for "The Silent Avenger" serial on June 15th, thus requiring a trifle more than six months for the making of the fifteen two reel releases. The Duncan company which includes Edith Johnson as leading woman has been given a two weeks vacation and at the end of this time will begin the filming of another serial now being prepared by president Albert E. Smith and Cleveland Moffett at Oyster Bay, New York.

Director Chester Bennet and Daniel Williams company have returned from San Francisco and San Pedro where water scenes were made for "The Purple Cipher." A number of boats of the U. S. Navy stationed on the Pacific coast were used for scenes in this film, the company spending several days aboard the submarine H-U.

Director William J. Bowman and Antonio Moreno company are working at Chatsworth, California, this week on the fifth episode of "The Veiled Mystery" and director William Bertram and the "Hidden Dangers" company are using two complete trains for the making of railroad scenes.

Director Jess Robbins has prepared the script and is now working on the first scenes for Jimmy Aubrey's comedy titled "Paradise Alley." The principal players for this are Babe Hardy, Evelyn Nelson, Katherine Myers, Jack Ackroyd and Jack Duffy. Norman Tauroy is directing aeroplane scenes at the Mercury aviation field for the next Larry Seeman comedy. This director has completed all scenes for "The Stage Hand" which has been shipped East.

BUFFALO

The Famous Players-Lasky company has taken over the operation of the Star theatre, according to reports. Harold B. Franklin, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, says the Shea Amusement company was approached by a representative of the producing company on a plan whereby the Star was to show the F. P. L. super-features and the Hippodrome the remainder of the program. The proposition was turned down. It is said that the new operators will spend a large sum in making over the house, changing the entrance to the Pearl street corner and erecting a marquee in front of the theatre.

Eddie Hayes, former manager of Metro and Robertson-Cole offices, has accepted the salesmanship of the First National office here.

Charles Nickum, owner of the Gem theatre in Olean, N. Y., will build a new theatre in that city at First and State street, where Mr. Nickum has purchased the Whitton property which he will remodel into a modern picture house. The "New Gem" will be ready August 1.

Jack G. Edwards is in charge of a company making a picture for the Sterling Pictures corporation in and around Olean, N. Y., where the villages, oil fields and lumber camps are being used as background for a big feature.

Morris Pincus, vice-president of the Olympic Amusement company, operating the Olympic and Lyric theatres, died suddenly at his home, 180 Ashland avenue, recently.

Dan Savage, manager of the Empire State Sales company, has engaged Leo Murphy and Marian Mack, formerly with Robertson-Cole as salesman and bookkeeper, respectively.

Clayton Sheehan, district manager; J. H. Greenwald, local manager, and Frank Moyihan, in charge of the Syracuse territory for Fox, were joined by H. J. Sheehan, district manager for the Pacific coast recently, and all journeyed to the Fox convention in New York. Clayton Sheehan reports the new Albany office in South Orange street will open shortly. O. R. Rieffel in the new cashier at the Buffalo Fox office.

Jack Kirach of the Dooley office reports the purchase of "A Child for Sale," by his company. Mr. Kirach visited Thomas W. Dooley in Syracuse recently.

Harry Lux of the De Luxe and Alhambra theatres was a Buffalo visitor recently. Mr. Lux toured to Buffalo. While here he saw "The Deep Purple," which was screened for him in Shea's Hippodrome by Lee Marcus, assistant Realarl manager.

A. W. Young, formerly with Gardiner Pictures, Inc., has joined Fred W. Zimmerman, former sales manager for Gardiner, who has entered business for himself. Mr. Zimmerman has office space at the Realarl office. He is handling all the Clara Kimball Young subjects and other productions.

R. H. Clark, general sales manager for First National, was in Buffalo a short time ago, for a conference with P. H. Smith, manager of the Buffalo exchange.

Frank S. Hopkins, Universal manager, has gone to the mountains to regain his health. The Universal office is preparing to move into the new Warner building in Franklin street soon.

Henry W. Kahn, manager of the Metro office, left Buffalo recently for a tour of the territory and ended in New York for the Metro convention. Mr. Kahn reports booking "Old Lady 31" with the Shea Court street house and Shea's Hippodrome. Victor O'Shea has been engaged by Mr. Kahn as a salesman.

DETROIT

John H. Kunsky this week announced his plans for his new theatre adjacent to Grand Circus park, the new center of Detroit's business district. It will be in the block bounded by Broadway, Madison and John R. streets with entrance on both Broadway and Madison, office buildings taking up much of the frontage on both streets with the theatre auditorium in between. The house will be known as the Capitol and plans prepared by C. Howard Crane, call for about 4,000 seats. One of the office buildings will be 10 stories in height and the other of six stories, and the larger will be exclusively for physicians and dentists. George W. Trendle, who is Mr. Kunsky's general manager, will take direct charge of the construction and operation of the new enterprise.

William S. Hart in the first of his new super-specials, "The Toll Gate," did so well at the Broadway Strand that the picture was held over by Manager Phil Geichman for a second week.

M. Harlan Starr has resigned as manager for the Triange exchange to take charge of the Educational Films Corp. releases in Michigan.

INDIANAPOLIS

M. E. Rice, formerly of Dixon, Ill., now owns the Majestic in Ft. Wayne and will remodel it during the summer.

S. Barrett McCormick scored his greatest triumph recently with the most pretentious pageant yet staged as a part of "Circle" atmosphere. The pageant, "Pagan Purple," was devised and staged by McCormick with scenery done by Frank J. Zimmerer, Circle art director, and music written especially by Norma Gregg. A cast of thirty-five was required in the piece, which was built around an old Chinese love tale as part of the exploitation for "The Yellow Typhoon." Preparations for the pageant required three weeks. Publicity given the exploitation equalled that given the picture.

The United Exhibitors Productions Company, which announced several weeks ago that it intends to invade the Hoosier field as a league of exhibitor-producers made its first public move last week when it purchased the Sipe theatre, a legitimate house, in Kokomo, Ind., at a reported price of $60,000 and announced plans to completely remodel it this summer. Merrill Moore, formerly with the Universal business staff in Los Angeles, will have charge of the Kokomo house, the company announced. The company also announced that by the time the Sipe is rebuilt it will have productions of its own ready for exhibition.

SALT LAKE CITY

Frank Newman, manager of the local Pantages theatre, recently announced that the Pantages will run continuous shows every day, beginning at 1 p. m. and continuing until 11 p. m.

The Paramount-Empress theatre is showing a picture this week which was made in Salt Lake with Salt Lake boys and girls as the actors. It is called "A Romance of Salt Lake." The picture is shown in addition to the regular program. The Salt Lake Telegram's contest of guessing the names of moving picture stars whose photos were published each day, proved highly popular.

CANADA

Sensational rumors have been in circulation in Toronto relative to the disappearance of Ambrose J. Small, the wealthy theatre owner, on December 2, after he had received a cash payment of one million dollars on the sale of his chain of theatres in Ontario to the Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, the new Anglo-Canadian syndicate. It was reported a few days ago that a warrant had been sworn out for the arrest of a man who, it is claimed, had been instrumental in the kidnapping of the theatre magnate and it was also reported that Small was being held for ransom.

Two of Toronto's downtown theatres, regularly devoted to vaudeville or drama, are to have indefinite picture engagements for the summer months. "The Confession" is being placed in Shea's Victoria Street theatre by the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Pathe distributors, while "The Great Air Robbery," the Jewel Special, will be the attraction at the Grand for an extended summer run. Last year "Mickey" played for sixteen weeks in the Grand.

"The End of the Road," the health picture, played simultaneously for two weeks in two of Winnipeg's large moving picture theatres, the Gaiety and the Bijou, both of which are controlled by Jule and J. J. Allen. Prices ranged from 39 cents to 55 cents for the runs. One film was used for the two engagements.

Corporation Bulletins Register Progress

THE third volume, No. 4, of the "Arrow Bulletin," a publication issued by the Arrow Film Corporation in the interests of the State Right Buyer, is an excellent specimen of the "corporation bulletin," which is becoming more and more frequent in the motion-picture industry. There are several such now in circulation, all of them indicating that spirit of "team work" and co-operation which their publishers are seeking to instill into the trade. The field of the film industry has become so complex in the innumerable units and branches of activities that go to make it up that some medium must be utilized by each organization to keep all the other interests allied with it in touch with its plans and achievements. The corporation-bulletin helps to serve this need admirably, and the present issue of the "Arrow Bulletin," that we have before us, is a most commendable example of its kind.

Its eight pages of text, relieved by pleasing arrangements of cuts, are newsy, well-ordered and excellently written. The edition as a whole reflects a healthy trend in the right direction and stands as satisfactory work of the typographic art.

Complete Filming of "Wings of Pride"

Jans Pictures, Inc., announces that B. A. Rolfe has completed the filming of the third of the Olive Tell features. The one just finished is an adaptation of the popular novel "Wings Of Pride" by Louise Kennedy Mable. The scenario was the work of Violet Clark, who handled the continuity on the Jans special production, "Madonnas and Men."

"On Wings Of Pride," as well as the second Olive Tell-Jans feature, "A Woman's Business," the producing company is now planning an extended advertising campaign, the first advertisements of which are scheduled to appear within the next few weeks.

Canyon Pictures Gets many Inquiries

The Canyon Pictures Corporation which is now producing a series of five-reel Westerns, semi-Westerns, and Canadian woods pictures, featuring Franklyn Farnum at the Selig Studios, Los Angeles, announces that many inquiries have come in both from state right buyers and exhibitors relative to these productions.

The first picture, "Riding The Winds," from an original story by William E. Wing, is now well under way and will soon be completed. An exploitation campaign concentrating on Franklyn Farnum will be inaugurated very shortly.

The San Francisco delegation of Independent Exhibitors stopped off at Los Angeles en route to Cleveland to see the sights and enjoy a banquet given them by the city's theatre-owners. The picture above shows them grouped on a "Married Life" set at the Mack Sennett studios. The lone lady is Louise Fazenda, one of the stellar principals of "Married Life," which is to be released shortly by First National.

Science Film Is Screened

"A Trip to Mars" Exhibited for Editor of Science Publication

ACCORDING to a statement from the offices of the Tower Film Corporation, "A Trip to Mars" was screened privately for the editor of the Popular Science Magazine and several of his associates at the projection room of the corporation this week. After viewing the picture, Tower Film states, the opinion was expressed on the part of those present that the readers of the scientific publication would be interested in the story of the picture and in some of the facts connected with its production. Accordingly, it was agreed that the production should be given a special write-up in one of the issues, states the Tower Film report.

Mr. Wilson, who is the editor of the astronomy department of the Popular Science Magazine, is quoted by Tower Film as having expressed the following opinion after the exhibition of the production had been completed:

"I consider 'A Trip to Mars' one of the most interesting photographs I have seen. It has a very fine dramatic appeal and at the same time conveys an interesting depiction of our relation to Mars and what some of the astronomical authorities claim to have discovered in their research work on Mars. I am quite sure the public in general will find 'A Trip to Mars' a very interesting photograph."

The Tower Film Corporation have now in preparation a campaign book covering every phase for the exploitation of this subject. A number of territories have already been disposed of.

Euclid Is Now a Going Concern in Ohio

The Euclid Pictures Corporation, an Ohio corporation, has been formed, with L. H. Finch, president and general manager; C. A. Badger, vice president; W. W. Myers, treasurer, and H. M. Stracham, secretary, for the purpose of making commercial and industrial films, and two reel comedies, in Cleveland.

"The Euclid Pictures Corporation has passed the experimental stage," says Mr. Finch. "Last season we went through the fires, when we made six two reel comedies. Jimmy Thompson, the fellow who made the character of 'Joe Jackson' famous the world over, both on the vaudeville stage and in the circus, was starred. These comedies are now being sold on a state rights basis. Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Kentucky, West Virginia, Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Missouri have bought the comedies."

Shallenberger Makes Short Statement

From information gathered at the Cleveland convention, W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, has formed the opinion that the exhibitors of the country are now looking forward to the independent exchangeman and producer for the solving of many present day problems. In a short statement issued this week Mr. Shallenberger said:

"Exhibitors know they can find splendid productions in the independent market today, and also know they can get a square deal," Mr. Shallenberger said. "The next few months will see, in my mind, a decided change in the exhibitors' movements. That movement will be toward the independent field."

I. A. Farrah, widely known in eastern Pennsylvania for many years as salesman, and branch manager for various companies, has opened the Penn Film Exchange, 224 Chestnut Street, Harrisburg, Pa., handling big productions and short subjects.

"Skinning Skimmers" Is Said to Sell Fast

Radin Pictures, distributors of "Skinning Skimmers," the five-part comedy featuring Johnny Dooley, are extremely enthusiastic over the success attained by the first long-length release of the famous Ziegfeld Star. It is reported that the Radin Company is negotiating with the Dooley producers for several more of these features to be produced either from stories that have been circulated in book form or from stage successes which can be adapted to the comedian's individual style of acting.

Matthias Radin, President of the Radin organization, has been on the road for several weeks disposing of territory and, according to the word received at New York, is rapidly signing final contracts with territorial distributors who have viewed the production from a print which had been previously shipped to them for that purpose.

Pioneer Stocks Up on Short-Length Films

The coming season will in all probabilities see the Pioneer list of exchanges in a position to supply the independent exhibitor with a complete program, which will include a big feature as well as a very striking selection of short subjects.

The Pioneer has just contracted with the Atlas Film Corporation for the productions of a series of Juvenile Comedies featuring Frank McGlynn, Jr., the son of Frank McGlynn, the well-known actor.

"A Woman's Business" Gets Wide Sales

Jans Pictures Inc., have already sold much of the state-right territory on "A Woman's Business," the second of their B. A. Rolfe-Olive Tell features. Recent contracts for territory have been made with Leon D. Netter, president of Masterpiece Pictures of Cleveland, for Ohio and Kentucky on "A Woman's Business"; and with W. G. Underwood, president of Special Film Company of Dallas, for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Arrow Men Due for Big Sales Campaigns

Two of Arrow's home office sales force are scheduled to leave within the week for extensive trips. Guy R. Hammond, manager of the export department, will sail for Mexico, and while in that vicinity he will visit Porto Rico, Cuba, and San Domingo.

S. Rubenstein, special representative for Arrow, will leave for a trip through the South and East calling on the independent exchanges in Atlanta, Philadelphia, Washington and other cities.

Ed. Martindel Signed by S. A. Franklin

Edward Martindel, comic opera star, has been engaged for an important role in the screen version of "Athalie" which Sidney A. Franklin is making for the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation to be distributed by the First National. "Athalie" is based on Robert W. Chambers' novel of the same name. Others cast for prominent roles in "Athalie" are Sylvia Breamer, Conrad Nagle, Robert Cain, Rosemary Theby, May Giarici, and Fred Warren.

Emerson and Loos Sign for Another Year

John Emerson and Anita Loos, photoplay authors, yesterday completed an arrangement with Joseph M. Schenck whereby they will continue to write screen stories for Constance Talmadge during the next year. They are at work on one of these new photoplays now, and will write three more during the next season. The prospective stories will be satires with a star part which will keep Miss Talmadge in the novel character which Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos built for her during the last year.

"In order to concentrate our best efforts upon the character structure of these stories, we shall devote three months to the writing of each one," said Mr. Emerson.

Pioneer Head Planning National Inspection

It is expected that within the next few weeks, A. E. Lefcourt, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, will begin his first official tour covering all the Pioneer exchange centers from New York to the Coast.

How the "World's Largest Theatre" Treats its Air

An Interesting Description of the Heating and Ventilation of the Capitol

THIS article on the heating and ventilation systems of the New York Capitol—the "World's Largest Theatre" has not been prepared with the thought that many exhibitors would be able to adopt the systems for their own use but rather to give a good idea of the value of expert air treatment in motion picture theatres. To a greater or less degree each theatre demands special treatment determined by size, construction, climatic conditions, etc. For these very important reasons the owner of a house of any size should employ an expert to solve his particular problems.

As practically everyone knows, the Capitol is located on Broadway at 51st St. at the northern extremity of the present theatre district. Mr. Thomas W. Lamb of New York was the architect and Mr. D. D. Kimball also of New York was retained as a consultant on the heating and ventilating problems.

From the time the patron enters the house he encounters "atmosphere," so called. The spacious lobby, the grand staircase and the luxuriously carpeted floors and passageways all work toward the same end—to impress upon the visitor that he is entering a place of rest, enjoyment, relaxation.

But these expensive furnishings could not do it all. The ever changing supply of fresh air plays an exceedingly important part, for no matter how easy the chair, how beautiful the scene or how attractive the surroundings, to enjoy them all one must at the same time breathe in fresh pure air at the correct temperature.

And this air cannot be furnished without cost. Three 135 h. p. Kewanee Boilers furnish the steam and two large fans distribute the tempered air.

From these boilers the steam at 2 lbs. pressure is carried to the various hot-blast radiators located about the building.

In the Capitol the fan chambers instead of being placed under the floor are placed above the roof of the auditorium. This was made necessary by the presence of flint rock under the floor and the cost of cutting away for the chambers was figured to be prohibitive.

On account of the immense size of the structure it was no mean task to lay out a system that would insure a plentiful supply of fresh air and a sure method of carrying away the used or vitiated air. As finally worked out it consisted of two independent systems of supply and two of exhaust. The quantity of air used is so large—the cubic contents of the theatre is over 1,000,000 cu. ft.—that if one single system had been used it was probable that the temperature of the air necessary to lower the temperature of the auditorium would have chilled the patrons seated near the floor exhausts.

THIS is the first of a series of three articles describing the heating and ventilating systems of the world's largest theatre. The same principles are employed in supplying fresh air to the smaller theatres although, of course, on a proportionately smaller scale. Credit is hereby given Mr. D. D. Kimball of the firm of Richard D. Kimball Co., for his assistance in preparing the material for publication.

Briefly the plan as worked out was this: the air is taken in at the roof level. It is then heated and then reheated and carried through ducts to the outlets placed in the ceiling. In addition steam radiators were placed in recesses behind ornamental grills and the vitiated air taken away by exhaust fans on the roof.

To perform the work of bringing in fresh air from the outside the multi-bladed types manufactured by the Massachusetts Blower Co., and capable of handling 80,000 cu. ft. of air per minute. This capacity may be increased to a maximum of 145,000 cu. ft. per minute, which means an allowance of from 16 to 30 cu. ft. of air per minute per person.

In one of the drawings with this article these fans are shown as No. 1 and No. 2. No. 1 supplies air to the gallery and No. 2 to the orchestra through grill work in the proscenium arch. All this air is drawn in through tempering coils to give it the right temperature.

To give the required temperature to this incoming air it was necessary to install a bank of 72" hot blast radiators. Eventually the air after being heated will be washed by passing through an air washing chamber but the latter has not as yet been installed.

Following the air washing the air will be reheated in another stack of hot blast radiators. A method of control allows the air to be shunted around either or both of the heater sections.

When the air has been reheated it is

Kings Theatre in St. Louis will Include Airdome when Completed

When the Orchestra Plays Dance Music the Audience Dances With It

Combination of Theatre and Dancing Hall Is Success

An Airdome with a balcony affording a total seating capacity of 1,500.

An al fresco dance floor to be used by the audience during intermissions and following the final curtain.

The largest glass marquee known to theatredom.

And a 75-foot extension of the front wall of the present structure planned to cover the adjoining airdome.

THESE are a few of the salient features which the Famous-Players Missouri Corporation has planned in the remodeling of the historic Kings Theatre—historic because it was the first large house in St. Louis to be devoted exclusively to the exhibition of motion pictures. The corporation which was recently formed and which assumed operation and control of the Consolidated Circuit, a chain of fifteen houses, will invest a small fortune in the numerous improvements and superlatively novel additions to their present quarters. Formulated plans have already been put into execution and June 15 has been set as the proposed date for the completion.

The Kings promises to surpass all theatres in the city for beauty, serviceability and adequacy to handle large throngs by virtue of its enlarged seating capacity. Ground has already been broken in the erection of an airdome on a lot adjoining the present structure. The striking feature of the out-door auditorium will be in the form of a balcony. Such a seating arrangement is believed to be the first in the country and was conceived by officials of the corporation when it was seen that the seating capacity would be limited by the narrowness of the lot. The operating booth will be constructed underneath the balcony, according to the present plans.

The second remarkable feature of the airdome will consist of the proposed dancing floor, which will be erected on the ground and between the first row of seats and the proscenium. Patrons will be encouraged to enjoy themselves during the intermissions and after the show is over. Officials of the company are completing arrangements with the local musicians' union whereby it is planned to have the orchestra of twenty-two pieces remain

Theatre Floors—and Romance

Benj. Franklin and his kite string are as far from our thoughts when we push the electric button, as Robert Fulton is when we cross the ocean in those huge sea giants that are the fulfillment of Fulton's great dream.

But whoever had the remotest suspicion that Linoleum had a Past? If anyone were to tell you that under your feet, in almost any theatre you could mention, was as real a romance as ever appeared behind the footlights, you'd probably laugh at him.

Yet the romance of machinery and the genius behind it is enough to stir the imagination of the most blasé theatregoer.

If you could accompany a guide of the Congoleum Company, Inc., through their great Linoleum factory, comprising thirty-three buildings covering six large city blocks in Camden, N. J., you would have a new idea of the vitalizing romance of modern machinery.

Motion-picture theatre owners whose floor-covering problems have been met so satisfactorily by the famous Farr & Bailey products, may be interested in knowing that the Congoleum Company has recently purchased the Farr & Bailey Manufacturing Company, which supplies many of the aires in the country with their well-known F. & B. Battleship Linoleum.

Picture, if you can, great vertically hanging sheets of cotton cloth on which boiled linseed oil drips until the sheets are stiff and gummy. (Perhaps you can guess how Lin-oleum got its name.) These sheets must hang for probably a period of two months until they accumulate a mass of thoroughly oxidized linseed oil approaching an inch in thickness.

This strange process, of which this is only a part, was a discovery made by Frederick Walton, many years ago, and is still in use today. He noticed one day the peculiar toughness of an oil-film on a can of paint, and through careful experimenting hit upon this process of oxidation that was the beginning of linoleum manufacture.

Linoleum has a truly American trait of descending from a most cosmopolitan ancestry and then appearing in the best society—on the deck of a battleship, on the floor of an office building, or perhaps on the floor of an American playhouse. Its jute or burlap base is Indian; the Kauri gum and resin that goes into its cement is Australian; its cork is what the Portuguese or Spanish native calls corko, and altogether it has a sturdy stock and strength that no other parentage could possibly afford.

But ancestry these days has to take off its hat to environment and education. If the factory can properly be called its environment, and the powerful presses and calendering machines its education, then Linoleum has every reason to turn out to be a perfect product.

The large, now heavy sheets, laden with their deposit of sticky oxidized oil, are sent through a systematic process of grinding and regrinding until an evenly divided, flaked mass is obtained.

The ground-up oil is then mixed with accurately proportioned quantities of cork, Kauri gum, resin, wood, flour and pigment. The mixing process is just as systematic and involved as the original grinding process was.

The mixture when fully prepared and ready is calendered on a burlap backing which is stretched over great heated rolls. Linoleum, at this point, is recognizable to the layman for the first time, but it is not ready for use until after it has hung in great stoves for weeks at carefully regulated temperatures.

The finished product when taken from the stove must pass rigorous tests to insure that it can meet the exacting United States Navy Specifications for Battleship Linoleum.

This famous Farr & Bailey Battleship Linoleum will hereafter be known as Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum (U. S. Navy Standard). The change is one of name only, as the same skilled workmen will continue to make it in the same F. & B. factory as they have for years back.

Farr & Bailey products are familiar to all theatre owners who buy quality floor-coverings that are economical and wear-resisting. The combination of the Congoleum Company, Inc., and the Farr & Bailey Company means an extension of a well-known guarantee to cover products equally well known for their quality.

The Fable of the Near Sighted Gent

Out of the House of Newman, the Cincinnati manufacturer of things ornamental for the theatre, comes a bit of near-sighted containing its full percentage of truth. Read it. It applies to most managers.

A certain Gent built a Motion Picture Theatre, extraordinarily large and ornate—a Palace of Mahogany, gilt, crystal and spanish leather.

The lobby was a Dream in Marble—deep and wide and very costly.

But the Gent would use these magnificent Marble Walls for Billboards—he persisted in slapping up Posters haphazard in his Lobby. They offended the Eye, like a Thistle planted in a bed of Violets.

He wondered vaguely why he catered to a certain Class, rather than to the Mass.

Nevertheless he made Money consistently; he operated the only Theatre of its kind in Town.

But opposition raised its head overnight. Another Chap opened a House not far away and hung out the S-R-O sign every night. Verily he prospered from the very Start.

This Chap built up a Stairway to success; each stair was one of his competitor's mistakes. His Lobby was a Hummer, yet he improved it Fifty Percent at slight expense by adding Brass Poster Frames and Photo Cabinets. A few (a very few) of these Frames were stood on Brass Basels, but most of them were hung on the Walls.

He took Pains to please his Patrons. To prevent congestion in his Lobby he installed Brass Railings wherever they were needed—one before the Ticket-Booth, another at the Door to separate ingoing and outgoing crowds.

When the first Gent—he of the Gaudy Lobby—finally discovered that he had failed to appreciate the Advertising Value of his Lobby it was too late. His Patrons were his no longer. His Business was on the Toboggan.

It may or may not be true that the Gent is now taking Tickets in his Competitor's Theatre.

Moral:—Dignity and "Class" in the Show-Window (the Lobby) never fail to Increase Patronage.

Ventilation of Largest Theatre passed through Fan No. 1 which forces it into and through ducts leading to the gallery and ceiling dome. Other ducts carry air to the wall outlets. Fan No. 2 forces air through another set of ducts to the grill work in the proscenium arch as described previously.

Cold air drafts are neutralized by ventilators in door frames

Fresh air for the lobbies is supplied by another set of fans and hot blast radiators located in the basement of the theatre. This air makes its exits through high narrow registers placed beside each outside door, thus neutralizing incoming draughts.

All of the fans are made noiseless in operation by installing them on sound deadening foundations such as cork, wood, felt and lead.

after the show and supply dance music for the audience from 11 p. m. until midnight.

The idea was inspired following numerous requests of patrons of the Kings to have the orchestra repeat its dance numbers. The psychology of the audience which demanded dance music (although there were no dancing facilities) was exploited to its fullest advantage and the work on the floor has already taken tangible form.

Inasmuch as the Kings' audiences are characterized by a large proportion of students of both local high schools and universities, the dance is expected to meet with unprecedented favor.

William Goldman, the director of the Kings, explained further causes which inspired the dance floor idea. He said that whenever popular dance music was being played by the orchestra or organist, invariably the audiences would beat time with their feet on the floor. The dance floor is merely a plan, he explained, to capitalize this mob instinct.

The wall separating the two auditoriums is composed of a series of doors. These may be thrown open within a few seconds, thus permitting the audience to transfer itself from the airdome to the interior auditorium in virtually no time. Certainly no better arrangement for the comfort of patrons could be devised, because of the fact that despite any possible change in weather, the audience is assured of seeing the entire program without more than a few moments' interruption. The uncertainty of summer weather in St. Louis and the very frequent sudden changes makes the arrangement a very desirable one.

In carrying out these plans everything possible was done to make the Kings Airdome different from any other. It is the only one in St. Louis with a composition granitoid floor, eliminating the dust caused by cinders and gravel. One of the greatest drawbacks the usual airdome has is the fact that patrons invariably get cinders in their shoes and raise a cloud of dust as they enter or pass out.

The individual opera chairs are white-enamelled and look as spick and span as a hospital ward. They are scrubbed daily, and prevent the possibility of a soiled dress. The floor is sloped to bring the screen in comfortable vision of each person.

The lighting effects are composed chiefly of mild blue and red strings, while flower boxes have been placed around the walls, on the posts and on the cornices.

The orchestra is destined to prove one of the big features of the theatre. Ordinarily, airdome orchestras strive gallantly to be heard.

Another very important revision of the present structure will consist of the erection of a new front wall and a glass marquis along the entire frontage of both auditoriums. The marquis, which will be seventy-five feet in length, will be one of the most pretentious of its kind. The added front wall will provide for an increase in lobby area of approximately three-fold its present space. Accordingly additional provision is thus provided for the construction of two more ticket offices and ample shelter is afforded for the large crowds during inclement weather. Present arrangements have proved slightly inadequate in the handling of large crowds which have attended the Kings.

With three ticket windows, the facilities will be such that any crowd, regardless of size, can be easily accommodated. The Kings will also be the first theatre in St. Louis to be provided with three ticket windows, and the only picture house to have more than one.

These features, together with new house policies inaugurated by the Famous-Players and the presentations arranged by Mr. Goldman, are expected to make the theatre nationally prominent. The Kings will continue to play only the largest and first-run pictures, presented with elaborate prologues, special features, and music from the largest orchestra in the city.

The Kings, which was built by the late O. T. Crawford, has played an important part in the amusement enterprises of the city.

Mr. F. J. Beecroft, Adv. Mgr.,
Motion Picture News, Inc.,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Beecroft:

My answer to your inquiry as to results obtained through the Bartola Musical Instrument Company's page advertising campaign in MOTION PICTURE NEWS is that both direct and indirect results have more than satisfied me.

How I feel about MOTION PICTURE NEWS value as an advertising medium covering the motion picture field nationally, is best evidenced by the fact, that, after testing it out thoroughly with keyed ads for several months, I have arranged through your Chicago representative, Mr. L. H. Mason, to continue our page advertising in the NEWS for the remainder of the year.

The advertising has brought us inquiries which have resulted in our placing thousands of dollars worth of business and I also find that practically every exhibitor I meet knows that the capacity of our plant has been trebled, has read in your columns of the new BARTON PIPE ORGAN, built especially for motion picture theatres, and is interested in the possibilities of our big new instrument. The inquiries, in regard to BARTOLAS, also continue to be received in satisfactory volume. With kindest personal regards, I am

Very truly yours,

Study Lessons for the Projectionist

AN induction coil is a means of intensifying the spark obtained when the flow of electric current is broken. This piece of apparatus while being used extensively for X-ray, wireless telegraph, etc., has its most important application in connection with the ignition system of gas engines.

Induction coils are of two types, the primary coil and the secondary coil.

PRIMARY TYPE INDUCTION COIL.

The primary type coil consists of several turns of coarse magnet wire wound over a core consisting of a bundle of soft iron wires. When the circuit is closed the current flows through the coil and magnetizes the core, the counter e. m. f. generated by the lines of flux cutting the turns of wire opposes the e. m. f. of the battery, so that a definite time interval is necessary to fully charge the iron core with magnetism.

Fig. 48—Magnetic induction circuit, showing rise and fall of current

The interruption of the current is so designed as to have a quick snap action. The magnet field then decreases and tends to continue the flow of current since the turns of wire are cut by these decreasing lines of flux. The resulting high e. m. f. tends to retard the decrease of current, and thus prevents a sudden collapse of the magnetic field. Thus at the point of break in the circuit there is a bright spark the energy of which is equivalent to the magnetic energy stored in the core. This spark is used in the case of a gas engine to ignite the combustible mixture in the cylinder chamber, and is commonly known as the make and break ignition. The contact should be so designed that the current will come to its full value as shown by Fig. 48 before the circuit is broken.

SECONDARY TYPE INDUCTION COIL.

The secondary type of induction coil is made up of two separate windings. The primary winding consists of a few turns of heavy wire, and the secondary a large number of turns of fine wire. The primary winding is connected in series with a battery and an interrupter, so that the magnetic lines set up cut the secondary turns and induce an electrical impulse in the winding. The voltage of the secondary current is in proportion to the primary voltage as the number of turns in the secondary is to the number of turns in the primary.

The secondary circuit is so connected as to contain a small gap across which there will be a spark when the primary circuit is broken. Thus when the circuit is rapidly completed and broken a series of sparks is sent across the gap of the secondary circuit. An induced current is also set up in the secondary winding when the circuit is closed which slowly rises to a maximum, but is too feeble to cause a spark to jump the gap of the secondary circuit. It is, therefore, the impulse produced when the primary circuit is broken which causes the hottest spark at the gap in the secondary circuit.

The wiring diagram of a secondary type of induction coil is shown by Fig. 49. This coil is much used for jump spark ignition for gas engines in which the spark gap is so constructed that the spark takes place inside the cylinder chamber to ignite the combustible gases.

In order that the current may be rapidly

Fig. 50—Interrupter for induction coil

broken and cause a succession of sparks across the gap in the secondary winding an interrupter is used in the primary circuit. Thus by the building up and falling off of inductive lines of force cutting the secondary winding an induced e. m. f. is produced in the secondary. This e. m. f. being as already stated in proportion to the primary battery e. m. f. as the number of turns of wire in the secondary and primary windings.

The interrupter, a simple form of which is shown by Fig. 50, goes through the following operations. When the switch of the primary circuit is closed the current in the primary winding magnetizes the core and the vibrator will be drawn toward it. This breaks the flow of current at the contact points, and the core becomes demagnetized and allows the vibrator to return to its original position. The circuit is then completed again, and the operation is repeated as long as the switch is left closed.

In addition to the spark at the secondary gap there is a spark at the break in the primary circuit, but as this spark serves no useful purpose in the operation of the coil and is very injurious as it burns the contact points a condenser is connected across these points as shown in Fig. 49. This condenser absorbs the self-induced current of primary winding and thus decreases the sparking at the primary contacts.

Brake for Take-up Reel

O. S. Shonyo, Bushton, Kan., writes:

An enclosing sketch of an invention which I devised to improve my shows. My operator would press lightly on the outer rim of the take-up reel while each reel was first being run. I watched this method and noticed the success, and thus set to thinking of some means of relieving the tension for the first few hundred feet of film. The machine to which this automatic brake is applied is a practically new Edison D. And am running Universal's Big money 12, so you may know that the fault was not with an old worn machine or old films.

However, we can now run films which may have one side of the sprocket holes completely torn out. We have done it.

This device will be appreciated by film producers, as it saves a lot of wear and strain on the first of each reel. Besides helping the show because every stop lowers the name of any theatre.

Any further information will be cheerfully answered.

The cost was about one dollar.

Attention of Mr. Will C. Smith, General Manager.

Gentlemen:

As I am about to begin the construction of two additional theaters in this City, I am most naturally concerned as to whether or not I will be able to get six of your latest model machines. I will not require them for four or five months, but, knowing the demand for your machines, want to get my order in early.

I have, as you know, been using your machines for the past 15 years, during which time I have of course tried about every machine manufacturer, with the result that I have always had to replace each other make with your machine. I had the best. I am taking no chances of further experimenting and placing the above order.

I look upon your concern as not only having the best and the most reliable machine on the market, but the matter of personal service and attention that follows the sale of your machines is one that gains for you full confidence of the purchaser. Your accomplishments in the direction of putting a perfect picture on the screen and in the durability of your outfit are especially deserving of my high praise.

The Methods to Be Used in Adjusting the Power's Intermittent Movement

A Clear and Detailed Account of the Separate Operations Involved

If making delicate mechanical adjustments, such as those necessitated in installing new parts of the intermittent movement of a projector, or in adjusting the intermittent to remove lost motion caused by long use, knowing how to go about the job in the simplest and most accurate manner is half the battle, and in response to numerous requests we present here with instructions for the assembling and adjustment of the Power intermittent movement, as employed on all Power 6, 6A and 6B projector mechanisms.

Assuming, therefore, that the intermittent movement has been rendered accessible by the removal of the above mentioned parts, and that the movement itself has been dis-assembled, we have now to set forth the procedure to be followed in assembling, or putting together again, in correct and perfect adjustment, the Power intermittent movement.

If only one new part is going to be installed, all of the other parts of the movement can be expected to fit together with the ease and certainty resulting from their having previously worked in company with each other, but let us assume the most difficult case which would occur in practice, i.e., the case when all new intermittent parts are to be installed. Under such circumstances it will be advisable to test the fit of the various parts, in order to assure ourselves that they will run properly when assembled. All parts of standard projecting mechanisms are made on the interchangeable system and similar parts are consequently exactly alike in their dimensions to a very small fraction of an inch, but it is always possible that conditions arising in individual cases may make some part a tighter fit than is advisable, which can be detected and remedied at the outset by the practical expedient of determining the fit of all running parts before proceeding to assemble them.

In assembling the Power intermittent we are chiefly concerned with the following parts, which will be designated by the names and numbers given them in the Power Company's price list of supply parts, viz

- No. 603 Framing Carriage.
- No. 602 Set Collar for Intermittent Spindle.
- No. 666 Pin-cross and Intermittent Spindle.
- No. 667 Intermittent Sprocket.
- No. 670 Intermittent Bushing (Large).

- No. 671 Intermittent Bushing (Small).
- No. 675 Cam and Spindle.
- No. 676 Collar for Cam Spindle.

Bearing the above suggestion in mind, the first thing to do, preparatory to assembling the Power movement, is to try the spindle of the cam in its bearings (on the framing-carriage) in order to make sure that it rotates freely and is a good running fit, after which the eccentric bushings, 670 and 671, should be slipped onto the spindle of the pin-cross, and rotated, to see that the intermittent spindle will run freely in them.

NOTE: When a new intermittent sprocket is to be installed, it is advisable to purchase an assembled pin-cross and sprocket.

If, however, the intermittent sprocket is purchased separately, it should be seen to, before assembling, that it is a good snug fit on the intermittent spindle.

Complete head, showing intermittent sprocket and loop setter

The ensuing instructions will prove so readily comprehensible to users of Power mechanisms, and to those familiar with this make of projector, that detailed illustrations are not required, but to fix the appearance and relative positions of the various parts of the Power movement in the mind of the reader, a general view of this intermittent is shown in Fig. 1.

When the proper procedure is followed it is very little more trouble to completely assemble the parts of the Power intermittent than it is to merely make the adjustment for removing lost motion between the pin-cross and the cam, and as the latter adjustment is best made by following the method practised in originally assembling the intermittent movement, we can proceed to describe in detail the method to be followed in assembling the Power movement, after it has been taken apart for the purpose, for instance, of installing a new part, or series of parts.

In dis-assembling the Power movement the following parts of the mechanism have to be removed (1) Apron, (2) Lower sprocket and spindle, (3) Large Idler Gear and spindle, (4) Flywheel, (5) Oil-Casing Cover, (6) Cam and Cam Spindle, (7) Pin-cross and Intermittent Sprocket (these latter in conjunction with the large eccentric bushing on the intermittent spindle may all be removed simultaneously). As the present article is designed to deal only with the Power intermittent movement, detailed instructions for removing and re-assembling the above-mentioned parts of the mechanism are not given here. They will be found, however, in the booklet of "Instructions for the Care and Adjustment of Power's Cameragraph Mechanism," issued by the manufacturers, and, indeed,

Complete assembled head with gate opened

To commence the assembly of the Power intermittent movement, the large eccentric-bushing, No. 670, is inserted in its hole at the left of the framing carriage. Upon examining bushing No. 670, it will be noted that two holes are drilled in its circumference near one end, these holes being meant for the insertion of a Better Projection at Less Cost—

The cost of operating one or two arc lamps for projection purposes in moving picture theatres amounts to considerable during a year.

Because apparatus must be introduced to convert alternating to direct current this expense is materially increased. Can this power consumption be eliminated, or can it be reduced to a minimum?

Westinghouse Cooper Hewitt Mercury Rectifiers represent the answer to this question.

For moving picture theatres having only one or two arc lamps, these outfits have proved very successful. Also they cost and operate for less than competing equipment. Their noiseless operation and light weight permit their installation in the projection room

A Series of Letters that Passed Between Exchanges and a Projectionist

In Which It Appears That Exchanges Are Beginning to Realize Their Responsibilities

IN months past there have appeared in this department several series of letters written to and by exchanges on the subject of film conditions. Generally the tone of the exchange letters was one of disinterest. But now, through the courtesy of John L. Hogan of the Empire Theatre, Chillicothe, Ohio, we are permitted to print the correspondence he had had with several exchanges in his vicinity. The replies of the Exchanges are interesting in that they reflect a change of thought.

Mr. Hogan's letter describing his cue sheets comes first and then the letters from the various Exchanges follow:

I wish to call your attention to a little fact, which I personally believe will be of great help to projectionist everywhere, and I also believe it will in time stop this practise of punching holes in the film. Here is my solution of the idea. I have made up some cue sheets large enough to hold eight reels of film, sample of which I am enclosing in this letter. I also sent you sample prior to this but it was during the printers' strike and therefore they were not given publicity. But for one to use this cue sheet he must and by all means he should study look his film over before he attempts to project it to an audience.

The cue sheets are used in this manner: At about five feet from the end of each reel write down that part of the picture on cue sheet, and when the reel is run on the screen one can easily tell when to make changeover and at the proper time. Of course, one would say there is a lot of work about it, but it is not so much as is punching the film full of holes. And at the same time any projectionist can clean his film each day and thereby save time in cleaning the aperture plate and film tracts after each reel. I may say for myself that for the last year that I have been using this cue sheet I have not had one white screen. All goes to show the good the cue sheet has done for me.

And as to the cost of them they only cost $3.00 per thousand and a thousand will last any projectionist that changes program every day almost three years, and you see that the cost of them is only a little better than $1.00 per year. Anyone desiring to get these cue sheets may have them at the above prices plus postage to their city. I have always and always will do my very best to stop the punch-hole nuisance. Thanking you for past and future favors and assuring you I am striving for that which we all should all be striving for better projection, I am,

From H. TAYLOR, Assistant Manager, Pathe Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Mr. Hogan:

We are today in receipt of your letter with enclosed clippings from "The Tiger's Trail," No. 14, and certainly appreciate your interest in this matter.

You noted, I presume, the silver paper along the sprockets of one side. A good many operators throughout the territory, like to sleep while the reel is being run and they have rigged up an arrangement and by putting this silver paper along towards the end of the reel, they form a contact thereby ringing a bell; then they wake up.

Glad to see, however, that you run your machine with your eyes wide open.

The reason that this film got to you in this condition is owing to the fact that we had to make a transfer, that is, getting the film off of some other show down at the depot and shipping it direct to you without giving it to our inspection department. However, we are giving these matters careful attention and certainly appreciate your co-operation along this line and wish that every operator in this territory gave these things the same consideration that you do.

Another letter from the same gentleman:

Dear Mr. Hogan:

We have your letter of September 8th with enclosed clippings.

For your information, Mr. Hogan, beg to advise that practically every exchange puts the markings on their film that we have on the clippings which you enclosed. We must have some manner of numbering our reels so as to know the reel number and also to be able to keep a record of same.

We are playing our pictures in the best theatres in the United States and while we appreciate your close attention to what you think is not right, we have never yet had anybody complain in regard to the numbers being punched on the tail end of the reel.

If you do not desire these numbers to show up on the screen, if you have two machines in your booth, merely start your next reel in time to keep these numbers from showing.

We cannot eliminate these numbers from the reels and will ask that you do not make any further clippings.

From F. W. YOUNG, Manager of Kansas City Branch of Robertson-Cole.

My dear Mr. Hogan:

We are just in receipt of your letter of the 30th relative to punch marks taken from "The Beggar Prince" film, and in reply wish to state that we are continuously watching operators who punch-mark our film, but as film is sometimes circumvented, it is pretty hard to tell just who does this work, however, we are attempting to find who put the punch marks in the "Beggar Prince" film.

Stone Is Live Motiograph Dealer

The Service Film & Supply Company of Portland, Oregon, under the management of W. A. Stone, one of the live wires of the business, is setting a mark for all other distributors of Motiographs to shoot at, according to Manager Spahr of the Enterprise Optical Company, not alone in the number of projectors he is selling, but in the splendid service his firm is rendering patrons. Mr. Stone has been selling Motiographs for three years and during that period two-thirds of the projectors he sold have been De Luxe machines and he is keeping the wires to Chicago hot with rush orders for more.

It is expected that Mr. Stone will make a visit to the home of the Motiograph during the early Spring to get in close touch with the plant organization and to get a few more pointers on "service" which is a hobby, both of his and of Mr. Spahr.

Describes Change-Over

Through an unfortunate error the name of the writer of the following letter and the designer of the device pictured was lost. The article is being printed without his name. If the author will send it to us we will publish it in the next issue thus giving him the credit he deserves.

I NOTICED in the issue of Nov. 29th an article headed Optics Amperage and Change-overs in which C. A. C. No. 118 asks how he can blend one picture on another at the end of each reel so I thought that the system I am using may also be as valuable to him as it is to me, therefore, I am enclosing a rough diagram of same. I have found the advantage of this changeover device, mostly in the fact that it serves a threefold purpose, it fades each reel into each other, it dissolves the slides and last but by no means least it furnishes you with light to thread each reel in frame. I am sure that when friend C. A. C. gets this little apparatus set up properly he will find it invaluable. Please note that in the diagram I have given no sizes as this will depend on the distance between machines, etc., the transformer that is used is the ordinary toy adjustable transformer which is commonly used to operate toy trains, etc., and which can be purchased for a small amount. There is a switch cut in on the line just below the transformer which can be turned off when light is not wanted, this saves the transformer from con-timidly having the juice going through it. I hope that the above is made clear.

There is a little matter which I wish to call to your attention. I have read in your pages much concerning your Anti Mistrust League and I thoroughly agree with you in all your sentiments regarding same. It is a shame the way some operators abuse film. I was very much surprised when recently I received an American film with William Russell in "This Hero Stuff" from Pittsburg Pathé Office. At the end of each reel a strip of paper was pasted diagonally across the film. I have had this same method of changovers on film received by me before, but this is the first time that I have ever had one of your labels used for this purpose. I am enclosing one of the strips of film. Evidently one of your members is not living up to the very fine sentiments of your league. Believe me no punch marks on any similar methods are used on any productions which come into my hands. Further more I use up considerable time cutting out the abuses of others.

I am enclosing a picture of my projection room which is well equipped.

This is the first time that I have ever written anything to your department, I can assure you that I read it each week and get much knowledge from same. In looking over the News of Dec. 6th I noticed an article in Equipment Service entitled "A New Department Suggested" and would say that the idea is a good one, to me personally I would consider it a great help.

The projection room where the change-over is used

In closing allow me to say a word of praise to the only projection department which I received during the recent strike. Good luck to the News.

If brother C. A. C. finds the explanation and diagram of the changeover device at all vague and wishes to know anything about it, he may write me care of Strand theatre and I will be glad to help him out.

Instruction Booklets

A SERIES of booklets recently issued by the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y., covers the design and operation of the line of GE-Compensars in an excellent manner. It will be worth the while of any projectionist to send for the set to have them on hand when needed.

Bulletin 45113 describes all the various types of Compensars both A. C. and D. C. and in addition sets forth the advantages of the various kinds of control equipment. Electrical characteristics and wiring diagrams make the bulletin complete.

Instruction books 82554, 82550B and 85101 take up the subjects of D. C. to D. C. motor generator sets, A. C. to D. C. M. G. Sets, and A. C. Compensars respectively. These instruction books are not advertising. They contain matter of direct interest to the man who is handling control equipment and should be found in the library of every projectionist. The text matter describes in detail all parts of the devices, method of starting and controlling them and ways of correcting troubles. Send for them; study them; and use the knowledge.

Smaller booklets B3563, B3564 and B3565 treat the same devices as mentioned in the foregoing paragraph but very briefly. These pamphlets are more for the man who wants the advantages of the devices in a few non-technical words.

Although no word as to the availability of these booklets has been received it is to be assumed that they will be sent to anyone requesting them. It is to the advantage of "better pictures" that the projectionist should have them to study.

punch by which the bushing is turned or adjusted when in place. The end of bushing 670 containing these two holes should be innermost, and the bushing should be turned downward to such an extent that the holes are visible, so that a punch may be inserted for adjusting it.

The pincross is next inserted in the large eccentric bushing, and the cam is then put in place, whereupon the bushing is turned upwards (by a punch inserted in the adjustment hole) until the pins of the pincross have a slight circumferential play on the cam, after which the bushing is locked in place by tightening its set screw.

NOTE: To tighten the Power intermittent movement, or to remove lost motion, the large eccentric bushing, No. 670, should always be turned upwards.

Studio at Providence Designed and Given Over to Production of Educational Films

Peopled by Experts in Every Line This Building
Contains Every Kind of Device for Special Purposes

UNKNOWN to but few in the industry and almost equally unknown to the citizens of the city wherein it is located there is in existence at the present time one of the first studios devoted wholly to the production of educational or pedagogical films. It is located in Providence, R. I., and is owned and operated by the Educational Film Corporation of New York. It was only by chance that a representative of the Technical Section of Motion Picture News learned of the project but he found Mr. Skinner of the Educational Film Corporation very willing to talk about it.

Set up of apparatus for the photographing of microscopical subjects

In speaking of the proposition Mr. Skinner said: "We have found that the educational value of pictures is intensified by weaving into the story an amusement phase. Thus we have done in all our pedagogical films. In the 'Why of a Volcano' this took the form of prehistoric tribes hurling sacrifices into the crater of the volcano when the volcano commenced to become active. School children on seeing these films will remember them because of this lighter vein that runs throughout the real educational parts."

How the science of Chemistry is made both interesting and instructive

Motor mounted portable power plant used in connection with educational laboratory

The Providence structure is equipped with a laboratory for the development and printing of films produced in the building, thus making it unnecessary to send the product elsewhere for this purpose.

The authorities at Brown University have offered the use of the college laboratories for any scientific experiments it is desired to carry out. The faculty are also available for expert consulting service.

The illustrations on this page show some of the important divisions of the Educational's studio. The motor truck carries a d.c. generator driven from the automobile motor, thus making available on location the best kind of current for lighting purposes. Other trucks are used for taking the personnel and accessories to "locations."

Several months ago—a year in fact—it was the feeling of certain officials of this corporation that there was a wonderful field for the educational film providing the latter were produced with truth, fidelity and care for details. In looking about for a location on which to erect a structure for the work it was decided that nearness to a State University would be of great assistance. Accordingly, Providence, with its Brown University, was selected.

A modern building was erected on land purchased for the purpose. And in the design and erection of the building a large amount of credit should go to Mr. H. C. Burnham, technical head of the project. It was Mr. Burnham who had many of the ideas that have since worked out to perfection in the actual production of the features. In many ways he is a mechanical genius, one who prefers to spend time in order to get the exact detail in its correct relation to the whole rather than overlooking these seemingly unimportant points.

Mr. Burnham has surrounded himself with the best talent in all the needed lines. Every artisan is an artist in his own particular work. This was found to be a necessity if truthness to life was to be attained. And later events have proved their selection justified.

Vignettes for the Camera

By E. M. REYNOLDS

THE various photographic effects produced by use of vignettes or masks is a matter of no small importance. The essential feature lies in the knowledge of using the proper mask in the proper place. Needless to say many productions have too much vignetting which mean little or nothing to the advancement of the art. On the contrary just as much thought and judgment may be exercised in the choice and place of using as in the weaving of continuity. The larger the supply of masks, naturally the greater is the scope of effects. In this event it is up to enterprising photographers to work out a goodly supply of these little helpers.

Masks are not only used for the purpose of lending a finished touch to the scene, but also for visionary and multiple exposure work. There is probably no better example along this line than in the production of a character playing a dual role. The most common way is to use two masks with parallel and perpendicular edges in a mask box. In the majority of instances this will produce a hazy effect straight up and down in the scene. A remedy for this probably will be found in cutting the matched edges in the form of a compound curve, this causing no visible line upon the screen; at any rate, it will break the line from being straight and is not so easily detected.

There are two positions or methods of placing masks. One is internally or between the lens and aperture, about five-sixteenths of an inch in front of the film. This has been found by experiment to produce the diffused effect. A second method is the use of a mask box mounted upon the outside of camera, and approximately four inches in front of lens. This distance may be varied to nearly any length according to the requirements of diffusion. In using internal vignettes the demands are most always that they be made of metal. This means more expense in time and material. Cameras equipped to mask in this manner generally have a fair supply of common designs, but it is strongly recommended that the special mask, made probably for the use of a very few types of scenes, be cut from thin black filre or cardboard and used in a mask box.

Let us keep in mind that in the external system of masking, two different principles are to be had. Namely of movable or stationary design. An example of the movable mask is the common "circle", which is gradually opened or closed, actuated upon the iris principle. An important feature worthy of note in connection with the iris, is that the design should be capable of opening or closing at any given point upon the screen. Also at its maximum opening the aperture in the camera should be left with a clear field. There are many movable masks with varied designs such as the square opening, and closing or the curtain effects which raises and lowers or parts vertically. It is very obvious that the use of these movable masks will always lend more action to the scene in question.

The other class of vignettes is of a stationary type. In other words, these masks have no action during the entire scene for which they are used. Strange as it may seem these were the slowest to develop into the cinematographic field. One of the latest effects has been the "spot-light" illusion. The most common way to produce this result is in the use of colored celluloid or gelatin. The writer has had very satisfactory results by using gelatin made for spot light colors. The trade name for this particular color used, being "straw." A piece is cut just large enough to slip into the mask box. The center of mask is obtained and a hole cut. The size of hole depending upon the area wished to be covered by the "spot-light" upon the screen.

When artistic photography is in the making, the cameraman may delve into his assortment of masks without a moment's hesitation. But as there should be reason and sense used at all occasions, a general suggestion may not be out of place. When a number of prominent characters are visible at the same time, care should be exercised in not masking too much. A slight diffusion around the entire screen being much more effective. The less players there happen to be in a scene, the more is masking licensed; until we finally come down to the gem of all that is beautiful in the cinema art, the "close-up." Here lies the haven and land of opportunity for the photographer with an artistic temperament. You may mask and "soft focus" to your heart's content, only we plead of you, get something original.

Cameramen to Be Recognized

The name of the cameraman will appear on all productions of the Special Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles, according to a letter written by Ward Lasealle, director general, to Philip Rosen, president of the American Society of Cinematographers. That organization of cameramen is waging a campaign to secure proper recognition for their achievements on the silver sheet.

A campaign is to be directed to the heads of all state universities to have a department of scientific motion picture photography added to the curriculum, according to H. Lyman Broening, secretary of the American Society of Cinematographers. The American Society of Cinematographers is an organization of sixty-five "Ace" cameramen united to further the art of motion photography. Membership is by invitation only and a cameraman is rated as an Ace when he is asked to join.

Staub to Tour Alaska

Ralph P. Staub, one of the youngest camera men in California, is about to leave for Alaska for a tour of that country. He is going alone and expects to film one of the scenic grandeur of the north country. His plan is to work his way from town to town and he arrives at Nome, where he has made arrangements to drift across the Arctic Ocean with a party of explorers.

James Crosby has aided him in securing camera and film for the trip, and Ralph has promised to send home thrilling photographs to Motion Picture News soon after arriving in Alaska.

Kinema Theatre to Have $75,000 Orchestral Organ

An instrument that will represent the finest and most elaborate work of the pipe organ maker's art is to be installed in the Kinema theatre and immediate construction will begin shortly. The contracts were signed last week between the owners of the Kinema theatre, Messrs. Michael Gore, Abe Gore, Sol Lesser and the American Photo Player Company.

The instrument is to be a five-manual, completed unified organ, embodying a main organ with pipes large enough for a human body to crawl through tapering down to some not larger in size than a lead pencil. In all the Kinema's new mammoth organ will have 15,147 pipes. The cost of installation is estimated to reach $75,000.

It is the intention of the management to provide Kinema audiences with not only the most elaborate pipe organ but also to give Los Angeles a subject of particular civic pride.

A large echo organ is to be installed in the rear of the balcony dome, while a modern jazz organ is to be built with pipes and instrumental effects never before heard. This jazz organ will contain every master effect as well as a giant marimbaphone and a harp which is to be perfection in itself. The largest xylophone ever built in an organ is also included in the specifications. Various colored lights are to be a feature of this particular part of the instrument showing audiences the effects being played. A piano with Hawaiian attachments, guitars, mandolins, an elaborate set of chimes; bass drums, tympanies, cymbal, triangles; Vox Humana; Chinese wood drums; tom tom; hundreds of bird whistles placed in various parts of the theatre auditorium; sleigh bells; and dozens of other instrumental novelties promise to make the Kinema's new orchestra organ a symphonic orchestra of marvelous tone and beauty.

The console, or keyboard, is to be placed in a glass enclosure upon hydraulic elevators so that during solo performances audiences may have an insight into the intrinsic mechanism of the giant Robert Morton.

Music For Your Theatre

Musical Materials at Hand

By Charles D. Isaacson

IN order to build a house, you must first know what is needed to make it complete.

Doubtless before the shrewd man comes to the conclusion to build, he has a pretty comprehensive idea of what materials he has at hand or easily obtainable. He figures his costs, measures these against what he can get out of his investment—and decides for or against the proposal.

In exactly that frame of mind would I have the careful theatre man consider the matter of music.

I have touched on three things so far:*

1. The general proposition of the wisdom of having music for the theatre as a money-bringing asset.

2. The reason why music accentuates and increases the emotional power of the picture; the psychological, medical reasons.

3. The music craze which can be harnessed to the theatre (just what is sweeping the country now in the way of musical interest, etc.)

If you are in sympathy with the idea of harnessing the music craze, of putting it to work for your box office; if you are in readiness to study for purely business reasons the real scientific reasons behind music's power in bettering pictures; if you are quite agreeable to a scheme for making yours an example of the new model motion picture-music house, let us begin right now an examination into the materials at hand—their cost, their cost of maintenance, and their possible return on the investment.

Now, in the matter of music, the same principles of expenditure hold, as they do with the pictures proper.

One theatre pays high prices for first runs, and some theatres wait a while—a long while, to pay a lower price for the productions.

It is not to be expected that the same musical goal can be set for all theatres. Indeed, I want to emphasize the great scope of possibilities. You invest what you can stand, and according to what you can reasonably bring back. It is not necessary for every theatre to engage a high-priced musical director, with an eighty-piece orchestra and a hundred-voice chorus, with a cast of principal singers and other soloists. It is not necessary that a costly pipe organ such as is specified in the home of the Vanderbilts be demanded.

Just as it is true that music covers everything from the singing of the birds in the field to the million dollar grand opera spectacles, so is it obvious that the matter of music in the motion picture theatre does not signify a hard and fast method of operation. Every man to his method. You can learn to walk (in introducing music)—afterwards you can learn to run, and later you can take the trolley or your high-powered limousine.

You can begin with the piano and its musician, or you can go even further back in the scale of musical excellence with a playerpiano, which runs by mechanical operation, or under the foot pedal of a sympathetic layman. Even with the player piano, the only place that the music occupies may be between pictures and not during their operation.

(I have even encountered a little theatre where the sole music was produced by a weak little phonograph with scratched-out records. But it was remarkable to see how much even that poor little device of a substitute for the real thing did for the audience.)

But, building up from the piano orchestra, the theatre man has as his materials the following:

Pianos.

Player-pianos.

Organs (square).

Pipe Organs (ranging from a minimum number of stops to the size of the great cathedral organs, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars, and being capable of anything and everything in music).

Orchestrons, or mechanical instruments representing the instruments in an orchestra.

Automatic instruments of all types, representing the violin and practically every genuine instrument.

Violins and all string instruments—violas, cellos, bass-violins (and the players thereof).

The orchestra of the Rivoli theatre, New York, of which Hugo Riesenfeld is the managing-director. Frederick Stahlberg and Joseph Littan are the conductors

*The Motion Picture News will be glad to send copies of the articles covering these points, on request to any theatre executive. If you have not read these important foundational articles, you ought to get them, as they are essential to a complete understanding of Mr. Isaacson's plan for music in your theatre. It will prove advantageous to keep a file of the music series.

Cornets, and all brass instruments, including horns, French horns, tubas, etc. (and the players thereof).

Drums and all concussion instruments. Singers of all kinds—tenors, sopranos, baritones, basses.

Dancers, from the esthetic creations of Greek ballets, through the toe dancers, interpretative dancers to the modern representatives of ballroom music.

The music is available—every opera, symphony, overture, medley, selection, characteristic dance, descriptive melodramatic material, dance ballets, the classics of all descriptions—from the beginning of all time, free to your use, without hurting or injuring or making unhappy the composers, music which will describe everything and fits into every scene, situation and emergency, music for interpolating entre-acts, novelties, specialties, music which in itself will attract listeners, music which aids the pictures—every kind of music.

Modern music of the minute—all the song and dance hits, the ragtime, jazzy sensations, the sentimental gush melodies and ballades, the musical comedy scores, medley selections.

Every musician is your material—local or international artist, from Susie Smith who has a nice voice, to Enrico Caruso and Amelita Galli-Curci—all are your material, from which to choose what is most appropriate and fitting for you. Every existing orchestra, quartette, may be considered. Every music teacher is grist to your mill.

Every musical instrument maker and dealer have material for you to investigate and adapt for probable use.

You must consider that you have the possibility of installing anything—the smallest of the stationary, permanent instruments, to the largest. You have the privilege of engaging any kind of orchestra, from a one man "ensemble" to the biggest in the world! You can have a permanent organization of musicians that is always on the job, or you may have it only for special nights, and fill in with lesser features on off nights.

Within your own city are the worthwhile musicians who are ready to discuss costs with you; who, without obligating you in any way, will show you what it will amount to in order to operate an orchestra. The local union of musicians will give you the accepted rate of organist, violinist, leader—any and all the men you want. It is easy to acquaint yourself with what your money will buy. It is easier still to see how much value the musical venture will bring to your seating capacity.

Gladly will the makers of the instruments come to your aid, in estimating costs for you, and making specifications which are adaptable to your needs.

The writer of these articles will be glad to draw up suggestions for you, based on your general statement of conditions and possibilities. Tell him what you are doing now—what your ambitions are musically, or indicate what you would like to make your maximum of investment; or if you wish, write a blank request and the writer will be pleased to make it his personal business to draw out the information which will bring about the facts to enable him to give you a prescription, of what you might do musically, and what it will cost to do it.

In the course of the forthcoming articles, the writer plans to touch on the individual details of the materials at hand—he will try to make you acquainted with the general characteristics of the instruments and what are the best combinations for small orchestras. He will attempt to show you what are the best installations of organs and will give you a broad idea of acoustics (the science of sound carrying, which governs the building of the auditorium, so that the maximum of pure sound will carry with the minimum of effort, and without interference). He will discuss the existing literature of music as it is published and how it is easiest to select from the stocks of the publishers; he will list the most popular music of the classics and near-classics. He will show you how to tie up to the existing hits. He will further endeavor to indicate the way to judge your prospective leader and assistants—how to put them to the test—thus eliminating the chance of your tying up to any fakers and four-flushers (and of these, unfortunately, there are many). It is unnecessary that the whole world of music should be a mystery. There are certain fundamental points upon which to choose musicians, instruments, ensembles, sheet music, rolls, records, programs.

I have no use for the manager who won't take the time to investigate the new idea of the minute. After a man has investigated and then is satisfied to leave the matter alone—well and good. But to turn aside without making a study of the situation, when so many are making good with music as the right hand of pictures that is unpardonable.

There, as I have indicated above, are the materials at hand—the general inventory of what you might use. Now go and call in the experts and manufacturers and dealers. They will do the work you give your ear and your time to listen.

(In the next issue Mr. Ineson will write about "An American Philosophy of Taste" in which he will show you the folly of using cheap music if you want to draw good trade).

One of the most interesting and most popular exhibitions at the recent Cleveland Convention was the demonstration of an 8-ft. Monsoon Blower in the lobby of the Hotel Winton, personally conducted by "Monsoon Dailey," President of the Monsoon Cooling System, Inc.

This enormous blower was so perfectly balanced that a little 10-inch desk fan propelled the blades at a good rate of speed. The novel demonstration aroused a great amount of interest among the exhibitors at the Convention and drew good sized crowds. Mr. Dailey had a lot of interesting things to say about this system which is designed especially for theatre cooling and ventilating, and the demonstration led to the signing up of several big orders.

Monsoon Dailey is going to make an extended trip through the South very soon to get acquainted with the exhibitors in that section of the country.

Large Crowd Christens Astor

Not since the days of motion pictures in St. Paul, Minn., has any motion picture event created the interest that attended the formal opening of the New Astor, Finkelshtein & Ruben's newest St. Paul theatre, on Saturday, May 15.

When the doors of the theatre were thrown open to the public a crowd of sufficient size to fill the 1,450 seats within, many times over, was on hand and trying to gain admission. A squad of eight police had its hands full trying to maintain order as the first capacity audience squeezed its way into the auditorium, and every day since the opening the New Astor has continued to draw overflow crowds to each performance.

The New Astor occupies the site on which previously stood the Gaiety, the third motion picture theatre in St. Paul, and is a handsome white structure of Greek design, standing out in contrast to every other building for blocks around. Buchner and Orth were the architects for the structure, which was erected by the Murphy Construction Co. The building has a frontage of about sixty-five feet and a depth of about 160 feet, standing about three and a half stories high.

The theatre is equipped with Simplex projectors, a $10,000 pipe organ, a Velvet silver screen, and has adopted a policy of presenting the latest photoplays at twenty-five-cent admission prices.

An eight-piece orchestra furnishes the bulk of the music at the New Astor. The interior lighting of the theatre is such that it has been termed a daylight theatre by Manager John M. McClure.

If you want to draw larger crowds talk to a Manager who has installed an Estey Organ.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Married Life"

(Mack Sennett Comedy—First National—Five Reels)

MACK SENNETT'S latest five-reel comedy is advertised as "Not a War Picture." It is more—it is a riot of "tomfoolishness," burlesque, satire and hokum. The latter element figures in the "take-off" on the ten-twenty-and-thirty melodrama in the days when pretty daughter was kissed by the slick v-i-l-l-a-i-n. The offering carries more mirth-provoking incident than "Down on the Farm," since it presents the entire Mack Sennett stock company—minus the birds and beasts. The latter piece relied for its comedy interest on the barnyard species for its points—the newest contribution carries itself very well upon its burlesque of a football game, a "phony" play and the expose of back-stage paraphernalia.

The cast is headed by Ben Turpin—and Ben carries on in his own inimitable fashion. It is the biggest part he has ever had and he deserves it after years of faithful service. He is the persecuted hero of this fantastic tale. His name, Rodney St. Clair, is enough to make him hounded by an army of Desperate Desmonds. Well, after guiding his team to victory in the football match—splendid hokum in itself—he wanders to his rival's office—the wronged husband in the plot. The latter's wife is about to present amateur theatricals and the play furnishes the outstanding comedy. The audience is composed of Charles Murray and James Finlayson, the aforementioned husband in a box, and Ford Sterling and Louise Fazenda in the front row. And a host of others.

A good deal of the humor is derived from the conversations of these spectators and what is left is generated from the stage when the back-stage inventions are exposed. How rain and thunder is made is a scream in itself. And the trick of the galloping horse is another. Ditto the burning house when the front falls away disclosing the wife, Phyllis Haver, and Ben Turpin on step-ladders. The husband in the box has a sorry looking face over the play which is mostly a study in osculation. And Ford Sterling is there with the merry quip. The several acts are titled such as "A. Drop in the Bucket," which, of course, introduces the rain-storm. When the following act presents the fire scene, Ford cries out "Why don't you use your rain now?" There is considerable chasing but that is to be expected. One doesn't notice this antique trick because of the comic incident interspersed throughout. For instance tossing Indian clubs about is good for a laugh or two.

The title editor on the Sennett lots deserves credit for his captions—all of which are brief and right to the point. A few samples:—"I hope he drowns," this said during the rain-storm. Another—"Sir Douglas Woolworth, your profiteering days are over!" A few other mirth provokers are. "A Chestertield never fails,"—"Maybe we'll have better weather next act,"—"I'll separate you from the earth, you cross-eyed home wrecker." "Married Life" travels on high from the start and presents Mack Sennett at his best. The players seem to enjoy themselves as much as the audience in looking at them.—LAURENCE REID

"Solid Concrete"

(Vitagraph Comedy Starring Larry Semon—Two Reels)

SOME one about the lot where Larry Semon makes Vitagraph comedies in ingenious in devising new and semi-new gags and slapstick stunts and also has but little regard for Semon's life, if we are to judge by "Solid Concrete," the latest offering with the elongated comedian as the star.

Semon and his company have journeyed to the location of a Portland cement plant and there enacted, in the air and on the ground the concoction labeled "Solid Concrete." There are more dare devil stunts in this than are usually found in a Fairbanks film. Semon climbs ladders, tumbles off roofs, dives from trestles and does other foolhardy things. The production registers as a thriller quite as much as a comedy and never stops a moment from being one grand round of action. The story told is of course inconsequential. In fact the whole picture gets its entertainment value from the stunts pulled, but as these are way out of the ordinary it can be booked with full assurance that the picture will get more than passing attention.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"The Servant Question"

(Released by Selznick on the Select Program. Willie Collier Starred with His Son in Support)

THERE is only one reason why this picture finds its way to any program or into any theatre which includes the one on Broadway where it is playing this wreck and that is that Willie Collier's name is worth something at the box office—yet. It won't after people get a look at "The Servant Question." Nothing quite so bad has ever come our way. The story what little there is concerns a pair of crooks who are stealing jewels and the efforts of Mr. Collier and his son "Buster," who showed considerable ability some years ago as a child actor in a Triangle picture, to frustrate their plans. Sandwiched in between the sequences having to do with this time-worn plot is an attempt at farce comedy which fails to register. The titles are painful in their attempt to be funny. The settings are cheap and badly arranged. The photography and lightings would suggest the work of an amateur. The cast for the most part overacts and displays a complete lack of knowledge in the art of screen playing. Mr. Collier is one of the worst offenders. His efforts to appear and act a juvenile, the camera together with very harsh lightings treat him very badly, are ludicrous. That is about all except that son "Buster," while for all that he is a nice looking kid, doesn't live up to expectations. He is decidedly camera conscious and doesn't know what to do with his hands.

If you think you can afford to put one over on your audience on the strength of Collier's name play this one but don't expect anyone to like it, unless you figure it is so bad that it will be funny. We wonder how much money it took to wish the "Buster" role in "The Servant Question" off on Mr. Collier for certainly he is too intelligent to think that the story was one that he had a possible chance of carrying to success. We hope that the sum was large enough so that he can afford the loss of a good bit of prestige. —J. S. DICKERSON

"The Jazz Bandits"

(Fox Sunshine Comedy Two Reels)

FOR real, spontaneous humor, this comedy falls far behind its predecessors. The action is vigorous, the tempo fast, and the cast as good as usual, but it has no original stunts that will make the audience drown out the orchestra with their laughter. Rather it is a hash of familiar slapstick gags, done with the typical Sunshine zest and speed, and by a typical Sunshine cast. Which is saying a good deal for the picture at that. It will put an audience, unless they are ultra-sophisticated, in a good humor and keep them smiling, and perhaps snickering, but for producing outbursts of laughter, it is not a success.

No one is starred, and about six of the regular Sunshine troupe share the camera equally. The familiar, dilapidated Ford plays an important part in the first reel, when a breakfast is cooked on its radiator. A windstorm scene is very well done. As usual, the car comes to sudden grief when it runs into a heavy man. The remainder of the film takes place in a restaurant and in a barber shop. There is a silhouette of a girl undressing which is a bit daring. The monkey and dog do not appear. Roy Del Ruth directed, and Hampton Del Ruth supervised.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for last twenty weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to February 21, 1920.

"PASSERS-BY"

(Blackton-Pathe)

Exceptional Characterizations Lift Ordinary Story

RICH in characterization and enacted by a flawless cast the screen version of C. Haddon Chambers' stage success, "Passers-By" is an interesting film in spite of its familiar "wronged girl" plot, and the fact that much of that which made the play so popular has been lost in translation.

There has been retained, however, the fine contrast of characters of the original and this and the incident provided, some from the play and some new is what lifts the picture out of the rut.

William J. Ferguson as "Pine" and Dick Lee as "Burns," a derelict, are chiefly responsible for the feature's entertaining qualities and also for considerable real comedy, while Tom Lewis as "Nighty," the cabman, makes much of a role that in less talented hands would have been nothing.

Mr. Blackton has been prodigal and painstaking in his production. The atmosphere of London with its fog and other peculiarities has been realistically produced. The sets used for the interiors are typically English and in keeping with the story. There are places where the picture drags and there is little suspense obtained at any time, but this is the fault of the plot, and because many subtitles selected from lines of the play that do not have the value of the spoken word have been used.

In the leading role Herbert Rawlinson is not given exceptional opportunities, but plays with a fine reserve that carries conviction. Leila Valentine is appealing as the governess. Charles Stuart Blackton, son of the producer and director, plays "Little Peter" with the skill of a veteran. The picture, although English in its viewpoint, is suitable for any house.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Herbert Rawlinson in "Passers By," a Blackton production released through Pathe will be the attraction at this theatre on _____ of _____ week.

It is a quaint, heart-grIPPING story that should interest those who have the opportunity of seeing it.

The story is by C. Haddon Chambers and is taken from the play of that name which ran so successfully in New York a few seasons ago. Mr. Chambers is well known as a playwright, having written "The Tyranny of Tears," "The Idlers," "The Saving Grace and Captain Swift."

Herbert Rawlinson is convincing in the principal role and is supported by a very capable cast.

He loved her and wanted to marry her although she occupied a much lower station in life. But his sister had other plans for him and wanted to bring about a marriage between her brother and a young lady of high standing.

Through the machinations of his sister Margaret, our heroine disappears and is lost to her lover for six years.

And it is only by chance that she is found again by her lover, when in a whimsical moment he decides to open his home to the strays who pass by.

His joy is unbounded when he meets his lost one for she was the great love in his life. And when she tells him that they have a little son, his happiness is complete.

PROGRAM READER

Herbert Rawlinson in "Passers By," a J. Stuart Blackton production, released through Pathe, will be the feature at this theatre on _____ of _____ week.

It is a quaint, heart-grIPPING story from the pen of C. Haddon Chambers and enjoyed a long run in New York as a most successful play.

Mr. Chambers is a well known playwright, having written "The Tyranny of Tears," "The Idlers," "The Saving Grace" and "Captain Swift."

Herbert Rawlinson is convincing in the principal role and is supported by an excellent cast, among whom are Leila Valentine, Ellen Cassity, Pauline Coffyn, and Tom Lewis.

He loved her and wanted to marry her although she occupied a much lower station in life than he did.

His sister, however, wanted him to marry a young lady of high station and in order to bring the marriage about, forced Margaret, our heroine from the house, where she was employed as a governess.

The lovers did not meet again for six years—and then it was by chance when in a whimsical moment our hero opened his home to strays who passed by. Margaret was one of them but when her lover found her he knew that she was the great love in his life. And when she tells him that they have a little son, his happiness is complete.

SUGGESTIONS

Although this feature will not startle your audience with its story, it should give pleasant entertainment.

It is taken from the stage play by C. Haddon Chambers, who is well known as a playwright and it would not be a bad idea to give him the premier position in your billing.

You might bill the characters separately and run a little story on each one individually.

You might also send out letters to your patrons especially, the elite class, telling them what the picture contains.

And don't forget to bill the members of the cast strong, for each one has been selected carefully as to types.

"TWINS OF SUFFERING CREEK"

(Fox)

Russell, in Western, Will Entertain But Not Thrill

WILLIAM RUSSELL has deserted farce-comedy and is a better actor for it. He has a Western story to work with which departs from the beaten path in its structure, but which also has no grand thrills or unusual daredevil stunts.

The story is laid in the familiar mining town of not so long ago, with the star as the respected owner of the saloon and gambling house. He has an argument with a gambler and both draw their guns, but in order to prevent a double killing, it is agreed that they decide who should have the first shot by cards. The star loses and Pemberton gives him three days to live. Figuring that he might as well do as much good as possible in his remaining hours, the star visits the only married family in Suffering Creek. Here the story neglects the star and his own romance with the dance hall girl, and tells the tale of the hard worked wife leaving her husband and twins to go with Pemberton. Russell cares for the babies while the miner pursues the runaways, and there is some fair comedy here. The husband comes back defeated and the star himself brings the wife, who now realizes her mistake, back to her home. Then there is a thrilling scene when he drives the stage coach through an attack by bandits, under the leadership of Pemberton. The latter is killed by the revenge-seeking husband, and Russell is free to live and marry his sweetheart.

All this may seem rather disconnected, and in a way it is, for there is no conflict or opposition in the star's romance, and the big scene at the end, the hold-up of the stage, is in no way the result of the great part of the picture the tale of the runaway wife. But if it is not perfect drama, it has action and is exciting enough to catch the interest. The children prove to be sufficiently cute. Russell shows up excellently in a scene where, badly wounded, he insists upon keeping his appointment with the villain and allow him his promised first shot at him. Length, 5 reels. Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Twins of Suffering Creek," a thrilling story of a Western mining town, with the inimitable William Russell as the star, will be the attraction at the _____ theatre on _____.

This picture is an adaptation of the novel by Ridgwell Cullum and, besides the star, the cast contains such well known names as Louise Lovely, Joe Ray and Florence Deshon.

"Suffering Creek" could never be accused of being quiet. The curfew never rang at nine o'clock. Instead it was a tip-rarin', hard-drinking and easily aroused village set in the western mountains, where the oldest inhabitants were those who drew their guns fastest. Bill Lark, played by William Russell, was the highly respected proprietor of a saloon and gambling resort. As he played poker with his sleeve. Both men drew their guns at an instant, but in order to prevent a double killing they agree to draw lots to see who should shoot first. Pemberton passes and Bill lives, and has still kept his word not to draw first.

The picture is replete with thrills and red-blooded action, the kind that makes you wish you had lived in those good old days in the new West, when the best men, and the quick shooting men, were the ones who remained in town.

PROGRAM READER

"We'll draw lots," said Pemberton, the gambler, "to see which of us shall have the first shot at the other." Bill Lark agreed, and lost, so Pemberton gave him three days to live. But a whole lot can happen in three days, especially when William Russell, talented star of the screen, is in the picture. "Twins of Suffering Creek" is its name, and it is just one mass of thrills and action. You remember this star from his recent farce comedies, and here he is again in a Western drama, which, besides showing his versatility, provides one of the most gripping Cullum, and directed by Scott Dunlap. Come and see the twins—you will like them. But they represented the entire married population of "Suffering Creek," and its entire growing generation. Two little children in a town of quick shooting and setting? What photography would not be interesting built around such an absorbing setting?

SUGGESTIONS

Bill this as a new kind of picture featuring William Russell. His following is now up to the average, and should increase with this picture. In your catch lines put across the idea of the gambling for the first shot and create, if you can, the atmosphere of the old Western mining town, which still has interest for the fan. Show trials of the hold-up and never mind the romance so much. Few street stunts are possible, but a pair of dolls, in life size, would attract the lobby. They should be labeled "These are the Twins of Suffering Creek." Ridgwell Cullum may not mean so much to the fans.

CATCH LINES

A thrilling story of a man who was to die in three days, unless he broke his word of honor. Did he break it? No! Did he die? No! See "Twins of Suffering Creek," with William Russell, and you will learn the answer.

"THE GREAT ACCIDENT"

(Goldwyn)

This Would Have Hit the Bull's-Eye Had Comedy Been Developed

IT strikes us that the adaptation of Ben Ames Williams' story, "The Great Accident," would have afforded more interesting entertainment had it been developed along comedy lines. There is the germ of a humorous idea here which is not taken advantage of by the producers. The idea of a never-do-well being made the victim of a practical joke and waking up to find himself mayor of the town, certainly has its comic possibilities. But those in charge have neglected its satirical pretensions in order to deal in sentiment and heart interest. After the first few hundred feet, the picture relies solely for its success upon Tom Moore's sincere and natural performance. It started off like a knock-out, but soon developed into a trite and conventional photoplay—with emphasis laid upon its sentiment and melodramatic trimmings.

The author writes human stories—and most of them are entirely logical. But his latest contribution has gone astray because it lacks his notes of originality and simplicity. The leading character is quite unconventional while the others are cut from an antique pattern. One sees the political boss endeavoring to defeat the candidate which he does by playing his practical joke. The son of the defeated man is placed on the ticket and is successful. Which, of course, brings out the idea that he will turn over a new leaf, fully determined to show the jokers that they haven't erred. The sequences from this point are rather confusing and it looks as if considerable footage had been taken because many of the scenes bear no relation to one another.

The girl is the factor toward leading the hero to redemption. And there is a counter romance which seems strangely out of place and robs the picture of its simplicity. This heroine is led to compromise the mayor after he has trusted her, and her subsequent apology doesn't ring true. Eventually the young man is a candidate for re-election upon a "dry" platform and is again successful. Ad interim, there is presented a deal of irrelevant incident which doesn't even serve the purpose of emphasizing the drama. Other ingredients are found in a quarrel and reconciliation between the hero and his parents and a fight between the former and his opponent. The sob stuff made it utterly conventional. Besides Mr. Moore's performance, the work of Ann Forrest is conspicuous. This actress flashes some real emotion which will make her heard from one of these days. A little editing here and there would make the latter scenes less confusing and do much in making it an average offering of its kind.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

Whether a good sense of humor or grim determination is the more powerful factor in achieving success, is the theme of Tom Moore's latest Goldwyn picture, "The Great Accident," which comes to the theatre the week of July 5. As a story it appeared in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post, the author, Ben Ames Williams, being one of that publication's most brilliant contributors. Mr. Moore plays the carefree, irresponsible, rather lazy son of Winthrop Chase who is candidate for mayor of his town. The father is confident of the outcome of the election. However, he doesn't reckon on the political whip wielded by Congressman Careall. The latter fears Chase and his influence if elected so he plans to defeat him by some hoax.

When election day arrives and who is counted it is discovered that the majority of voters had written the name of Chase, Junior. The young man realizes the practical joke played on his father and himself and, mortified, is tempted to resign. But an incident occurs which makes a new man of him. He is determined to shoulder his responsibility. And eventually the natives are glad that their practical joke turned out for the best. A fine flavor of romance is interspersed with the action which is admirably taken care of by Jane Novak, Ann Forrest and others. Harry Beaumont directed the feature, which is sufficient guarantee of its excellence.

PROGRAM READER

Were you ever the victim of a practical joke? If you were did that joke react upon its perpetrator and present you in entirely a different light than what was intended? Tom Moore comes to this theatre soon in "The Great Accident," an adaptation of Ben Ames Williams' serial from the pages of the Saturday Evening Post. He is the victim of a practical joke which makes him the mayor of his town. How he is transformed from a lazy, carefree chap into a resolute, determined factor of the community by means of a practical joke is told in most interesting style in the feature. It is one of the best comedies in which the popular Goldwyn star has ever appeared. The fact that Harry Beaumont directed is ample proof that it is well-nigh perfect. Jane Novak, Ann Forrest are members of the cast.

"SICK ABED"

(Paramount-Artcraft)

This Lively Comedy Is a Sure Laugh-Pronger

ONCE in a while an adaptation of a farce-comedy flashes across the film horizon which entitles it the same encomiums as were found in the original. Take "Sick Abed," Wallace Reid's latest picture for example. It carries on the same spontaneity, the identical flavor of satire and make-believe, with nary a draggy moment, but with sure-fire incident most of the way. Only in the introductory flashes is the outline of action different, but once it gets into its momentum there's nothing to it—it breezes under the wire a winner. Here is one picture which does not have to rely upon dialogue to score. The original version carried its mirth-provoking puns, too. But their absence is not felt because of the wealth of comedy business and the zest with which the players enact their parts.

The director, Sam Wood, has timed his scenes perfectly getting the most from every one without resorting to emphasis or exaggeration. "Sick Abed" scored quite a hit upon the stage; it should do likewise upon the screen. For one thing film audiences will look upon something quite unconventional. The "business" of exits and entrances is done away with—and what is presented has its place. Each scene and situation builds from its forerunner with proper sequence which of course makes the laughter spontaneous. The idea of a young man shamming sickness so that he might avoid a restless member of the opposite sex and also to keep from testifying in a divorce suit is brought out here with charming freshness.

The high comedy points generate from his ability to play the invalid. A captivating nurse is sufficient to keep him sick for life that is quite evening arrives. Then a stern, man-handling nurse takes up her duties. The plot is all arranged even to the quick doctors. But something goes wrong. The infatuated woman who drove him to his bed is the identical person who is suing her husband for divorce. And she goes to court and gets permission to have a specialist examine the fakir. Which is occasion to score with some more fine comedy. The pretty nurse is enough to set his pulse beating rapidly and he has no temperature when she slips a piece of ice in his mouth. The farce emerges into a romance when the family quarrel is patched up and the invalid takes the girl as his nurse for life. Wallace Reid is batting a high average these days—what with his automobile stories and his latest contribution. He plays the part with acceptable pep and ginger, aided and abetted by Bebe Daniels as the pretty nurse. Clara K. Kennedy's scenario is compact and well written. Your audiences will have a good time here.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

Wallace Reid in a bottled green version of the stage farce "Sick Abed," which had all of New York's big theatres, will be the attraction at the — theatre beginning —. The offering presents the breezy star in a whirlwind of amusing complications. He attempts to protect a friend by pretending to be so ill that he can't testify in a divorce suit. Since he is the star witness, Wallace delays the proceedings, but he has a tough time getting away with the deception. Two quick doctors, a real one, a pretty nurse, a homely one who snores, a wife lawyer for every man but her husband, and the husband himself—these are the principal figures in this farcical domestic triangle.

The star is shamming sickness. It is while he is dodging the doctors, who suspect his indisposition to be "phony," he encounters a beautiful nurse. And then the fun begins. He has to play sick for three reels, and it is the fun derived from this experience which furnishes the high spots of the picture. Mr. Reid is an ideal selection for the leading role and his support is entirely competent. Bebe Daniels, John Stepping, Tully Marshall and others are eminently suited to the demands of the story. Sam Wood directed this picture from Clara K. Kennedy's scenario. Ethel W. Mumford is the author.

PROGRAM READER

He shammed illness to protect a friend. The doctors stuck a thermometer between his lips and tested his heart action. But they didn't know that the patient had a cake of ice in his mouth. He wanted to be sick because it meant that a beautiful nurse would care for him. This is the crux of the situation which carries "Sick Abed" through as one of the liveliest and funniest farces that ever reached the screen. Upon the stage the offering scored as a decided hit, and none of its sparkle and gaiety have been lost in the silent version. The picture comes to the — theatre next — with Wallace Reid. Prominent in his support is Bebe Daniels, who has progressed rapidly on the screen. The subject can be called an amusing study in the art of deception. And it is bright and entertaining throughout.

CATCH LINES

He had sinking spells—spells of dizziness—spells of heart flutterings. Yes, he certainly was in a bad way. What was the reason for it? Was he as sick as he imagined? See Wallace Reid in "Sick Abed."

"THE JOYOUS TROUBLE-MAKER"

(Fox)

William Farnum Scores in Light Role, Though Entertainment Value Is Rather Weak

It will surprise William Farnum's following to find him in light entertainment which is based upon a semi-humorous foundation. The rugged Fox star is versatile enough to come through with a pleasing performance, although there is no question that his personality is more adaptable to subjects of dramatic ingredients. The picture has its compensation in the fact that it takes him out of heroic characterization, although less magnetic figures might have scored just as easily. "The Joyous Troublemaker" is not a good title for this picture because of the "he-man" proportions of the star, and its entertainment values are somewhat weak owing to its obvious pattern.

The action gets off to a slow start but picks up in strength and finishes with an adequate punch. There is no question that the comedy would have been more spontaneous had the title-editor paid more attention to his situations instead of laboring to create laughter by wholly irrelevant captions. It is difficult to reconcile Farnum with the vernacular of the race-track. It is making a bid for laughs which might have been gained in the regular orthodox manner. The theme is based upon the romantic urge felt in the heart of the wealthy nature-lover and his cave-man attitude toward the heroine. He simply sweeps her off her feet and in the end she capitulates through the sheer force of his personality.

The high spots of the feature are found in her efforts to hulk him. She goes to such extremes as hiring a pair of desperadoes to put him off her property—property to which he claims ownership. But the good-natured fisherman (the fishes for hearts as well as trout) conquers them just as easily, and in the jiffy they are working for him. Of course, the entire action is anticipated there being nothing original in the treatment. It is interesting, at times, because one never knows just how Farnum will proceed in living up to the title. A touch of melodrama is inserted which is nearly spoiled through the serious pretensions of the villain. It would have been more consistent with the spirit of the piece had the touch been one of mock-melodrama. Certain sequences are offered which are rather confusing and certain features are out of harmony. If the star spoke in more natural terms the picture would strike a higher average. It should please after a fashion. J. Gordon Edwards has given the subject appropriate backgrounds. There are very few interiors. The director has placed his cameraman in a strip of landscape which is in perfect keeping with the story. And between him and the author enough high lights have been incorporated to furnish an adequate program picture. Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

William Farnum will make his appearance at the theatre on week in a comedy-drama entitled "The Joyous Troublemaker." This is quite a departure for the rugged Fox star, but the manner in which he takes advantage of his semi-humorous role proves that he is an actor of marked versatility. He appears as Bill Steele, a wealthy young man whose object in life is the pursuit of pleasure. To be near a trout stream and enjoying the landscape of nature is his chief ambition. He buys an estate which is contested by Beatrice Corliss, and she endeavors to put him off without success.

The girl is independent and has a spirited disposition, but she promises that if he ever succeeds in erecting a cabin on her property she will come and cook a meal for him. In the meantime Bill saves her from various dangers as well as himself. And in the end he wins the girl through sheer courage and resourcefulness. The picture is well punctuated with dramatic moments, which carry in for good measure. The author has some genuine Farnum thrills thrown the director, J. Gordon Edwards, has kept it moving in a typical Farnum way. The star plays the part in spirited fashion and his support, which includes Loue Lovely, is adequate.

PROGRAM READER

You have seen William Farnum in Zane Grey stories; you have seen him present his forceful personality in rugged Western tales where he had to fight his way through thick and thin to reach the top. But you are in for a pleasant surprise when you see him in "The Joyous Troublemaker." In this picture Mr. Farnum appears in a serio-comic role. Quite a departure for this star. But he comes forth as a most versatile actor. Really he is as successful in comedy parts as in those which call for dramatic interpretation. The picture carries a deal of humor and is flavored with a delightful romance. The star is assisted by Louise Lovely and others. J. Gordon Edwards is the director of this feature, which comes to the next

"SAND"

(Paramount-Artcraft)

William S. Hart and His Pinto Score in Characteristic Picture

THE popular delineator of Western roles, William S. Hart, has in "Sand" a characteristic picture—one which presents the star in the same identical situations which have established his following. The few times he has placed his sombrero on the shelf, hung up his two guns, and put his horse out to pasture and appeared in straight dramatic roles have not increased his popularity. He can play the Westerner so well that he should continue to play it as long as he is identified with the screen. People will flock to see Bill Hart regardless of the type of picture, but they will prefer to see him in the offering which he does best. "Sand" is made to order in every respect, although there is a scarcity of moving moments. It seems to rely principally upon its notes of pathos and heart interest for whatever success it will attain. The villains belong to the orthodox variety, with the ring leader masquerading as a worthy citizen and furnishing the conflict upon which the action and romance are based. The girl misunderstands the Westerner when he is fired from his position as station agent. He talks of a wonderful friend on a neighboring ranch—a friend he is anxious to see. Little does she dream that he is speaking of his horse. A little explanation, a little understanding and the atmosphere would have been clarified. But he goes his way emoting a trifle too much to establish himself as a "he-man."

It's a great scene, the meeting between man and beast and one that gets under the spectator's skin and stays there. Nothing has been presented up to this point which is the least bit adventurous or exciting. The ex-robber and station agent takes to the long trail determined to bring the train robbers to account. Which he does in typical Hartian style. Alone and unarmed he rescues the passengers and trainmen and unmasks the ring leader. And then the lovers (the girl being one of the passengers) realize that their misunderstanding has been a mighty small trouble to cause so much anguish. Mr. Hart is more of the actor here than in some previous pictures. The lack of incident is responsible for his taking an emotional burden upon his shoulder. But never does he overdo it. His facial expressions show that he is complete master of himself. The title could have been used for a dozen Hart pictures. The sand of the desert and what is a simile for courage in a determined individual has been a factor before. Mary Thurman plays the heroine in acceptable fashion. The picture isn't one of Bill Hart's best, even though it is characteristic to the core. Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

The ever popular William S. Hart, the foremost delineator of Western types, is coming to the theatre next — in "Sand," a picture which presents the star in another of his characteristic roles and which is thoroughly entertaining. "Sand" has a double meaning which is found in the locale of this story—in a word, it is a picture which is made up of the quality of absolute realism, which is to be expected in his offerings. Mr. Hart is supported by the charming Mary Thurman, Patricia Palmer, G. Raymond Nye and others. Russell Boggs wrote the story, which was scenarized and directed by Lambert Hillyer.

PROGRAM READER

William S. Hart has a characteristic Western role in his new picture, "Sand," which comes to the theatre beginning — The film was adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer from a magazine story by Russell Boggs. How would you like to step up to the ticket office in your home town railroad station and have the piercing eyes of Bill Hart look out at you through the grating? Bill tries railroad for a while in "Sand" and the action presents a host of exciting situations. A delightful little romance accompanies the adventure. The finale is a stirring express train hold-up which is said to be striking in its realism. The lovely Mary Thurman, who formerly adorned Mack Sennett comedies. Don't miss the picture. It presents the star at his best.

CATCH LINES

See "Sand"—a stirring picture of a man, a maid and a pinto pony, and a robber band in the great Southwest. See Bill Hart at his best.

They called him yellow, but he proved he had sand. How? See Bill Hart in another of his exciting, adventurous pictures. See "Sand."

"DOLLARS AND SENSE"

(Goldwyn)

Has Rather Lukewarm Story, But Should Interest

IT is not the same Madge Kennedy in "Dollars and Sense," whom your audience knew as the star of hilarious farces, both on the stage and screen. The picture is sufficiently light for her personality, but her greatest asset, that of handling a farce situation in her peculiar, delicate way, is lost. The story makes a lukewarm sort of picture, for behind it is a germ of an idea that is not strong enough to hold up even a light production of feature length. The incidents give it a human interest, and will keep the attention, but at the end; there is liable to be a feeling of vague unsatisfaction.

Every character in the story is good—even the supposed villain. The star is a member of the chorus, penniless at the close of the season. She refuses the proffered aid of a rich banker, and takes a position as an assistant in a bakery, where a philanthropic, book-loving young baker holds forth. Together they start a bread line to relieve the victims of the "flu." This is, we believe, still sufficiently timely to convince. The baker becomes ill, and the star, in order to insure him expert care, appeals to her banker friend to save him, offering herself to him in return. When the time comes for her to go to his apartment she finds the baker, now cured, and a clergyman; while the reformed villain waits to bestow his blessing upon the two young people.

Madge Kennedy is never emotional, and in places shows her old-time, inimitable personality to good advantage. Kenneth Harlan plays opposite her and is entirely satisfactory. Willard Louis, the banker, keeps up the spirit of the picture and is a good natured and affable heavy.

If your patrons do not take it too seriously, they ought to go home happy. But if they mistake it for intense drama, and do not catch its light vein, they may not be satisfied. Madge Kennedy certainly will not lose any admirers, but she will not win a host of new ones.

Direction is excellent and continuity better still. There is no padding here. Length, 5 reels. Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Madge Kennedy's latest Goldwyn picture to play the theatre beginning in "Dollars and Sense," a screen version of the Saturday Evening Post story by Octavus Roy Cohen and presents the star in the type of story which she has made famous. The tale centers around a chorus girl's struggle for existence. One of her friends endeavors to persuade Hazel to follow the easiest way, but the latter refuses and with her last two cents enters a baker's shop to appease her hunger. The baker is an idealistic young man who with rare insight sees through her deception which she tells him the buns are for her dog. His aim in life is to help suffering humanity.

Eventually they cooperate together in establishing a bread line and plan other things for the uplifting of the poor. David is taken sick and Hazel resolves to accept the generosity of a wealthy admirer. The latter's intentions are good, for when the girl reaches the apartment there is David ready to take her in his arms. The story carries a good lesson and the characters command a deal of sympathy. There is a flash of humor which is admirably commingled with pathos and in the adaptation none of its highlights are lost. Miss Kennedy is thoroughly at home in her part and her assistants, including Kenneth Harlan, are competent.

PROGRAM READER

Madge Kennedy, the inimitable comedienne of Goldwyn pictures, and one of the most delightful personalities of screen and stage, will come to the theatre beginning in her latest comedy-drama entitled, "Dollars and Sense," an adaptation of Octavus Roy Cohen's Saturday Evening Post story of the same name. Madge Kennedy appears in the part of a chorus girl whose struggle for existence provides the moving moments of the play. She is tempted from several sources, but having a high sense of honor and a fine resourcefulness she keeps to her own high ideals and succeeds. How she rises to the top in the face of adversity is told in five reels of entertaining scenes and situations. Miss Kennedy's assistants include Kenneth Harlan, Willard Louis and Florence Deshon. Harry Beaumont is the director.

SUGGESTIONS

The pointers to bring out in advertising this picture are the flawless cast headed by the inimitable Madge Kennedy, the director, Harry Beaumont, who was responsible for "Skinner's Dress Suit," "Thirty a Week," and "The City of Comrades." Mention these pieces and your patrons will recognize his ability. Bring out that the picture is an adaptation of the short story which appeared in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post written by Octavus Roy Cohen. The author is known to all the short fiction readers. So play him up. Bring out that the story presents the struggles of a chorus girl to earn a livelihood and keep her sense of honor at the same time. Play up your copy to get the most out of the theme and use catch lines and teasers in abundance. Bill the name of the star and run stills of her in your newspaper copy.

CATCH LINES

She was a chorus girl gifted with a high sense of honor and she maintained it through various vicissitudes. See Madge Kennedy, the inimitable comedienne in "Dollars and Sense."

"THE GIRL IN THE RAIN"

(Universal)

Picture Has Many Traits of the Old Time Melo

THIS picture reminds us of the old melodramatic days, in story, action and subtleties. The author of the story must have been brought up in the old melodramatic school where the hero and heroine always succeeded in outwitting those about them, including sheriffs and detectives and where convenient methods of escape were always at hand and readily found by the persecuted ones.

This story doesn't deviate an inch from the old time melo, the subtleties being in conjunction with the rest, using the "thrilling" words and phrases that were so popular in those days.

The heroine is a sister of a counterfeiter who is pursued by the police. Being a kindhearted brother, he tells his sister upon arrival at a country hotel, to put her riding tags on and go for a horseback ride. She takes the ride, but meets with an accident during a rain storm.

The hero now appears, informs her that she cannot go back to town because the feds have swelled. He therefore, takes her to his lodge in the woods where they live as brother and sister for a short period until the detectives arrive in pursuit of the girl.

She foils them, however, makes her escape and by a clever trick succeeds in aiding her brother and his wife in escaping from jail. She now decides to abandon her relatives and lover, but fortune favors the hero, he meets her again and in an exciting finish in which all are concerned, including the always pursuing detectives, "squares" everything and wins the heroine.

This picture may have its faults and they may be pronounced, but it should appeal in the smaller neighborhood houses where it will interest. Length, 5 reels. Frank Leonard.

THE CAST

Beverly	Lloyd Bacon
Judith	Anne Cornwall
Vera	Jessalyn Van Trump
Fabyan	James Farley

Story by Varick Varady.
Scenario by Doris Schroeder.

PROGRAM READER

Anne Cornwall in her latest Universal feature, "The Girl in the Rain," will appear at this theatre on _____ of next _____.

Patrons should remember her for the pronounced hit she made as leading woman to Lyons and Moran in their runaway success, "Everything But the Truth" and her appearance with Laurel Hargrave in "The Copperhead."

In "The Girl in the Rain," Miss Cornwall is given a vehicle that is suited to her personality and emotional ability, for the story is chock full of dramatic incidents and love interest.

The locale is laid in the small town and the country, thus creating a very pretty background to look upon.

Many thrilling moments occur during the picture, among which are the heroine's escape from detectives as they are about to arrest her for a crime committed by her brother, in which a motor boat is brought into play and a very clever piece of work in the country jail, in which she succeeds in foiling the sheriff and by a clever trick aids her brother and his wife in escaping.

The feature has a strong finish in which all concerned participate and it is an exciting moment indeed when the heroine is seen rushing to the rescue of a detective who is about to be shot by her brother as a penalty for his too vigorous pursuit.

The cast is a good one, among whom are Lloyd Bacon, Jessalyn Van Trump, James Farley and George Kunkel.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Girl in the Rain," Universal's latest feature, starring Anne Cornwall, will be the attraction at this theatre on _____ of next _____.

This production has a wealth of dramatic incident, romance and love interest, and is a most gripping and emotional picture, and a very pleasing story.

The story is set in a small town and the country, and is a very clever piece of work in the country jail, in which she succeeds in foiling the sheriff and by a clever trick aids her brother and his wife in escaping.

She is seen as the sister of a counterfeiter who is being tracked by the police. They arrive in a small town and while on a horseback riding alone she meets with an accident during a rain storm and is only saved by the sudden appearance of the hero.

He informs her that she cannot go back to town because the feds have swelled, and so he takes her to his lodge in the woods where they live as brother and sister for a short period. But the detectives arrive and in an exciting and thrilling scene, the young lady makes her escape, and to cap the climax succeeds by a clever trick in extricating her brother and his wife from jail.

The story has a strong finish in which all participate and which should afford pleasant excitement for all who have the opportunity to view it.

SUGGESTIONS

Although this feature will not attract an elite audience because of the faults mentioned in the review, it should interest in many of the smaller houses and give satisfaction.

When you book this feature your best bet in exploitation would be the story, which, of course, is not a strong one.

You might run catch lines on the important dramatic incidents such as the heroine's escape from the police in the hunting lodge where she lived as a sister with the hero, the clever manner in which she tricks the jailer and aids in the escape of her brother and his wife, and the dramatic finish when she rushes to the aid of the detective and prevents her brother from shooting him.

These scenes are the big moments in the story and should attract the attention of your patrons.

As the star is little known and the cast an ordinary one, it would hardly be worth while to exploit them strongly.

The dusk is a thrill with pleasure and the whole world sails in view

THE world of romance is yours tonight—any night. There's a party this evening at a fifty-thousand-dollar apartment on Fifth Avenue. Attend it, with Paramount. Great things!

There's a lordly yacht sailing the southern seas with Wealth, Beauty (and maybe a Beast) aboard. Play slow—watch with Paramount, and away with the skein of events unwind!

There's a show in the dark and a clatter of hoofs on the windswept western plains.

There's a hurt of laughter . . . a mist of tears . . . hopes . . . loves, and the deep, bell note of tragedy!

With eyes to see, the gates of romance are open to you right now.

"The whole world sails in view" at the theatre that shows dust in the air. "The whole world sails in view" at the theatre that proclaims "It's a Paramount Picture" —in lobby, advertisement and poster.

Everybody knows about "Sand!" now.

President Wilson liked it—and allowed a thousand newspapers to say so!

Now everybody wants to see it. It's one of those strokes of luck that happen once in half a dozen life-times.

The picture is good enough to break records unaided, but with this tremendous boost and the wide publicity that was given it—Goodnight!

All right, then! Show it quick!

Shhhh! Keep it Quiet!

THEY'RE in love with each other! And they've been married a whole year! It isn't done, you know.

So he pretended to have a soul mate and she pretended to have a soul mate and then they were in style. And happy? Well, no.

You've got to see the picture to find out what happened. It's by a long shot the snappiest comedy these two clever stars have ever appeared in.

The Way "A.P." Will Play the Game

Because we believe the exhibitors as well as the other distributing and sales organizations in the motion picture industry will be interested we quote herewith, in full, our definite instructions to all Associated Producers branch office managers:

"For years the picture business was made a yellow dog business because of the sales methods and ethics of picture employees.

1. We are to sell our pictures on their individual picture and Producer merits.
2. We are not to sell or attempt to sell by innuendo or by attacking other companies' product.
3. We do not want in our employ those whose idea of salesmanship is to attack competing companies' product.
4. Every big, successful picture in the market—no matter who makes and owns it—helps us in maintaining and getting proper rentals for our own big successes.
5. The men who have been engaged for our organization have been analyzed in advance from many angles—and one of the chief angles of analysis has been their capacity for clean, fair salesmanship.

"Associated Producers, Inc., is not affiliated in any way with any other organization. We are and will at all times be free of entanglements and alliances. We can afford any week-end first run the absolute protection of our big productions to keep it free from dictation by any of the elements seeking to obtain a control over the business of exhibiting.

"We are not unfriendly to any of the elements in the industry. Our product is wide open to any clean buyer.

"We will and expect to play on merit and on clean selling theatres owned by the various factors in the market—Marcus Loew houses, Zukor houses, Rowland and Clark houses, William Fox houses, Goldwyn houses and those of the various other organizations.

"The feuds or politics of the industry are none of our business, or our men's business.

"Our business is to sell pictures; to make a reputation for our Associated Producers, for our men, for our organization collectively and—having made a reputation—to hold it and increase it."

We are pleased to have all exhibitors intending to visit New York direct their mail and telegrams in our care. We will make your advance reservations in any hotel you may desire.

YOUR WAY

The Exhibitor First! That is the Realart policy.

The Exhibitor First! Why dispute over the relative merits of percent ages, flat rentals and other means of fixing values? Realart's way is your way; take your choice.

The Exhibitor First! You have not approved present booking methods, hence Realart forsakes them and offers you a plan, new, novel, and inviting—a plan radically different from all others and one which we predict will be a model for many seasons to come—the sale to individual theatres of the

REALART STAR FRANCHISE

Here at last is a proposition so plain a child can understand it—so uninvolved that it can be announced in twelve simple words: The theatre rights to thirty six productions, each starring one of six actresses.

The Exhibitor First! A system more equitable than any proposed even in Exhibitors' conferences—one embodying the best points developed in years of observation and experience—the only really constructive plan advanced in a decade for attaining results fair and equitable to both exhibitor and producer.

The Exhibitor First! Realart will not bother you during 1920-1921 with persistent solicitation on special features. Here, too, it has a definite, fixed in advance plan. It will produce, under its own supervision, four, and only four, special features, all to be made by

WILLIAM DESMOND TAYLOR

The Exhibitor First! And with the photoplays of the Realart Star Franchise and the William Desmond Taylor Productions will be frankly conceded your right to a fair profit, to dependable service, to the best stories, to a high grade of production, to adequate accessories and, above all, to a square deal.

For several weeks Realart managers and salesmen have been explaining this plan to the exhibitors of the country. The response has exceeded expectations. Many franchises have been sold and many more will be sold in the next few weeks. Your opportunity is now! It's first come, first served! The time is limited in which to get your name to the fairest contract ever written in the motion picture business.

REALART PICTURES CORPORATION

469 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

"SWEET LAVENDER" and "THE LITTLE CLOWN," both stupendous stage successes—

"BLINDNESS," a heart interest story that has been read by nearly 2,000,000 women—

Do these sound good to you as titles for the season 1920-1921?

ARTHUR WING PINERO, author of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Gay Lord Quex," "The Amazons," "Mid-Channel" and many more stage triumphs—

AVERY HOPWOOD, creator of such dramatic triumphs as "Seven Days," "Fair and Warmer" and "The Gold Diggers," now packing them in at the Belasco Theatre—

DANA BURNET, writer of popular stories, one of the most successful young American novelists—

Do these appeal to you as names to bank on in the coming season?

Plays, authors, all—they're yours, with the productions of that superlative actress, the Girl with 40,000 Admirers. And these are only a few of the early pictures planned to add new triumphs to the already long list of achievements of

Realart policy is reflected in this announcement for Miss Minter's coming season. Her successes of the year now ending might have been an incentive to decrease expenditures for stories, direction and production during the next few months.

But that's not the Realart way. These very successes are Realart's reasons for building in 1920-1921 on a foundation that is bigger, stronger, broader, than any ever before provided for a motion picture actress!

Miss Minter has taken her place among the greatest screen stars of the times. Her present season has been the most successful of her career and it is Realart's intention that lack of initiative on its part shall not stand in the way of more Mary Miles Minter mighty box office triumphs in the sea on to come.

*In a Group of Big Photoplays Available to All
Holders of the Realart Star Franchise*

IT takes more than promises to make pictures profitable to you. And so Realart gets down to brass tacks in the matter of its plans for Alice Brady's 1920-1921 season.

How does "THE NEW YORK IDEA" by Langdon Mitchell strike you for a starter? Whale of a title, isn't it?

And one of the few plays in all history that has a record of two major runs in New York. Mrs. Fiske made a triumphant success in it and then Grace George, wife of William A. Brady, repeated. Now, Mr. Brady's daughter is to appear in the play in pictures.

But that isn't all. There are other big stage successes on Miss Brady's schedule—among them "THOSE WHO WALK IN DARKNESS" and "BLACKBIRDS."

ALICE BRADY

will not lack for good titles, or competent direction, or great production in the coming season. "BLACKBIRDS," you'll recall, was produced as a stage play by Henry Miller, with Laura Hope Crews in the leading female role. It made the Lyceum Theatre one of the brightest spots along New York's Rialto.

"THOSE WHO WALK IN DARKNESS" has passed the test supreme as story and play. It is based on the novel by Perley Poore Sheehan, which won remarkable popularity, and the dramatization is by Owen Davis, who had three plays running simultaneously on Broadway last season.

You will hunt a long time before you will find better material than this—better titles or stories better suited to a great dramatic star. And you can be sure that Miss Brady will be shown in an atmosphere of elegance and good taste, and that her opportunities to wear handsome gowns will be constant.

In a Group of Emotional Dramas Available to All Holders of the Realart Star Franchise

AND now an announcement!—the interesting story of a jury's award! a modest statement of great expectations! the important news of the acquisition by Realart of an actress whom critics acclaim the most beautiful young woman in America!

JUSTINE JOHNSTONE

becomes a Realart star by virtue of a verdict returned by a jury comprising twelve nationally known leaders in the world of literature, art and commerce. She was chosen on merit as the closest approximation of the jurors' ideals.

It was not alone hair of spun gold, or eyes like the deep waters of the ocean, or complexion comparable to the pale pink petals of the rose, or yet her Venus-like form—not beauty, nor youth, nor personality, nor talent alone that won the verdict for Miss Johnstone. It was the combination of these—the sum of them—that robbed the New York stage of one of its favorite actresses and gave to motion pictures a new star in whom is the promise of great achievement.

In dramatic experience, Miss Johnstone is well qualified for her new work. She was a member of the Follies of 1915 and 1916 and has had many important roles in stage productions—with the Castles in "Watch Your Step"; with Gaby Deslys in "Stop! Look! Listen!"; with Raymond Hitchcock; in "Oh, Boy"; with Ed Wynn in "Over the Top," and so on through a list of real triumphs.

For Miss Johnstone's first production, Realart has obtained a recent New York stage success, George Scarborough's "MOONLIGHT AND HONEYSUCKLE," in which Ruth Chatterton was the star. Exceptional stories, based only on famous books and plays, will constitute the repertoire in which Miss Johnstone's talent and beauty will be introduced to the patrons of America's most representative motion picture theatres.

In Plays of Young American Womanhood Available to All Holders of the Realart Star Franchise

Bloom

FOUR super-specials, each to be made under Realart supervision! These and the Star Franchise will comprise Realart's complete program during 1920-1921.

And for these super-specials, one director!—a full year's work on four productions!

And as for the director, the man who made "Huckleberry Finn," "Mile A-Minute Kendall," "Captain Kidd Jr.," "The Tale of Two Cities," "Johanna Enlists," "Anne of Green Gables" and many other productions of golden memory.

WILLIAM DESMOND TAYLOR

is one of the very few directors whom you really know whom you advertise whose name is familiar to your public. You know him—your patrons know him—as director of Mary Miles Minter, of Mary Pickford, of Kathlyn Williams and of other foremost stars of the screen. But it is in big special features that his originality, his artistic sense, his wonderful faculty for story-telling have been most forcefully shown.

Realart has had prepared for him a special story of the sort which he likes best to do—a story of boyhood—"THE SOUL OF YOUTH." The author is Julia Crawford Ivers and the picture is the fulfillment of the great promise of achievement which you and every one else saw so plainly in Mr. Taylor's delightful "Huckleberry Finn."

It is a story of a freckled, homeless boy and his faithful dog—a heart interest story so tenderly sympathetic, so full of the real romance of life as to win the heart of any man or woman who has not turned to stone. And among the real characters in the wonderful cast are JUDGE BEN LINDSEY of Denver, LEWIS SARGENT and LILA LEE.

"THE FURNACE," a Canadian romance by Pan, the distinguished English author, will be the second of Mr. Taylor's productions and following this will be two others which, in production quality and story value, will rival the most pretentious pictures of the season.

Four Great Feature Productions, the First of Which Will Be Available in September

CONSTANCE BINNEY in one of James M. Barrie's greatest stories!

You who were charmed by "Erstwhile Susan" you who have exclaimed over the winsomeness, the radiant beauty, the brilliant talent of this debutante star of screen and stage—can you conjure up for her a character more fitting than the lovable heroine of a Barrie novel?

Realart can't! And this announcement is our pledge of faith in one of the most charming actresses of all times! For we are investing in the rights to this story, and in the production to be made from it an amount of money which shall firmly bespeak our intention of standing back of Miss Binney and back of the little army of exhibitors who helped her achieve the most successful first season which any star ever has had!

CONSTANCE BINNEY

will open her second season on the screen in "TOMMY AND GRIZEL," a sequel to the well-beloved "Sentimental Tommy."

Since its publication in 1900, this has been one of Sir James Matthew Barrie's most popular romances, sharing that high honor with "The Little Minister," "Peter Pan," "What Every Woman Knows," "The Admirable Crichton," "Quality Street," "A Kiss for Cinderella," and other masterpieces of this premier story teller.

And there are others coming of equal quality—plays wherein lie opportunity for true creative work. But it is of "TOMMY AND GRIZEL" that Realart is thinking now—and thinking, too, in terms of values that usually are associated only with the greatest special features.

Realart's promise to exhibitors is that production and story shall fully measure up to that high order of ability which has made Miss Binney one of the outstanding figures of the screen in the season just ending.

In a Group of Sentimental Stories Available to All Holders of the Realart Star Franchise

A MARGARET ANGLIN success! A MAUDE ADAMS success! A widely read novel! And one of the best short stories of recent years!

A play by PAUL KESTER, a comedy from the French of BISSON and CARRE, a novel by ALICE DUER MILLER, a rip-roaring Saturday Evening Post yarn by SOPHIE KERR!

And what titles! "THE MASKED BALL!" "HER FIRST ELOPEMENT!" "SWEETIE PEACH!" "FOOD FOR SCANDAL!"

Some stories, we'll say, for any actress! —stories of unusual box office power! —stories that have double and treble the ordinary appeal! —stories which will be produced in a way to enhance their intrinsic value!

WANDA HAWLEY

is the star for whom Realart is making these plans for the coming season. She has just completed "FOOD FOR SCANDAL." This is from Paul Kester's play, "BEVERLY'S BALANCE," in which MARGARET ANGLIN made a sensational success in New York and on tour. The screen version was directed by James Cruze from a scenario by Edith Kennedy.

"THE MASKED BALL" was produced by the late Charles Frohman and in it MAUDE ADAMS made her first big success. This play was probably the greatest production of Mr. Frohman's career and Realart proposes a screen version which will be a credit to the memorable history of the play.

You will miss one of the great opportunities of the coming season if your date book does not list the productions of the actress who had her introduction as a star in Jerome K. Jerome's "Miss Hobbs."

In a Group of Charming Comedies Available to All Holders of the Realart Star Franchise

THE Good Little Bad Girl—the Girl with the laughing black eyes from which two taunting little devils fling the age-old challenge: “I dare you!” the Girl of the Stygian tresses and peach bloom cheeks who makes you think of far-away Spain where romantic youths strum mandolins 'neath the windows of the senoritas; who combines the forcefulness and energy of her Scotch father with the rich beauty of her mother's pure Castilian ancestry—

What has Realart prepared for her whom you recall in leading roles of “Male and Female,” “Everywoman,” “The Dancin’ Fool,” “Why Change Your Wife?” and other special features—what has 1920-1921 in store for

BEBE DANIELS

Never have more ambitious plans been made for a successful young actress. Miss Daniels comes to stardom cast in an unique role. She is a type unto herself; born to the portrayal of dashing, impetuous youth. She is the shop girl, perchance, or the cigar stand girl at the Giltmore, or perhaps your manicurist. Always she dances upon the sagging fringe of convention, yet never falls; tantalizing, fascinating, ever daring.

You will meet her as Rowena Jones, a poor girl who sets her cap for a millionaire and then has the toughest job of her life toeing the line of social propriety. The story, as we've told you before, is “YOU NEVER CAN TELL,” and somehow we have the idea that this title and a picture of Miss Daniels' flirtatious eyes—well, we're all human! It took two stories to make “YOU NEVER CAN TELL,” and both were published in the Saturday Evening Post over the famous name of GRACE LOVELL BRYAN. Chester Franklin has directed the production and he's made it one of the liveliest pictures of the year.

Do you recall “OH LADY, LADY!” that sparkling comedy which had a run of 174 performances at the Princess Theatre, New York, during 1917-1918? Well, that is to be another Bebe Daniels subject. It was written by GUY BOLTON and P. G. WODEHOUSE and has been played, we're told, in every English-speaking country of the world.

Other themes just as big as these will be provided for Miss Daniels, and in them all, whether as clerk or student or social butterfly, you will find her a constantly different, always interesting, good little bad girl.

Sensationally Dramatic Exploration Picture

"Shipwrecked Among Cannibals"

THE most astounding six-reel picture of many years—the authentic adventures of Mr. Edward Laemmle and William F. Alder, who were cast ashore on the coast of New Guinea, completely at the mercy of the Kia Kia cannibals. Hundreds of shots of the strangest scenes that a camera ever recorded, all taken under the greatest personal risk by these two daring men—the wild Dance of Death—the Skull Dance—women whose bodies are seared to make them beautiful—men whose features are tortured to make them ferocious—children whose daily playthings are human skulls. Humanity at its wildest—at its lowest ebb—and through it all a wonderful set of titles with moving backgrounds which bring home constantly the tremendous danger which hung over these two men. Book this sensation by wire—don't delay—it will prove one of the biggest clean-ups of the year.

One of the really big productions of the year. A great romance of love and adventure that gets off to a smashing start with a terrific storm at sea—then plunges you into the perils of gun-running in a southern republic—then carries you into a lawless colony of beach-combers, to be swept a moment later into the midst of red revolution, and a tremendous battle for a beautiful woman. There is something for everybody in "Under Crimson Skies." Photographically, a marvel.

J. Barney Sherry

Stanhope Wheatcroft

THIS picture has the treble advantage of a very sympathetic and intense story—an appealing star and a supporting cast of really unusual talent and popularity. Add to these three things the fact that it has been staged and costumed to perfection and you will see why it is a Universal-Jewel Super-production. "THE BREATH OF THE GODS," while it is laid in Japan, is almost as much American in its atmosphere as it is Japanese. It is in the clash of temperament, of love and of racial beliefs and customs that it gets its truly remarkable hold on the viewer. It is safe to say that not a single woman in your audience—or man—but will praise your good taste and keen sense of the unusually dramatic after they have seen this fine picture in your theatre. Book it today. It is a picture exceedingly worth while.

The First Ten Productions

PAULINE FREDERICK

The undisputed star of dramatic emotion with all producing restrictions removed—surrounded and supported by the best brains, talent and genius obtainable, leaves nothing more to be said regarding her first super-special.

OTIS SKINNER in "KISMET"

This mighty combination has been regarded with envious eyes by every motion picture company in America. The public, which has long marveled at the stage production, will sit amazed at the grandeur of the unlimited screen version. It shall be undoubtedly the most magnificent attraction of the season.

"SO LONG, LETTY!"

The celebrated OLIVER MOROSCO stage success with a cast such as seldom assembled even for big specials, and personally directed by AL. E. CHRISTIE, is a combination which assures a production that the public will clamor to see. Its exploitation possibilities are unlimited.

LEW CODY in "THE MISCHIEF MAN" (Working Title)

"THE MISCHIEF MAN," like "THE BELOVED CHEATER" and "THE BUTTERFLY MAN," is a delightful fascination. It is another unique characterization, one more triumph for LEW CODY—another treat for the public that demands "something new"—another "clean-up" for the exhibitor.

WILLIAM CHRISTY CABANNE

is now visualizing a remarkable story of his own that required over a year to write. To be penned so painstakingly by one of the screen's greatest directors is proof of its picture possibilities. It is Mr. Cabanne's aim to make it his cinema masterpiece—the moulding of a powerfully human theme into a phenomenal sensation.

A Notable Array of Super-Specials

MAE MARSH

The characterizations of this little artiste are distinctive and inimitable. After an enforced absence from the screen she is again to bring to it, in soul-appealing romances of every-day life, her quaint eloquence which creeps close to the hearts of theatregoers.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA in "THE FIRST BORN"

The famed stage success, "THE FIRST BORN" moulded into a classic of the films by the remarkable dramatic ability of SESSUE HAYAKAWA, one of the screen's most distinguished actors, will be an unquestioned box-office asset.

DUSTIN FARNUM in "BIG HAPPINESS"

A powerful, clean story of the great outdoors, "Big Happiness" has a tremendous dramatic appeal and a vivid moral in manliness. DUSTIN FARNUM claims it to be his greatest histrionic triumph.

"THE BEACH OF DREAMS"

From a sensational novel by H. de VERE STACPOOLE, "THE BEACH OF DREAMS" depicts a story ranging from society magnificence to the desert island crudity of romance. It is a rare ensemble of keen action, exquisite beauty, and remarkable talent, in all star cast which includes EDITH STOREY, CAPT. TEMPLAR POWELL and JOSEPH SWICKARD.

"813," AN ARSENE LUPIN STORY

"813" is produced with all the lavishness of modern picturecraft. Detective stories hold a fascination for people in every walk of life and the ARSENE LUPIN stories by MAURICE LE BLANC are the greatest in all fiction. WEDGWOOD NOWELL is an admirable Lupin, strongly supported by KATHRYN ADAMS, WALLACE BEERY, WILLIAM MONG, FREDERICK VROOM, H. MILTON ROSS and other sterling players.

PIONEERS IN THE MAKING OF INDUSTRIAL—EDUCATIONAL FILMS ORGANIZE OWN COMPANY

By their energy and perseverance, these people have made industrial-educational films as popular with the general public as are the newspapers and periodicals.

They have created a new industry within the moving picture business from which you profit directly, and indirectly; directly through the money paid for the exhibition of the films, and indirectly because of your increased patronage resulting from the popularity of these films brought about by intensive methods of exploitation.

These fourteen people are the founders of this new organization and will continue their labors so that industrial-educational films will maintain their position among the great mediums of education and entertainment.

Truth and Buncombe

A COW that could jump over the moon would certainly be a most remarkable animal—but a sane farmer would have better use for a good milker.

The reputation of the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. is not based upon fabulous promises, distilled from the fertile imagination of an advertising writer. Our message is addressed to the exhibitor who actually uses motion picture posters—and to him an exaggerated statement is at once recognized to be what it usually is—pure buncombe!

Our demonstrated claim for the RITCHEY poster is simply this:—that with its increased use come greatly increased box-office receipts,—and we make that claim to the one group of men in the motion picture industry in a positive position to check and know its truth.

Because that statement is true we are forced to protect both ourselves and the exhibitor from the posters put out by the incompetent. In that matter all we can do is to point out the true facts. The remedy is in the hands of the exhibitor. His one efficacious method to protect himself is by insisting upon the RITCHEY trade mark appearing on every poster that he uses. When it does not appear it is safe to assume that the poster in question was not a RITCHEY poster.

It is likewise safe to assume that a disappointing ticket sale will result from its use!

The Bed Rock of the Business

HERE'S a bull's-eye letter which we print in full and we emphatically ask for it the attention of the distributor.

Bear in mind the fact that this small town theatre is one of that large class of picture houses which in number dominates this industry and distinguishes the motion picture from all other amusement fields.

This theatre is ten thousand strong!

What is to be done to save it?

* * *

Motion Picture News, Inc.,

New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen: Your presentation of the difficulties confronting the small town motion picture theatre in the editorial, "The Year's Big Problem," in the current issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, finds our picture house in so nearly the condition that you set forth, that I cannot refrain from an expression of appreciation for having brought this matter to attention in such a masterful way.

The scratched, dirty, brittle condition of the prints on old pictures which we can afford to purchase, subtract at least forty per cent from their entertainment value.

On four such pictures as the "Miracle Man," which we ran this Spring, we are facing a ten per cent loss, despite our intensive advertising and the high prices which we were required to charge our patrons for these productions.

In a little theatre seating 234, we have, within the past six months, installed an $1,800 musical instrument, a gold fibre screen, and two new projection machines of the latest model. Our patronage has not appreciably increased, and we are receiving no returns to justify our investment.

Furthermore, we will be required to pay 25 per cent more for program pictures for next season over what we paid last. Our admission price is 10c. and 20c. To increase this will result in lower attendance (which we have already proven to be true), and our box office receipts will not materially increase. No apparent relief is in sight. The present owner does not desire more than a reasonable income from his labors and investment, but the way things now stand his actual investment is seriously endangered. If it were thought that the near future would not bring relief of some kind, it would scarcely be worth while to keep up the fight.

Your reviews on pictures and the dependable comments which you so fearlessly make on productions, have been of inestimable value to us. In the past six months we disregarded your advice twice, and both times we had reason to regret our action. We would not be without your publication for ten times its cost to us.

W. J. Powell,
Strand Theatre,
Carey, Ohio.

WE are just entering upon a season of exceptional promise. More—many more—good pictures will be offered this year than ever before. They will be pictures of distinctly a higher order; pictures made with much more time and care, and with a new sincerity and purpose; pictures more nearly approaching the appeal and artistic excellence the picture is capable of; pictures that can and should be shown to at least fifty per cent. of our entire population and among these to millions who have no other means of theatre entertainment.

That's the motion picture—its new, peculiar and remarkable field!

And yet, by present selling policies these pictures won't reach a maximum average of more than four thousand theatres. Many towns won't see the best of them at all. Many towns will see these in a scratched, dirty, scarcely tolerable condition.

There's something wrong—decidedly wrong—with a selling policy which so limits the distribution of pictures and so cramps or destroys the existence of the numerous small town theatres—the backbone of the industry.

The present gross rental to the distributor is not too high; the net to the producer is such as to make production a hazardous enterprise. It is not that the producers and distributors are getting more than their share of the picture's gross receipts.

But it is as plain as daylight, that the small town theatre bears an unjust rental burden, and that this burden must be lightened, made equitable.

The answer to the problem lies in a modification of present selling policies; the change to be made will have to be a revolutionary one.

The long and short of it is simply this; with a product the public wants and with an adequate supply of it the producer today cannot meet the public demand

W. J. Powell

DEALING IN PERSONALITIES

While we don't like to mention names we know of a publicity person who attended all the exhibitor sessions at Cleveland as proprietor of "THE MYTH THEATRE" in a certain town. While such exhibitors as Alfred Black, Lee Ochs, and others were asked to pay their respects to the credentials committee, no one seemed to object in the slightest to the owner of a "Myth Theatre."

We'd hate to insinuate that the word got by because there wasn't a Webster or Funk and Wagnalls handy.

But the real reason we mention it at this late date is because of the laugh we received this week when the "owner" of The Myth showed us a circulation solicitation that he had received from one of the "endorsed" papers. Said letter congratulated The Myth on its interest in the independent exhibitor movement, and so on and so forth, winding up by urging the "exhibitor" to delight all concerned by rushing his subscription in.

And we wondered—how many Myth Theatres are to be found on some subscription rolls?

There's something in the air that should be attended to right away. It's this bug they call "Matrimony." Seems to us it's running riot in the picture business. To our desk there comes the news that CHARLIE MOYER, of United Artists, is to be married this fall to Marie Josephine Magennis, daughter of Dr. Brynat Charles Magennis, a well known physician and surgeon of Paterson, N. J.

Charlie, we read in the announcement received from his friends in United Artists, "has just had accepted the shortest story ever written, a story of nine words." Proposals used to be done in three words, Charlie. First person singular, a verb, and second person in particular.

The other regular fellow who is searching for an apartment for Fall is our old friend JOE REDDY, of Pathe. Joe says he never knew there were so many houses for sale at fifteen thousand cash until he started looking for a modest newlywed's apartment.

If all reports are true EARL HAMMONS may be expected to reach these shores within the week. Earl was scheduled to sail in time for arrival as above—but schedules don't always work out in this game.

Witness the trade paper story from Los Angeles that "HARRY MUSGROVE has abandoned his trip to New York and leaves for Australia today"—published four days after Harry has arrived at the Astor. Why, surely, we do the same thing ourselves once in a while. It's the "schedules we're criticising.

ELMER MCGOVERN, one of the real pioneers, has branched forth for himself in the state rights arena. Good luck, old scout.

Gosh, anyone would think that Elmer sported gray vines after reading that last paragraph. You've got to realize, though, that it is possible for a man to have cut one reel Westerns with New York Motion Picture Company and still be within whispering distance of thirty.

JOE DANNENBERG—take it from our absolutely reliable friend, the picture postcard—is sojourning in the neighborhood of Montreal. And to the best of our knowledge Joe is not one of those fellows who hankers after it strongly enough to travel that far.

This was a scenic week, another picture postcard journeying from somewhere in Borneo to carry the regards of HAROLD HORTON, who packs his camera around the world in search of the unusual.

David Griffith is to make his "repertoire seasons" annual affairs. We hear that he has secured the 44th Street theatre and will open in August with "Way Down East." Talk is also heard of a later revival of "The Birth of a Nation," and possibly of "Broken Blossoms."

Merritt Crawford had a really exciting week. One night he pulled the movie hero stuff and carried his wife down through smoke filled halls when fire broke out in the apartment below, and on another day he blushing received a handsome desk set as he said farewell to fellow workers at Fox.

Met "Doc" Willat the other day and a sight of his ruddy face made us wish for a trip to the Coast ourselves. "Doc" is in the proverbial "pink" of condition. Bubbling over with enthusiasm over the coming Irving Willat specials.

Br'er Dietz of Goldwyn is speeding his way to Los Angeles, on business bent.

ARTHUR KANE is doing the honors just as we scurry to press. Friend Arthur is presiding genius at a luncheon introducing Bessie Love to the New York end of the Alexenandria-Astor circuit. Bessie, judging from the anxiety of "our best people" to be present, is quite a popular little person among those who know it.

RAY A. GROMBACHER, of the Liberty theatre, Spokane, Washington, was a visitor to the News office this week. Mr. Grombacher is associated with Frank Bailey, well known to those old-timers whose memories go back to the days of J. J. Murdock as a film factor.

BR'ER GROMBACHER refuses to pose or talk either highbrow or indignant exhibitor stuff. "The trouble that I find with most exhibitors," he declares, "is that they don't work hard enough. Everyone tells you that the West is naturally a wonderful picture territory. Rot! The West is good because exhibitors out there work. Why is Grauman the greatest showman in the game? Because he works—putting in nearly twenty-four hours a day on his job."

Met JIMMIE GRAINGER during the week and found him enthusing over the new Marshall Neilan title, "Go and Get It." Sounds like old stuff to us. We've heard Jimmie himself, and many other sales managers tell their exchange men and salesmen to "Go and Get It." Will bet that Jimmie's next sales letters establish a record for brevity. The first line will give the territory's quota; the next the picture's title. What more need be said?

North Carolina Exhibitors Hold Meeting at Wilmington

Quota to National Fund Oversubscribed by Exhibitors

THE North Carolina Motion Picture Exhibitors Association held a three-day convention at the Oceanic Hotel, Wrightsville Beach, N. C., just outside the city limits of Wilmington, N. C., on June 25th and 26th. The first day of the convention was devoted to the consideration of impending adverse legislation and taxation. Mr. H. B. Varner, Secretary and Treasurer of the Organization, for many terms, stated that various religious and civic bodies in the city had publicly declared in favor of establishing a censorship for motion pictures. He did not believe the subject would be taken up at the special session of the Legislature about to be called, but he feared the introduction of such a measure at the regular session of the Legislature. He suggested a campaign in opposition.

On the subject of taxation, President Percy W. Wells, called attention to the fact that the Legislature had voiced its intention of restoring the county tax on motion picture theatres throughout North Carolina. Committees were appointed to look after these new matters consisting of Messrs. L. H. Mason, W. E. Stewart, A. F. Sams, H. T. Sams, H. T. Drake and R. K. Hill.

Considerable routine business was also transacted and reports of the various officers were received. In the course of the afternoon session Willard T. Patterson, of Atlanta, Ga., appeared in response to an invitation extended to him by the convention. It was decided to let Mr. Patterson's address stand over until the next day.

On the second day of the convention, Willard T. Patterson, of Atlanta, Ga., addressed the delegations speaking in terms of laudation of the newly elected national president, Sydney S. Cohen. "He represents my idea of the type of leadership necessary for this organization," said Mr. Patterson. Mr. Patterson was followed by Samuel I. Berman, executive secretary of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Mr. Berman gave a graphic and thrilling account of the events at Cleveland which led to the formation of the new national organization. He dwelt upon the necessity of raising enough funds for maintaining an efficient national organization. After R. D. Craver of Charlotte, N. C., had stated that the quota of North Carolina was $600., Mr. Berman made an appeal for this amount. Inside of fifteen minutes over $1,000 was on the table. The excess of the money over the quota required for national purposes reverts back to the state treasury. Mr. Berman was roundly applauded.

Upon the conclusion of his appeal, Mr. L. H. Mason, chairman of the committee on resolutions submitted a series of resolutions. The first one recited that the North Carolina Association of exhibitors fully approved of the acts and resolutions of the Cleveland Convention and had every faith and confidence in the leadership of the officers elected and therefore sought membership in the National Organization. This resolution was passed pledging support to the independent producer and the independent distributor, the substance of the resolution being to the effect that the exhibitors of North Carolina should give preference in bestowing their patronage to those independent producers and independent distributors who have not entered the exhibiting field.

In the course of the discussion on the last named resolution, H. B. Varner said that there were lots of good pictures in the field made by independent producers who had no intention of invading the exhibiting field. He said "It behooves us to encourage these men by our patronage, other things being equal."

A strong resolution against censorship coupled with a resolution declaring in favor of clean pictures was passed unanimously.

The election of officers which followed the adoption of the resolutions resulted as follows: President, Percy W. Wells; secretary and treasurer, H. B. Varner; attorney, A. F. Sams; first vice-president, R. D. Craver; second vice-president, H. T. Drake; third vice-president, Roland K. Hill.

A committee of ten representing the ten congressional districts of the State of North Carolina was appointed by the chair. The last day of the convention being Sunday was largely devoted to social relaxation and an exchange of notes.

Cohen Addresses Open Letter to Zukor

THE following is an open-letter addressed by Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion-Picture Theatre Owners of America, to Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation:

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America recently met at Cleveland to advise as to the best means of resisting the unfair competition from your organization which has for some time past pursued a destructive policy towards the independent exhibitor.

"We desire to inform you that the evidence to sustain our allegations is in shape to be presented to any group of fair-minded men, either within or without the industry. In fact our evidence is ready to be used at the proper time.

"The Government has given me a strict mandate to seek a remedy against your policy of destruction, and it has placed its power behind this mandate. As I understand the instructions of the convention, a fair and amicable adjustment of the troubles which have arisen is their first desire. I am happy to say that this view fully accords with my own feelings in the matter and I therefore deem it my duty to exert every effort possible in the direction of a settlement on a basis of mutual understanding.

"Your rise to wealth and power in this industry would have been impossible without the appreciation and assistance of the great exhibiting body of the country. I am glad to say that the same progress which attended the development of your organization resulted in benefits to exhibitors, and you will bear me witness when I say that the exhibitors of the country applauded your pictures and supported your efforts in a very substantial way. There is a feeling of sincere regret among many of us who have thus associated your name with their own success at the thought of the profound change which has taken place in our relationship. For years we have been your constant friend and friend in a definite and concrete way. You have compelled us now to regard you as our most dangerous enemy, the man who is seeking to destroy the properties which we have built up, to be sure, to some extent with the aid of your pictures, but also with the aid of our own unremitting efforts, our own money and our own ability.

"It may be, and I believe it is, difficult for you to measure the bitter resentment that you have bred in quarters where formerly your name was honored and respected. Exhibitors throughout the country now think of you as a man bent on creating a monopoly in this field, regardless of what the cost may be to those who stand in your way. Motion picture theatre owners in this country are firm in their belief that you want to make them a sacrifice to your ambition, which they believe aspires to a complete control of this great art and industry. The motion picture theatre owners represented at the convention at Cleveland, in person or otherwise, have in their judgment as much right to seek their livelihood in this industry without any dictation from you, even as you believe that you have the right to regulate your organization without dictation from any outside source.

"Having thus established a legitimate and substantial interest in the industry, as legitimate if not as substantial as your own, we believe the exhibitors of the country have a right to ask certain plain, straightforward questions of you and that you have a duty to answer them in a plain straightforward way. We ask for nothing less than an avowal of your intentions.

"Some of your representatives have threatened to drive the independent exhibitor out of business if he does not submit to the dictation of your company in some form or other. Some of your branch managers and other representatives have threatened independent exhibitors in different parts of the country in various ways to force and coerce them into disposing of their theatres to the interests you represent. They have threatened and intimidated exhibitors, and have told exhibitors' theatre, using another word, would not entertain the exhibitor into a deal he otherwise would not have made.

"You have made the claim that you were forced into doing this because exhibitors unreasonably refused to show the pictures of your organization in their houses. Conclusive evidence in our hands shows that this excuse will not hold water. Our facts show cases where an exhibitor built up the reputation of his pictures, creating a valuable patronage, only to have it taken away from him by means of a 'competitive theatre' acquired in close proximity to his own by your organization.

"It is hardly possible that the men in Wall Street have such an unshakable grip on your organization that they are in a position to force you into this policy, whether you deem it wise or foolish.

"We have this plain question to ask of you, which interests which we have in our theatres and in our profession. Is it the purpose of your organization to continue its present policy of acquiring and building theatres in competition with the independent exhibitors throughout the United States?

"A plain definite avowal of your intentions will clear the air quickly and I have no doubt remove the odium under which you persons and your organization are resting at this moment. We are approaching you in a spirit of fairness, almost in a spirit of conciliation, although you have been the wrongdoer and not us.

"This question has a profound significance for the public which visits our theatres. Its importance not only to the public, but to the whole society in which we live, may not be fully appreciated by you. The

Chicago Commerce Ass'n Has Film Committee

A meeting to organize a moving-picture department of the Advertising Council, an organization within The Chicago Association of Commerce, was held on June 24th, at the Hotel La Salle. W. Frank McClure, chairman of the council, presided.

The following committee was elected to direct this new undertaking:

Chairman, A. L. Erickson, Armour & Company; vice-chairman, T. T. Maxey, C. B. & Q. Railroad; Gridley Adams, Floyd, Short & Partners; Frank M. Hallenbeck, Action Film Co.; Edward S. LaBart, Wilson & Company; Waterson R. Rothacker, Rothacker Film Mfg. Co.; and G. R. Schaeffer, Marshall Field & Co.

This committee will meet during the summer months to prepare a program for these activities. Among other subjects which it is expected will come before this group are those concerning the use of industrial films for Americanization work and for the instruction of employes in machine operation.

Joe Brandt in Statement Denies All Rumors

Joe Brandt, who recently announced his resignation as director general of the National Film Corporation, arrived in New York, from the coast, on Tuesday. When asked about the truth of the many rumors which have been circulated regarding his future plans Brandt issued a sweeping denial of all of them.

"The very first thing I want to say," stated Brandt, "is that I have absolutely not tied myself up with any organization and don't intend to, notwithstanding rumors to the contrary."

"I am going to establish an independent film clearing house. This organization will not in any way be affiliated with any now in existence. It will be a new organization with new ideas and unique methods of film distribution. It will be an outlet for the productions of a selected list of independents."

New Amusement Companies Launched in Indiana

New amusement enterprises in Indiana, launched recently, are as follows:

The Vendome Theatre Company, Evansville, capital, $900,000, directors, Charles J. Sholz, Charles M. Frisse and William E. Stilwell; United Theaters and Amusement Company, Princeton, capital, $30,000, directors, Ansel J. Cassidy, Joseph S. Heston and Clyde E. Noble; Opera House Amusement Company, Lawrenceburg, capital, $2,000, directors, Frederick Lutterback, Carl W. Decker and Harry H. Sims; Idle Hour Theater Corporation, Ft. Wayne, capital, $35,000, directors, William Theodore Beiersdorfer, Jessie E. Beiersdorfer and August W. Koehn.

Paul Brunet Embarks for Conference at Paris

PAUL BRUNET, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., sailed for Paris on June 24th, one of the distinguished passenger list on "La France." Some of the biggest projects in the history of the organization render his presence necessary in Paris, where will be held a meeting of Pathe Cinema, the powerful international organization, of whose board he is administrateur, being the only vice-president of the American organization who has been accorded this recognition. Mr. Brunet, if all plans develop as expected, will return to New York about September 1st.

Returning to France on the same steamer was Mr. Leon Madieu, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Pathe Cinema, Paris, who spent a month at the Home Office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in conference with Mr. Brunet regarding the big international propositions that have developed during the last year.

Class 5, National Ass'n Hold Elections

The members of the General Division, Class 5, of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, have elected the following officers for the year: Thomas G. Wiley, chairman; George Blaisdell, vice-chairman, and Julian M. Solomon, Jr., secretary.

At the recent meeting it was decided to appoint a membership committee of three and also a committee of five, which is to draft certain recommendations relative to proposed changes in the by-laws, affecting a revision of classification of the membership in this division.

Various suggestions were offered in connection with the proposed inauguration of a drive for new members, and a meeting of the membership committee will be called to consider ways and means for interesting individuals in the general work of the National Association.

New York F.I.L.M. Club Hold Meeting

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York City announces that all plans for the annual outing to be held July 17 have been completed. A baseball game has been arranged between the exchange managers and the Film Board of Trade. Mr. Buxbaum is managing the players from the exchanges, while William Brandt is looking after the boys from the Board of Trade.

Phil Meyer, chairman of the grievance committee, submitted a report, showing hearings on fifteen cases. Eight of these, involving claims of exhibitors versus exchanges, were decided in favor of the exhibitors, it is stated.

A committee was appointed with S. Eckman as the chairman to draft a letter to be sent to Attorney-General Palmer, assuring that official that the F. I. L. M. Clubs would welcome an investigation as recommended by the recent Cleveland Convention of Exhibitors.

Sol Lesser Returns West' Is Disposing of Films

Sol Lesser, following his sale of "What Women Love," starring Annette Kellerman, to the Associated First National Exhibitors, has returned to the Coast. He will return East again in about six weeks to dispose of the George Beban picture, "One Man in a Million." After the sale of this production is effected, Mr. Lesser will relinquish the title of producer.

Lesser is now actively engaged in laying plans for his future work in the theatrical field, and his present hasty return to the Coast is said to be in connection with his new theatrical enterprise. Plans for the erection of the three-million dollar theatre in Los Angeles are now being completed, it is stated.

Ben Atwell Resigns from Capitol Theatre Staff

Ben H. Atwell has resigned as the director of publicity at the Capitol theatre, New York. His resignation went into effect on last Saturday. Mr. Atwell has been associated with the big Broadway house during its formative period, and his present action is said to be due to his plans to return to his former activities in the musical field in the fall. It is understood that he will sail shortly for Europe to act in the capacity of advisor to the executives of a big musical enterprise, now taking form in Rome, Italy. Mrs. Atwell will accompany her husband abroad.

At the Capitol, Mr. Atwell's former duties are being assumed temporarily by Miss Bessie Mack, press representative, and Herbert Berg, principal assistant.

Al Lichtman Announces Recent Appointments

Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces the transfer of J. W. Hicks, Jr., formerly branch manager at Minneapolis, to the home office in New York, where he will assume the duties of assistant-sales-manager, Philip Reisman, will succeed Mr. Hicks as branch manager. Mr. Lichtman also announces the appointment of John A. Muchmore as branch manager at Des Moines.

The last two appointments take effect immediately, and that of Mr. Hicks, July 5.

Naulty and Hunting Form Company of Their Own

Messrs. Naulty and Hunting, for a long time identified with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announce that they have organized a producing company of their own and have already started work on their first picture. The exteriors of this picture are now being "shot" near Ithaca, New York. The director is E. H. Griffith, until recently with Vitagraph, and the featured player is Robert Gordon.

First National Straw Vote on Presidential Nominees

Plans the Most Thorough Pre-Election Test Ever Attempted in History

FOR the first time in motion picture history the screen is to play a prophetic part in national politics and demonstrate the magnitude of its intimate daily contact with public life through a presidential straw vote to be launched by between 5,000 and 6,000 exhibitors of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., immediately following the conclusion of the Democratic national convention in San Francisco.

The plans which have already been worked out in detail call for the most far-reaching canvass of public opinion ever undertaken in the history of the United States. It is expected that through the medium of the motion-picture theatre between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 voters will be reached, making it the greatest and most thorough straw vote ever cast in any pre-election test.

Newspapers in a local way and magazines nationally have conducted straw votes in the past, but never have they recorded the political leanings of more than a few hundred thousand voters.

With the united front that several thousand theatres will present in systematically testing the public pulse, the motion-picture industry is expected to prove the most accurate political gauge yet employed, and the results will be looked for with the deepest interest at Washington.

For a long time leading members of the different political parties have debated the actual power of the screen in censorship agitation and legislative proceedings affecting motion-pictures. The question of screen influence on the public has been discussed without any tangible conclusion for the reason that no effort ever has been made either by states or nationally to actually test exhibitor strength as an agency through which to reach the millions of motion picture theatre patrons in this country. The contemplated straw vote will in a large measure reveal the really great power of the screen—a power the extent of which has never before been put to a determining test.

The exhibitor officials of Associated First National will offer to Senator Warren C. Harding and Governor Calvin Coolidge as Republican nominees for president and vice-president respectively and to the Democratic nominees to the same offices a special service of tabulated reports by cities and states as rapidly as the straw ballots are counted and classified.

It is expected that all returns from the straw vote will be in and completely classified by the middle of September, and that the result will give a close forecast on the outcome of the election in November.

New York Office Opened by the "Big Six"

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS, INC., announces the permanent location of its New York home offices in the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue. A lease has been signed with George Backer, the owner, for the entire fifth floor of the building for a term of years, occupancy of these quarters being deferred a few months until the present tenants' leases expire. In the meantime Associated Producers has taken a unit of offices on the tenth floor of the same building, and its executive and departmental managers already are installed there.

Announcement is made of the appointment of Frank L. Hudson as Atlanta manager for Associated Producers. Mr. Hudson resigned as the manager of the Pathe Atlanta office to take over the management of the Associated Producers' office. Ralph C. Bradford had been appointed Minneapolis manager for Associated Producers. He has been with the Stephen Lynch interests in the South and resigned last week as Chicago manager for the Famous Players-Lasky office.

Every exhibitor of Associated First National Pictures will cooperate in the taking of this straw vote among patrons of the more than 5,000 theatres which they own. The exhibitors will have printed ballots supplied them by their Associated First National exchanges for distribution among their patrons, and as fast as the ballots are turned in at the theatre, they will be tabulated and mailed to the Home Office in New York. At the Home Office the ballots will be recorded and classified and the total vote in each exhibitor's state will be sent to him as soon as complete returns have been received. In the same way the national result of the straw vote will be made known by the Home Office to all First National exhibitors as soon as it is available. As a result, each exhibitor will be enabled to benefit by the local publicity which his part in the canvass will consequently bring about. The publicity for the exhibitor will be cumulative. The local newspapers will first print the news about the results of the local canvass. It will then publish the results of the statewide exhibitor canvass when these become known. And finally it will have the big news of the national results of the straw vote. In addition, the straw vote will provide abundant material for newspaper feature stories. Last, but not least, it is expected to give the most accurate forecast of a great national election that has ever been made, and to demonstrate that the screen is in closer touch with the public than any other institution.

Associated First National exchanges have already received pledges of support in this enormous undertaking from more than 3,000 exhibitors, who appreciate the publicity their theatres will gain through it, and who have recognized the significance of a demonstration to the country at large, to the presidential candidates and their respective constituents, to federal, state and municipal political bodies, to newspapers, magazines and the reform interests of the country, of the tremendous power and scope of motion picture theatres when they function as a unit on any given proposition and of the intimate daily contact they have with the so-called "great American public."

The bulk returns received at the Home Office will be classified according to cities and states and not by the generally recognized film territory, or by the so-called presidential electoral districts.

The Home Office will divide the feminine from the masculine votes, and the listing will show the feminine votes which come from states that have suffrage, and the feminine votes gathered in states where the ballot has not been granted to women. This method of classification will provide a literal means of determining, after the official election returns are in next November, just what effect pre election feminine opinion has on the masculine vote.

The final returns of the straw vote will be so classified as to show the political leanings of not only those who are legal voters, but also those whose opinions may have influence with bona-fide voters. Children and unnaturalized aliens will be barred from voting. Only persons of voting age will be permitted to fill out the ballot.

Already a large number of exhibitors have made arrangements for turning their theatres into "voting precincts" and balloting will start, they say, just as soon as the Democratic convention is over.

The necessary ballots have already been printed, and are being distributed by the thousands to the Associated First National exchanges. Each ballot calls for a straw vote on either the Republican or Democratic nominees for president and vice-president. The socialists are not mentioned, and no candidates for any other office are included in the test.

The theatre patron is to be handed the straw ballot form as soon as he enters the theatre. He merely checks his party preference, fills in his name and address, and hands it to any employee of the theatre on leaving. It is understood and so stated on the ballot that under no circumstances will the voter's name be used. He is advised to watch his newspaper for local, state and national returns on the straw ballot.

Big English Authors to Write for Screens

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Acquires
Prominent Writers in Big Deal

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation states that Jesse L. Lasky, who went abroad about a month ago on a mission in behalf of the production plans for this corporation in England, has completed arrangements with some of the most famous literary lights in England whereby these authors will write directly for the screen. The following writers are reported by Famous Players to be involved in deals effected by Mr. Lasky; Sir James M. Barrie, Henry Arthur Jones, Justin Huntly McCarthy, Edward Knoblock, Arnold Bennett and H. G. Wells.

The following statement has been issued from the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in connection with the acquisition of these authors:

"Announcement of this coup effected by the Famous Players-Lasky first vice-president is said to have created a tremendous sensation in London's literary and film circles, for all of the authors mentioned with the exception of Mr. Knoblock are native Britishers and none of them ever has written directly for the screen. While it is understood that their writings for the most part will be produced by Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., at the London studios, it is possible that some of the productions will be made in this country at the Eastern or Hollywood studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"In giving the news to the press in London Mr. Lasky said:

"As in the United States leading authors, realizing their responsibility in being able to influence vast audiences, are beginning to write specially for the screen, our arrangements with these famous British authors will provide us with original plays and stories which shall be representative of the British life and people, and they shall be acted by famous British players."

"I have the greatest faith in the future of British films and I know that they will be welcomed on introductions to the United States, for, after all, the picture language is universal, because it is universally understood, and the human appeal is the same throughout the world. Each country is anxious to know, and needs to know, more of the people of all other countries, and it is highly appropriate that plays on British themes, filmed in their original settings and interpreted by British players, shall become better known abroad."

"Mr. Lasky professed astonishment at what had been done in transforming the former London power station at Islington into a motion picture studio of the most modern type. He paid a high tribute to the studio general manager, Milton E. Hoffman, and his assistants, under whose supervision the work of equipping the plant has been accomplished. The building in its present stage, he said, equals anything America possesses for the purposes of film production."

"The production of the Louis N. Parker-George R. Sims Drury Lane drama, 'The Great Day,' is now under way there under the direction of Hugh Ford, with a cast composed entirely of British players. Mr. Lasky stated that he had seen a projection of part of the film and was impressed not only by the artistic beauty and truth of the interior scene but also by the exteriors, which possessed all the typical charm of English scenery, a charm which cannot be duplicated by utilizing the natural settings offered by any other country."

Musgrove Promotes Australian Project

Carroll Musgrove Theatres, Ltd., to Build and Operate
Theatres in Sydney and Other Centers

IN Australia as in America the day of the small motion picture theatre, at least in the larger cities, is past. No greater proof of this fact is needed than a recital of the plans now under way of the Carroll-Musgrove Theatres, Ltd., which is about to build motion picture palaces in Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide and Brisbane, the four population centers of Australia, which will equal the best that world affords and which are to be patterned after the favorite theatres of the United States, such as the Broadway, New York houses, Grauman's and the California of Los Angeles, the California at San Francisco and the other famous houses of American big cities.

The Carroll-Musgrove Theatres, Ltd., Company is composed of prominent theatrical men of Australia, among whom are E. J. and Dan Carroll, both leaders in the amusement field of Sydney and known by reputation in America, and Harry G. Musgrove, late general manager and director of Australasian Films, Ltd., the principal film distributors of the Antipodes, and prominently identified for many years with various other theatrical enterprises in Sydney, including Union Theatres, Ltd. and West's, Ltd., both big concerns. Mr. Musgrove also is well known in America, having visited the United States on a number of occasions.

The immediate plans of the new organization which will give Australia modern theatres and the best of film productions concern the erection of a theatre in Sydney to have a seating capacity of 3,000. A plot has been purchased in Castlereagh street, one of the principal thoroughfares, 100 by 152 feet, opposite the Hotel Australia. The house will be named Prince Edward theatre and when completed will be the most elaborate of any theatre ever erected in Australia. It will be equipped with a complete stage and the most modern lighting installation. While it is intended that the house shall be devoted exclusively to motion pictures, nevertheless a full stage equipment will be installed.

Mr. Musgrove is in America making a tour of the principal cities for the purpose of inspecting the best houses of the States from which plans for the Prince Edward will be made. Mr. Musgrove has looked over the West Coast houses, including the principal theatres of Los Angeles and San Francisco, and is now in New York for the same purpose. Later he will see the theatres of Washington, Boston, Cleveland and Chicago.

Following the construction of the Prince Edward at Sydney the erection of the theatres in Melbourne, Adelaide and Brisbane will be given attention.

Mr. Musgrove is enthusiastic concerning the prospects of the photoplay in the cities which are to be invaded by the new company. Australia has been at a standstill both in theatre construction and in presentation for the past six years, when the war regulations paralyzed all proposed new undertakings. Now conditions are becoming normal, capital can be secured, as is proven by the fact that the Carroll-Musgrove projects will require several million dollars of actual cash and the interest in the photoplay is rapidly on the increase.

Not only will the Carroll-Musgrove company come to America for ideas in building the new theatres, but the building material and equipment for the houses will

Pete Smith Wins "Derby" for Best "Stunt" Yet

Picture press-agents have put over some sensational "stunts" in the recent past, but San Francisco witnessed a coup on Tuesday last that ranks with the most daring of them to date. With delegates assembled in the Coast metropolis from all over the country and newspapers in all parts theorizing on the effect of President Wilson's influence on the Democratic Convention and the part he would play personally in the proceedings of that body, an electrifying rumor went the rounds of the town to the effect that the President himself had arrived and was establishing his headquarters in the Hotel St. Francis. Here's First National's account of what happened at the hotel:

"The secret service men (?) assisted by policemen and reporters helped force the crowds back, allowing the president (?) to enter. The instant Woodrow Wilson (?) set foot inside the lobby a band of fifty pieces broke into the strains of 'The Star Spangled Banner' and a huge silk American flag was unfurled from the top of the large staircase overlooking the lower body. A cheer that lasted for several minutes swept from the lobby as the president (?) was rushed to the elevator just ahead of eager newspaper reporters and delegates.

"For almost a quarter of an hour the president (?) remained in a suite of rooms upstairs while the St. Francis Hotel was made the mecca for the brightest lights attending the convention. Delegate after delegate phoned the president's (?) suite of rooms only to be informed that within the next few minutes Mr. Wilson (?) would appear in the lobby with information for all.

When the president (?) did appear he wore a silk streamer around the front of his coat reading:

"The Democratic Nomination is open for all. GO AND GET IT."

The instigators, First National says, were the following: "Publicity" Person Parker of the Rothacker Company; William Jobelman, publicity manager of the Turner and Dahnken office in San Francisco; and Pete Smith, director of publicity for Marshall Neilan, who produced "Go and Get It." Ralph Faulkner, who has imitated the president in vaudeville for the past year, played the "presidential" role. At latest reports, there were no casualties sustained by the principals of the act.

Governor Appoints Movie Man to Commission

Governor Frank O. Lowden has appointed Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, a member of the newly organized Chicago National Guard Commission. Mr. Jones has accepted the appointment and will assume his new duties at once. In his letter advising Mr. Jones of his appointment, Governor Lowden paid high tribute to the patriotism and ability of the Chicago moving-picture man.

Meet in Philadelphia to Promote Organization

A MEETING of the exhibitors of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware was held in the City of Philadelphia on Monday, June 21st. The meeting was called by the president of the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League, Albert J. Fisher. Among those present were Charles Goodwin, John Evans, John Cook, Albert J. Fisher, Frank Buhler, M. Brenner, and George Bennethum.

Plans were laid out for the intensive organizing of the exhibitors of Pennsylvania, and an organizer is being sent out. The quota for the $100,000 national fund is being raised.

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was present in conjunction with C. L. O'Reilly, member of the executive committee from New York City. J. T. Collins, president of the New Jersey Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was also present.

W. H. Linton a Member of Executive Committee

The announcement is made that W. H. Linton of Utica, New York, is a member of the executive committee of the new national exhibitors' association. In announcing the roster of the executive committee in the issue of June 26, Mr. Linton's name was inadvertently omitted. At Mr. Linton's request, the exhibitors of Central New York are informed of his membership on the committee, thus assuring them of representation in that body. Mr. Linton is also a member of the rules and resolutions committee.

be purchased here, and United States architects will draw the plans.

The Sydney house will perhaps be more elaborate and larger than the others to be built, since Sydney has a population of a million people and is rapidly growing, while Brisbane, the smallest city on the circuit, has a population of 250,000.

The experience and ability of the men back of the project, especially Mr. Musgrove and the Carroll Brothers, is ample assurance that Carroll-Musgrove Theatres, Ltd. has bright prospects. The new circuit will give American films, which are not at present controlled in Australia by any theatre or special interests, special attention. The directors of the organization are: The Hon. G. R. W. McDonald, M.L.C.; Theodore J. Marks, Esq., Messrs. Robertson & Marks; Charles A. Jaques, Esq. (Messrs. Stephen, Jaques and Stephen); George Marlow, Esq., late governing director, George Marlow, Ltd.; E. J. Carroll, Esq., proprietor and manager of theatrical and picture enterprises; Dan Carroll, Esq., managing director, King's Pictures, Ltd., Brisbane; Harry G. Musgrove, Esq., late general manager and director, Australasian Films, Limited, and director of Union theatres, Limited, and West's, Limited.

Finds Demand of Bowery and Broadway the Same

A NEW angle to the study of motion pictures from the point of view of the exhibitor and the spectator was given by Paul McAllister in a talk before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their last weekly luncheon.

"The first thing I did," he said, "was to visit theatres in all parts of the city. When I went into the poorer sections I dressed in rags. I studied the audiences intently and after the performances I talked with the exhibitors, giving them the impression I was a patron. I have seen one picture shown in Broadway, and I have seen the same picture on the lower East side, where an interpreter translated the subtitles into Hebrew.

"The result of this study convinced me of two things: That the crowds on the lower East Side appreciate a good production just as much as a Broadway crowd does, and that the average exhibitor does not view pictures in the proper light. In other words, he does not look at his pictures as an audience would. The average New York exhibitor very naturally studies a picture from the financial point of view. He first gets it on the strength, probably, of what the salesman has told him, and after that he sees it only in snatches, and even then looks at it only to see how the audience is taking it. The exhibitor should study his pictures as his audiences view them—that is for the element of genuine entertainment in them. If he did that he would soon be able to make his own selections on his own judgment and not be swayed by so called 'selling-talk.'"

Samuel Levin Going Into Business for Himself

AFTER fifteen years of service, during which time he has materially contributed to the success of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer Enterprises, Samuel I. Levin has resigned as general manager. In retiring from his office, Mr. Levin says:

"I am striking out for myself. In co-operation with J. Handelsman I am erecting theatres in Evansville, Indiana, and Louisville, Kentucky, and my future efforts will be directed toward building and operating theatres in the principal cities, a business of which I feel quite capable after my many years with Jones, Linick & Schaefer. My plans are for co-operative theatres, whereby everyone gets an even chance and a piece of the profits and I know I'll win!"

Mr. Levin was tendered a farewell banquet on Friday at the Hotel Sherman by his intimate friends and associates.

Discovering a New Evil—"Mr. Prominent Exhibitor"

By TOM J. GERAUGHTY

EVERY whip stitch somebody rears up on his hind legs and says:

"I'll tell you what's the matter with motion pictures!"

I am going to exercise my prerogative, and by that token give birth to a serious thought which has been simmering in my system for some time.

Not that there really is anything seriously the matter with pictures, except "growing pains," a common symptom in any new and flourishing industry.

Briefly, I think the most serious menace and drawback to this newest art are the exhibitors.

Not the vast majority—the eighty-five or ninety per cent of the exhibitors of the smaller houses, who go ahead attending strictly to their own business of exhibiting pictures and pleasing patrons. But the ten per cent—the exhibitors who have suddenly come into affluence as good showmen, and who feel they are blessed with a heaven-sent genius, and must tell producers what sort of pictures they want made, and how they shall be made.

The curse of this is that certain producers do lend an ear to them, or at least pretend to be accepting and following their advice.

My experience has been (and I can also speak here as an exhibitor) is that exhibitors should never be consulted. If producers continue to listen to them, the art of making pictures will be at a standstill, and the industry will retrograde, if anything.

Pretty strong language, eh! Well, I think it's the truth, and some one should have the courage to say it. If it is not truth, it is always open to argument, and sensible, weighty discussion will at least make for better pictures.

Understand, I am not speaking of the average so-called program or independent features. I am speaking of better pictures—and pictures that will mark a step in the progress of this newest art. Neither am I a bug on "art for art's sake," or soft focus hokus pokus, dragged in by its futuristic heels. What I mean is—quality! In a word, when we see a new picture, we can honestly say:

"There is something new—and it's corking, too!"

The exhibitors have never been responsible for anything new or better in pictures. The producer with vision, the heart and elastic bankroll, deserves all that credit. This self-appointed exhibitor (who is a good showman locally) will play a feature picture, and it fills his box office.

"Give me more just exactly like that," he shouts.

Then we have a vogue of pictures just exactly like that until the public is nauseated, from being gorged and overfed.

(Editor's Note—Tom Geraughty is nothing if not courageous. He has more nerve than we possess at this particular moment as we introduce this special article from his typewriter. The machine that usually buses itself turning out scenarios—most recently Douglas Fairbanks stories—has stepped aside for a moment to discover and decry a new "evil" in the business that seems to have more than its share. Mr. Geraughty's lance is aimed at the "Prominent Exhibitor" who visits the producer and the studios and "tells 'em what to do." Not being in a position to get as indignant about it as Brother Geraughty we'll let him go on with his story.)

Suggest something new to this exhibitor, and he will shake his head doubtfully, but always wisely. Then it is that the industry comes to a standstill.

This same exhibitor will say he is in a position to know what the public wants. He's nothing of the kind!

THE only progress made in better production was before the day the exhibitor began to horn in.

If Griffith had gone around the country and told them in advance that he was going to make "The Birth of a Nation" in twelve reels, a costume picture, what would have been their answer? Does a successful novelist go snooping around book stores, consulting the busy proprietors on what sort of a book he shall tackle next?

A while ago I had dinner with Mary Roberts Rinehart, and we were discussing this very same subject. She declared she never consults her publishers on what sort of a story she will do next. She frankly admitted that she thinks she knows more about the public than the publishers—that's why she is a successful writer. And playing this lone hand game she has arisen to the top—the highest paid author of fiction in this country. I could name scores of other authors of the same mind and principle.

Would you attempt to tell a successful and famous painter that he should paint cows and trees, instead of lurid battlefields, even if you were the foremost art store proprietor in the country?

When Charles Frohman, David Belasco, Arthur Hopkins, George Cohan, or any of the other successful producers of stage plays were making a production—selecting a story, players, etc., did they first send agents out among the theatre owners of the country to get their O. K., or finger of approval?

THIS suggests a digression for a moment—that of the passion and hysteria some exhibitors have for wanting to cut pictures. This offense should be made a felony and punishable accordingly. Would a theatre owner, viewing a successful (or even unsuccessful) stage production, gather his family, and admiring friends about him and say:

"That play is too long. Tomorrow night I shall cut out the first act, and run the curtain down during the middle of the last act. I know what the public wants."

Or would they buy an oil painting at a very large price from a world famous artist, then buy a ten-cent can of lamp black and proceed to block out some high lights that did not strike their fancy?

Suppose a bookstore proprietor, who reads the new books as they come to him, would reach in and tear out a few pages, and chapters here and there, saying:

"The public will not like this stuff—I know what they want."

It would be just as proper and sensible for him to do that as it is for an exhibitor to dare cut a picture.

Every man should stick to his last!

LOOKING about I can see on the desert of failure the bleached bones of several successful exhibitors who left the realm where they really belonged, and dropped their wad when they went beyond their depth of ability.

I am not saying it is impossible for an exhibitor to make a successful producer, or mentor for producers. But I do contend that if they are successful, they would have been anyway, had they never conducted a picture theatre. The man who creates must be born to it—he cannot be hand-picked, or come out of self-fashioned mold.

Pictures have not progressed materially in the last year or two. And I fasten the blame upon the exhibitor, who, during that time, has forced himself into being a factor in the production end. The only marked improvement we have had is among the cameramen and players. The cameramen are not bound by rules laid down arbitrarily by exhibitors, neither are the players, except from the story angle. As a result, we have some wonderful effects in photography, lighting, color values, better sets, etc. They do not have dinned in their ears:

"Say, you'd better not do that—the exhibitors will kick—they want the same old sure-fire stuff!"

There has been a deafening wail from the exhibitors since producers first began listening in on the party line:

"We want books, plays—big New York successes!"

They say that for several reasons. First, it is the obvious and easiest thing to say, child-like wisdom. Second, it is perhaps easier to put over a much discussed book or play occasionally, and, lastly, because the ten per cent exhibitors I speak of live in or under the influence of New York, and their perspective is lost and their vision clouded and fogged.

It is true, they might do a tremendous business with an adapted play or book. But, firstly, it must be a good picture. The most widely advertised and popular book or play in the world will flop if it has not "been born again" under the skillful hands of knowing directors and scenario authors.

But for the most part (and I have kept watch on an accurate barometer for four years) books and plays adapted for the screen have retarded the progress of pictures.

It required the sublime art of Mary Pickford and the ingenious touch of "Mickey" Neilan, with his opening three reels of pure and unadulterated hokum, to make a howling success of one of the most widely read and discussed popular stories of our time, "Daddy Long Legs."

The best and biggest stories must come from within. It is a different technique—a new art.

Look at some of the top-notchers. D. W. Griffith has maintained his standing always through his originality and creative genius. Cecil B. De Mille really did not begin to find himself until he started making original stories, Douglas Fairbanks has achieved his greatest success with originals. Charley Ray has come to the top with original stories. William S. Hart has kept his hold on a big public with originals. Constance Talmadge has made rapid strides recently with John Emerson and Anita Loos writing her scripts.

And to me, above all the others, stands Charley Chaplin, the greatest entertainer the world has ever known, and whose fame will never be erased by the ages. He uses nothing but original stories, and writes them himself for the most part. (Wait until you see his first five reeler! Sir James Barrie might have written it, if only he understood the screen as Charley does.) Chaplin has told me repeatedly that when the producers must resort to adapting a book or play, they only display a weakness and a poverty of creative ability. He has always been of that conviction.

If we are to remain stagnant and grind out machine-made pictures from a form and mold, then let us continue to heed the newly rich exhibitor. They probably do not realize it, but this will kill the goose that laid the golden egg for them. If pictures are to continue their popularity, and ever increase their following, they must go on.

And the only way to achieve this is for the silkstockinged and high collared exhibitor to keep his money calloused finger out of the production end, and allow the men who make a profession of studying anticipating a public's wants and desires, to go ahead as they were a few years ago, unhampered and unshackled.

I remember when we all thought the world war would produce an epochal period in picture production. It did, in a measure, thanks to a few fearless producers who proceeded against the advice of these self-same exhibitors. After two or three great pictures had been made, they set up the usual wall: "The public doesn't want any more war pictures."

We all knew the public did not want an overdose. But I noticed thereafter that five or six of the biggest pictures of the year had war themes. One producer who was a bit tardy in getting his production out, tried to sell it, even for a song. The wise exhibitors and traders laughed at him. He took it to the Middle West, presented it himself, and within a few months "cleaned up."

Personally, I know of five or six productions which were under way, and which were halted because of the ukase (or bull, I might say, in this instance) that war pictures were taboo. And I have since heard these same men curse themselves out as fools when they saw millions of dollars made long afterward in war pictures.

There has long been an under-current ultimatum or edict which runs: "Don't give us Western pictures." I have heard that for more than two years. Still some of the biggest successes of Doug Fairbanks, Bill Hart, Tom Mix, Harry Carey, and others, have been made and marketed these last two years.

I am sure a good picture will sell and make money for the exhibitor, in spite of himself. There are too many rank fallacies prevalent, built entirely upon sand. None of these protesting exhibitors can analyze his objections.

There is a positive ban against costume or period stories. Mickey Neilan told me a year or so ago, he would like to make "If I Were King," with John Barrymore, and make most of it abroad. He said he would make it human, not the strutters of the conventional costume play. I would like to "have a piece of it" if ever he made it. Or, Doug Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers!"

Do these exhibitors know how much Lasky's "Carmen" netted?

I am not holding a brief or preaching a propaganda for costume stories. But I am saying there should not be any arbitrary, iron-bound "don't" against anything in a field which offers so broad a scope as motion pictures.

I remember when folks would get up and walk out of a vaudeville theatre when they threw on the pictures. I did it myself. The managers of those theatres laughed at the possible popularity of "movies." They knew. Weren't they showing pictures, and didn't they know their public?

All of which resolves itself into one thing. A good exhibitor will use his brains as a business man, and if he does, he cannot possibly give the required thought to the producing end. No more than producers should go around the country telling successful exhibitors they are "all wrong" the way they conduct their theatres. I do not know of another calling where men actually live their work and so tirelessly concentrate, as do the persons in the making of pictures. They talk, eat, walk, sleep and dream pictures.

We welcome friendly and constructive criticism from everyone—exhibitors included. But we can't use advance criticism—especially local criticism. You know, the biggest producers receive comment or criticism from all over the world—thousands of letters about every picture.

And we know how often pictures repeat and how they are going. A picture might not "go" in a certain section, but still be a success.

In fact, the best producers can pretty nearly tell how a production is going to be received by critics and the public. There is a certain "feel" that one acquires through experience. It's not infallible, of course, but enough so that invariably, we hide our heads in the sand when we send out an indifferent or mediocre feature.

Let us scourge the money changers out of the Temple of Art, and drive them back to the box office where they are such able men, and where the industry needs them. It will not only prove beneficial to them, but to the industry, and the vast majority of real, exclusive exhibitors—the ninety per cent who stick strictly to their own business and knitting—and to the men who are earnestly and conscientiously striving to make "better, greater and grander" pictures.

Too many cooks spoil the plot!
The hoodlums may be at the gate—but they shall not pass!"

Cohen Addresses Zukor

fact is, that the motion picture today is more than a mere amusement. It is a medium of expression and it is to the public interest that every medium of expression remain free and untrammelled. The people of this country would view with profound alarm monopolistic combinations towards placing the materials out of which our newspapers are made into the hands of one man or group of men. It would view with equal alarm an attempt of one individual or group of individuals to obtain complete possession of all publications in the United States. They will not long countenance a plan to monopolize this industry, to bring all the sources of production as well as the motion picture theatres under the control of one man or a group of men.

Current rumor has it that financial groups desirous of strengthening their hold on our industry, have selected at least one of the well known independent producers whose efforts have been applied to producing picture and not in acquiring theatres for their special consideration by impairing the credit of this concern, no doubt with the hope of curtailing the output of the independent field. This will gain them nothing, as the independent exhibitor throughout the country will rise to the support in a very substantial way of the independent producer who is being threatened by the same forces who have also been endeavoring to eliminate the independent exhibitor from the field.

Aside from other important public considerations, they know that monopolistic control of this field would mean poorer pictures and higher prices for admission. We realize that if we take this fight to the public we will win, for no man has the power to stand up against the popular will. However, we have no desire to engage in a warfare with the public, and we ask your judges, unless we are forced to do so in self defense.

In conclusion we beg to remind you of your own stand publicly and emphatically announced some time ago when you and your organization took the position that it was wrong for the exhibitors and injurious to the prosperity of the industry to have the theatre owners invade the producing field.

"If you will only adhere to the policy which you then so well defined, you may restore normal conditions in this industry, both to your own benefit and to the benefit of the men who own theatres. Will you agree to dispose of these motion picture theatre holdings to the independent exhibitors who are doing business preferably in the zones in which these theatres are located, providing that no financial loss will accrue to either your company, your associates or yourself."

"This organization is prepared to meet you on a fair basis so that no loss will accrue to you and so that the great motion picture exhibiting body will be independent, and the market open to your product as well as that of other producers, where merit will be the first consideration."

My dear Mr. Isaacson:

I am glad that for the second time since I have known you, you have found a public need and are striving to fill it. Your first great project, the Family Music Page in the "Globe", has been to me one of the most pleasing of innovations, for it did in the newspaper field what I have striven to do in the motion picture field; that is, give the public good music, make it clear to them and make it their own.

It was a delightful surprise when I was looking through the Motion Picture News of July 3rd to find your article entitled "Music for Your Theatres". It was number four and I went back into my files and read its three predecessors. Nothing that has been published in this field has given so much promise of service to the exhibitor and therefore of service to the public.

If we can only convince the motion picture theatre owner that music - and when I say music I mean good music, real music, though not necessarily high-brow music - is almost as essential to his theatre as the picture; that it makes his photo-play live and his actors act; that it supplies in part the great lack of the spoken word, the human voice, which is so rich in meaning, then we can feel that we are on our way to the goal that we both have sought for years.

One thing especially strikes me in your fourth article. Instead of assuming that only the large picture houses, the institutions which draw thousands of patrons a day, can supply real music, you have found the essential fact that real music is obtainable within limited means; that even the smallest neighborhood theatre can improve its program and give life to its pictures by using music that is available to it. Whether it be a piano or a player piano or an organ, good music can be got out of it if only the management will watch the instrument, the player and the selection of numbers.

I notice that you offer your personal help to the small exhibitor who hasn't either the means or facilities for working out his own music problems. If you are as helpful to him as you have been to hundreds of others with your kindly criticisms and suggestions in your valuable music page in the "Globe", I am sure the small exhibitor will be more than repaid for his study of your series of articles.

Yours very sincerely

The Silec Film Exchange of Chicago has just acquired the rights for the state of Illinois for "Copical Tips," one of the brightest reels of its kind on the market today, consisting of clever sayings of various editors and newspapers. This reel will be approximately three hundred and fifty feet in length and will be released every Sunday.

The Jester Comedies are still running strong in the territory and Lee Herz reports fifty-eight additional accounts were opened up by the Silec Film Exchange during the week commencing June 21, which is remarkable for the small territory which they are handling, inasmuch as it includes only the northern part of the state of Illinois.

B. A. Lucas, who recently assumed the management of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office, announces that A. G. Spencer, formerly with Pathe, and Thomas Gibbs, recently with First National, have been added to Robertson-Cole's Chicago sales staff.

District Manager Hansen, of Robertson-Cole, has left for Omaha where he will install Manager Britt in charge of Robertson-Cole's office in that city. Mr. Britt formerly was manager for United Artists exchange at Minneapolis.

On the eve of Isadore Gettleman's departure for Minneapolis, where he is to take charge of Universal's Chicago exchange as manager, the Chicago staff presented him with a handsome gold pen and pencil as token of their esteem. Mr. Gettleman had been manager of Universal's Chicago feature sales department for the past two years, and previous to that time was connected with Universal's Milwaukee Exchange.

I. M. Schwartz, who has been appointed local manager for the Educational Films, has opened offices at 1328 Consumers' Building. Physical handling of the films will be done by First National. As previously announced, the Educational Films' Franchise for Illinois is held by Balaban & Katz.

E. D. Saider, formerly with Robertson-Cole, has joined the sales staff of Greater Stars.

Messrs. Brockell and Corbett of Greater Stars are back at their desks after a fishing trip to Crooked Lake, Illinois.

Through the efforts of a small group of ex-service men now in the film industry, Theatrical Post No. 646 of the American Legion has been organized for members of the theatrical profession. At the first meeting held at the Universal Film Exchanges, 220 S. State Street, Chicago, the following officers were elected:

Post Commander, Edward Trinz; Vice Commander, Martin Saxe; Finance Officer, Max Balaban; Sgt. at Arms, Charles Kamp; Adjutant, Nat Wolf; War Risk Insurance Officer, Stanley B. Waite; Employment Officer, Max Ascher; Historian, Harry Rice; Standard Bearers, John I. Funk, Geo. Senseu; Executive Committee, W. F. Meetings will be held the first and third Friday of every month.

Any application for membership can be sent to either Harry Rice, Universal Film Exchange, Inc., 220 S. State Street, Chicago, or to Nat Wolf, Adjutant, Theatrical Post No. 646, First National Exhibitors, 110 S. State Street, Chicago.

Manager Aschmann, of Pathe's Chicago exchange, made a flying trip to New York this week for a conference with officials at the home office. Mr. Aschmann reports that work on the new Pathe Exchange Building, on Wabash Avenue, is progressing nicely and that he expects to move into his new quarters on schedule time.

Sid Goldman, Chicago manager of Associated Producers' Exchange, will make his headquarters with the Mickey Film Company, on the fourth floor of the Consumers' Building for the present, and on August 1st expects to move into Associated's permanent Chicago exchange, which will be located at 8th and Wabash.

Eddy Eckels left for the Pacific Coast last week. It is said that while in Los Angeles he will map out plans for further Pinnacle Productions.

Manager Seery, of First National, announces that Clayton Bond, formerly with Famous Players-Lasky's Chicago Exchange, has joined the staff of First National as city sales manager.

Louis Laemmle, of Universal's Chicago Exchange, has completed arrangements to sail for Europe on July 8th and will leave Chicago within a few days to board ship. Mr. Laemmle will accompany his brother, Carl Laemmle, and will remain abroad until September or October.

Ditz & Michels have purchased the Star Theatre at Oregon, Illinois, from I. H. Dales.

Joe Friedman is back in Chicago after escorting his family to Wentoning, where they will spend the summer. Mr. Friedman is so busy with his Gump cartoons, which he is releasing nationally, and the pictures he is handling in Illinois and Indiana, that he probably will not be able to take a vacation.

Among the exhibitor visitors to Chicago this week were Del Smith, manager of the McFerrin Opera House, Hopeston, Illinois, and the Opera House at Watseka, who reports that business is big, irrespective of the hot weather; Charles Lamb, manager of the Palm Theatre, at Rockford, who closed contracts for all of the Billy Francy comedies; Manager McKeene, of the Royal and Gem Theatres, Morris, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. McGurdy, of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis; Mrs. Mailous, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Bradley, Illinois; George Singer, Lincoln Theatre, Mishawaka, and J. K. O'Neil, of the Henry Opera House, Henry, Illinois.

Carl Harthill, manager of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation's Chicago Exchange, who also is supervising manager of the Wisconsin territory, has notified his selling force that the salesman with the greatest number of Reelcraft Pictures contracts to his credit by the end of July, will receive a bonus of one hundred dollars and a three weeks vacation in August with salary in full.

Pete Smith of publicity fame used the long distance from Frisco to reach the Rothacker plant in Chicago and inform them that he wanted to show "Go and Get It," to the democratic national convention delegates, and got quick action. Watterson R. Rothacker threw open the throttle at his Chicago plant and by evening, the first print from the latest Marshall Neilan negative was ready and A. L. Parker, publicity director for the Rothacker Company, started on his way to the coast with the print.

Ike Van Ronkel has resigned as manager of Goldwyn's Chicago exchange but will remain in charge until his successor arrives to take over the office. Mr. Van Ronkel plans to spend a month's vacation at Atlantic City with his family, after which, he will return to Chicago and again become an active factor in the motion picture industry. Although it is understood he already has completed arrangements for his future connection, he is not as yet ready to announce them.

Word has just been sent from the Chicago headquarters of the American Film Company, Inc., to the Pathe offices in New York that the first print of "The Week End," an American production from the script by Cosmo Hamilton, has been shipped from the Chicago executive offices. The new picture is a six reel special, starring Margaret Fisher, directed by George I. Cox. "The House of Toys," another new American special, had a very successful week's run at the Play House, Chicago, during the G. O. P. Convention and afforded relaxation to some of the convention delegates whose presidential plans also proved houses of toys.

Watterson R. Rothacker is in New York for a few days and will return to the Rothacker Chicago headquarters before sailing for Europe on the Olympia, July 8th. Douglas D. Rothacker has returned from Wisconsin with two industrial contracts and while he was away, J. W. Carnick sent up two in Chicago.

Ralph Thomas Kettering, playwright and general representative and publicity director for Jones Lusk & Schacter, is having a prosperous year. Through Ed Rowland, he has just disposed of the motion picture rights to his play, "Which One Shall I Marry?" to W. N. Selig, for a reported consideration of $45,000. Mr. Kettering also will have two plays on Broadway next season. A. H. Woods will produce, "When It Strikes Home," a play written by Mr. Kettering in collaboration with Walter C. Percival, and the other play to reach Broadway is "The Man Upstairs," upon which Kettering has collaborated with Sidney Toler and Daniel Kusell. Kettering recently disposed of the Australian rights to his new Irish play, "Rose O'Killarney," to Gerald Griffin who guarantees a season of not less than forty weeks in that country and New Zealand. During the past ten years Mr. Kettering has produced six full-sized plays, of which five proved big popular successes, three of which are still touring, and has written over two hundred vaudeville playlets.

D. L. Reese, familiarly known to the trade of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, as "Dandy Old" Reese, has been appointed assistant manager to Carl Harthill of Reelcraft's Chicago office. Mr. Reese is a veteran who has been connected with the Cropper organizations for many years and is one of the most widely known men in the motion picture industry of the Central West. Reports from all the salesmen of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation in the section show that the Billy Francy comedies are proving to be one of the best single-reel subjects ever placed on the market, according to Mr. Harthill. The pre-release showing of Reelcraft Pictures' two-reel comedy, "Kick," featuring Milburn Moranti was made at Barbier's Theatre the week commencing June 27th.

Mr. Wm. A. Johnston, Pres.,
MOTION PICTURE NEWS, INC.,
720 5th Ave., New York, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Johnston:

Your letter of April 16th addressed to the Exhibitors' League, 127 Pleasant street, Boston, Mass., has just been brought to my attention. I have been away, in Florida, for some time, and therefore did not receive the same before.

You say in the first paragraph of your letter, "A prominent producer has withdrawn all advertising in the NEWS because of an unfavorable review in our columns." The exhibitor today has to absolutely rely on the reviews as published in the various trade papers. This possibly is not true of the New England states, as we are privileged in this section of the country, mainly through the efforts of the undersigned, to pre-view our pictures at least a week before we use them. If a picture has received an unfavorable review, that of course is the judgment of your reviewer, and I must say that I think, with one single exception a number of years back, your judgment, or rather the judgment of your paper, has been sincere, just and without fear or favor. The manufacturer is certainly short-sighted if he does not want his pictures reviewed, as the return which he should receive from his investment must come from the exhibitor, and in most of the states and the exchange districts, the trade papers are the only means that a man possibly has of pre-judging a picture.

I am writing this letter entirely as an individual and not as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts, or National Treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc.

The eighth paragraph of your letter asks a question, "Are we competent of reviewing pictures?" I can say YES, most emphatically so, as people who have grown up with the business as you and I have are the best judges of what the exhibitor, and through him his patrons, want.

Your reviews, in answer to paragraph nine of your letter, certainly help in booking and advertising.

You may use this letter as coming from an individual, as stated above, in any way you may see fit, but it must be distinctly understood that it is not coming from me as an officer of the two organizations.

With kindest personal regards, I remain,
Sincerely yours,

(Signed) ERNEST H. HORSTMANN,
Boston, Mass.

"In the smaller towns where an exhibitor has not the opportunity of getting to the cities as often as he would like, a good honest review will always be of great help to him. Time was when a picture played the Strand, Rialto, etc., meant considerable to me but I am frank to say that has now lost its pressure, and I find that I am in a better position to doctor the amusement ills of my patrons by good reviews than any other way."

ELWYN M. SIMONS,

"I use your reviews and others in making my bookings, and I find them a great help—they also help in our publicity. I have found this service in your paper to be all right and a great help, and I think your reviews have been very fair to both producer and exhibitor."

BRUCE ASPLEY,
Trigg Theatre,
Glasgow, Ky.

"Yes, certainly we want reviews. Why? Because in the smaller towns we cannot view the various releases before we show them, and we want dependable reviews, since we cannot afford to pull a picture and substitute, as they can in the cities when a mistake is made."

E. VAN HYNING,
Pastime Theatre,
Ottawa, Kansas.

"I like the reviews because as a whole they give me a guide as to the pictures. I want to book for my theatre and the ones to let alone, this being practically the only way the small city exhibitor has any way of picking the good from the bad."

E. O. FORD,
Grand Theatre,
Story City, Iowa.

"Yes, I am following your reviews closely and I derive benefit from them, and that's why I am reading your splendid paper."

"It injures my business as well as my feelings, when I hear them say that it was a rotten picture."

L. DANIELS, Manager,
Gem Theatre,
Benld, Ill.

"Your reviews do not cause us to ask for a reduction in service but gives us an idea of what we should book. We read your reviews first, your other reading matter is interesting and the advertising amusing."

(Signed) BLUMENSTIEL & WOLF,
Princess Theatre,
Hot Springs, Arkansas.

"Beg to state that I depend upon the reviews of your journal and others in my selection, rejection, or approval of all pictures booked by me, and without such dependable reviews I could easily dispense with the trade journals."

The Kinema theatre of Oakland Cal. featured "The Bottom of the World" engagement even to staging a prologue as shown below.

The dog used was "Bully of Nome" the famous racing dog, winner of seven Alaska Sledgestakes, and a celebrity with Seattle residents. The young man in the picture is "Scotty" Allen, father of the "Alaskan Sledgestakes" and owner and driver of "Bully." Mr. Allen is the only person who can handle the dog. The sled is one of the original racing sleds used in Alaska.

Everybody interested in exploitation has wondered what it is to happen when the page and double spreads of co-operative advertising are played out in the field. Ohio, an answer was found to the problem. The paper shortage made the newspapers shy on a double-page spread. The fact that our paper was in the midst of a contest campaign made it stay away from co-operative advertising on "Everywoman." The other paper almost missed publication because of lack of print paper. The exploitation man from the Cincinnati office of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation worked out a plan of selling individual co-operative ads instead of a page at a group. A beautiful two column cut, taken from a feature story, ran in another paper and showing Violet Fleming looking into a vase of flowers, formed the basis for a florist ad, a smiling portrait of Margaret Loomis, also cut from the same layout, was the idea for a dentist ad. Three other ads, running to three and four columns, were linked up individually on the strength of the pretty, showy cuts. A page of space was thus secured, but scattered through the papers. The idea put "Everywoman" on nearly every page of the paper. Advertising Manager Scheffer of the News co-operated in the idea.

Every downtown druggist made a display of toilet and beauty articles, tying up with "Everywoman." Still enhanced the beauty of the displays, The Home Store, loading dry goods store, reproduced the figures of "Youth," "Beauty," "Modesty," and "Everywoman" with wax figures, changing the window several times during the week's showing.

Roche and Flannery 'Double Team' Madison

"On With the Dance" Exploitation Makes Wisconsin City Gasp With Amazement

MANAGER HUGH FLANNERY, of the Fuller Opera House, Madison, Wisconsin, assisted by Daniel Roche, Chicago Exploitation Representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, staged a most unique and startling stunt when "On With the Dance" was shown in that city recently. Four elaborate window tie-ups and a liberal use of the bill-boards a "Masked Dancer" stunt was carried by one of the local papers, the dancer being advertised to appear in a music store window on the most prominent corner in town. The paper offered prizes to the first one hundred persons correctly guessing her identity.

Hearing that Jack Williams, the "Human Fly" would climb the tallest building in town on the Saturday before the picture opened at the Fuller, Mr. Roche conceived the idea of having him "climb" for the Fuller. When Saturday arrived the city of Madison was jammed with people from the surrounding country to see the "Human Fly" do his climb. Circulating through the crowd and driving about the streets was the "Mysterious Masked Dancer" in a big touring car covered with flags and toy balloons and carrying a banner advertising the picture.

Crowds in the street watching Jack Williams, "The Human Fly," climb an eight story building at Madison, Wis., after passing "On With the Dance" on the windows of the skyscraper in his upward climb.

When the "Fly" began his climb and put the letter "E" on the second story window the crowds' attention was caught and held from then until he placed the final card in the window on the fifth floor spelling "On With the Dance." The accompanying photograph shows him climbing up into the 8th story window after completing his task.

Immediately after he finished his climb the crowd surged over to the window in the next block where the dancer was to perform. She was driven around town for five minutes while the crowd congregated and when Mr. Roche arrived with her he was met by an irate chief of police who ordered him to "take her out of that window" because she "is blocking traffic, by Heck!" But no exploitation man is worthy of the name who cannot overcome the objections of a policeman, so when Mr. Roche finished with him the street "Grew Wider" and the show went on to a successful conclusion.

In view of the fact that the "Human Fly" was brought to Madison to climb by private parties, only to have the performance turned into an advertisement for "On With the Dance" it is little wonder that exhibitors are rapidly beginning to realize the value of the services rendered to them by the wide awake exploitation men.

Experiment in Advertising Worth Study

"Love Expert" Exploited in Three Ways With Interesting Results

EXHIBITORS who are often puzzled as to what particular angle of a feature picture to play up in advertising will probably gain some degree of satisfaction from an experience of Frank A. Dowler, Jr., owner of the Rialto theatre at Chattanooga, and the Strand theatre at Knoxville, Tenn. He tested two distinct angles of a production by having the Rialto play up one feature and the Strand the other, and came to the conclusion that the main drawing power of a feature production lies in the star, the producer, or the theatre rather than in the story itself.

Constance Talmadge in "The Love Expert" is the picture on which the experiment was tried. E. R. Rodgers, advertising writer for the Rialto theatre, was instructed to play up the comedy entertainment offered by the picture by featuring in the advertising the situations which arise from the efforts of the heroine to work out her destiny as revealed to her through being able to detect her true mate on first meeting. For the Strand theatre, W. E. Drumbar the advertising writer, was instructed to treat the possibility of a love expert, that is a person who would be able to distinguish the true passion from infatuation or false love, as a serious matter. Both

Rothapfel Adds Novelty to Rendition of Orchestra Number

S. L. ROTHAPFEL is giving the audiences at the Capitol theatre, New York, added entertainment this week with his stage specialties in connection with the orchestral rendition of selections from Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta."

The number opens as an ordinary orchestral selection but on various changes the specialties are interpolated.

The first is the stilling of the orchestra for the rendition of the violin solo. This is followed by "The Dance of the Puppets" with the strings leading to the fly as in the original and the dancers, two in number, in costume. "The San Domingo Girl" dancing number is next also a costume exhibition with the solo number "Captain Dick," sung by Sudworth Frazier in "Colonial" toga.

The Capitol ensemble of a mixed chorus of male and female voices also assists.

men turned out striking ads.

"The result did not prove much in detail," said Mr. Dowler, "For both theatres did capacity business. Upon analysis we find that the two ads had "Three things and only three things in common. These three things were the title of the picture, the name of the star, the name of the producer. Therefore a logical deduction would be that these are the three most important drawing powers a picture may have. The story naturally is important, but not important in the advertising. The advertising is to draw people into the theatre and then the responsibility of entertaining them then, and only then, goes to the story.

"A conclusion that I have reached is that the facts that can be reiterated in advertisement after advertisement are the facts that should be used as the basis of all ads. The names of stars, the name of the producer, the name of the theatre can all be made to have their following if they each do consistently good entertaining. The commercial world has long recognized the value in dollars and cents of trade marks and good wills of business that have always maintained a good standard, and I believe the motion picture exhibitor can cash in on these things, which is about the only thing that was proved by my experiment with the diverse advertising of Constance Talmadge, in "The Love Expert."

Exploitation Campaign at Mansfield Merits Praise

Gives Free Tickets to Youngsters with Celtic Names

Here is a little exploitation idea originated for the engagement of "The Luck of the Irish" at the Broadway theatre, Richmond, Va., which should appeal to exhibitors regardless of the size city in which they live.

Ken Findley, manager of the Broadway, announced free admittance for all children with Celtic names after an argument with Jack Pegler, of the Mayflower Corporation, who was in the city working in the interests of "The Luck of the Irish," which had terminated in a bet as to the number of children in Richmond with Irish names.

The result of the experiment was a great crowd of "Harps" who took in the show and some fine front page publicity in the newspapers, who found the whole affair a first class news story.

For the Broadway's showing of "The Deep Purple" Pegler obtained some productive publicity when he hid a bunch of admission tickets for the attraction at the Strand in an out of the way place in the woods and then tipped off the Boy Scouts

Synchronizing the Program Demonstrated

THE Rivoli theatre is again demonstrating how effectively the different numbers on a bill may be synchronized by exercising a little care in the selection of the units.

The Rivoli overture is "Espana," a typically Spanish composition. This is followed by a scenic under the title of "Scenes From Spain." On the fade out of the scenic a dancing and singing number under the title of "In Granada" is staged.

Before a canvass representing the exterior of a Spanish house, same having a practicable balcony, Edoardo Albano, a tenor attired in Sicilian costume, sings a Spanish ballad, assisted by Turk Rohn, a soprano, also in costume, from the balcony.

At the close of the song Albano joins Miss Rohn on the balcony while Flore Mayo and her dancing partner perform a Spanish dance. This specialty number is followed by a Pathe strip of current events showing views of a big labor demonstration at Madrid, as the first piece of the Rivoli's Pictorial. In this manner the first half of the Rivoli program has been tied together in a most pleasing way.

with the hint that they attempt to find them.

Makes Special Appeal to Catholics With the "Confession"

When Bernard Deplan, Jr., is not directing the Wizard, Strand and Pickwick theatres in Baltimore, he is lying awake nights thinking up new ideas for putting big pictures across. He hit on an original one for exploiting "The Confession," with Henry Walthal, which he was showing at Ford's Opera House, one of Baltimore's largest legitimate theatres. Briefly he had assistants call all Catholics in the city on the telephone and announce to them personally that a picture with a particular appeal to members of their religion was being shown at the theatre.

Before showing the film Mr. Deplan took steps to have the Catholic clergy of the city endorse it. He gave a private showing of the picture in the auditorium of Loyola College for the benefit of 75 Catholic pastors of the city and then received the official endorsement of Cardinal Gibbons. Although the picture is not primarily a religious one, he played to the Catholic element, which is large in Baltimore.

How Patella Plans His Publicity Campaigns

Manager of the Opera House, Mansfield, O., Gives "The Flame of the Desert" Great Exploitation

W. M. PATELLA, Manager of the Memorial Opera House, Mansfield, Ohio, divides his time between studying his screen and his patrons. After watching the amusement business for many years, he has reached the conclusion that the public likes big exploitation on big productions.

So, working on this theory, he laid out his campaign on "The Flame of the Desert," a campaign that entailed considerable expense but the expense was negligible when he counted up the week's receipts. Patella started out with the bill boards. He spread one, six and twenty-four sheets on all the open space available. His next efforts were directed toward window cards. While the bill boards featured the play, the window cards featured Mlle. Violet Doreen, danseuse de luxe who danced an interpretative dance as a prologue to the production. Not content with bill boards and window cards, Patella next laid his snare for the automobilist. He had over a thousand auto tags made with tie-on arrangements. But his biggest spread was in the newspaper. Here he used a double page co-operative ad, in which eleven of Mansfield's biggest and most progressive retail stores participated. In these ads were several misspelled words. Patella offered free tickets to anybody finding these misspelled words. This isn't new, but it's good. It brings the family together, pouring over the paper looking for the error. The whole family reads about the "Flame of Desert." They each take a whack at the ad to see if they can get a pass. And dollars to doughnuts, even if they don't succeed in getting in for nothing, they are just curious enough to pay their way in just to see what it's all about.

Now here is where Patella showed he was the real showman. After all this splurge, he kept his prices down to the regular scale—but gave more for that thirty-nine cents than the people of Mansfield had ever had before. This worked two ways. It filled the house for every performance of "The Flame of the Desert"—and it created an added regular patron list for the Opera House. For human nature is such that if we get more than our money's worth at a place sometime, we will always go back to that place again, in the hope of getting more than our money's worth a second and a third time. So, although the campaign was expensive originally, it was cheap in the end.

In addition to the written advertising campaign, Patella had two Arabs, garbed in startling robes, parade the city during the busy hours of the day. Mlle. Doreen also toured the residence and business districts in an automobile, bearing announcements of the little lady's appearance at the Opera House in connection with "The Flame of the Desert." She, too was attired in Arabian dress, and was conspicuous.

So much for what happened outside the theatre. Here comes the story of what took place inside the theatre. Naturally, after having gone to so much expense to advertise the production, Manager Patella had to have something extraordinary to offer, else Mansfield movie fans would lose confidence in him. In the first place, the usual organ overture, was replaced by a ten-piece orchestral overture. Following the opening selection, the stage was wrapped in complete darkness. This lasted several seconds. Then a faint blue light appeared. Just as this blue light became steady, a dull gong was sounded, and at this moment, the Arabians who had toured the streets were seen crouched down in the position of homage. As the lights were raised, they also rose and salaamed in true Turkish fashion. Gradually the blue light was replaced by an amber spot light centered upon Mlle. Doreen, standing on the verandah of a palace, looking out into the desert. The spell was broken by a wild crash of the gong, which was the signal for the beginning of Mlle. Doreen's weird dance.

This was a magnificent prologue. It was one of the most elaborate Mansfield had ever seen. And it didn't cost Mansfield patrons a penny more than a regular picture entertainment without any show. In a run with other exhibitors, whom do you think the Mansfield people will support, the manager who gives them just what they pay for all the time, or the manager who gives them more than they pay for once in a while?

Strand, Seattle, Gives Curwood Picture Lobby Display

Allens Inaugurate New Service

Julie and J. J. Allen, of Toronto, have taken two interesting steps to add comfort and convenience for patrons of their many large moving picture houses in Toronto.

One innovation consists of an automobile service car which is at the disposal of Allen theatre patrons. If a motorist has trouble of any kind before or after attending a performance in one of the nine large Allen theatres in Toronto, a call is sent in for the Allen service car and it is immediately sent to the spot to render desired assistance. The service vehicle is a Ford truck with a special body with plate glass panels and finished in a dark red with gold trimmings. The car is driven by a uniformed attendant.

During the morning and late at night the truck is used to deliver or collect reels and various moving picture accessories. It is also used for special advertising purposes. But it is at the disposal of motorists for emergency repair work during the hours that the theatres are crowded with people.

Another move by the Allens has been to engage a ventilating expert whose duty it is to maintain the cooling and ventilating equipment of the local Allen theatres at a proper degree of efficiency and to arrange for the installation of additional facilities where needed. This specialist is Mr. James Tanner,

Remarkable Scenic with Exploitation Possibilities

THE modern scenic picture, embracing dramatic values and with a story is to be found at its best in "Outlaws of the Wilderness," a Robertson-Cole release on the Capitol program this week.

The subject has some very wonderful mountain and rough country shots but its greatest interest is in the views caught of two wolves and the trailing of the animals by two hunters and a pack of hounds.

There is a real thrill in these sequences especially where the pack first picks up the scent of the wolves. Some very fine titles also give the picture interest.

Poultry Aid Spokane Theatre to Put Over Picture

Manager Stilwell, of the Casino theatre, Spokane, in playing "Down on the Farm," did some novelty advertising for the picture that attracted the attention of the whole city, among which was the use of a flock of poultry about the theatre.

A crate of guinea hens was placed just back of the office and after they became acclimated they called incessantly to the passersby. Another crate of ducks did noisy advertising and the "old reliable" in the shape of Plymouth Rocks did a lot of cackling for the success of the picture.

Home Town Honors Author of "Virgin of Stamboul"

All this hunk about a prophet not being honored in his home country went by the board recently in Hudson, N. Y., which used to boast that it was the home town of Evans Ale, but which now points with pride to the house where H. H. Van Loan, noted screen author, first saw the light.

Star director, producer et al. took a back seat when A. A. Elliott, manager of the Playhouse, Hudson, booked Van Loan's latest picture, "The Virgin of Stamboul." In folders, ads and publicity, Elliott featured the author.

Van Loan, in a personal letter to Elliott, sent his greetings to his fellow Hudsonians. To cap the climax, the author was induced to run up to Hudson from New York City, and make a personal appearance at the showing of the picture.

It was like old home week in Hudson, with the Playhouse the center of interest. Van Loan met a lot of the fellows he used to "lick" in school, headmilted, and some that used to "lick" him.

During his three days in Hudson, "The Virgin of Stamboul" almost eclipsed the political campaign and other standard subjects of interest. Many columns of copy concerning Van Loan and the picture appeared in the local papers.

What Brown Did For De Mille's Special

Followed By What "Why Change Your Wife?"
Did For Brown and the Memphis Enterprises

WHEN the Memphis Enterprises, Inc., booked "Why Change Your Wife?", G. E. Brown director of publicity and advertising recognized his opportunity as well as his duty and inaugurated an exploitation campaign which overshadowed even his previous strenuous efforts to inform the Memphis public of the attractions which come to the Enterprises theatres.

For four weeks, previous to the opening day, Mr. Brown wrote special "coming" articles for the daily papers and just one week before opening, shot the first gun in the biggest campaign that the South has seen in months. There was no let up either in the newspapers or in street advertising from then on until the last performance.

More than 35,000 pieces of literature consisting of circulars, stickers, string cards, window cards, one sheets, auto tire rack cards, banners, street car cards and the like were used and there wasn't a paper published in Memphis, even to one in Italian, that was not utilized in carrying the message to the people.

There were more than fifty automobiles which carried 30 inch circular cardboards on their rear tire racks, these sitting around for ten days prior to and during the showing. Each auto card carried the words, "Why Change Your Wife?" painted in large red letters and beneath were the words "Buy her a Roamer" or whatever car carried the card.

Fifteen thousand heralds were distributed at the Strand the week before the engagement, 5,000 autos carried on their windshields the words "Why Change Your Wife?" Mr. Brown having had a four-inch square sticker printed for this purpose. Door knobs, autos, wagons, in fact every place possible to reach, carried the string cards and 2,000 11 by 14 cards were tacked up all over the city, not a pole downtown being missed.

Through negotiations with the Chamber of Commerce, which was putting on a membership drive the same week, Mr. Brown arranged for the showing of 1,100 feet of Memphis views, this film having been titled and assembled by Mr. Brown himself. It did much to put over the picture at the advance in prices charged.

The Chamber of Commerce also was prevailed upon to advertise this feature in its campaign and special newspaper stories, 1,500 window cards, 200 street car cards and 2,000 street sign cards were gotten up by Sam D. Fusen, publicity manager for the Chamber. All these as well as 5,000 letters sent out by the Chamber carried "See Memphis at the Strand theatre this week."

A half dozen window tie-ups in the most prominent stores downtown were also arranged by Mr. Brown and not being content with this, he put on an ideal husband and wife letter contest in the leading afternoon paper, writing all the articles himself and handling the contest which brought in more than 1,100 letters.

A cash prize of $25 was awarded as well as a half dozen season passes and a score of doubles to "Why Change Your Wife?" This idea resulted in ten days front page publicity, the climax being a four-column article with the winning letters published on the front page.

As the climax of his advertising plans, Mr. Brown drew up unusually big ads for the full week, these all being hand drawn the first to be used by any theatre in Memphis.

Three parades were held during the week of the showing and Mr. Brown saw to it that either banners on trucks or some of the fifty autos with the rear tire cards were there for a showing.

The result of all this was not only financial returns greater than any theatre in Memphis ever before had enjoyed but the Strand's big week made the manager of an opposition house declare that "Why Change Your Wife?" had made him have his first losing week.

Window Displays by 'Frisco Theatre for "Sick Abed"

Wallace Reid's "Sick Abed" received some great exploitation in the shop windows of San Francisco during its showing at the California theatre, of which Eugene Roth is managing director. Above is a tie-up window effected with a book store

(Above and right)
The drug stores were only too anxious to lend a window for the "Sick Abed" advertising designed by the California. In the cut at the left note the two dolls, one an invalid and the other the nurse. Nurse Doll is about to give Invalid Doll a shave, a tie-up with the Gillette safety razor having been secured in this display

Energy and Brains Overcome Time Handicap

Viewed from the angle of the big city the results attained by A. W. Eiler, manager of the American theatre of Walla Walla, Wash., and the energy and faculty for originating and carrying into execution on short notice a campaign on "Burning Daylight," he displayed recently, might not figure as wonderful but when it is known that Walla Walla is one of the many cities where the manager is sign painter, advertising director and many other things, Mr. Eiler's achievements place him in the class of live wire showmen who can and does put over a picture. "Burning Daylight" was booked to fill an open date two days ahead of the time of booking. The afternoon papers carried "Burning Daylight" teaser ads. Before business ceased in the local stores on the same day Mr. Eiler had lined up many stores for window displays and placed his next day advertising order with the papers.

Taking a tip from the title of the picture he climbed out of bed at 4:30 the next morning and by 7:30 had painted six big signs announcing the coming of the picture to the American. He put banners on his automobile and drove about town all the afternoon. Twenty-four hours after he had booked the picture Eiler was all set and ready for his opening, his exchange accessories having arrived. Forty-eight hours after signing the contract he put the picture on with as much advertising having been done as most small city exhibitors would have been able to put over in a week.

It was a whirlwind campaign in every way and the result at the box office was the same as it is whenever energy and gray matter are utilized in the exhibition field.

Artistic Lightings Add to Vocal Number

ALL the Broadway picture palaces are illustrating this week how spots and floods in colors and blends may be used to advantage in dressing specialties on the bill, but none more effectively than the Rivoli in the presentation of a vocal number called "The Swing Song," in which the singing of the "The Swing Song" is the vocal accomplishment.

A canvass done in dark color in which an oval opening has been cut about six feet long by four wide is backed by a golden hued drop. Between these two is a fancy swing the ropes of which have been entwined with flowers and colored electric bulbs, Turk Rohn, soprano, sits swinging gently back and forth as she sings her number. The lightings used are nicely blended to bring out the best of the singer's personal appearance and to set off her costume which is somewhat abbreviated and gauzy.

The singer is suspended about six feet above the stage floor and centers in the opening cut in the front drop.

Theatre and Newspaper Cooperate at Clinton

ANOTHER "The Virgin of Stamboul" exploitation stunt has been used at Clinton, Iowa, where the manager of the Strand theatre aroused the entire city with a Priscilla Dean Mathematical test, engineered with the aid of the Clinton Herald. Two knotty problems were presented to the youngsters of Clinton. Hundreds of solutions were received. The judges held session in the parlor of the handsome Hotel Lafayette. The first prize was awarded to Donald Campbell the 15-year-old Clinton high school boy who recently won the Government's national essay contest on "Americanism."

Slocum's Publicity Gets Young Picture Extra Bookings

In Cleveland, which is quite some city, it is not so unusual for a good picture to run day and date in two first run theatres but it remained for "For the Soul of Rafael" to have the honor of playing three of the city's downtown houses for the same week, the Metropolitan, Strand and Orpheum.

The reason, or at least one of the reasons that the managements of the three theatres decided there was business enough for every one on this picture was the advance exploitation that had been put over.

Palmer Slocum, who handles the publicity for the Strand and Orpheum, had pulled something that had never been done before in the city, when he lined up half a dozen of the leading retail stores on Euclid avenue in a co-operative advertising campaign that had immediate and effective results, both at the box office windows of the theatres, and at the retail stores themselves.

The stores not only loaned their windows for a display on "For the Soul of Raphael" with cards and photographs of Clara Kimball Young, but they also co-operated with the theatres in a series of daily advertisements which appeared each morning in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Slocum got up the ads, and added to their value considerable by picking out a simple but effective design, and sticking to it all through the campaign. Their very uniformity was striking, and caught the attention of many who were not followers of the movie news. The stores reported that they had crowds in front of their windows continually during the campaign, and they also stated that they felt a direct benefit from participating in the campaign.

Audubon Takes Advantage of Local Event

Jackson Hitches on to Unusual News Item With Splendid Results

AN exploitation stunt was put over successfully to the last by Ben E. Jackson, manager of the Audubon theatre in New York City, in behalf of "Love's Harvest," and may be used as an example of live-wire showmanship, clever arrangement of details and accurate timing of the stunt with the showing of the picture and the breaking of the story in the daily press.

Jackson knew of the proposed test of the new Police Department Aero Force. It was learned that a test race between pseudo-automobile bandits and selected members of the Police Department was to be held to determine the possibility of the airmen keeping in sight of fleeing automobile thieves. This offered Mr. Jackson a golden opportunity, and he immediately set about pulling the wires that would bring this trial race to the vicinity of his theatre, the Audubon.

Mr. Jackson caused to be sent to all daily papers in New York a story of the forthcoming trial of the new branch of the Police Department, giving the line of the chase—but without any mention whatever of the theatre or the feature which the showman planned to exploit. This story appeared either on the front page or conspicuously elsewhere in every paper in New York.

Then, on throwaways, or small jazz heralds about three inches square, Manager Jackson printed an announcement that the cards were thrown by the driver of the police plane with an additional statement that "Love's Harvest" would be shown at the Audubon.

These heralds, together with many free tickets to performances dated for the showing of Shirley Mason in "Love's Harvest," were taken aboard the police plane at its starting point, and when great crowds, having read of the chase to be conducted on Sunday afternoon, were gathered on Riverside Drive and Broadway at 86th street to witness the exciting event, they were showered with masses of tickets and heralds which floated down to them announcing the coming of the Shirley Mason film.

Broadway and Riverside Drive at this point are always filled with pedestrians and vehicular traffic at this time on Sunday. People lined the sidewalks, automobiles lined the roads, and families appeared on the roofs of buildings along the route outlined by the newspapers the previous day.

All along the path of the flying machine and the fleeing automobile, up Broadway to Washington Heights, people reached for the little pasteboards which fluttered to them from the clouds.

Sumptuous Stage Settings Designed by Strand of Omaha

On this page is shown the sumptuous stage setting used by Manager Harry Watts of the Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb., for the showing of "The Yellow Typhoon," which is said to have been the most elaborate thing of its kind ever attempted in the city

Braddock Stages Prologue for "The Confession"

FOR the presentation of "The Confession," Manager George E. Braddock, of the New Liberty theatre, St. Paul, arranged what is said to be the most elaborate storm scene ever seen in the city. The stage setting was a natural looking scene in the woods, prepared by the scenic department of the Finkelstein and Ruben chain of picture houses, of which the New Liberty is a link.

Preceding the showing of the feature, a soloist offered several songs. Then the dimmers were used, and during the twelve minutes which the prelude occupied, the coming of the storm was amazingly depicted.

The applause which greeted the final note of the overture which was played was greater than that which was given to the "In Old Kentucky" presentation at this same playhouse, several months ago.

For the preparation of the storm scene Manager Braddock used the corps of scenic workers for two days. The pipe arrangement necessitated the employment of six plumbers for an entire day. Two one-inch pipes were constructed overhead, each thirty-five feet long. There were 500 one-sixteenth inch holes in the pipes, which were suspended twenty-five feet above the stage.

Two large tarpaulins covered the entire stage, and a four-inch pipe furnished the drainage system. Water was supplied from the regular city fire-pressure lines.

The lighting effects throughout the scene, commencing with the first use of the dimmers, and the thunder peals and huge crashes, were so realistic that the local papers carried stories on the accomplishment. With space at the highest premium in history, Manager Braddock "put one over" in admirable shape.

Other thunder effects were obtained from the use of electrically operated drums, placed in cases, and suspended over the stage.

Schools Interested in Shackleton Film

The possibilities of "The Bottom of the World" as an exploitation feature is exemplified in the experience of the Moon theatre of Omaha, where the Commerce High School was closed while the students attended the Moon where the subject was being shown as part of the bill.

We are not informed whether or not this was brought about through the efforts of Manager Ballantyne but at least it will suggest to enterprising showmen who will run the picture in the future the calling of the educational authorities' attention to the feature and explaining its educational worth.

In New York the picture has had a showing at the Museum of Natural History and arrangements have been made to present it with the cooperation of the Board of Education to the pupils of the Washington High School and probably at other New York City High Schools.

Allows Patrons to Select Serials

The Rex theatre of Richfield, Utah, recognized that a serial picture which "catches on" is a real drawing card and one that doesn't is a detriment allows its patrons to select an attraction by preparing a ballot with the current serial pictures available for showing listed on it and a voting space where the public may register their choice.

The plan is not so new since the writer himself used the same idea ten years ago and borrowed it from some one even then, but it is a reliable way of finding out the public's preference and of also getting some advance exploitation for the particular picture to be selected.

The plan of course is especially effective in small towns and for use by neighborhood theatres, where the patronage is pretty much the same week in and week out.

Lorain Enlists Uncle Sam's Aid for "Deep Purple"

UNCLE SAM has again proven himself a good booster for the motion picture this time his aid being secured at Lorain, Ohio, by the Opera House to put over "The Deep Purple."

A special one sheet was printed for the attraction in which a tie-up with the United States Army recruiting campaign then in progress in Lorain.

The recruiting service posted the sheets on every choice location in the city, for army bill posters can plaster signs where even angles fear to swing a brush. The recruiting station also equipped its automobiles and motorcycles with purple banners calling attention to the showing of the Walsh production at the Opera House.

As a result of Berry's efforts, hundreds of extra patrons were recruited for the showing of "The Deep Purple" and tickets popped out of the Opera House's machine with the speed of bullets coming out of a rapid fire gun.

Rothapfel Staging Prologue with "Slim Princess"

THE Capitol theatre is presenting a prologue with "The Slim Princess" which is remarkably effective and yet within the scope of every theatre which has a stage.

With the stage dark and against a black background the figure of a Turk in costume is silhouetted by means of a spot which cuts above the ankles giving the appearance of the person being suspended in mid air.

Just what the person is standing upon we do not know but a step ladder could be used for this purpose.

During the exhibition an Oriental chant is rendered from off stage. The figure fades out and the screening of the feature begins on the drapes as they close prior to the lowering of the picture screen.

Newspaper Display Calls Attention to "Six Feet Four" Stunt

THE Kinema theatre in Salt Lake City helped crowd house for four days with the following spiel in their newspaper display ad, featuring "William Russell" and "Six Feet Four" in big type:

"Bill's Dope
"You longs and lankies!
"You fellows that are so tall you can get your feet wet Christmas and not catch cold till the Fourth of July

"Here's a chance to put your altitude to some account. There's a whale of a good show at the Kinema the first four days of next week called 'Six Feet Four.'

"Now, as a little stunt to go with a show having a title like that, any man or woman who measures up to a six foot mark near the ticket office can walk right into the show at any performance FREE OF CHARGE. But

"No judgin' no standing on tiptoe. And if your neck stretches more than two inches, you're barred!"

"Say, you other folks, there'll be a show at the ticket office worth about as much as the show inside. Come and see it!"

Gives All "Priscillas" Free Admission

AS an exploitation stunt to aid in putting over "The Virgin of Stamboul" at Erbert's theatre, East St. Louis, Manager Joe Erbert invited all girls whose name was "Priscilla" to be guests at a performance. He now confesses that he had no idea there were so many females in the city with this name but is satisfied with the result of his exploitation scheme.

Every "Priscilla" brought along some one else who paid to get in and in some cases the whole family came also.

This stunt is just a new twist to the old and reliable plan of giving out one ticket for every lithograph placed which showman knew to be a sure fire way of selling seats before the days were thought of.

Pickwick Theatre Gives Dean Picture Extra Attention

The Pickwick theatre put out an unusually large amount of paper, besides extending its newspaper publicity, for the week's showing of "The Virgin of Stamboul." A pre-view was given to the chief of police and other city and county officials. An elaborate prologue was presented, with a stage setting representing a Turkish harem, and Lola Gonzales, oriental dancer, was featured, as was Arthur Jasmine, screen star. The background for Miss Gonzales' dancing was a reproduction of one of the scenes of the picture. Mr. Jasmine appears in the rôle of the sheik. Novel lighting effects added to the realism of the prologue. Manager Malaby of the Pickwick found it necessary to add a special day performance at 11 a. m. in order to accommodate the public.

Efficacy of Teaser Method Demonstrated

EFFICACY of a "Teaser" advertising campaign has just been demonstrated in a daring fashion by Henry S. Ford, manager of the Majestic theatre at Wichita Falls, Texas. The campaign as conducted by Mr. Ford was of a pure "teaser" type as compared to many which follow the form of this method of exploitation but betray the fact that it is amusement promotion by overdoing it, or using other advertising which discloses the basis for the "teasers."

Constance Talmadge in "In Search of a Sinner" is the feature which suggested the campaign to Mr. Ford. For a week before the production was to be shown at the Majestic, Mr. Ford used small two-line ads in each of the classifications of the want ads in all of the Wichita Falls papers. To make the advertisement which read "wanted—A Sinner" look legitimate, a newspaper box number for responses was included in the "teaser." The Majestic usually uses slides in the theatre announcing coming attractions but these were omitted in connection with the Constance Talmadge production. In no other form of advertising was the fact betrayed that the little want ads were used in connection with a motion picture.

Strange as it may seem, the want ads pulled over 400 replies, the great majority of which were inquiries as to what it all was about.

The day before the picture opened, Mr. Ford expended the advertising appropriation which is usually for a week's expenditures in smashing newspaper advertisements, and streamers on the side of all the street cars in the city.

The campaign was one of the most successful ever conducted by a Wichita Falls theatre. Mr. Ford is authority for the statement that even after a generous allowance for the drawing power of Constance Talmadge, attendance was nearly twenty-five per cent above normal at all showings.

Great Idea for "Day's Pleasure"

This is the story about an exploitation campaign that represented an exhibitor idea and little or no investment.

It was conceived by Ralph Hanson, manager of the Willard theatre, Creston, Iowa, after the following fashion:

Four days before the first scheduled showing of "A Day's Pleasure," Mr. Hanson was pondering about his exploitation for this attraction. Passing a second-hand clothing store he was attracted by a pair of superbly-huge shoes hanging just across the door hinge.

Then his idea came.

When Chaplin opened at the Willard, thirty-five shoes dangled from the edge of the lobby ceiling to a position just above the heads of those who entered the lobby. A cut-out showing Chaplin walking across the back of a fat woman had been in front of the box office. Frame on the side walk carried a part of a one-sheet poster with a single shoe hanging from the poster.

The novel stunt created a buzz of comment and cost almost nothing.

Special Free Matinees for Children Pay

Encouraged by stories of the success of children's free matinees as business builders that have appeared in the News from time to time and especially from the result of the Finkelstein and Rubin entertainment at the New Lyric theatre, Minneapolis, when over 6,000 children saw "Judy of Rogues Harbor," Charles W. Mason, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind., held a special show for the "kiddies" and like wise was quite as successful as were Finkelstein and Rubin, and the host of others who have used the free show plan as a box office tonic.

He realized that if he got the children interested he also would interest their parents. Mr. Mason, who is widely known among the exhibitors of Indiana for his lively exploitation ideas, started his advertising campaign several days in advance of the showing and appealed to the "Kiddies" to see "Judy of Rogues Harbor."

He especially invited the grown ups to bring "your own children; if you haven't any of your own, bring some one else's children." This newspaper advertising and publicity campaign was linked up with special billboard advertising.

Mr. Mason also arranged a special children's matinee at popular prices and all orphans of the city were admitted to the theatre as the special guests of the management. The result of this children's appeal was that the Orpheum played to unusually satisfactory business with the picture.

Toledo Theatre and Newspaper Cooperate

"The Deep Purple" Subject of a Publicity Campaign Highly Original and Successful

TO the average male mind, the most fascinating pastime in the world is sleuthing. If every boyhood ambition were realized, nine out of every ten bankers, bakers and walking-stick makers would be earning their daily coffee and buns via the gum-shoe route.

Capitalizing this fact, Edward A. Zorn, General Manager of the People's Amusement Company, working in conjunction with Ace Berry, field exploitation representative for the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, staged a sleuthing contest for the promotion of "The Deep Purple" during the picture's run at the Temple theatre, Toledo, Ohio. The stunt aroused more public interest and got more newspaper space than any promotional device used by a Toledo theatre in a long time.

Manager Zorn was fortunate in securing the co-operation of the Toledo Blade. The newspaper gave the contest feature display on its movie page for seven consecutive days, in addition to printing and distributing window cards and hanging banners calling attention to the contest on its fifteen delivery trucks.

Every day for the duration of the contest, the Blade ran a short detective story called "The Deep Purple Mystery." Each story contained a clue which if followed helped the reader to find one or more of the many deep purple envelopes which were hidden in various parts of the city. "These locations," read the Blade's opening announcement, "may be discovered by reading the stories carefully and by using your detective powers."

There were, of course, suitable rewards for the amateur sleuths.

Another ingenious stunt evolved by Manager Zorn and which recommends itself to the attention of alert showmen, was the wearing of a tie tag by 600 of the Blade's carrier newsboys during the run of the production. On Saturday morning, Zorn staged a special show for the newsboys, who paraded through the downtown section, displaying their tie tags which admitted them to the show. As a result of the stunt, Manager Zorn got the benefit of the services of 600 enthusiastic sandwich men at a nominal cost.

Having sewed up every other available avenue of publicity, Zorn and Berry next turned their attention to the circus which was playing in the city at the time. They secured a mammoth perambulator, drawn by four horses, and annexed it to the circus parade. The vehicle was covered with large banners calling attention to the picture's showing at the Temple. After being drawn around the main thoroughfares, it was parked on the circus grounds, where it drew almost as much attention as the vociferous inmates of the animal cages.

Zorn further backed his showing of "The Deep Purple" with large newspaper and billboard displays. This, coupled to the stunts, gave the Temple's "How Many" girl seven of the busiest days of her seat selling life.

Borrows Circus for Publicity Purposes

Harris Gets Away With Great Stunt in Putting Over "Down on the Farm"

WILL D. HARRIS, the enterprising manager of the Grand theatre, (Columbus, O.), whose exploitation deeds have been told at various times in the News, has again put over a stunt which places him among the real live wire exhibitors of the country.

In his very modest manner, Mr. Harris tells us that as soon as he contracted for "Down on the Farm" he planned a lot of circus and jazz exploitation. A week prior to the opening of his show there was advertised a real circus for his town. "So I went after the circus, not expecting the results I obtained, but it certainly was a move in the right direction, and my proposition, appealed to the circus management, and we worked together from the minute they entered my town, they advertising me and I them.

"We contracted for banners to be placed on the sides of all of their large wagons, on the sides of the elephants, and in the big circus rings, together with the clown band also. I made my arrangements so far ahead that it gave me the opportunity of obtaining attractively painted banners, which were thoroughly dried before they reached Columbus.

"The day of the circus was a typical spring day, and when the parade for the circus started, the streets were lined with people along the many miles of the march. The effect of this advertising was excellent."

"Members of the clown brigade," he continued, "as they passed through the crowds yelled, 'I'll see you "Down on the Farm," at the Grand next week.' I paid the clowns a small sum for this special advertising stunt which they did in a splendid manner. There were banners also hung at the entrance of the tents and over the trapeze acts in the big top and remained there until the close of the evening show. After the circus left town I had the banners pasted on some excellent dead walls throughout the business section of the city and they remained there working for the show until it was over."

The remainder of Mr. Harris' campaign for this picture was beautifully dove-tailed so as to make every bit of advertising, publicity and exploitation count. "Just as soon as I secured the picture," he said, "I planted stories in all the papers about its coming and when it was passed by the Ohio censor, I made much of the fact, and the papers carried the notices to the effect that even the hardened members of the board were compelled to laugh at the screamingly funny tactics of the players in this picture.

The week before the picture was to open

I began a teaser advertising campaign, using the three largest papers, scattering through the news columns seven point readers in bold face type which stated, "Lots of fun 'Down on the Farm,'" etc.

These teasers were only a line each and started people talking. They were followed by ten point readers illustrated by cuts from artists' drawings obtained in the press book which announced the engagement of the picture and explained the teaser ads. Display advertising was used effectively also.

On Saturday before the show opened I broke into the editorial page of the Dispatch, the leading paper in Central Ohio, with a story about how hard it was to get horses. It was the first time a show picture or otherwise—ever got on the editorial page. To appreciate this I only need say that advertisements are not accepted at any price for that page.

"We kept everybody talking about the show all the time. The ushers, the ticket sellers, the doormen, everybody.

"The result was that the crowds came rejoicing, the largest crowds in the history of the Grand. They laughed and howled and went away telling their friends. It came up to every promise and it was the greatest week in our history."

Chester Exhibitor Wins with "Pollyanna"

Thomas Proffit Left No Stone Unturned in Advertising Pickford Feature

THOMAS PROFFIT, the live wire manager of the William Penn theatre, Chester, Pa., recently put over an exploitation campaign on "Pollyanna" which brought the attraction to the attention of every resident of his city and was largely conducive to bringing in business that set a new record for the theatre.

Mr. Proffit studies the art of exploiting pictures and has arrived at some very definite conclusions.

"When you start to exploit a picture don't leave a stone unturned. Go after everybody," says Mr. Proffit in discussing the result of his campaign for the "Pollyanna" showing.

"When I booked this picture I determined to go after the feature in a big way. The feature had wonderful presentation opportunities, all of which I consider good exploitation, but I was more interested in what I could do on the outside, rather than the inside of my theatre, so I sought out all the possible large display windows in my section of the town, for the possible use of cut-outs of enormous sizes, and before I was finished with my rounds I had landed exactly fourteen windows, all willing to co-operate with me in putting this picture over.

"Fourteen show windows of enormous size in my town for a display was more than one could possibly expect, but I didn't end there. I started and kept up a concerted and constructive newspaper advertising campaign. I kept everlastingly after the people. I went on every billboard I could get hold of. I had over five hundred large one-sheet boards printed specially and had them placed all over the town. I had the Five and Ten Cent store sell 'Pollyanna' shopping bags and the 1,500 we supplied went like 'hot cakes.'

"But it was the window display campaign that carried most weight and attracted most attention.

"I was particular to choose only good stores and succeeded in obtaining the windows of a book store, an autos sales room, a drug store, two electric light companies, a newspaper office, a grocery store, a gas company, a clothing store and a department store, as the leading ones; securing fourteen places in all. In these I made elaborate displays of cut outs, and 'Pollyanna' was to be found advertised on every street for blocks around my theatre.

"In front of the theatre I strung a banner. On a building nearby I had a great sign painted with a hand pointing to the theatre and telling the people that it was there that Mary Pickford was to be seen in her latest production.

"And the fact that I went after it in that manner brought me capacity business. I'm a believer in exploitation to say the least, but only when you go after every angle of the idea."

Mr. Proffit also cooperated with the Chester Times and Morning Republican, which newspapers gave a free performance to all the newsboys in the town. It is seldom that a bunch of several hundred big-hearted, little more-or-less unwashed newsboys have a leading theatre hired especially for their entertainment, but that's what the newspapers did, and more than that—gave "Pollyanna" no end of good publicity.

Completes "The Purple Clpher" Vitagraph

What is believed by Vitagraph to be Earle Williams' best feature since "The Fortune Hunter," was completed this week under the direction of Chester Bennett at the Hollywood studios of that company. It is called "The Purple Clpher" and is a fast-moving melodrama of Oriental intrigue and American nerve and resourcefulness. The story is by Will F. Jenkins. It was arranged for the screen by J. Grubb Alexander.

Vola Vale, who played with Earle Williams in some of his biggest successes, appears opposite him. Henry A. Barrows plays an important part. Ernest Shields and Alan Forrest also have strong roles.

Rose Mullaney Leaves Casting Staff

Rose Mullaney, who has been casting director for the Selznick studios for the past two months, retired from that position on Saturday last. Miss Mullaney was compelled to tender her resignation on the advice of her physician who informed her that she was threatened with a nervous collapse unless she took a rest.

Miss Mullaney was for years connected with the legitimate casting department of the Chamberlain Brown Agency and a little over a year ago went to Los Angeles as the head of the casting department for the Metro Studios. She returned from the coast about two months ago to take over the casting department for the Selznick productions.

First of "Director's" Series Completed

A statement just issued by the Jesse D. Hampton Productions announces the completion of the final scenes of the first of a series of director special productions. Plans which are now being formulated for the independent releases of these productions will be announced in the near future. The statement from the offices of the organization is as follows:

"A wonderfully entertaining, virile story which is strikingly illustrated by its title 'Half A Chance,' from the well known novel by Frederic S. Isham, celebrated dramatist, offers the initial subject, which headlines the name of director Robert Thornhill."

Ormsby Film Making Sea Production

Articles of incorporation have been issued by the State of California to the Ormsby Film Corporation which has opened offices in Los Angeles and leased a studio in Boyle Heights for the making of a special sea spectacle written by Captain Lesley T. Peacocke. A. B. Ormsby is president, Walter Goodwin vice-president and A. N. Ormsby secretary and treasurer. The company has progressed very satisfactorily in the filming of their first production, title of which has not been made public.

Live News From The Producers

Willat Picture Progressing Personnel of Producing Staff Is Named; Hodkinson to Release Films

THE work of filming the initial Irvin V. Willat production is progressing rapidly at the West Coast studio of the company, is the report. The story is from the pen of I. N. Westcott. This is Mr. Willat's first independent production under his own name. His staff, many of whom have been associated with him in his previous work, include John S. Waters, assistant director, Andrew Webster and Frank M. Blount, cameramen. Harold G. Oliver, who was responsible for the technical work in Mr. Willat's most recent productions for Thos. Ince, "Behind the Door" and "Below the Surface," is technical director; F. G. Erickson, in charge of properties; "Slats" Coombs, electrician; J. J. Murray, business manager. Don Hix is handling the publicity for the company. C. A. (Doc) Willat, who organized the company, is president and general manager. The product for the coming year will be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

In speaking of his first production Mr. Willat says:

"The rural drama has been produced both in pictures and on the stage so many times and under so many guises that it has become stereotyped and fails to succeed because all but a very few of the versions have missed the keynote in not giving a true insight into the life of this great class of the American people."

"The locale of Mr. Westcott's book is in the rural districts of New England and upper New York State where the foundation of the American Republic was laid and whose people are noted for their insistence that they typify the true Yankee. As an Americanization factor this picture will be found to be a typical exposition of American home life, customs and ideals and above all, will teach a lesson. To my mind, the picture which does not teach a lesson, which does not give an audience an incentive for self-improvement in some manner or other, has lost its reason for existence."

"Red Lane" Out July 12 Stars Frank Mayo in Story of Outdoor Atmosphere and Adventures

WHAT is described to be a picture of unusual outdoor atmosphere and stirring adventure has been made by Universal starring Frank Mayo in "The Red Lane," from the novel of that name by Holman Day, who is reputed to know the life of the North Woods better than any other American writer, having been born a few miles from the international border line of United States and Canada. All of Day's books are tales of the Maine and Canadian border, dealing with adventure and romance. "Fine Tree Ballads," "The Mayor of the Woods," and "Old King Spruce," are a few of his celebrated stories.

Not since "The Brute Breaker" and "Lasea" has Frank Mayo appeared in a role which so well fits him as that of the border customs officer in "The Red Lane," says Universal. It is a strong, virile, manly part that not only permits him to display his youth and vigor, but do a bit of romancing in a thorough fashion.

Lillian Rich, who plays opposite Frank Mayo in "The Red Lane," is comparatively new to the screen. She was last seen in "The Day She Paid," with Francis Billington. It was her clever work in that production which attracted the attention of Lynn Reynolds, the Universal director, so that when he was commissioned to produce "The Red Lane" with Frank Mayo, he immediately thought of Miss Rich as the one for the chief feminine role.

The supporting cast also includes James Mason, Paul Weigel, Clark Formes and Jean Herscholt. The picture will be released July 12.

Tom Terriss, director of "Trumpet Island," a coming Vitagraph expected to find favor with audiences

Terriss Completes His Vitagraph Special

Tom Terriss returned recently from California, following the completion of his first special production for Vitagraph. This is an adaptation from Gouverneur Morris's "Trumpet Island." The picture will be released in September. Mr. Terriss is now engaged with the production of "Dead Men Tell No Tales" by E. V. Hornung.

Ralph Connor Prints to Go to Rothacker

Another big producer has come into the Rothacker fold. This latest Rothacker client is the Ralph Connor Productions. Contracts have been executed between Ernest Shipman, producing manager of the company, and Watterson R. Rothacker, whereby prints of Ralph Connor pictures will be made in Rothacker Laboratories.

The following are a few of the twelve pictures which will benefit by Rothacker prints: "The Sky Pilot," "The Foreigner," "The Man from Glengarry," "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," "The Prospector," "Black Rock" and "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail."

Famous Players Buys Four Stories

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces the recent purchase for Paramount filming of four popular stories. Two of these, "The Kentuckians," by the late John Fox, Jr., and "The Quarry," by John Moroso, are novels, while the other two, "The Snob," by William J. Neidig, and "The Laurels and the Lady," by Leonard Merrick, are short stories. All probably will be placed in production during the coming Autumn.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

Our policy of bigger & better pictures, inaugurated so successfully in 1919-1920, will be continued & expanded for 1920-1921. Approximately 50 big productions will be produced. In wealth of story, direction, acting and mounting as well as in variety & general excellence, they will be the greatest ever offered the exhibitor and public.

The genius and energy of our producing forces in our eastern and western studios, is sparing neither time nor money to make these tremendous features the last word in box-office value & screen art.

In addition to six big specials, to be made by each of our world renowned stars, there will be a series of super productions with all star casts.

The good will & success we have earned by our past relations with the exhibitor, will be continued and cemented. Our pictures will be rented upon a flat rental basis or if it is preferred, upon the percentage plan.

We have no axes to grind! Our policy is a policy of "live & let live" with pictures at a price the exhibitor can afford to pay!!

Merit Seal Awarded "Suds" at Strand

Shared in by representatives of literature, the drama and the screen, the M. P. H. Merit Seal of the Motion-Picture Theatrical Association of the World made its official debut at the Strand last night. Dr. Frank Crane, as member of its Board of Merit, outlined the object of the Association and introduced Frank Bacon, of "Lightnin'" fame, who, as vice-president of the M. P. T. League for Better Pictures, presented the M. P. T. Merit Seal to Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, as a unanimous award of the Board of Merit to her daughter's latest production, "Suds," now having its premiere at the Strand.

Speaking of the need of co-operation between public, exhibitors, producers and playwrights, responsive to that generally recognized urgent demand for pictures—truly artistic and wholesome, Dr. Crane said that the object of the association was not to sit as a board of censorship, but rather as a "board of encouragement" of "truly artistic and sincere" entertainment.

Appointments Announced by F. P.-Lasky

The following appointments in the department of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, were announced this week by General Manager Al Lichman:

Harris P. Wolfberg is appointed district-manager of District No. 5, with headquarters at Chicago. Fred C. Cresswell will act as special representative at large. Mr. Wolfberg also assumes temporarily the duties of branch manager at Chicago.

Norma Talmadge Revival Distributed

The National Film Corporation announces that the prints of "Captivating Mary Carstairs," the five-reel Norma Talmadge revival, from the book of the same name by Henry Sydney Harrison, are now being distributed. Posters, press-sheets, lobby displays and accessories, all of which were made up specially for this re-issue are now available and are being sent to the purchasers of territory on this production.

Vitagraph Editor Compliments Aide

An appreciation of the quality of continuing work that Rudolph de Cordova has done in association with George Randolph Chester at Vitagraph, is contained in a letter from Mr. Chester, regretting that production was so far ahead as to necessitate a wait until Fall before further work could be done together on special features.

Mr. de Cordova was associated with Mr. Chester in work at Vitagraph for upwards of a year. Mr. de Cordova has also won a name for original photoplay writing in association with Alicia Ramsey.

Educational to Release Serial

Contracts to Distribute and to Exploit "The Mystery Mind"

THE Educational Films Corporation announces that a contract was signed this week by the provisions of which Educational takes over for distribution "The Mystery Mind," the latest Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Gray creation, produced by Supreme Pictures, Inc. The production itself has just been completed after more than eight months of continuous work, and the negatives have been turned over to Educational for printing. The latter company will handle the entire exploitation and distribution of the serial in the United States, and an advance campaign is now being planned. Tentative arrangements provide for the release to start early in September through the branches of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., in the twenty-four principal distributing centers.

The Educational Films Corporation has issued the following statement in connection with the newly acquired chapter-picture: "The Mystery Mind" has already established through the film world the sales slogan, "The Aristocrat of Serials." Into it Messrs. Reeve and Gray have put the benefit of their years of experience in writing, in production and especially in serial specialization.

"As the title indicates the background of the story is hypnotism, and to carry out such a theme J. Robert Pauline, unquestionably the greatest hypnotist of today, was selected as the star. He is said to show screen ability of the highest order, adding to the pulling power of his name an interpretative quality that is rare among such celebrities. Paul Panzer, Violet McMillan and Peggy Shannon have other principal roles while the supporting cast includes fully twenty well known players.

"The entire production was made under the direct personal supervision of Messrs. Gray and Reeve, with Fred W. Sittenham directing. A greater portion of the work was done at the Supreme studios at Flushing, though many of the scenes were made in Florida.

"Arthur B. Reeve is known to literature and screen alike wherever mystery and detective stories are enjoyed. His 'Craig Kennedy' is one of the most famous of fiction creations, and the sale of his books has run into the millions. Mr. Reeve is one of the original serial writers, his first creation for the screen having been 'The Exploits of Elaine,' which made a fortune for producers and exhibitors. This was followed by 'New Exploits of Elaine' and the 'Romance of Elaine,' and 'The House of Hate' with Pearl White, 'The Hidden Trail' with Doris Kenyon and Sheldon Lewis and 'The Tiger's Trail' with Ruth Roland.

Arthur B. Reeve John W. Gray
Creators of service which marks Educational's debut in that field

"In addition to preparing the story for the serial Mr. Reeve will write a novelization of 'The Mystery Mind' which will appear in a popular edition and in serial form either in a selected list of daily papers or in a magazine of national circulation.

"John W. Gray has been a foremost figure in motion-pictures since he took the post of advertising manager with Universal several years ago. He planned the first syndicate serial ever released 'Lucille Love' and later he handled such successful chaptered stories as 'The Tree of Hearts,' 'The Black Box,' 'Runaway June' and 'The Fatal Ring.' Mr. Gray went then with Mutual at the time of the combination of Reliance and Majestic, and there he arranged the sales plan for the first of D. W. Griffith's Mutual productions. He left there to join Vitagraph, and when International was formed his services were enlisted as head of exploitation. He next became associated with Pathé as head of the scenario and editing department, supervising production, working on many serials and particularly working on the screen.

"It was during this association that Mr. and Mrs. Reeve determined to form their own organization. Whether they have written and produced 'The Mystery Mind' and 'The Grim Game' for Hollywood, 'The $1,000,000 Reward' with William Walker, and 'The Great Case' with Herbert Raydon.

"Mr. Reeve and myself feel that we have rounded out our accomplishment in arranging for Educational Films Corporation to handle 'The Mystery Mind,' and Mr. Gray 'We feel we that we have created the best chaptered mystery story in our career, and one that is also rather unique. We believe that we have a serial that will make the largest amount of money on record for exhibitors.

"It was because we have had this conviction that we have had the most earnest thought to its handling. We have known the Educational organization for a long time and we have been impressed with its recent development. We are all the more pleased that when the proposition was first brought to the attention of Educational officials, by mutual friends they advised point blank to have anything to do with a serial. It was only after we were able to show them the quality of the offering that they consented to become our associates. I believe that is the very best proof of the worth of 'The Mystery Mind'."

First of "Nick Carter" Series Is Finished

"THE $100,000 KID," the first of the "Nick Carter" stories to be filmed, was completed Saturday, June 19th, under the supervision of Robert B. Broadwell, president and director general of Broadwell Productions, Inc. Major Robert Ross directed the picture, which stars Thomas Carrigan, supported by Mae Gerson and Colin Clive, and other well known actors. John Gray has been appointed scenario editor and New York representative with office at 1415 Brokaw Building, 1437 Broadway.

"The Vanishing Dagger" Proved a Success

Universal's latest serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," with Edith Pohl as princess, a big success. Bob Abraham, manager of the Frolic Theatre, San Francisco, ran "The Vanishing Dagger" on one of the hottest days in June, and did the biggest business he ever did with the exception of Harry Carey in "Marked Men," at Universal. The Frolic is a first run house.

Levey Names First Picture Series

"LUTH PRODUCTIONS" is the name of the first series of pictures to be released by the Harry Levey Corporation, the new film producing company organized by Harry Levey, for the making of educational and industrial motion pictures. The name "Luth Productions" is an adaptation of the slogan of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

James Morrison Cast with Anita Stewart

James A. Morrison has completed the leading role in the Company's production, "The Morrison" and it is his way to the coast to play opposite Anita Stewart in her next picture. This is the first time James and Anita have played together since their Vitagraph days.

New Story Bought for Douglas MacLean

Charles Belmont Davis' stirring story, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince for adaptation to the screen with Douglas MacLean in the lead role,

F. P.-Lasky Units Speed-Up

BACK at the Lasky studio after a vacation of several weeks.

Wallace Read began work under the direction of James Cruze last Monday upon "The Charming School," his new Paramount starring vehicle, which is adapted by Tom Geraghty from the story by Alice Dine Miller. This appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and was later published as a novel. A distinctive feature of this picture is that Mr. Read will be supported by fifty beautiful girls, all under twenty, besides the regular supporting cast, which includes Lila Lee as leading woman, Adele Farrington, Beulah Haines, Edwin Stevens, Lincoln Stedman and other favorites.

George McFarland and a large cast of players left last Saturday for Truckee, California, where they will film scenes for Mr. McFarland's new production for Paramount, Opre Read's grand old novel, "The Luckless," the scenario for which was written by Frank Condon. The party was comprised of the director and his staff and the principals of the cast, including Maude Glynne Scott, Ruth Runk, Monte Blue, Charles Ogle, Lums J. Mudge, Zella Cawington, Walter Hall, J. M. Dumont, Clarence Burton, Guy Oliver, Robert Brower, Jack Herbert, Jack Hall, William Scott, Arthur Fribold, Jack Byron, Frank Weatherwax, Charles Wildash and "Uncle George" Curry. The company will be gone about three weeks, after which they will return to the Lasky studio to film interior scenes.

Roscoe Arbuckle is making splendid progress on his latest starring vehicle for Paramount, a new screen adaptation of James Forbes' play, "The Traveling Salesman," in which Frank Mc Intyre formerly starred on both stage and screen. Walter Woods wrote the scenario and Joseph Henderson is directing. The company, including Betty Ross Clark, the leading woman, and other members of the cast, left this week for Jamestown, Tuolumne County, in Northern California, where small town exterior scenes will be filmed.

Tom Forman, director, and Ethel Clayton, star in a new Paramount picture temporarily titled "Romantic Ozma," from the story by Catharine Stockley, scenario by Mary H. O'Connor, are working over time so that all scenes in which the star appears may be filmed this week, as Miss Clayton intends to depart next week for Europe. After her tour, Miss Clayton will begin work in the London studios of Famous Players Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

William DeMille is scheduled to start about July 7 at the Lasky studio on his new special production for Paramount, which will be an adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's new novel, "His Friend and His Wife." Genevieve Daniels is writing the scenario, and Mr. DeMille is busily engaged in making preparations for the new picture and in selecting his cast, which will be all-star. The members of the cast will be announced later.

Bryant Washburn, under the direction of Major Maurice Campbell, is being filmed in some of the biggest scenes of the new Paramount picture in which he is featured and which is temporarily titled, "Wanted: A Blemish." Douglas Bronston wrote the scenario from a short story by J. E. Henderson and Henry J. Buxton. Several bulls were used in some of the recent exterior scenes and the star and director are said to have done enough running around and dodging to have qualified them as toughs. "It is easy enough to throw the bull," remarked the director, "but when it comes to directing the bull it's a different matter."

Fifth Blackton Picture Released July 18th

With the release on July 18th of "Man and His Woman," a drama produced from an original scenario by Shannon Fife, Pathe will present the fifth J. Stuart Blackton produced picture of the year. The uniform quality of these pictures and the recent big success of "Passers By" is claimed by Pathe to have established a particularly high regard for the Blackton offerings; and the fine favor in which they are held is clearly evidenced by the exceptionally big business and early bookings of "Man and His Woman."

The first of the Blackton pictures released in 1920 was "My Husband's Other Wife." This was followed, in turn by "Respectable By Proxy," "The Blood Barrier," "Passers By," and in the middle of July, "Man and His Woman" is to be presented. This list of features contains the names of Pathe offerings, the success of which has earned for them a place among the most prominent pictures of the season.

Author and Director in Conference

Samuel Merwin, author of "The Passionate Pilgrim," the second of the Robert G. Vignola productions, was an interested visitor at International studio last week where he saw his story transferred to the motion-picture screen under the direction of Robert G. Vignola.

This is the first time that these two celebrities have ever met, and the meeting was in the nature of a gala occasion at the studio where the entire staff turned out in honor of the visitor. After Mr. Merwin was shown about the studio and had had explained to him the mechanics of a modern motion-picture making plant, he went into a conference with Mr. Vignola on "The Passionate Pilgrim." The conference lasted several hours and when it was over both director and author expressed themselves as having benefited highly thereby.

Critics Praise "Passers-By"

FUELLING the large predictions made for it by Pathe, J. Stuart Blackton's production, "Passers By," was warmly received during its week's run at the Capitol theatre, New York, where it was effectively presented by Samuel I. Rothaphel. Critics at the Metropolitan dailies were liberal in praise of the production, in which Herbert Rawlinson has the leading role. The work of W. L. Ferguson, Tom Lewis, and Dick Lee was also highly commended by the critics.

The New York Commercial was particularly pleased with the Blackton production, commenting as follows: "Passers By, a screen version of C. Haddon Chambers' famous stage success, which played to capacity audiences on Broadway for more than a year, is the principal feature of an ambitious program of motion picture novelties presented by S. L. Rothaphel at the Capitol theatre this week. 'Passers By' is a work based upon the force and strength of 'lines' rather than of situations and, in consequence, presented unusual problems to the producer, who has achieved a photo play of naturalness and human interest."

The Sun and Herald were even more emphatic in its belief that "Passers By" struck public fancy, stating:

"At the Capitol a charming production by J. Stuart Blackton of C. Haddon Chambers' play, 'Passers By,' is presented, and proves more attractive than when numerous persons saw the original with Richard Bennett on Broadway and resolved solemnly to have their children lead better lives. This play of the obligations of parents toward their offspring, though essentially a study of the mind rather than a presentation of action, is so movingly and delicately presented that it holds the attention even when the great outdoors is calling."

The Post, extremely conservative in its judgment of films, sounded the praise of the picture, as follows: "In many ways J. Stuart Blackton, who produced 'Passers By,' has given us a screen version that is noteworthy. Without the artificial means of cut-in and flash-back he has retained throughout the human interest of the play. Humanly speaking, directors make editions, at least always command more sympathy than they deserve. They are always good theatrical material. However, the 'passers-by' proper enter only superficially into theme and story. Yet, on the whole, the passers-by serve more for comedy and contrast than as integrals in the main story. Resisting the temptation of feature film flourish and person Mr. Blackton has kept upmost the values of human appeal in the play as they concern his characters."

"In general, then, the play is effective, it holds with genuine suspense. But in particular one may find a tendency to slight the proper emphasis, due no doubt to a generous cutting of the film from its original footage. Lady Hurley, given more motivation, would be less the cruel agent of injustice to the girl and more the snob, acting according to her lights. The state of affairs between the governess and her upper-stratum lover is too slightly sketched, and the unsuspecting can only guess. Naturally, having been trained by the movies, they guess the worst, but some day the worst will be the wrong guess and the movies will have only their habitual lack of definiteness to blame for that."

"Passers By" is excellently cast. And mark this, there is no star to monopolize centre stage and ruin an otherwise good picture. Herbert Rawlinson is easy and unassuming. Miss Leila Valentine as the governess is charming, comely and a capable actress. More of her kind on the screen would be enthusiastically welcomed. The acting of the character parts by William J. Ferguson, Tom Lewis, Dick Lee and Little Charles Stuart Blackton is a child actor of promise."

Bert Cann Renews His Ince Contract

Bert Cann, the Thomas H. Ince cameraman whose photography has placed him in the top ranks professionally, has become a permanent part of the Thomas H. Ince organization. A long-term contract has just been signed, by which Mr. Cann continues as chief cameraman for Douglas MacLean's series of pictures.

"The Third Eye" Duplicated in Real Life

Another illustration of how the screen blazes the trail in scientific methods of crime detection, has been found in the announcements early this week to the effect that Assistant District Attorney Duoling and his staff have decided to employ the Iris Test as their last hope of solving the Elwell murder mystery.

This test consists of photographing the iris or retina of the dead man, in the belief that it retains the last image which those eyes saw before their possessor died. This news is of particular interest since the Iris Test has already been put on the screen by H. H. Van Loan. This gifted writer used this method of solving a fiction mystery in "The Third Eye," the Pathe serial, featuring Warner Oland and Eileen Percy, which is now being distributed by that company.

Goldwyn Says It Has Real Service Book

That "forward-looking" distributors are coming to realize the wisdom of preparing press books of real service to exhibitors, instead of a camouflaged advertising boosts for the picture, is said to be evidenced in the service book issued by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation on Edgar Rice Burroughs' "The Return of Tarzan," produced by Numa Pictures Corporation and released by Goldwyn. This book calls for special attention, because it is a concrete answer to the objections exhibitors have leveled at the advertising and exploitation aids supplied them in the past.

There are sixteen pages in all, starting with a brief description of the high spots of the picture, and telling how the production was handled during its run at the Broadway theatre, New York.

"Jucklins" Is George Melford Production

Speaking of his novel, "The Jucklins" Opie Read, the author, once said: "I confess to a fondness for those homely, humorous and peculiar folk. They are real but they are passing away, and to set them forth with truth is almost a solemn duty." These words were spoken a good many years ago and so their truth is even more pointed today than then.

Thus, by perpetuating them on the screen as George Melford now plans to do, for Paramount release, he will assist in preserving these characters for posterity.

Forrest Stanley Chosen for Leading Roles

After a search involving nearly a score of candidates, Cecil B. DeMille has chosen Forrest Stanley as the leading man of future Cecil B. DeMille special productions for Paramount. Stanley, who succeeds Thomas Meighan and Elliott Dexter, signed a five-year contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, following his negotiations with the director-general of that organization.

Authors Serving the Screen

Prominent Writers Give Their Best Works for Picturization

THE flooding tide of screen development is sweeping the great authors of the country into the motion picture field. Many of them are writing original scenarios for the "movies," while others are merely aiding in adapting their literary productions to the films. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has been one of the largest agencies in bringing about the present "Screen-tide" in the affairs of our literary men. It has released the works of more than a dozen authors, freeing them from the covers of the books on library shelves and placing them out in the open on the silversheet.

Among the prominent authors of this country and England picturizations of whose novels and plays have been released to the exhibitor by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, the following may be mentioned:

Zane Grey, writer of western stories with a combined book circulation running into millions of copies. Hodkinson has already released two Benjamin B. Hampton picturizations of his novels, "Desert Gold" and "Riders of the Dawn," the latter based on the novel, "The Desert of Wheat." Mr. Hampton has just completed a new Zane Grey story for Hodkinson release, "The U. P. Trail."

Augustus Thomas, dean of American playwrights, whose play, "The Harvest Moon," was pictured by Theodore C. Dietrich and Arthur F. Beck, with Doris Kynyon in the stellar role. "As a Man Thinks," done by Gibraltar Pictures with Leah Baird starred, and "The Capitol," done by Arthur F. Beck, with Miss Baird in the chief role, were Hodkinson releases, as was Mr. Thomas' story written expressly for the screen, "The Volcano," produced by Harry Raver with Leah Baird in the lead.

Louis Joseph Vance whose novels, "The Bandbox," with Doris Kynyon, and "Cynthia-of-the-Minute," with Leah Baird, were produced by Gibraltar Pictures, and whose "Lone Wolf's Daughter," with Louise Glaum in the stellar role, has been produced by J. Parker Read, Jr.

Holman Day, whose "King Spruce" starring Mitchell Lewis, has just been completed by the Dial Film Company.

Winston Churchill, whose novels reflect American life as it really is. His "The Dwelling Place of Light," has just been filmed by Benjamin B. Hampton and will soon be released by the Hodkinson organization.

Emerson Hough, writer of western romances "The Sagebrusher," produced by the Great Authors' Pictures with Benjamin B. Hampton in charge, was selected for initial screen production and was a financial and artistic success.

Frank N. Westcott, brother of Edward Noyes Westcott, whose

"David Harum" enjoyed wide popularity. Irvin V. Willat makes his first independent production in the picturization of his highly successful novel "Dahomy Child."

Galen Berriss, one of the country's foremost writers and humorists. Gibraltar Pictures is producing his novel, "The Heart Line," to the screen for Hodkinson release, with Leah Baird in a leading role.

Stewart Edward White, writer of western and African novels and short stories, "The Westerners," one of his earlier novel was adapted by Benjamin B. Hampton for screen adaptation in his Great Authors' Pictures series.

So Louis French, whose novel, "The Silent Barrier," has just been filmed by Gibraltar Pictures, with Sheldon Lewis in the lead.

William Maynard, another English novelist whose story, "One Week End" furnished the plot for "No. 99," produced by Robert Branton, and distributed by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Every Release on Broadway Educational's Releases Seen in Big Houses; Featured in Theatre Display

EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORPORATION claims that it has set a new record in that every release of the company to date has been given a showmatinee at one of the leading Broadway motion picture houses. It also calls attention to the fact that practically every picture has been featured in lobby displays, electric light and newspaper advertising.

"We have not been holding back one of our pictures for trade paper review," says a statement from Educational, "because all of them to date have been shown at one of the Broadway theatres, and exhibitors have had the benefits of the reviews where the critics have been more or less unconsciously swayed by the effect of the pictures on the audiences. And since the exhibitor is principally concerned with the audience appeal of the pictures, we believe that such criticisms are worth far more to them in judging their worth."

The company's "A Fresh Start," the first of the "Merrimack" comedies, is given a prominent position on the bill at the Strand. "A Fresh Start" will be shown at the Strand, and has been the subject of the lobby display. The second of the "Merrimack" comedies, "The Merry Men," is scheduled to come out next week. After the Strand showing the picture will be exhibited over the whole Lowy metropolitan circuit.

"The Silent Barrier" is also being shown at the Strand, and the full bill includes one of these, "Dreams Come True." These pictures are also being shown over the Lowy circuit.

At the Strand, Brooklyn, "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes," one of the new comedies that we have released, occupies a prominent position on the bill this week. This picture was given its premiere showing on Broadway, at the Criterion. The other special, "Modern Comedies," was shown at the New York Strand where it attracted much attention.

"The Robert C. Bruce Series," are being shown at the Radio and Strand, and already Dr. Brundage will show the release of which all wish these pictures. Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, of the Educational Strand, is also using these pictures and giving them special matinee showing, often employing a solo act in connection with their showing.

"Four Times Told," the first of the "Chester Comedies," was shown at the Radio and Strand and Dr. Brundage has booked others of this series. The second, "An Ounce of Honey," will be given an early showing in advance of its regular release.

Caprice Signs with Pathe

To Make Debut in Serial, But Will Also Be Starred in Feature Films

THE constantly growing list of Pathe stars has been augmented by the addition of Imit Caprice, who has just been signed to a long term contract by Paul Brunet, vice president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Miss Caprice has been starred in several big productions distributed by Pathe, including "Oh Boy!" and "A Damsel in Distress."

Under the terms of her new contract Miss Caprice will make her debut in the serial field, in addition to appearing in features of international flavor, one of which will be filmed abroad. Plans have been formulated whereby the screen luminary will be starred with Mr. Seitz in at least one serial, to be produced following the completion of work on "Rogues and Romance," which will be photographed in Spain.

In the overseas production, Miss Caprice is also to be co-starred with the famous producer and star in Pathe serials, who will make his debut in features with "Rogues and Romance." The play incidentally is adapted from a stage story written by Mr. Seitz himself.

The Pathe statement has the following to say about its newly acquired star:

"Young and exceptionally pretty, Miss Caprice is the type of motion picture star who holds the greatest appeal for all classes of audiences. In addition to her beauty, Miss Caprice is one of the most capable actresses on the screen. Co-starring with George B. Seitz in "Rogues and Romance," she will have one of the greatest opportunities offered her in her screen career."

Miss Caprice sails for Spain on July 3rd, in company with the Seitz entourage. She began work for Pathe several weeks ago, when Mr. Seitz inaugurated production on the interiors of "Rogues and Romance" in the New York studio.

To Feature "Pirate Gold"

Pathe's Serial Release Will Be Played Up on Bills of Big Houses

"PIRATE GOLD," the serial co-starring George B. Seitz and Marguerite Courtot, which Pathe has placed on the specially selected program for the summer, is to be accorded feature honors on the programs of many big theatres that have booked it for next runs.

These exhibitors declare the serial will be advertised extensively with the names of the stars featured, because of the popularity gained by Mr. Seitz and Miss Courtot in "Bent and Gagged," which is said by Pathe to have played more first class theatres than any serial up to the time of its release.

These houses demonstrated their confidence in Seitz both as a director and star by signing up "Pirate Gold" as the first opportunity.

The serial is in ten episodes. It was produced in that length in accordance with Mr. Seitz's policy of giving his stars the number of reels he thinks best suited to develop his property. Therefore he has developed "Pirate Gold" in ten instead of the customary three episodes.

The serial is an original by Frank Lee, Seitz' author of "Bent and Gagged" and other Pathe serials.

Ray's Picture Progressing

Kane Predicts That Stage Success of Cohan's Play Will Be Duplicated

REPORTS from the Charles Ray studios in Hollywood say Arthur S. Kane, that the production of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" is proceeding in a manner not guaranteeing a repetition of the success of the unparalleled success which the Cohan classic enjoyed on the stage. The picture will be presented by Arthur S. Kane for First National release. The following statement has been issued by the Kane Pictures Corporation:

"Charles Ray promises to score another home-run with this presentation, but he will not be alone in his success. He has surrounded himself with an excellent cast. Donald MacDonald is taking the part of Tom Bennet, the breezy young man who falls heir (or thinks he does at the beginning of the story) to his uncle's fortune and employs his old pal, 'Kid' Burns, as secretary at $10,000 a year. Harry Myers has the role of Daniel Cronin. William Cortright appears as Andy Gray and Eugene Besserer is cast for Mrs. Dean.

"Ray himself appears as 'Kid' Burns, the thoroughly likable young pugilist of Bowery extraction, who shares Bennet's good fortune and loses his heart to Mary Eades of 'Forty-five Minutes from Broadway'—remember Burns as a quick-witted, open handed youth, bubbling over with clean, wholesome humor, and with a heart big enough to include the whole of mankind. The 'kids' essential charm lies in his intensely human qualities, and it is their possession which fit the character to Ray's talents so perfectly. Burns is a source of much bubbling fun but there are pathetic moments, too, and this actor may be counted upon to make the most of all these situations. It will be recalled that George M. Cohan expressed gratification when he learned that Ray was to be the interpreter of the hero of 'Forty-five Minutes from Broadway,' for he considers him the ideal man to give the Cohan-esque touches in the picturization.

"The present production is being carried on in the new glass-enclosed studios, and the actor is quoted as saying that the environment formed by its settings affords real inspiration."

Allan Holubar Is Signed Up

Joseph Schenck to Produce a Big Special, Starring Dorothy Phillips

REPRESENTATIVE of the aim of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., to enable directors and producers to bring forth screen entertainment of the greatest possible merit, negotiations between Joseph M. Schenck and Associated First National Pictures, Inc., terminated this week in the signing of a contract whereby Allan Holubar will direct the most pretentious and ambitious picture of his career. Joseph M. Schenck, as the producer of this feature, announces that the title will be "Man, Woman and Marriage" and will star Dorothy Phillips.

Details coincident with the production of this feature are said to be unusually novel from an exhibitor standpoint. "Man, Woman and Marriage" will mark one of the few pictures arranged for under contract and qualifying which no time or money limit has been set. It has been unanimously agreed between Messrs. Schenck and Holubar and First National executives that regardless of the time needed for its making, "Man, Woman and Marriage" shall bear the stamp of Mr. Holubar's maximum in direction.

Examination of the script from which the production will take its theme shows that the producer and director have selected the type of picture most successful from a box-office standpoint and have determined to create an attraction that will elaborate on the previous production featuring domestic situations, especially aiming to surround the central theme with events of sufficient importance to make the happenings in "Man, Woman and Marriage" hold a vital interest for others besides the central figures of the story.

The closing of the contract is also significant for the fact that it marks an extension of the scope of Joseph M. Schenck's activities as an independent producer. And Mr. Schenck has made it clear that he is determined to secure the most finished and artistic box-office picture within the power of money, directorial genius and time. Those who have been privileged to know full details of "Man, Woman and Marriage" confidently declare that it will be one of the strongest box-office attractions of next year.

New Company Engages Edward Griffith

With the engagement of Edward Griffith of the Vitagraph staff, to direct their initial production, James N. Naulty and Gardner Hunting, formerly of the eastern Studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, made public the formation of "Cayuga Pictures, Inc."

The announcement of the formation of the new company is a surprise in film circles, as well as significant of big things to come in the way of productions of box office value, because of the wide reputation of the men in lack of it. Both Mr. Hunting and Mr. Naulty have long been identified with the best, most dignified and artistic in picture production, and their long joint engagement at the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation attests their ability to pilot an independent concern to success.

A Tip To State Right Men with Brains

By a Prominent State Right Man

(With Apologies to K. O. B.)

I HAVE often wondered WHY FILM men
ESPECIALLY State Right
BUYERS don't do like
OTHER MERCHANTS in OTHER LINES
WHO make IT THEIR business to SEE THE GOODS they buy
BEFORE they pay for them.
SOME STATE RIGHT men will SWALLOW hook, line and SINKER from some slick
BULL CON film salesman
WHO HAS nothing to sell
BUT CONVERSATION and a
HOAKUM picture while right
UNDER THEIR very noses are STATE RIGHT opportunities
ON BIG PICTURES that are REAL winners and that State
RIGHT men can see before they PAY OVER their cold kale.
THE BIGGEST of such pictures
ON THE market today is
"KEEP TO THE RIGHT," with EDITH TALIAFERRO.
I SAW twelve state right

PICTURES LAST week that WERE TOUTED to death
AS S. R. O. money getters
AND I wouldn't give you a
PLUGGED DIME for them all.
I PLAYED my lucky thirteen HUNCH AND went to see
"KEEP TO THE RIGHT"
WHICH WAS the thirteenth
PICTURE AND sure as fate
THE HUNCH worked and I picked
A WINNER.
I NEVER saw such posters nor

Robertson-Cole's Fall Announcement

WITH twelve big pictures already announced for fall release, A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, states that the new policy embraces a minimum of thirty-six big specials only for the season 1920-21, each picture to be released to bear the brand "Super-Special." The new pictures call for an investment of millions of dollars by the firm. The stars who have contracted to make Robertson-Cole pictures will appear in only four pictures a year, so that they can devote all necessary time to making the productions as perfect as art and modern appliances will permit.

The twelve productions listed for early release carry with them the names of Otis Skinner, Pauline Frederick, L. J. Gasnier, Mae Marsh, John G. Adolphi, William Christy Cabanne, Lew Cody, Sessue Hayakawa, Dustin Farnum, Al E. Christie, Wedgwood Nowell in an Arsene Lupin story, a special Hawthorn production, and a new Martin Johnson exploration picture.

Robertson-Cole plans to announce a feminine star, said to be one of the biggest box office magnets, who will start productions work as soon as her present contracts expire. This star is said to be at the peak of her profession and at the height of her very successful career. She will make the twelfth production.

One of the large items of the big investment will be the "Kismet" production which is now under way. Otis Skinner, one of the foremost actors on the legitimate stage today, made his greatest success in this play of Edward Knoblauch. The screen version is being directed by L. J. Gasnier who says: "There has never come to my attention a stage play more adaptable for motion picture purposes." With Mr. Skinner playing his original role of Hajj, the success of the picture is apparently assured.

Pauline Frederick is so strongly established as a dramatic actress of great worth in the world of motion picture art that the mere announcement that Miss Frederick will be seen in Robertson-Cole productions in the future is sufficient to assure exhibitors and the public that Robertson-Cole is in the business with a sincere desire to give them the very best productions. Every arrangement is being made to give her ideal surroundings, support and directorial skill so that she may devote herself wholeheartedly to the dramatic art of which she is mistress, says Robertson-Cole.

The name of Mae Marsh is coupled with that of John G. Adolphi as the director of her first picture. Exhibitors know the large following of the whimsical Miss Marsh and with Adolphi as her director, Miss great dramatic possibilities. There is good reason for believing, they say, that this picture will be the most phenomenal picture sensation of the year.

Love of the great out-doors is inherently implanted in every man, woman and child even though the degree may vary, and both sexes love big strong characterizations in out door settings. Powerful and clean is "Big Happiness," the first super special selected for Dustin Farnum, a man among men. It is a two listed story and Farnum is just that kind of an actor. Mr. Farnum believes that "Big Happiness" will mark his greatest histrionic triumph. Such an expression may sound trite but, nevertheless, can be true.

The special Hawthorn production listed will be "The Beach of Dreams." This is a screen version of the sensational novel written by H. De Vere Stacpoole, listed among the best sellers, and is said to be ideally suited for motion picture production. With society and a desert island as backgrounds, this picture gives great opportunity for directorial skill and for lavish scenic interpretation. The cast is equally important, including as it does, Edith leased as a super-special, will absolutely cinch his position. It is real entertainment and built within a setting that will be a new pace-maker for lavishness. Betty Blythe, Barney Sherry and Cleo Ridgely support Mr. Cody in this production.

As a dramatic star, Sessue Hayakawa shows rare finesse. He is a master of the art of expression and gesture, and again he will prove these facts in his latest production, "The First Born," which will be the first Hayakawa picture under his new contract calling for four pictures a year.

A limited number of the Maurice Le Blanc "Arsene Lupin" stories are to be pictured and the first one, "813" is nearing completion. Wedgwood Nowell is to be featured in these productions.

Last but not least in the twelve productions is the latest exploration picture taken by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson. This will be "Wild Men of Malekula." Malekula is the island on which the Johnsons were captured, it is stated, two years ago by the cannibal Chief Nagapate. They have since dared Nagapate again, and their adventures among these wild people will be given to the world via the camera and the screen.

The Fall Announcement in Condensed Form

AN investment of millions of dollars for new pictures. One brand only—"Super-Special." A minimum of thirty-six pictures for 1918-21.

First twelve productions named: Otis Skinner in "Kismet," Pauline Frederick in powerful stage success, Mae Marsh, directed by John G. Adolphi; "So Long Letty," directed by Al E. Christie; Dustin Farnum, in "Big Happiness," a Hawthorn production, "The Beach of Dreams," Lew Cody, in "The Mischief Man," Sessue Hayakawa, in "The First Born," a super-production written and directed by William Christy Cabanne; "813," an Arsene Lupin story, featuring Wedgwood Nowell; "Wild Men of Malekula," photographed by Martin Johnson.

A woman star, "one of the biggest box-office magnets," enters into a Robertson-Cole contract in the early fall. No Robertson-Cole star will make more than four pictures a year.

Marsh's picture will reach the peak of success. Mr. Adolphi is ideally fitted to direct Miss Marsh owing to his penchant for the human side of stories and getting the utmost comedy value out of them. This was proved conclusively by Mr. Adolphi's direction of the Georges Carpentier production, "The Wonder Man."

Those who saw Oliver Morosco's musical comedy success, "So Long Letty," and that number ran close to a million during the first three years of its tours of the continent—will remember that much of its success was due to the fact that "So Long Letty" was a musical comedy with a real plot—a story teeming with really funny situations. Robertson-Cole has secured Al E. Christie to direct "So Long Letty" for the screen.

A production directed by William Christy Cabanne will be also included in the first twelve pictures released. Mr. Cabanne is so far to assume that his production will fully qualify to the Robertson-Cole standard. Mr. Cabanne's first picture will be a screen version of a story that he has been working on for twelve months. It is his own story and when he briefly outlined it for the Robertson-Cole executives they were one and all impressed with its story, Captain Templar Powell, Josef Swickard, Cesare Gravine and George Fisher.

The success of Lew Cody in "The Beloved Cheater" and "The Butterfly Man" has permanently raised this young man to stardom. "The Mischief Man," which is to be re-

"Li Ting Tang" Offers Fine Possibilities

Exploitation plans which have been formulated by Robertson-Cole for the purpose of advertising "Li Ting Tang," Sessue Hayakawa's newest starring screen vehicle, which will soon be released, include a special appeal to college students, as a part of the extensive campaign.

In "Li Ting Tang," Hayakawa has the role of a Chinese prince, who has been educated at a leading American university, is accepted by some of the most prominent of the male students of the school as an equal and friend. As graduation approaches a beautiful American girl shows a decided preference for the Oriental.

This instantly brings about a change in his own life and that of the men around him. Would this happen in a real university, if such an affection sprung up? Placing this question before the school will start a discussion which is bound to aid the business of the exhibitor. Other "stunts" from the college angle are also suggested.

To Film Remote Spots in Balkan States

Jefferson Davis Dickson, globe-trotting cinematographer for the David P. Howell organization, will sail on the Adriatic on July 3 for another of his trips in search of unusual camera material. His first stop will be Paris, from which point he will outfit for an extensive trip through the entire group of the Balkan States, operating from Bucharest in Roumania as his headquarters.

The Balkan States provide the most remarkable material for odd and unique camera work that can possibly be imagined. In addition to the great natural scenic beauty, most of which is far from the beaten track of the average tourist, these small principalities provide examples of the oldest western civilization in existence.

Another object of his trip is to establish a moving picture exchange in Bucharest for the International Committee of War Workers of the A. M. C. A.

Good Cast in Support of Jewel Carmen

Roland West's star, Jewel Carmen, has been surrounded with a strong cast for her first production under his direction, entitled "Out of the Darkness." Julia Swaine Gordon has an important character part. Edward Davis, formerly a player on Belasco, is also in the production. Others include I. Herbert Frank, Virginia Vail, Leslie Austin, Gail Albertson, Jule Power, Henry Selick, Marie Coverdale, Paul Everett and Gladwin James. The picture is now nearing completion in New York.

Lejaren a Hiller Will Make Next in West

Lejaren a Hiller will start West shortly to begin production on his new picture. Arizona is to be the locale of the new picture production, which will be based on a story by Charles I. Gaskill, entitled "The Love of Abou Ben." Mr. Hiller has just completed his first picture, "The Sleep of Cynthia Rozer," which was also written by Mr. Gaskill. Rambarger & Levy are the selling agents of this picture.

Fox Opens London Offices

Justin H. McCarthy and Winfield Sheehan Participate in Ceremony

THE William Fox Film Corporation announces the opening of its new office building in London. The building is located at 13 Berners Street, a few blocks away from the Fox former offices at 74 76 Old Compton Street, in a center that has come to be looked upon as the film district. The building was officially opened by Justin H. McCarthy, author of "It I Were King" which William Fox has converted into a picture production with William Farnum in the principal role. Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, also assisted in the opening exercises. Two gold keys were made. With one of these, Mr. McCarthy opened the front door. The key was later presented to him as a souvenir. The other key has been sent to Mr. Fox in New York.

The Fox organization has sent the following statement concerning its new London headquarters:

"In the basement is the office for the receiving and despatching of films and posters. Here also is the film hospital, and the film is kept in three fireproof vaults. The managing director's office is on the first floor, front, half the front space being occupied by his private room and the other half by his secretaries.

"Back of this is the sales manager's quarters and also the office of the Fox News sales manager. Further back is a theatre, thirty by thirty feet, alongside which is a smaller theatre 10 x 14 feet, the latter being used by the technical manager. The former, like the reception room and the managing director's office, is decorated with leather wall paper.

"The second floor is occupied by the sales manager and the contract department. On this floor the main building is connected by a bridge with what is called the annex on East Castle street. In the second floor annex is the Fox News staff, and it may be said in passing that the Fox News, which was first released April 20, is doing a tremendous business.

"The third floor of the main building is occupied by the counting house, while across the bridge in the annex the poster stock and the stationery is kept. The fourth floor contains the publicity department, and the technical manager, who has charge of the films, also is quartered there. The annex is only three stories in height.

"On the fifth floor of the main building are the negative and positive examination rooms and the Fox News projection room, also seven specially built film vaults. The Fox Film Company is now under the managing directorship of K. W. Mordant Hall, who was appointed to the position soon after he was discharged from war service in the British Navy."

Ingraham to Direct Carter De Haven

The A. S. Kane Pictures Corporation announces that Lloyd Ingraham has been engaged to direct Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, the well-known comedians, who recently became affiliated with the Kane organization, in their forthcoming production of "Twin Beds." Ross Fisher will be the cameraman. The De Havens express themselves as delighted with the acquisition of both these experts for their production staff. The list of members of the supporting cast will be announced soon. An array of unusual talent is promised by the De Havens.

Ann Forrest Cast for "The Other Wife"

Ann Forrest has received the honor of being chosen by Cecil B. DeMille as leading woman for his next special production for Paramount, according to a telegram received from Mr. DeMille. This is the home office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The message also stated that Miss Forrest had signed a two-year contract and that production work on the new picture, which is titled "The Other Wife" and is from a story by Jeanne Macpherson, would be started July 6.

Tucker Now Tinting "Ladies Must Live"

Advices from the Brunton Studios, where George Loane Tucker is cutting and tinting "Ladies Must Live," state that it will take six weeks or more for the director to complete his task. Holding a keen regard for the importance of properly preparing a production for the screen, Tucker is pursuing the same policy in editing "Ladies Must Live" that helped to make "The Miracle Man" such a big success. Realizing the promise held forth by his new production and intent upon making it a worthy companion piece to "The Miracle Man," Tucker is bending all effort toward developing the story to its fullest power, states Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

The principal feminine role in "Ladies Must Live" is played by Betty Compson, who is now at the head of her own company.

Famous Players London Plant Finished Soon

At last the new studios of the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers Company at Islington, London, are approaching completion and are already in a condition that permits work on actual production. The huge No. 1 studio, with its 50 ft. water tank, is cleared for action; scenes are being set in the No. 2 studio, for "The Great Day," the five-act drama by Geo. R. Sims and Louis N. Parker, which has been adapted for the screen by Miss Eve Unsell; Director Hugh Ford, Assistant Director J. C. Boyle, Hal Young, cameraman and a party of fifteen are now away shooting scenes in Devonshire and elsewhere with some of the leading players of a star cast. They return shortly to carry on work for the interior set now being staged at the studios.

Rowland Lee Is Made Ince Director

True to plans formulated several months ago, Rowland Lee, for many years a favorite principal before the camera, has been assigned to the directorial ranks of the Thomas H. Ince Studios, and will direct forthcoming Hobart Rosworth Specials for J. Parker Read, Jr.

Pretty Soft - for exhibitors who play the Rolin Comedies

"America's best single reel comedies" is what the exhibitors who play them call these reels of ripples and roars.

"Snub" Pollard and Pickaninny Sammy have become national institutions. They are headliners in The Hall of Fun.

The productions are good in settings, fast in action, interest provoking in plot, and clean in humor.

Fit to top off the program in any theatre in the country, they will prove to you that they are exactly what your patrons want.

One Rolin one-reel Comedy Every Week

They were rescued by Finch Morichich, a diver from Catalina, after being submerged for six hours, it is declared in the First National report.

Reports from the Pathe branches state that this scheme has been fully demonstrated in past seasons as successful in sustaining business during the hot weather.

Ora Carew has been chosen by William DeMille as leading woman in his special productions for Paramount. The first production in which she will appear will be "His Friend and His Wife," which Mr. DeMille will start early in July at the Lasky studio. This is an adaptation by Genevieve Daniels of Cosmo Hamilton's new novel of that name.

In refutation of this statement, comes the news that she will have her own company, known as the Madge Kennedy Pictures Corporation. Miss Kennedy will play in four pictures a year and this will permit her to select original stories and avoid the rush that is so often responsible for poor productions.

Practically every producer in the motion picture field sought to place Miss Compson under contract as a star following her phenomenal rise through her remarkable por-

Miss Comp was a steady draw for her maker, with her dancing, the public faith that saw the "Miracle Man." The demands for a more frequent appearance of Miss Comp became constant. It tens of thousands of letters and in hundreds of appeals from the owners of the theatre whose churches were forever demanding to know when they were to see again "that girl who played in 'The Miracle Man,'" that she felt justified in making her own productions.

her sense of her youth and beauty she had of course been well known, but neither the public nor any of the film producers ever dreamed of the emotional depth and power which the girl displayed in that extremely difficult characterization of "Rosa" in "The March Man"—a characterization which made demand upon an actress far exceeding any performance ever produced on the screen, in view of the extraordinary range that was required to play the part.

"On October 1, I put an article in the papers, more clearly, stating that I owed the public an explanation for not playing the same after giving it such extensive advertising and mentioned the fact that it was a great surprise to me as I positively knew that it had never been condemned before in Canada. It looked at one time as if this was true, but soon Mr. Jeffries came onto the ground, and if ever a man handled a thing diplomatically, he did. I, myself, am no novice in the show game as my father was in the show game before he married my mother and I am now of fifty years of age. Naturally, I have been through a number of deals many times, but I do think that of all such deals I was in, not in your Mr. Jeffries' handled the matter more skillfully than I ever saw anyone handle a similar deal. It is an appeal based together, and the way he talked to them would make me feel amazed with it and I am all up, as you say, with it and it passed in an instant, and I am simply waiting the letter as I am so much pleased about the matter."

Filming "The Tiger Lady"

Good Cast Supports Hope Hampton;
Maurice Tourneur Is the Director

WORD has just come from the Tourneur Studios in Hollywood, where Hope Hampton is now filming "The Tiger Lady" under the direction of this master of screencraft, giving a complete list of the cast which supports the young Texas beauty in this picture. Miss Hampton's leading man in this picture is Henry Woodward, who will be especially remembered for his excellent characterization in "Male and Female." The role of Garson in the story is played by James Gordon, an experienced actor and director, whose recent pictures include "The Girl From Outside," "Behind the Door" and "The Sea Wolf." Rennolds is played by Joe Singleton, a character actor who has been seen in a great number of motion pictures produced by Universal, Fine Arts, Fox, Vitaphone and Aricraft. Jack McDonald, the well-known character actor in stock, vaudeville and pictures, who has been seen in Universal, Fine Arts and Triangle productions, plays the role of Lenine—coast advices do not disclose whether this is the individual who is stirring up all the trouble in Russia or not. The other members of the cast include Dannie Hoi, Raylene Eberlee, C. Norman Hammond and Edna Andriot, a sister of Lucien Andriot, the famous cinematographer.

Under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, and with the support of such an exceptional cast, Hope Hampton Productions, Inc., promises that "The Tiger Lady" will be an especially noteworthy production and will further the star's popularity on the screen. That the star is already well entrenched in the public's favor is proved by the culmination of a plan adopted some time ago.

In response to the questionnaire recently sent out by the officers of Hope Hampton Productions, Inc., addressed to one hundred leading exhibitors throughout the United States, the daily mail is bringing replies from these showmen giving estimates of the merit of "A Modern Salome," Miss Hampton's first production. Here is a sample received from the Mascot theatre Company at Moberge, South Dakota:

"I beg to advise you that we have run your feature, 'A Modern Salome,' and that this was a first-class picture and was enjoyed by our patrons."

Good Cast for Pathe Serial

Second Pathe Serial with Juanita Hansen as Star Is Begun in East

PRODUCTION on the second Pathe serial, starring Juanita Hansen, was begun June 28th at the George B. Seitz Studio in New York. The picture is to have the strongest cast of principals ever assembled for a serial attraction, declares Pathe. Warner Oland, Pathe's premier heavy, will appear in the picture.

Marguerite Contout, who has played leads, co-starred and been starred in her own right in productions, is cast for an important part. Miss Contout will join the company upon her return from Spain after the completion of the work there on "Rogues and Romance," the feature in which George B. Seitz will co-star with Lina Caprice.

"The Phantom Fog," Miss Hansen's initial starring vehicle for Pathe, was completed a short time ago, only a brief test being taken before work was started on "Roaring Oaks," the title of her second picture. Bertram Millhauser is directing the production.

The story is an original one by James Shelly Hamilton, whose first scenario work after joining the Seitz production staff was the continuity for "Violet Fingers," the serial starring George B. Seitz with Marguerite Contout.

The leading male role is to be played by William Bailey, an actor of long experience on the stage and in pictures. Mr. Bailey is another player who will be seen in support of Juanita Hansen when "The Phantom Fog" is released.

Pathe announces that "Roaring Oaks" is to be one of the most pretentious pictures ever attempted and will set a new standard for elaborateness in serial plays. It is planned to have the story a spectacular staging and the subject matter is said to afford rare opportunity for the accomplishment of big scene effects.

Form International Circuit

New Exhibitors' Organization to Follow Lines of First National

THE International Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., is formed upon the now familiar lines of the First National Exhibitors Circuit and therefore, in that respect presents no novelty in the film business. The success of the First National has been so manifest that in many respects the International expects to follow in the same general path.

The International, however, intends to go still further by eventually increasing the number of territorial units, so as to take in the foreign territories, thus giving added strength to the Circuit and obtaining a proper degree of support abroad in the purchase of negatives and in the marketing of film. By arrangements which are the subject of the annexed letter, the International starts off its business under better conditions than the other circuits, in that it will have film ready to distribute and will be a going concern right from the start.

The company has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware and in order to temporarily transact business prior to the election of a permanent board of directors, temporary officers and directors have been elected who have agreed to resign when the permanent board is elected at the general meeting of franchise holders. This temporary board and temporary officers will receive no salary, and no disbursements will be reimbursed until approved by the permanent board of directors.

A meeting of all the franchise holders of the company will be held in the near future, and the permanent board of directors and officers will be elected by them for a period of one year. There will be seven directors, a president, vice-president, treasurer and secretary.

The offices of the United Picture Theatres of America being partly unoccupied, temporary quarters of the International Exhibitors Circuit, are located at 1600 Broadway, New York City.

Enlarging the Sales-Force

Hodkinson Announces Appointments Made Recently in Selling Force

PROMOTIONS and enlargement of the sales force and increased bookings are the order of the day with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, not to mention a greatly extended program of productions for release during the next six months. Among the promotions announced by Hodkinson is the selection of H. M. Owens to take charge of the Kansas City branch. He is succeeded at St. Louis by James Gust whose wide acquaintance among exhibitors in that territory is counted on for the rapid development of business in the St. Louis Sector. Jack Krum, formerly a salesman in the Utah territory has been assigned to Denver, his home town, where he becomes the Hodkinson representative, where the business on Great Authors Productions leads the field for Hodkinson. Krum has been a big factor in stimulating this remarkable success for the Ben B. Hampton photodramas.

C. A. Thompson has been appointed manager of the New York Exchange for Hodkinson. Thompson gained his early selling experience with some of the best sales organizations in the country and has earned his present important office after a thorough training in the Cleveland territory.

In Los Angeles the Hodkinson representative is now W. T. Wall, who has been covering the coast territory from Los Angeles to San Francisco. In Dallas, Texas, Mr. Hodkinson has appointed Jack Schaeffer as branch manager. Jack Schaeffer worked the Dallas territory until three years ago when he joined the A. E. F.

Pathe Program Arranged for Capitol Theatre

SAMUEL L. ROTHAPPEL, managing director of the Capitol Theatre accords the Pathe product an unusually high honor by comprising his program for the week of July 11th of virtually all Pathe pictures, it is stated. His bill that week will be made up of H. B. Warner in the Jesse D. Hampton production, "One Hour Before Dawn," incidentally the initial Warner picture released by Pathe; Harold Lloyd in the first of his second series of comedy specials, "High and Dizzy," which marks the young comedy genius's debut at the Capitol; the Pathe News, Topics of the Day, and Hy Mayer's Capitol Travels, which are to be distributed throughout the world by Pathe, following their Capitol showing.

Equity in Deal with Inter-Ocean Film

A deal has been closed between Joseph L. Schmutz, president of Equity Pictures Corp., and Carl Schlemmer of the Inter-Ocean Film Co., which involves the purchase by Inter-Ocean of all the foreign rights to the distribution of Equity's six reel production "Whispering Devil," starring Conway Tearle and Rebecca Thelma. Equity remains in control of the American and Canadian rights.

The feature of the transaction is said by Equity to be the high price paid for the foreign right to the picture, a figure that is considered to constitute one of the largest ever paid for a production of this kind. The reason for the unusual sum involved has been stated by Inter-Ocean to be in the tremendous popularity of Conway Tearle throughout Europe and particularly in England, where Tearle is reputed to have a powerful following among the motion picture public. Conway is a brother of the celebrated actor, Godfrey Tearle, now on the London stage.

International Cast at Ince Studio

The cast supporting Fred Benetti in "I Wonder If," the latest Thomas H. Ince production has literally been gathered from the four quarters of the globe. Miss Benetti is Australian by birth, and American merely by marriage and adoption. Fred Noble, her husband-director, is a nephew of Uncle Sam.

Geoffrey Webb, the hero of the romance, is an Englishman. An even more recent importation is Derrick Ghent, the young Belgian, who so romantically portrays the part of the foreign prince in the story by Frank Dixon. Marie Davis, whose dusky hair and dark eyes proclaim her French and Spanish lineage, plays the adventuress, and her partner in crime is he of the unmistakable Scotch name, Donald McDonald.

Heads His Own Company

Former Universal-Educational's Manager to Produce Industrials

EDUCATIONAL and industrial motion pictures have become an increasingly important factor of the motion picture industry to warrant the establishment of an independent producing organization that will concentrate itself with nothing else.

Announcement has been made that Harry Levey, for three years manager of the Industrial and Educational Department of the Universal Film Company, has resigned that position to head a producing organization of his own, which shall be devoted exclusively to the making of the type of motion picture.

Mr. Levey having made a careful study of the field, has taken this step because he believes that the motion picture as an aid to American Industrial Progress has been firmly established, and that the medium of films in this field is sufficiently wide to warrant production where there shall be no division of loyalty or attention.

He establishes the new business with an organization of qualified directors, scenario writers, camera men, editors, and technical artists, and a thoroughly organized sales department, it is stated. Production studios are located at No. 209 West 124th street, New York. Connected with Mr. Levey's organization are Don Carlos Ellis, formerly in the film service of the Department of Agriculture; Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, Secretary of the New York State Reconstruction Commission, and the Governor's Labor Board; Ben Blake, Lem F. Kennedy, Harry Fraser, Al Marim, George U'ell, M. Karpen, Willard Van der Veer, Harry Forbes, Henry Clay Grant, Roswell Johnson, Chester C. Kleber, Mortimer Flanders and Walter Coyle.

Mr. Levey has already started production on a large scale. He has been retained by the Association of Chemical Industries to make a series of pictures showing the history of dyes, explosives, medicines, automobiles, aeroplanes, paint, leather, electrical supplies, and food preservatives.

To Star in Director's Story

Priscilla Dean Starts Work on New Feature, "Outside the Law"

PRODUCTION on Priscilla Dean's new feature, "Outside the Law," under the direction of Tod Browning, has been started at Universal City, California, Universal announces. This will be Miss Dean's first screen work since the completion of "The Virgin of Stamboul," some four months ago. Since then she has read hundreds of manuscripts, Universal states. She almost despaired of finding a story that would prove a worthy successor to H. H. Van Loan's romance of the orient, when finally Tod Browning, who has directed Priscilla in most of her features since she achieved stardom, decided to develop a story for her. He says he has had it in his mind for the volatile star since he first guided her movements through the intricacies of a scenario.

"Outside the Law" is from Browning's own pen. It was put in continuity by Lucien Hubbard, chief of the Universal scenario department. Miss Dean is said to be delighted with the story and its dramatic possibilities. The star's enthusiasm is shared by the officials at Universal City.

A good cast has been engaged to support Miss Dean, including Wheeler Oakman, who was her leading man in "The Virgin of Stamboul"; Lon Chaney, who will play the heavy role—a San Francisco gangster; Ralph Lewis, who will enact the role of a reformed crook; F. A. Warren, who played the bazaar keeper in "The Virgin of Stamboul"; and who will next be seen as a Chinese philosopher—and many others.

Hayden Talbot to Adapt "Body and Soul"

HAYDEN TALBOT, former newspaperman, author, playwright, and scenario writer, has been engaged by Bayard Veiller, chief of production at Metro's West Coast Studios in Hollywood to prepare the continuity for "Body and Soul," the forthcoming special production with an all-star cast headed by Alice Lane.

Mr. Talbot has an enviable record as a writer of stage plays. "The Truth Wagon" was his first work for the legitimate, which was followed by "The Little Joker," "O, Joe," "God's Country," "Let's Go, Tige," "The Lesser Evil" and "Hail, Columbia." Numbered among his photoplays are "Alimony," "The Married Virgin," and the picturization of his stage play, "The Truth Wagon."

The screen version of "Body and Soul," which was originally written by William Hurlburt, will be completed within a few days. Production will start the latter part of next week. It is a psychological melodrama based on the dual personality of a young girl in Paris, who becomes an artist's model, is wrongfully accused of the murder of a friend and is finally vindicated.

The Curfew Gone, Lane Abandons Nyack

Charles Lane, who played with Dorothy Dalton in Famous Players' forthcoming production, "This Woman—This Man," and who was cast in the role of Dr. Langdon in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," had planned on taking up his summer residence at Nyack on the shores of the Hudson, opposite Tarrytown. The Nyack magnet for Mr. Lane lay in its nine o'clock curfew law, this theory being that any place with such a regulation would prove a haven of rest for a tired picture actor. However, the Nyack Board of Trustees has seen fit lately to repeal the time-honored curfew ordinance, and so Mr. Lane has abandoned Nyack as his prospective habitat for the summer season.

"Humoresque" Breaking Records Is Report

"Humoresque," Cosmopolitan's production for Paramount, which has been proclaimed the logical successor to "The Miracle Man" by New York critics, entered the fourth week of its run at the Criterion theatre, New York, leaving a trail of broken records behind it, says Famous Players-Lasky. On the Saturday which terminated the third week of its engagement the picture played to 2,726 paid admissions, breaking all records of the previous weeks.

On the date also, a related Public Week-end in "The Fourteen Man." Joseph Henabery directed. The supporting cast is headed by Bobe Harbo, leading woman, and includes Walter Hays, Robert M. Leach, Norma Kelly, Ed McCann, M. Goldart and Sylvia A. Hurn.

"Suds" Wins Seal of Merit

Association for Encouragement of Artistic Pictures Makes the Award

PRECEDED by a delightful talk on motion pictures by Dr. Frank Crane, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, was presented with the first seal of Merit issued for a motion picture production by the Motion Picture Theatrical Association of the World. The presentation was made by Frank Bacon, secretary of the organization, from the stage of the Strand theatre, New York, Sunday evening, June 27th, before a crowded and enthusiastic house.

The Motion Picture Theatrical Association is an extensive organization of those people interested in better pictures and more worthy stage productions. A committee of the organization, composed of members of different professions and of all walks of life, view a production, and if it is up to the high standards of beauty, artistry and wholesomeness, set by the association it is awarded the Seal of Merit which is run as a trailer similar to the one used by the National Board of Review.

The Association for some time has been interested in Mary Pickford's continued success as a producer of pictures on the high plane demanded by the organization, and it was decided that in appreciation of this continued excellence, Miss Pickford should receive the First Seal issued.

Owing to the absence of the star in London it was deemed most fitting and proper that the gift of a replica in gold of the seal should be accepted on her behalf by her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, who was in New York attending to business affairs of the late Pickford organization.

Vidor Production Screened

After Showing Author Wires His Congratulations to the Producer

A PREVIEW showing of "The Jack-Knife Man," a King Vidor production, adapted to the screen by William Parker from the book by Ellis Parker Butler, was given before a select audience at the Plaza theatre, Fifty-ninth street and Madison avenue, New York, last week. The showing followed the regular show, and many of the audience remained to see the Vidor picture. There were also present Winchell Smith, author of "Turn to the Right," and various officials and department heads of the First National Exhibition, Great, which organization will release "The Jack-Knife Man" early in the fall.

After the screening, Mr. Butler wired his congratulations to Mr. Vidor and later addressed the following letter to him:

"I wire you tonight my complete satisfaction with the Jack-Knife film, which I have just seen. I believe you have a picture that will make a big hit, and I want to thank you for the way in which you have grasped the spirit of my book and the fine, wholesome quality of the whole picture. It is a great piece of work. It has heart interest, humor, pathos, action and throughout, the real spirit of the Mississippi River of which I wrote. The people of the picture are real people. I think you have done a masterpiece. I believe "The Jack-Knife Man" is going to be one of the most successful screen productions and I am proud that my name is connected with it."

To Keep Foreign Trade

Arthur Ziehm, Goldwyn Manager of Foreign Sales, Discusses Question

THE following statement has been issued by Arthur Ziehm, manager of foreign sales for the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, concerning the opportunities of the American-made picture in foreign markets:

"Despite uncertain trade conditions and fluctuating rates of exchange, I am convinced that there never was a greater opportunity than exists today for American producers to cultivate the European market. The point to bear in mind is that the demand for good pictures is becoming greater than ever before with the creation of many new theatres in all European countries and the establishing of affairs on a peace time basis. The question is, who shall supply these pictures? Will they come from America, as they have during the past few years, or will the studios of France and Germany and Italy meet the competition of America and carry off the bulk of the business? It is well to remember that at the outbreak of the war, the foreign market was almost exclusively supplied with French, Italian, Danish and German films, and that the studios in all these countries are being reorganized with a view to regaining their past dominance.

"On the other hand there is no disputing the pre-eminence of America as the producing center of the world. In technical efficiency, in stories, in stars, we have gone far ahead of our rivals, and speaking for Goldwyn, I feel certain that we have created a loyal following for our product.

"The problem to be met by American producers is how to maintain the advantage which we have gained. As a premise it must be conceded that the day of easy sales is past. The take-it-or-leave-it attitude adopted when there was no rivalry worth mentioning must give place to real salesmanship. Instead of waiting for foreign buyers to come to us, we will have to send properly qualified agents to them. These men should be thoroughly versed in the business methods and social conditions of the countries they aim to serve. They must use tact and discrimination in dealing with customers who no longer are forced to take anything that is given them by American producers."

Rivoli to Get 'Big Feature

"The World and His Wife" to Open There Week of July 18 for Showing

"The World and His Wife," the latest photoplay feature of Cosmopolitan Productions whose other wonderful picture, "Humoresque," is now in the fifth week of its great success at the Criterion theatre, will be seen for the first time by the public at the Rivoli theatre, on Broadway during the week beginning July 18. This will be a pre-release showing, the general release for the picture being set for the week of July 25.

Like "Humoresque," "The World and His Wife" was selected for the Rivoli by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, who directs the Criterion and Rialto, because of its excellence as a photoplay and its appeal to all classes. While "Humoresque" brings out the noble tenderness of mother love, "The World and His Wife" shows in a dramatic manner how gossip and loose, unthinking talk may wreck or mar the destinies of scores of persons.

Adapted from Charles Frederic Xiefflinger's play, based on the dramatic poem of Jose Echegaray, "The World and His Wife" has been made into a most remarkable and unusual photoplay. It was directed by Robert G. Vignola and is his first big special for Cosmopolitan Productions.

Set in a Castilian atmosphere, one of the features of this production is its scenic splendor which is characterized by massiveness and magnificence throughout. Joseph Urban designed the settings.

As in "Humoresque," Alma Rubens is the featured player, and surrounding her is one of the greatest casts ever gathered together in one picture, it is stated. This cast includes Montagu Love, whose first success in this country was on the speaking stage with Cyril Maude in "Grumpy," and who has since been a sensation in pictures; Pedro de Cordoba, one of the greatest of American stage and screen actors in a character part; Gaston Glass, who played the role of the boy in "Humoresque"; Charles Gerard, Margaret Dale, Allen Walker, Byron Russell, Ray Allen, James Savold, Peter Barber, Leon Gendron, and Vincent R. Macchia. Frances Marion, who adapted "Humoresque," for the screen did the scenario for "The World and His Wife."

Priscilla Dean, whose new Universal picture will be "Outside the Law"

Bryant Washburn's next Paramount picture will be "The Sins of St. Anthony," in which Washburn does an eccentric role.

Madlane Traverse to Produce in Fall

Madlane Traverse, who a few weeks ago withdrew from the Fox forces to enjoy a well earned rest, will reappear in the fall in her own company as the star of a big special attraction. According to an announcement at the Hotel Algonquin, where Miss Traverse has been stopping, the story will be based on a subject selected by her more than a year ago, but which was not then found available for production at the Fox studios, chiefly because many of the settings necessary for its proper presentation were too costly and elaborate for an ordinary program production.

E. J. McGovern Enters State Right Field

Elmer J. McGovern has announced his entry into the state rights field. Encouraged by the many successes he has prepared for the independent buyers, while employed by various production companies, he has purchased from the Pyramid Photo Plays, Inc., a Doraldina Special, entitled, "The Woman Untamed."

Headquarters have been established at 130 West 46th street, N. Y. C., occupying part of the Joseph Miles office space on the sixth floor.

Harry Morey Becomes Star-Producer

Harry Morey, for many years one of our foremost screen stars, has severed his association with the Vitagraph, after having been with that company for twelve years, to become the star of his own producing company, the plans for which are well under way. Mr. Morey is "making hay" slowly, for he is profiting from the experiences of many who have gone ahead too rapidly and failed. Mr. Morey will specialize on personality stories, three of which are under consideration, the first having practically been settled. "The role will be announced within a few days."

Celebrities Seen In Feature

Noted Newspapermen and Writers Appear in "Go Get It"

FOR the purpose of rehearsing what is declared to be the scintillating element of his career with a wealth of local color and detail, Marshall Neilan has successfully concentrated in "Go Get It." He has secured for his picture the best feature production now in the course of making, made his contract with Associated Artists National Pictures, Inc., actual scenes in which a number of America's most famous newspapermen and magazine writers appear.

This feat was perfected by Mr. Neilan as the climax of a succession of triumphs, it is stated, most of which will be guarded until his picture is brought before the public, incident to the production of "Go Get It," his latest independent special attraction for First National.

Beginning with the selection and revision of a story that is said to hold one of the most unusual ideas ever presented in story or screen form, Mr. Neilan has added to his original idea until it represents the apex of producership. He now is the originator of a motion picture declared to be basically different from any of his previous offerings.

The literary element in the story arises from the fact that the mystery which runs through the entire production centres about the efforts of an ambitious newspaper reporter, alert with instructions to "Go Get It" from his managing editor, to solve an enigma that baffles the brightest minds of the day. With the vow that he will "lift heaven and earth" in his effort to "go get it," Pat O'Malley playing the part of the young reporter mearths facts and experiences that cram the picture with gripping incidents.

It was the fact that Mr. Neilan took advantage of the newspaper element which makes the basis of his story and that he likewise took advantage of the convenient combination of writers and newspaper men that made such a proposition possible. Mr. Neilan was able to secure the noted writers for scenes in "Go Get It" by virtue of the fact that many of America's most famous correspondents and writers were gathering in San Francisco to express their views and the news about the Democratic Party National Convention.

Among writers secured by Mr. Neilan for his picture are Samuel G. Blythe, Mike Lockie, Ring Lardner, Irvin S. Cobb, Arthur Brisbane, and Robert E. Sherwood. Scores of other writers are seen in the picture, but those mentioned in the foregoing are probably the best known. Misses Lardner, Blythe and Cobb are in scenes with Agnes Ayres, heroine of the story.

The central theme of the story is a mystery, the nature of which will not be made public until the initial showing of the picture. It has been suggested that the idea of the story be withheld by exhibitors and exchange men in an effort to allow the production to make its startling impression without giving the audience a chance to anticipate what is coming.

An interesting motion picture event developed as the result of the interest of the writer in taking for motion picture. Following the scene which was made in San Francisco, Mr. Neilan had taken a collection of newspapermen and had taken all the way from Hollywood to San Francisco. Ring Lardner insisted that the picture should be a burlesque, "Go Get It" and a film that could be shown before the press clubs all over the world. Mr. Neilan agreed to personally direct every scene of the picture which takes form in the shape of a one-act comedy.

The unexpected part of the burlesque is the fact that the take-off on "Go Get It" promises to be worthy of general exhibition. The story was written by Ring Lardner and Irvin S. Cobb and the opening scene, which filmed up the roof of a San Francisco hotel, where Cobb and Lardner are seen securing inspiration for their story.

The scene then changes to the ranch of Major Kettle of San Francisco and the picture is shown in a number of comedy scenes. Blythe and Arthur Brisbane are started taking the part of young reporters who are engaged by Cobb and Lardner to "go get it." However, the objective of the burlesque is a proposition of rapid and hilarious that of the real "Go Get It" cast is a concrete proposition.

"Go Get It" follows the independent Neilan productions, "The River's End," and "Don't Ever Marry," and is declared to possess the dramatic quality of the former with a touch of the humor of the latter. Wesley Barry, according to Mr. Neilan will provide a great part of the humor in "Go Get It."

Read Planning Bigger Things

LOUISE GLAUM'S production for the next year will be made by J. Parker Read, Jr. And these super-plays of the screen will be big specials of spectacular calibre, mounted lavishly and with supporting casts that will be of truly all-star character.

These statements were made this week by J. Parker Read, Jr., who, at his headquarters at the Thomas H. Ince studio in Culver City, is laying plans for the production of the coming year's Hobart Bosworth and Louise Glaum specials.

A review of Mr. Read's production activities reveal, besides the expenditure of big sums in the actual making of his pictures, an intelligent and expensive casting. Mr. Glaum always has been an enthusiastic believer in strong supporting casts, and such names as the following have appeared in Miss Glaum's and Mr. Bosworth's vehicles: James Kirkwood, Myrtle Stedman, Anna Q. Nilsson, Irving Cummings, Jean Calhoun, William Conklin, Matt Moore, Noah Berry, Edwin Stevens, Tracy Hobbes, Arthur M. Lee, Paul Robeson, Paul Lang, Joseph Kable and others of equal reputation.

"Mr. Glaum will make four production a year," J. Parker Read declared. "And I am prepared to give to each one of them the utmost of my artistic, financial and cinematic resources.

"I have surrounded Miss Glaum with the most capable organization I have been able to find. I have engaged Nicolas Roeg to direct her next picture, 'The Leopard Woman,' and will assure her of the finest directorial talent procurable.

"Personally, as scenes I shall consider her stories, and to this end I already have completed arrangements with Stewart Edward White, Bayard Veiller, Charles Belmont Davis, Daniel Carson Goodenow, M. S. Dubson and other notable writers.

"These stories will be gone over with the utmost care. Each picture will be completed, in preparation for actual filming, in the offices of the scenario staff and in secretaries, regarding the working script, the director will play a more important part than ever before. In other words, I want to assure my companies of smooth sailing and to avoid the irritating delays occasioned by changing last-minute scenes.

"I have the most confidence that Louise Glaum's dramatic power is a big problem, but will reach its zenith during the coming year, and the report submitted to me by Mr. S. S. Hager on his recent cross-country tour of inspection, as a result of his study of her, confidently assures me that exhibition will profit through Miss Glaum's forthcoming vehicle in a measure heretofore unobtainable.

"Miss Glaum today stands as one of the screen's greatest actresses. In point of histrionic merit, I doubt if she has a superior. Her personal charm and the unique quality of her work make her a tremendous attraction, I believe, and operating on this basis, I intend to provide her with the most elaborate production possible to achieve, while being consistent to the purpose of her stories."

It is stated, also, that Mr. Read has expended an amount of $4,000 in securing the screen rights to powerful, dramatic vehicles for his made star, Hobart Bosworth.

New Stewart Picture Well Under Way

Work on a well under way, on Anne Stewart's next Leon B. Mayers first feature attraction, "Among the Vind." This is a dramatization of the famous play of the same name by John Galsworthy, which reached New York and London by means several years ago. Every thing points to a gigantic production when it is completed. It is being directed by John M. Stahl.

Fox Announces A Special

"If I Were King," with William Farnum as Star, Released Soon

WILLIAM FOX announces that he has ready for early release a film production of "If I Were King," from the successful novel and stage play by Justin McCarthy. William Farnum enacts on the screen the character of Francois Villon, in which E. H. Sothern made so great a hit on the stage.

According to those who have seen it, and this includes the author, Justin Huntly McCarthy—it is one of the biggest pictures made this year. It is in line with those other big Farnum productions "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Les Miserables," but it is said by the Fox Film Corporation to be even greater than these two.

As soon as the picture was completed and titled, a copy was shipped to the London office of the Fox company, and the author was invited to see it. From his home in London McCarthy wrote to William Fox:

"I witnessed the Fox Film Company's presentation of my story, 'If I Were King,' with keen interest, which soon became a warm approval that ended in cordial admiration. The tale has been retold vividly and brilliantly in the terms of the new art. The characterization is excellent, the setting remarkable for its beauty, and the handling of the great crowds toward the close a marvel of effect."

But the triumph of the film was William Farnum's interpretation of the part of Francois Villon. Humor, poetry, rascality, gallantry, valor, passion, tragedy, played in their turn upon William Farnum's face, so eloquent in its wordless action that I could almost believe that I was hearing William Farnum's voice."

When the Fox company secured the screen rights to this famous play and book, the matter was placed in the hands of E. Lloyd Sheldon to write the scenario. Technical men were assigned to study the period of the story so that nothing would appear in the picture that was not absolutely correct. At the time William Farnum and his director, J. Gordon Edwards, were in the East and they were in conference day after day, states the Fox Film Corporation, with Mr. Sheldon on the dramatic points involved.

Broadwell Local Agent Has Had Long Career

John I. Clavey, the New York representative for Broadwell Productions, Inc., of Boston, which is now making a series of two-reelers based on the Nick Carter stories, has been associated with motion-picture activities over a long period. Among the organizations that Mr. Clavey has been affiliated with are the Keystone Film Company, as publicity man, scenarist, and assistant to Hampton del Ruth, production-manager; the Fox comedies, as production manager and later as dramatic editor; the Hallmark Pictures Corporation, as assistant production manager and continuity-writer, "High Speed" and "The Veiled Marriage" being two of his best works in the continuity department; and now with the Broadwell organization.

"The Isle of Destiny" State-Righted

Character Pictures Corporation announces that they have decided to state-right their first special production "The Isle of Destiny," which was recently made at Oriental Island, Florida, with Paul Gilmore as the featured player.

Offers for the negative rights had been placed with the Character Pictures Corporation, but this fact is more than balanced by the numerous telegraphic and other communications from state-right buyers, exhibitors, etc., making offers for territorial rights.

"Man and Woman" Now Open for Sales

Radin Pictures last week announced the completion of "Man and Woman," the latest acquisition of that company, which they are offering to state right buyers. According to reports, "Man and Woman" with Betty Mason in the stellar role, is a feature of exceptional merit. This heart-interest drama is said to be made up of many unusual situations and enacted by a capable cast of artists who display a thorough knowledge of the roles assigned to them. The Radin Company has prepared a full line of advertising accessories and theatre aids in connection with "Man and Woman."

Penn Company Closes for South America

Adolph, head of the Penn Import and Export Company, announces that the South American rights for all "Hallmark" Pictures, exclusive of serials, have been sold for the territories as follows: Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. The name of the buyer is not disclosed. Negotiations are now under way for the territories comprising the West Indies, Mexico and Central America, all of which will probably be closed within the next ten days. Negotiations are likewise under way for the sale of the entire series of pictures, including serials, for the United Kingdom and for Continental Europe.

Tuttle Opening Dallas States-Right Office

T. O. Tuttle of Dallas, Texas, announces that he will open an independent sales-office in that city shortly for the purpose of handling the best state-right productions obtainable. His first purchase for the territories of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Mr. Tuttle also states that all his connections with the S. A. Lynch Enterprises and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have been severed.

Third Issue of "Screen Snapshots" Available

Jack Cohn announces that issue No. 3 of "Screen Snapshots," the bi-monthly, single-reel, animated photoplay-column which he, with Lewis Lewyn, produces, is now ready for release. Among the other scenes in this issue, "Fatty" Arbuckle engages in a special comedy skit with Charles Murray and Sessue Hayakawa. Picking "extras" at the Thos. Ince studios is another peek into film life which "Screen Snapshots" offers.

Louis Collier Manages Pearce's Office

Louis S. Collier and wife have just moved to Atlanta, Ga., where they will take charge of the new office opened there by the Pearce Films which have had offices in New Orleans for some time. The Atlanta office is located at 146 Marietta street.

Reelcraft Completes Seven Productions

The general office of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation announces the completion of seven more releases for its exclusive short-subject program. Alice Howell has completed her last comedy to be made at the Chicago Studio of Reelcraft. The title is "Lunatics in Politics." At the Hollywood Studio of Reelcraft, Billy France, under the direction of George Jeske, has completed three more single reel comedies titled "Fixing Lunch," "Getting His Goat" and "The Professor."

Billy West has completed his latest production of "Italian Love," in which Evelyn Gibson is so star. The Matty Robert producing unit has completed all of the work on the first two releases titled "Lucius Days" and "She's a Vamp."

Photo Products Aid to Release Schedule

To the list of George Kleine Viola Dana Shirley Mason revivals, now being marketed on the state right plan by Photo Products Export Company, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City, three Alma Hanton subjects have been added. These are "The Devil's Prayer Book," "The Final Curtain," "Wild Cats," two Irene Fenwick subjects, "Sentimental Lads" and "The Spend Thrift," and an Anna Nilsson subject, "The Scarlet Road."

Eva Pearson Is Engaged for "Determination"

John J. Livingston announces that Eva Pearson has been signed up for "Determination" and will play the star role in the prologue, entitled "The Angel of Mercy." Miss Pearson has been playing on the English stage and is well known in London. She has also played here with the Vitaphone, Famous Players, World, Metro, in fact with all of the large companies.

Improvements on the Coast : : : : :

WITH production at absolute capacity and improvements of all sorts either under way or completed, Frank E. Garbutt, manager of the West Coast Realart Studios, faces the new motion picture season with a highly optimistic spirit.

"It took a considerable portion of last year," said Mr. Garbutt, "to lay our plans and get under way. That preliminary work is now completed and we have people and equipment fully capable of turning out photographs of the high artistic standard demanded by Realart exhibitors."

"Only recently we have completed a new unit of glass stage which gives us an enclosed space equal to any in the business. It can and has taken care of the very largest sets. In addition we have the outside open stage and 'set lot' for exteriors and emergencies."

"Perhaps the improvement which has created the most talk around the studio is the new 'Star's Bungalow' directly across the street from the dark stage. On taking over the plant Realart purchased this seven room house from its private owners and transformed it into two star suites consisting of sitting room, dressing room, wardrobe, bath and kitchenette. We are very proud of this innovation. The rooms were all re-decorated and furnished with a view to the occupancy of Miss Hawley, Miss Daniels and any other Realart stars who might use it from time to time. Few studios, it is said, have provided their stars with such eminently desirable quarters."

"We have just finished a big new garage to handle the company's fleet of trucks, passenger cars and 'power wagons'. And we have started the erection of a fine machine shop, with a full equipment of precision instructions so that we may be able to do our own camera repair work. In the past, we have been severely handicapped through the necessity of sending East for necessary parts. Factory men will be in charge and the shop will place us free of 'accident fear'."

The items just quoted are worthy of further mention, especially the new power wagons which are being built to the designs of Mr. Garbutt and his assistants. They are built on five-ton White trucks and are considered the very last word in such apparatus. Their capacity exceeds any similar wagons now in existence, for on night locations they will be able to flood a street or section of country with the illumination from forty Klieg lights.

The generators have a capacity of about 200 K.W. The outfit has been built so that it can be operated at any angle, or while running. This has never been possible before.

The machine shop referred to will have specially designed Manderbake and milling machine, capable of accuracy to 1/10,000 of an inch. This can be best appreciated by saying that a machine would repeat an ordinary human hair cut into thirty different sections.

"We have found it necessary to make but few changes in our laboratory," continued Mr. Garbutt. "That organization was practically perfect from the start. It has an excellent record for output, and Frank V. Buggy, the superintendent, is to be congratulated."

"He is installing our machine, however, which will do away with technical troubles all film printers have experienced. This apparatus will absolutely equalize the current passing through the printing machine, and do away with the light fluctuations due to the irregularity of current as taken direct from power or light lines."

"As far as the production efficiency of the plant is concerned, I think that was demonstrated during the making of 'Mr. Hobbs'. I understand we created a new record for speed in turning out the great number of prints ordered one week in advance of the very restricted time limit we were given. Only people working in absolute cooperation could have achieved this result."

"In the actual making of the pictures there are several people who deserve the highest praise. Will M. Rutledge, of course, is invaluable in his work as Supervising Director and Scenario Editor. To him must go much of the credit for Realart's high standard. Una Nixon Hopkin in 'Mr. Hobbs', 'Tummy Be Good' and 'Nurse Marjorie' showed that fine creative sense which has made her one of film's leading art directors. Walter Hansen, production manager, has a crew of stage carpenters that have made an enviable record for their speed and workmanship in the construction of important sets."

"We have made addition and improvement to our storage space. Constantly new furniture and other properties are being added to our permanent supply while agreement with leading store place at our disposal any of a thousand articles we may want. Our system in this regard is almost perfect."

"Our wardrobe has overflowed and it has been necessary to build a new new department on a mezzanine floor of the big picture stage. This is under the charge of Mr. Louis Muller, acting director."

Woody Discusses Franchise : : : : :

THE Realart Star Franchise is described by J. S. Woody, general manager of the company, as the most constructive measure devised in a decade to bring order out of the chaotic conditions that have existed for some time between producers and exhibitors.

Discussing its provisions, Mr. Woody declared the Franchise represented the first occasion in his knowledge when an important producer had stepped forward voluntarily to meet the exhibitor more than half way. "The face of the matter is," he said, "that the Franchise is written on the exhibitor's own terms."

Mr. Woody was present in Cleveland early in June when the big exhibitors' convention was held there. He said he had made as accurate a survey of exhibitor opinion on what was needed for the coming year as was possible under the circumstances. Realart, he declared, had gauged the situation correctly and times its announcement to the minute.

"From all I could gather at Cleveland," Mr. Woody continued, "exhibitors are waiting with open arms for the Realart Star Franchise. I explained it in a general way to a number of the men I met there, and they agreed with me that it was the fairest, most equitable and constructive measure a producing firm had made in many a moon."

"And not only the Franchise itself, but the fact that it was Realart that offered it seemed to arouse an immense amount of enthusiasm. However fine a proposition we might have prepared, it would not have aroused this heartiest greeting if the Franchise had had, if Realart did not have the reputation and respect of a successful business enterprise with whom it has done business."

"Looking at the Franchise in a large way, it is a simple proposition to understand. It is written only for a year. Many exhibitors would like this sort of protection for a longer period, but the majority at present don't want to tie up for more than a year."

"From another viewpoint, the Franchise is the exhibitor's own because. It leaves him free to do as he wishes, without any special problem. It is essentially not his, but it is created to establish absolutely his own sort of arrangement with the Realart Star Franchise."

"Some producers, I have noted recently, are so zealous that the independent exhibitor they would like to lend him money. Now after you've taken a man's promissory note or a mortgage on his house, just how independent is he? There are local banks all over the country, and to take care of such conditions as this."

"No, I've met a lot of exhibitors, but I've yet to meet any mendicants among them. Let me say it most Recent Literary Acquisitions : : : : :

IN the list of famous novel and stage successes acquired by Realart as screen material for the coming season is "The New York Idea," by Lampton Mitchell, described by a number of critics as the long-awaited "Great American Play."

A survey of the list reveals the following notable names in American and European literature: Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, Sir James M. Barrie, Avery Hopwood, P. G. Woodhouse, Guy Bolton, George Scarborough, Harry Lane Smith, Owen Davis, Doris Burnett, Grace Lovell Bryan, Paul Kester, Miss Dyer Miller, Sophia Ketti, "Pan" and Augustin Thomas.

The purchase of the material for 1920-21 shows Realart strongly entrenched in its first announced policy of using only the finest available book and screen material for its productions. Negotiations for a large number of equally successful works are pending and will be approved well in advance of production needs.

"The record of 'The New York Idea' in which Alice Brady will be featured shows that from the standpoint of popular success its distinction as 'The Great American Play' is deserved. It was first produced in 1906 with Mr. Munn Madden back as the star and had a long run in New York City and through the country.

Later it was revived as a vehicle for George Fox, who enjoyed the greatest success her career in it.

Mrs. Miles Minter's latest production in the new year will be an adaptation of "Sweet Lavender," one of the most successful plays written by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, author of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Gay Lord Quex," "The Amazons" and "Mid Chimed." When first produced in London, "Sweet Lavender" ran for 167 performances and has had several productions in the United States. It has also been published in book form and has had a wide circulation.

"Tommy and Gravel," by Sir Lancelot Matthew Barrie, author of "The Little Minister," "Peter Pan," "What Every Woman Knows," "The Admirable Crichton," "Quintus Street" and "A Kiss For Cinderella," has been purchased as material for Constance Talmadge. It is a sequel to his well-known novel, "Sentimental Tommy," and has been one of his most popular books since its publication in 1900.

"The Little Clown," by Avery Hopwood, has been acquired for Mary Miles Minter. It was produced in New York City several years ago and enjoyed the enormous popularity that has been given Mr. Hopwood's plays. He is the author of the current Broadway hit, "The told Diogenes," collaborated with Mary Roberts Rinehart on "Seven Days," and with Channing Pollock on "Clothes," and was sole author of "Nobody's Widow," "Sadie Love," "This Man and This Woman," "Judy Forgot" and "Fair and Warmer."

"Oh, Lady, Lady," the recent Broadway comedy hit by Guy Bolton and P. G. Woodhouse, will be adapted to the screen for Bebe Daniels. Bolton and Woodhouse were the co-authors of "Oh, Boy" and independently have written a large number of successful stories and novels. "Oh, Lady, Lady" was presented at the Princess theatre in New York and had a run of 174 performances during the season of 1917-1918.

"Moonlight and Honeysuckle," which was presented last season at the Henry Miller theatre with Ruth Chatterton as the star, with tremendous success, has been purchased as the first starring vehicle for the new Realartist, Justine Johnston. It was written by George Scarborough, author "The Fight" and "The Son-Daughter" and a number of other successful Broadway plays.

"The Wishing Hour," by Augustin Thomas, the veteran American playwright, has been purchased and will be used by William Desmond Taylor as one of his four special productions for Realart during the coming year. It was one of the most popular of Mr. Thomas' long list of successful plays that included "Arizona," "As A Man Thinks" and "Missouri," and served as a starring vehicle for John Mason for several seasons.

"The Furnace," a novel of contemporary life in England, by "Pan" an anonymous author, has been purchased as material for another of William Desmond Taylor's super-special productions. Its publication recently created considerable of a sensation in the literary world both here and abroad.

"Those Who Walk In Darkness," by Owen Davis, has also been purchased for Alice Brady. It was first published as a novel by Percy Poore Sheehan in 1919, dramatized in the same year and produced at the 48th Street theatre. Owen Davis is the author of "Sinners," "Forever After" and a long list of Broadway stage hits.

"Blindness," a novel which appeared serially in the Ladies' Home Journal during 1919-20, by Dana Burnett, has been acquired for Mary Miles Minter. Mr. Burnett is one of the most accomplished young writers in this country, and has had numerous novels and short stories published within the last few years. He is the author of "Private Pettigrew's Girl" and "The Shining Adventure," which have enjoyed considerable popularity.

Studio Plans for Coming Year : : : : :

"I BELIEVE we have done well the past year. But we have only started. With the plays in view and others in course of negotiation, I feel that the coming season will show a product exceeding quality anything that has been done. We have the stars, we have the stories, we have the organization. I am highly confident that 1920-21 will be a year of splendid profits to those exhibitors who have signed a Realart contract."

Will M. Ritchey, supervising director of the West Coast Realart studios makes this emphatic prediction for the coming year. It indicates to what extent Realart's policy has pleased him. A man of seven years' experience, he knows all angles of the motion picture business, and is well qualified to speak with authority.

"The exhibitor already knows," said Mr. Ritchey, "the excellence of 'Tommy Be Good,' 'Indy of Rogues' Harbor,' 'Nurse Matrone' and 'Miss Hobbs.' The first three were Mary Miles Minter productions, directed by William D. Taylor, with supervision of Julia Crawford Lykes, and the last was the first Wanda Hawley production. They gave a hint of what Realart can do, and presage excellent things for the future."

"We expect to concentrate production at this studio proper on Wanda Hawley and Bebe Daniels, until an enlarged plant makes it possible to include William D. Taylor special productions and Mary Miles Minter features. For the present they are producing in another plant under, however, the supervision of Realart's organization in California. Their plans are indicated elsewhere.

For Bebe Daniels and Wanda Hawley, however, we have a schedule that is rapidly rounding into shape. Miss Hawley has just completed her second starring picture, "Food for Scandal," adapted from the popular farce "Beverly's Balance" by Paul Kester. Edith Kennedy prepared an excellent scenario and while very different, I believe the play exceeds in attractiveness even its remarkable predecessor, "Miss Hobbs." It is a brilliant, sparkling comedy, well cast by Miss Jessie Hallett. Harrison Ford again appears as leading man.

"Miss Daniels has recently starred in 'You Never Can Tell.' The trade papers have been so full of this production that further explanation is hardly necessary.

"In preparation for Miss Hawley we have a very successful French farce by two noted authors. For certain reasons the name cannot be given. Suffice it to say, however, that the production is well known and has that clever, rapier-like comedy sense which reaches its highest perfection in the field of French farce. It gives Miss Hawley still further chance to demonstrate her versatility. In 'Miss Hobbs' she was futuristic; in 'Food for Scandal' a girl of proud family, Spanish in descent. Now she is to be seen as a French lass with all the brilliance of costume to be expected in high Gallic society.

"Alice Eytan is preparing the scenario. She is well-known for such scripts as 'A Full House' with Bryant Washburn, 'Girls and a Girl Named Mary,' Marguerite Clark; 'Happiness a la Mode,' Constance Talmadge; 'Louisiana,' Vivian Martin and a score of others. "Then to follow comes 'Her First Elopement' from a story by Alice Duer Miller, author of 'The Charm School' and other well-known stories. This is a clever, biting tale of mistaken identity different in character from any of its predecessors on the Hawley list. It offers the star splendid opportunities for her inimitable humor.

"Edith Kennedy is now working on the script of 'Oh, Lady, Lady,' the side-splitting musical comedy by Guy Bolton, and P. G. Woodhouse. It will be a Bebe Daniels feature. Miss Kennedy is another experienced scenarist whose laurels have been won through a series of famous successes. Her presence on the staff is an indication of the Realart policy of giving its exhibitors the best at every angle of production. Some of her scripts include: 'A Pair of Silk Stockings,' 'Mrs. Lefingwell's Boots,' Constance Talmadge; 'The Rescued Angel,' Shirley Mason; 'Home Town Girl,' 'The Third Kiss,' Vivian Martin; 'All of a Sudden Peggy,' Marguerite Clark and 'Young Mrs. Winthrop,' Ethel Clayton.

"'Oh, Lady, Lady' gives Miss Daniels a splendid part of the 'good little bad girl' type which she has brought to such a success. Its fame as a stage production alone should mean thousands of dollars to the exhibitors."

"In the Bishop's Carriage" has also been secured for Miss Daniels. It is being adapted by Douglas Bronston from the famous book and play by Miriam Michelson. As the young girl crook Miss Daniels should score one of her greatest triumphs.

"The scenarist, Mr. Bronston, is one of our newest acquisitions. He comes to us after many years of continued success with Pathe, Fox, Universal and Famous Players-Lasky."

Woody's Statement

emphatically, and I know it to be a fact: What the exhibitors want more than anything else is good strong pictures. Given those, they'll fight their own battles and take care of their own finances.

"And that's what Realart aims to do—give exhibitors the very best brand of pictures that are obtainable. As to the quality of our products, what we put out last year is as fair a criterion as any. We do not wish to talk to exhibitors entirely in the future tense. Realart is willing to stand or fall by what it has done as well as what it intends to do."

"Movie Chats" Rousing Great Interest

Charles Urban, editor of "Movie Chats," one of the newest and best releases from the Kineto Company of America, Inc., said this week that the increase in interest in his "Movie Chats" was beyond his most hopeful expectations. He had on his desk a mass of inquiries from motion picture exhibitors and organizations, asking how they could make arrangements to book the "Movie Chats."

A typical request for information was one from an exhibitor in Redwood Falls, Minn. All he wrote was:

"Have you a distributor in Minnesota? I want to use your 'Movie Chats.'"

Mr. Urban credited the great quickening of interest in his "Movie Chats" to the recent trade paper advertising he has done, and he said that the general interest had progressed faster than he could develop his distributing organization.

Arrange for Release of "Dabney Todd"

C. A. Willat leaves New York this week after completing preliminary arrangements of Irvin Willat's first independent production. C. A. Willat, as general manager for his brother, Irvin Willat, has been in the East for conferences with the W. W. Hodgkinson Corporation, through whom future Willat productions will be released, beginning with "Dabney Todd" brought to the screen from the famous book of F. N. Westcott, author of "Hepsey Burke." Irvin Willat prepared the original continuity for this picture.

Schwab State-Righting "Fickle Women"

The D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc., have opened offices at 117 W. 46th street, New York, where they are state-righting their latest production "Fickle Women," starring David Butler together with an all-star cast. Territorial rights on this picture have already been closed with Ralph Clark of the New York First National Exchange and with F. M. Fabian of First National Exhibitors' Exchange of New Jersey.

STATE RIGHTS—EXPORT

Aids for "Tarzan" Picture Work Started on Advertising and Publicity Accessories for Serial

REALIZING to a maximum degree the immense public popularity of the now famous character of Tarzan, the ape man of the jungles, work was started this week on the advertising and publicity accessories which will accompany the fifteen-episode animal serial, "The Son of Tarzan," now being produced by the National Film Corporation for David P. Howells, Inc.

The completed campaign will provide a special line of accessories for each of the episodes, including at least three styles of posters, black and white and hand colored sets of photographs for lobby frames, slides and lithographed cut-outs figures for window and lobby trims.

Consultations between members of Mr. Howells' staff and a number of independent state rights exchange men who have already made tentative offers for "The Son of Tarzan," as the serial for fall distribution to succeed previous investments, has resulted in a plan of advertising and publicity campaign which will exceed the usual quantity of material available for a special feature attraction.

Information from exchange men and exhibitors strongly favored a maximum of supplies for use by theatre owners in advance of their presentation of the opening chapter. To this end, several styles of campaigns will be completed and available, when Mr. Howells begins the actual awarding of rights to domestic territorial buyers.

One of the novelty advertising features, which will constitute a trade mark for the entire fifteen episodes of the sensational experiences of the son of the ape man, is a group pose of the son of Tarzan, Meriem, the white jungle girl of mystery and Akut, the ape, who invades the social life of London seeking his former human companion, and whose venture takes the son of Tarzan far into the heart of the jungle haunts of his father's childhood. These three figures, symbolizing the outstanding characters of the serial, will be used in all of the important display advertising, on the posters, on the heralds, slides, for special cut-outs to be used as lobby and window displays.

"Wings of Pride" Out Soon Olive Tell in Star Role; Will Be Placed on State Right Market

"WINGS OF PRIDE," the third of the Jans Pictures, Inc., features, starring Olive Tell, is an adaptation of the popular novel by Louise Kennedy Mabie. It was produced under the personal direction of B. A. Rolfe of the Jans organization and will be ready soon for a showing.

The story of "Wings of Pride" concerns the life of a society girl, haughty and proud, who later learns that her father is nothing more nor less than a common drunkard. Her pride takes flight and she leaves the realms of society to go back to her old hometown, where she becomes a factor in a political fight.

It is said that the leading role in "Wings of Pride" provides Miss Tell with an unusually fine dramatic role, in which she is given every opportunity to register strongly. Any number of big scenes are shown in the picture such as a thrilling race between a speeding auto and a railroad train and a fight that is carried on in all the lower floors of a large house with a great number of people actively engaged.

"Wings of Pride" and the second Jans-Olive Tell feature "A Woman's Business," will be placed on the state rights market together. Both of them are said to be particularly fine photodramas, each telling a distinctly different but highly dramatic story. Advance criticisms of "Wings of Pride" and "A Woman's Business" place them as strong box-office attractions, containing just the elements that go into the making of photodramas that the public particularly like, says the Jans Pictures Corporation.

InterOcean Establishes West Coast Offices

Formal opening of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation's Los Angeles service office at 6,514 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, California, the first of three offices which the company proposes to establish on the West Coast, and which will serve as branch depots to accelerate shipments of American films and motion-picture accessory products into the Far Eastern film markets, was made this week, according to telegraphic advices which have reached officials of the company at their New York offices.

An entire building has been rented at the above address. Eugene H. Kaufman, manager of Inter-Ocean's Accessory Department, was the party who was instrumental in making suitable arrangements for its lease.

After remaining at the Hollywood office for a few weeks, Mr. Kaufman will proceed to San Francisco where plans are under way for the opening of another branch office. After his work in San Francisco, Mr. Kaufman's itinerary will take him into Portland, Oregon, where an additional branch office will be opened.

Georgia Hopkins Will Star for Arrow

Georgia Hopkins is to star in and to produce live-reel attractions for Arrow distribution. The acquisition of the new producing unit for Arrow is made in connection with the announcement that Miss Hopkins is heading her own producing company.

The initial release which will be ready for presentation to the independent buyers within the next three weeks is titled "A Bachelor Apartment," a five-reel comedy drama. It is announced as a "sundance," produced by "Hizzoner the Janitor." Joseph Farnham is now editing the production.

Reelcraft Expands Its Policy

Will Distribute Short Subjects of Independent Producers

NOT only Reelcraft productions but the productions of independent producers of short subjects are to be distributed by the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, according to the announcement of President R. C. Cropper, in outlining the plans of this company for the coming year.

"With both Reelcraft studios at Chicago and Hollywood scheduled for full production capacity, there is still a greater demand from our distributing exchanges than we are able to supply. To fulfill this demand Reelcraft has expanded its policy to permit the selling and distribution of independent productions of one and two-reels, that can pass the standard of quality set for the exclusive short-subject program of Reelcraft.

"A thorough analysis of the successful short subject reveals no magic; it requires no witchcraft to open the mystic door to success in the making of one and two-reel pictures," says R. C. Cropper. "It is only a matter of efficiency and organization. The great difficulty is in the securing of efficient people to build up the organization. No one firm has all of these efficient experts in its employ, I believe there are numerous capable short subject producers without the proper organization, and visa-versa there are other organizations without the experts. Personally, I am a firm believer in undiscovered genius and can truthfully say that Reelcraft has never yet refused to listen to any proposition presented to it, in fact we make it a point to encourage them.

"The independent producer of today stands as the only logical solution of the production end of the industry, and deserves the unlimited encouragement of every distributor. Where these independent producers, be they individuals or concerns, with a meritorious enterprise, Reelcraft, for one, stands ready to back them up, not only with its organization for world-wide distribution, but ready to buy their productions outright. There is room for all the short-subject producing concerns that can deliver the goods, and we stand ready to back the deserving ones to the limit.

"The short-subject field has ever been the weeding out process for the stars of tomorrow. It is true it means the hardest work, but the reward is equally great. Nearly all of the biggest stars of today (there are exceptions, of course), are the graduates of the one and two-reels. Take some of the biggest names in the industry, they all began with short-subjects: Mary Pickford, D. W. Griffiths, Tom Moore, George Melford, Fatty Arbuckle, Charley Chaplin, Mabel Normand, Babe Daniel, Harold Lloyd, Larry Seamon and numerous others. More over the opportunity is still there today just as much as ever, with the same great reward for those who can make good.

"During the coming year Reelcraft expects to triple the number of releases. Two new series have already been given to the exhibitors; and one of these, the Billy Franey single-reel comedies, has proved a genuine sensation in its immediate success among the exhibitors. That a star, only fairly well known, should be playing in over three thousand theatres throughout the United States by the time of release of his eighth picture is a wonderful accomplishment."

Reelcraft predicts the success for the series of two-reel Romances of Youth in which Matty Roubert is being featured. Reelcraft's latest announcement concerns the series of two-reel Royal Comedies soon to be put on the market and numbering among the early releases a picture titled "Buggins," in which Leon Errol of vaudeville fame is featured.

Bamberger and Levy Is Agent for Miller

Bamberger & Levy, motion-picture sales-agents in the Putnam Building, New York, have just completed arrangements with the Lejarin & Hiller Productions whereby they take over the exclusive selling agency throughout the entire world for the first production of this new producing company, entitled "The Sleep of Cymba Roget."

The story was written by Charles S. Gaskill. Lejarin & Hiller was the director. Helen Gardner plays the principal role. The cast is reported to be an unusually strong one, including Templer Saxe, C. D. Williams, Marc Connelly, Albert Tovell, Jenkins Dolive, Miss Leli Lamier, Mrs. Davenport, Countess Olga Treskoff, and William Anker. Negotiations with a national distributor for the release of this picture are said to be now in progress.

Victor Kremer Secures Arrow Film Series

Announcement was made this week from the Arrow offices, that Victor Kremer has signed for the Arrow series of mounted-police productions known as the "Blazed Trail" productions. These productions star Miss Dakota Lawrence. The same series has been contracted for by the Merit Film Corporation of Minneapolis according to the Arrow statement.

Fine Arts to Exploit Picture

ACCORDING to a statement of the Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., one of the largest newspaper syndicates in the country has expressed its willingness to cooperate with Fine Arts in its national exploitation campaign on "Up In Mary's Attic," the comedy-drama being distributed through state right exchanges.

The fact that Eva Novak, who portrays the leading role in the new production, is an expert swimmer and has won many prizes in swimming and diving contests prompted the syndicate to offer its assistance for the campaign states Fine Arts. A series of illustrated stories for the purpose of teaching girls the art of swimming and diving in addition to a full page layout for the Sunday magazine sections of the newspapers are reported to be in preparation for national distribution. A series of photographs, showing the young comedy star in various poses have been arranged for to be used to illustrate the series of articles.

"This is only one angle to the national advertising campaign being conducted for the aid of exhibitors booking the picture," it was announced by Murray W. Garsson, president of the company. "Arrangements have been completed with a number of concerns to cooperate from a national standpoint.

"The Mennen Company, which deals with drug stores, department stores, stationery stores and other retail houses in virtually every city of any size in the United States has agreed to cooperate through their agents for the purpose of devoting window space to "Up In Mary's Attic." A circular letter, directed to stores throughout the country regarding the possibilities of cooperative exploitation has brought hundreds of favorable replies.

"The Mennen Company is arranging for the preparation of cardboard cutouts of the baby featured in the picture to be used in the window display and the independent distributors handling the production and cooperating directly with the Mennen Agents.

"The Asbury Mills, one of the largest national distributors of women's bathing suits in the country, also has offered its huge clientele for the purpose of cooperative exploitation of their product and the picture.

"One of the largest advertising agencies in New York is aiding in this venture. A number of window displays already have been made in New York and pictures of them are being sent to the stores handling the bathing suits throughout the country as samples of ideal window displays.

"Arrangements also are being planned for national cooperation with a large sporting goods distributor. For this purpose enlargements are being made of the various gymnasium scenes, shown in 'Up In Mary's Attic.' Such an advertising campaign as this is bound to get results for the exhibitor."

Campaign Book Ready on Fine Arts Film

A twenty-four page campaign book in addition to a complete press-sheet has been prepared and is now available for the exploitation of "Up In Mary's Attic."

Arrow Negotiates Big Exchange Deals

What are said to be record contracts were signed last week between the Arrow Film Corporation and Pierce Films, Inc., of New Orleans, and the First National Exchange of Louisville.

Each of the exchanges contracted for fifteen features according to the Arrow statement. Both exchanges signed for the same fifteen productions. The features include the "Tex" series of twelve mystery pictures which are meeting with a decided success over the country and the three features, "Desert Scorpion," "Wolves of the Street," and "The Chamber Mystery."

Aywon Will Release Two-Reel Series

A series of fifteen two-reel Western features, starring Harry Carey, are to be released through The Aywon Film Corporation, according to an announcement just issued by Nathan Hirsch, president of the company. The Aywon Film Corporation will release one of the Harry Carey two-reel Westerns each week. The first release date to be announced later.

Paper, advertising helps and accessories will be made available by Aywon on this series. A press sheet will also be issued by Aywon.

New Company to Handle Pictures Abroad

Sidney Garrett as president of the new company of foreign distributors recently formed under the name of Sidney Garrett, Inc., is one of the best judges of American films for foreign markets. He was recently associated with J. Frank Brocklis, and he signals his entrance into the field under his own banner by placing his first big contract with W. W. Hodkinson Corporation this week. Mr. Garrett's first contract covers The Dial Film Company production of "King Spruce" and eight J. Warren Kerrigan pictures.

New Zealand, Australia, Tasmania, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden will be covered by the new firm.

Howells Forms New Company

To Deal with Europe and Asia on Basis of Territorial Rights

IN conformity with the established policy of dealing direct with each territorial unit in the foreign field, David P. Howells has formed a new company to cover the territory of Spain, Italy, the Balkan States, Greece, Turkey and Egypt.

This latest expansion of the Howells activities is known as the Howells Picture Corporation. Associated with Mr. Howells in this new enterprise are the Luporini Brothers, Ferdinando and Mario, well known throughout the motion picture business both in this country and abroad. In conjunction with Mr. Howells both of these gentlemen are officers and stockholders in the new company. The offices of the new corporation will be adjacent to the present Howells offices on the eleventh floor of the Godfrey Building at 729 Seventh Avenue.

The entire general and detailed direction of the activities of the new company will be in the hands of the Luporini Brothers. They are both American citizens though born in Italy, where they had extensive film interests as well as in Spain.

Mario Luporini has just returned to this country from an extensive tour of Italy and Spain studying film conditions throughout these countries as they now exist. He brought back with him a comprehensive knowledge of the entire Italian and Spanish situation with the detailed requirements of each country and just what is required from the American market to fill the demand.

Mr. Luporini will leave in the near future for another long trip in which he will visit every important film center in the entire zone covered by the new company. This trip will be for the purpose of establishing branch offices and representatives throughout Italy, Spain, Portugal, each one of the Balkan States, Greece, Turkey and Egypt. On this trip he will visit every film buyer of consequence in each of the countries mentioned for the purpose of selling to them direct the pictures of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

In explanation of the policy responsible for this move on the part of the Howells organization, the following statement has been issued:

"The policy of the David P. Howells organization is based primarily on service, and this will likewise be the policy of the Howells Pictures Corporation. For this reason, it was decided to make this territory which in the past has been handled from the Paris office as a separate and distinct unit.

"To dispose of the First National Pictures to one big company covering this entire territory would not conform in the least to the Howells' policy of service. Consequently, it has been decided to operate under a plan similar to the states rights plan in this country. In other words, each little country will be handled individually, the rights to that country being sold to some buyer who thoroughly understands the requirements and is best fitted to supply them.

"Definite plans are now being formulated not only to sell American pictures in Latin Europe but to buy both Italian and Spanish pictures for distribution in this country. It is expected in course of time that this form of activity of the new enterprise will develop into an enormous business.

"Several years ago the only really big spectacles in the business were made exclusively in Italy. The old timers will recall the enormous success of The Last Days of Pompeii and Quo Vadis, brought to this country and exploited by George Kleine."

Hallmark Announces Releases

A BUSY summer and fall season is expected by Frank C. Hall, president of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, with what is conceded to be the biggest and most complete list of star pictures for release under the banner of this organization. The list includes more than fifty Triangle star productions in five or more reels and a series of twenty-six Sennett produced comedies of two reels each. The list of feature productions features some of the most popular stars of the screen today, including Charles Ray, Louise Glaum, Frank Keenan, Dorothy Dalton, Constance Talmadge, Dustin Farnum, Bessie Barriscale, Douglas Fairbanks, Wm. S. Hart, Norma Talmadge.

Two of these Triangle specials have already been released. They are: "The Pinch Hitter" starring Charles Ray and "Love or Justice" starring Louise Glaum. "The Aryan," a recreated William S. Hart feature to be released in the near future is conceded to be one of the biggest star productions ever released, including as it does the names of William S. Hart, Louise Glaum and Bessie Love. "The Coward," another one of the recreated Triangle specials to be released in the near future stars Charles Ray and Frank Keenan. The three of Douglas Fairbanks former successes are on the list including "The Americano," "The Lamb" and "The Habit of Happiness."

This list of recreated Triangle specials has been taken over by Hallmark for distribution in the territories upon which state rights have not been sold. With each one of these features Mr. Hall holds the exclusive rights for distribution in New York. These series of pictures are being retitled and re-edited by Hopp Hadley.

The list of twenty-six Sennett produced comedies in two reels which Mr. Hall has taken over with the fifty-two special features for distribution, star such popular comedians as Polly Moran, Walin Trask, Bobby Vernon, Gloria Swanson, Chester Conklin, Dora Rogers, J. Hanson, R. Milliken, M. Trick, F. Dwiggens, F. Shade, Ford Sterling, Mack Swain, L. Fazenda, Wayland Trask, C. Murray, S. Summerville, B. Armstrong, M. Wayne, C. Woodward, Geo. Hims, Blanche Payson, Harry Gribbon, M. Thurman, Chester Conklin, Ben Turpin, Glen Cavender, P. Pearce, Ethel Tearle, Fay Tincher and A. St. John.

Included in this list of comedies are what are conceded to be some of the best comedy productions ever made by Mack Sennett during his association with the old Ince-Triangle organization.

In addition to these re-created subjects, Mr. Hall has on his list of specials his own productions including "The Discarded Woman" released in June starring Grace Darling and Rod La Rocque; "For Love or Money" starring Virginia Lee, a former Ziegfeld Follies beauty; and "The Common Sin" starring Grace Darling and Rod La Rocque, all three of which are Burton King productions made especially for release by Hallmark Pictures.

"Should a Wife Work," a Plimpton production starring Edith Stockton, is also included in this list of Hallmark special feature releases.

In Hallmark's series of releases are included "Wits vs. Wits" starring Marguerite Marsh; "High Speed" co-starring Edward Earle and Gladys Ingle; "Chains of Evidence" starring Edmund Breese, Anna Lehr and Marie Shotwell; "Carmen of the North" starring Anna Bos; and "The Veiled Marriage" co-starring Anna Lehr and Ralph Kellard.

Foreign Importation Approved

INTER-OCEAN FILM CORPORATION, in a statement issued to the trade press this week, warmly approves the resolution unanimously adopted at the recent exhibitors' convention in Cleveland, urging the importation of foreign-made motion pictures as an incentive to stimulate American competition, and places itself on record to pledge its cooperation in obtaining for American distribution the best cinema offerings available in foreign film markets.

The Inter-Ocean statement follows:

"The most important move made by the exhibitors assembled in convention at Cleveland was the resolution introduced and unanimously adopted to encourage the importation of the motion picture offerings of our foreign conferees. The problem of importing the product of other countries has confronted the motion picture industry for a long time, but we are glad to see that it had remained for the American exhibitor to take the initiative on this all-important question.

"The readiness and willingness which characterized the attitude of the exhibitors assembled, to book all high-class features, regardless of the source of production, is testimony to the splendid showmanship and wisdom of the American exhibitor. While the estimated number of exhibitors who attended the Cleveland convention is said to have been between 700 and 800, we feel certain that in unanimously adopting the resolution this body of showmen were re-echoing the spirit of every exhibitor in this country.

"Productions made in foreign countries have improved more than one hundred per cent. within the past two years, according to advances which we have received from our representatives in the principal producing centers of the world. While we concede that the standard of foreign-made pictures is not up to the American standard we must not overlook the fact that encouragement and constructive criticism is what the foreign producer needs most. And the unqualified stand of the exhibitors at the recent convention is to our way of thinking, the first move that has been made in this direction."

The resolution urging the importation of high-class foreign-made films is in line with our Mr. Schlesinger's recently published interview in the trade press regarding the distribution in this country of British-made productions. In part he said:

"In making pictures in the future, England and America must concentrate on the production of pictures containing an international appeal. The film markets of the world are reopening; new markets are being discovered; and the demand for films is greater now than at any other period. Motion pictures are becoming recognized everywhere as the standard form of amusement. There is room for every country's films everywhere—provided of course the pictures in question are patterned after the successful prototype in picture production.

"We again reiterate our stand taken then and approve the importation of the foreign-made film as expressed in the resolution adopted in Cleveland. In this connection we pledge our organization and our many years of wide experience in foreign countries to the cause of obtaining the finest foreign-made productions available.

"We have instructed our representatives in the principal producing centers of the world to be on the lookout for big foreign productions, and we hope to be able to announce within a short time the acquisition of several big productions for distribution in this country."

Film Passed by Censor Board after Delay

The announcement is made that "The Greater Sinner," co-starring James K. Hackett and Ormi Hawley, has been passed by the Board of Censors of Pennsylvania two months after its first presentation to that body. The board rejected the picture on the ground that it was immoral, it is stated. The owners contended that it taught a moral lesson, dealing as it does with a young girl's inherited taste for drink and the action of her husband in forcing her to partake in the fast life of a younger society set in New York.

The Great Sinner Company retained Carl Horton Pierce to reopen the case in behalf of the production. Two of the sub-titles considered objectionable by the board were eliminated and substitutes written; and a "flash-back" adjudged by the board to be unnecessary was cut out. The picture was then passed, it is stated. The picture is being handled on the state-rights basis.

"Madonnas and Men" Brings Inquiries

The Jans Pictures, Inc., announce that since the invitation-presentation of "Madonnas and Men" at the 44th Street theatre, New York, three weeks ago, inquiries from representative buyers all over the country have been reaching the Jans offices concerning the pictures. No decision has been reached as to the method of release to be adopted for this production. Quite a number of proposals have been received, states, Jans, but as yet none of them have been definitely adopted.

Hemmer Lining-Up First Cast

RADICAL departure from recognized methods in motion picture production is promised by Hemmer Superior Productions, Inc., now engaged in making its first feature film. Edward Hemmer, president, plans to turn out a minimum of four big productions a year. The first production, according to Mr. Hemmer, will be ready for release in the very near future.

When discussing his plans for the future Mr. Hemmer pointed out that in forming the present company he had decided to introduce into his methods radical changes which he considered necessary if his productions were to live up to the standard he had set for them.

"In the last ten years," he continued, "there has been a gradual but marked change in the producing end of the motion picture business. To keep abreast of those changes means progress, the sort of progress that gives the public what it wants. We are going to guide our work according to these changes in order to give the public exactly what it wants in a play."

"One of these changes is a good screen story. I intend producing romantic dramas, the stories of which are bound to find popular favor. The American public is essentially a motion picture public and in the past their patience very frequently has been abused by producing companies that were not honest in their dealings. Any kind of a cheap story, carrying a cheap sentimental appeal was good enough. That day is not yet dead and I intend to hasten its demise. My association with Mary Pickford for six years as her manager has taught me the necessity of giving the public not only a star that they will like but also to give that star a starring vehicle."

In commenting upon independent motion picture producing companies, Mr. Hemmer emphasized the fact that eighty per cent. of the most successful pictures during the last two years have been made by independent producers.

"There is an open market," he said, "and the best proof of that is that every good picture finds a ready and profitable market with competitive bids from releasing houses."

Though the cast is not yet complete, Mr. Hemmer already has surrounded himself with such stars as Flora Finch, who first won popularity in her parts with the late John Bunny, Pete Raymond, character man of twenty-eight years' experience on the legitimate stage, who played with Ethel Barrymore, was with Belasco and the Shuberts, is another old time favorite known both to theatregoers and motion-picture devotees.

Concerning the other figures scheduled to appear in the initial production, the Hemmer Superior Productions has the following to say:

"Maud Sylvester, ingenue of the cast, is destined, through the forthcoming production, to write her name indelibly in the heart of the public. Tiny three-year-old Peggy Parnell, baby vamp of the cast, is quite the champ and will vie favorably with her older sister and brother artists.

"Then there are a number of other 'kid' stars, such as eleven-year-old Milton Berlinger, juvenile impersonator of Al Jolson, Opie Read, a veteran screen 'kid,' Thor Larsen and Phil and James Brady, both of whom were raised in a studio from infancy.

Metro President Issues Statement

"OUR policy of bigger and better pictures, inaugurated so successfully in 1919-20, will be continued and expanded for 1920," says an official statement by Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, outlining the company's plans for the coming year. "Approximately fifty big productions will be produced. In wealth of story, direction, acting and mounting as well as in variety and general excellence, they will be the greatest ever offered the exhibitor and the public."

"The genius and energy of our producing forces in our eastern and western studios is sparing neither time nor money to make these tremendous features the last word in box-office value and screen art. In addition to six big specials, to be made by each of our world-renowned stars, there will be a series of super productions with all-star casts."

"The good will and success we have earned by our past relations with the exhibitor will be continued and cemented. Our pictures will be rented upon a flat rental basis, or if it is preferred, upon the percentage plan. We have no axes to grind. Our policy is a policy of 'live and let live,' with pictures at a price the exhibitor can afford to pay."

"In its array of noted authors," says the Rowland statement, "Metro yields supremacy to no other organization in the industry. Accepting the truth of the motion picture axiom that the story is the most essential groundwork of the successful production, Metro has seen to it that the stories for its pictures shall be the best obtainable from any source whatsoever. No less than four established playwrights—Bayard Veiller, Eugene Walter, Winchell Smith and Eugene Presbey—are regularly under contract with Metro and will not only contribute their original work but actively and personally supervise the translation of that work from the manuscript of the theatre to the screen."

"We have built up our authorial staff consistently and carefully, selecting our writers from the two fields of contemporaneous drama and contemporaneous fiction. Eight nationally and internationally known writers of fiction stories—Irvin S. Cobb, Henry C. Rowland, Arthur Somers Roche, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Donn Byrne, George Kibbe Turner, Hulbert Footner and Arthur Stringer—will reinforce the literary and supervisory efforts of our quartet of dramatists in supplying quality material for Metro pictures."

"Last fall," the statement goes on, "we made some big claims for our pictures. They were claims that some people in the industry may have thought could not be substantiated. But we are happy to say right now that we have more than made good every one of them. We said we were going to make bigger and better pictures than Metro had ever made before. We said we were going to stress the story and the prestige of its authorship as prime factors. We said that we were going to increase substantially the popular following that Metro productions then enjoyed, and that this increase would directly and materially benefit the showman exhibiting our pictures."

"All these things we are proud to say we have accomplished; ask no one to accept our say-so on this matter; the unsolicited testimony of countless exhibitors throughout this country, in Canada, and even in Europe, will bear out these assertions. Never before has Metro received so many letters and other messages of commendation from the so-called 'hard-headed and hard-boiled' business men who show pictures for their livelihood, and who as a rule are backward rather than forward in their bestowal of praise."

Metro Announces Releases

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION announces the completion of a tentative schedule of releases from July up to and including January, 1921. Twenty-six special productions are in the list. These include twenty made by Metro Pictures Corporation, three by C. E. Shurtliff, Inc., one S-L production and one Robert Harron production. All of them are six reels, or special-feature-length.

The compilation of this schedule gives an opportunity to the Metro branch and exchange managers for a fall sales drive of unprecedented strength. In most cases the prints will be in the hands of the managers four to six weeks ahead of the date of release, says Metro.

Two Metro specials will be released in July. "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," adapted by June Mathis and A. P. Younger from the stage success by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, goes out on July 5. It will have an all-star cast. The director is Edward Dillon. On July 19, "The Misfit Wife," featuring Alice Lake, is marked for release. It is an adaptation by Lois Zellner and A. P. Younger of a stage drama by Julie Herne, daughter of the late James A. Herne. The director is Edward Mortimer.

Three releases are scheduled for August. The first will be "Held in Trust," starring May Allison. It will be seen on August 2. John E. Ince is director. "The Chorus Girl's Romance," starring Viola Dana, will be released August 16. The picture is founded on F. Scott Fitzgerald's Saturday Evening Post story, "Head and Shoulders." On August 23 comes "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," a Shurtliff production, with an all-star cast, including Mitchell Lewis, Helen Ferguson and William V. Mong. The director is Edward Slobman.

Five productions will go out in September. On the first of the month, an all-star cast including Jack Muhlhall, Ruth Stonehorn, Frank Elliott and Marguerite de la Motte, will be seen in "The Hope." An S-L production, "Love, Honor and Obey," adapted by Eugene Walter from Charles Neville Buck's novel, "The Tyranny of Weakness," will be released September 6. It will have an all-star cast including Wilda Bennett, Claire Whitney, Kenneth Harlan, Henry Harmon and E. J. Ratcliffe. The director is Leander de Cordova. "The Price of Redemption," starring Bert Lytell, is scheduled for September 15. It is an adaptation by June Mathis of I. A. R. Wylie's novel, "The Temple of Dawn," directed by Dallas M. Fitzgerald.

"The Saphead," co-starring William H. Crane and Buster Keaton, comes out on September 20. The production was made under the personal supervision of Winchell Smith, co-author with Victor Mapes of "The New Henrietta" from which "The Saphead" was adapted by June Mathis. Herbert Blache is the director. September 27 will see the all-star production of "Clothes," adapted by Arthur Zeller from the stage play by Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock. Fred Sittenham is the director.

October 4 will be the date of the production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," June Mathis's adaptation of Vincente Blasco Ibanez's great war novel. It will be produced under the direction of Rex Ingram with an all-star cast. The Robert Harron production of "Coincidence" is to be released on October 25.

November will see five productions. The first of the month will bring forth "The Marriages of Mayfair," adapted by Julia Burnham from the spectacular melodrama by Cecil Raleigh. George W. Terwilliger was director. "Fine Feathers" is scheduled for November 8.

"Polly with a Past," starring Ina Claire, goes out November 15. On November 22, "The Star Rover," another Shurtliff production, will be seen with an all-star cast. May Allison will be seen on November 29 in "Are All Men Alike."

To Erect Big Cabaret on Studio Stages

William C. Dowland, director of "The Chorus Girl's Romance," Viola Dana's forthcoming Metro production, decided to build the interior of the cabaret, as called for in the script, on one of the big Hollywood studio stages. No cabaret in Los Angeles is of sufficient size, it is said, to represent this particular locale of the story.

Philip Rosen to Direct May Allison Feature

Philip E. Rosen has been signed by Metro to direct "Are All Men Alike?" May Allison's new starring vehicle. Mr. Rosen has moved into his office at the Metro studios, and is completing preparations for starting the actual filming of the picture, which was adapted by A. P. Younger from Arthur Stringer's story, "The Waife Iron," as published in McClure's Magazine.

June Mathis Adapting Ibanez Novels : : :

JUNE MATHIS, head of Metro's scenario department, left the New York studios recently for Hollywood, California, to undertake her share in what she regards as the greatest effort Metro has ever attempted—the production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," founded upon the sensational novel by Vicente Blasco Ibañez.

Miss Mathis came to New York several weeks ago when the intention was to have the production made here. Locations had been selected for the big open air scenes, but in general they were regarded as unsatisfactory. After a conference among Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro, Maxwell Karger, director general and Miss Mathis, it was decided to have the production switched again to the Pacific Coast, where the locations afford better opportunities for the realization of Miss Mathis's ideals.

"The main idea in having the production made in the East," she said before leaving New York, "was that it might have the benefit of the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger. But Mr. Karger already has in hand the productions of 'Polly With a Past,' with Ina Claire, 'The Misleading Lady,' with Bert Lytell, and has started preliminary work on Eugene Walter's 'Fine Feathers.'"

"He has selected Rex Ingram to direct the production in the West. It is probably the most important assignment that has been given to a director this year, and I am very glad Rex Ingram got it."

"I think 'The Four Horsemen' will be an inspiration to everybody connected with it. For my own part, I have lived with the story for months. I have developed the screen version so that it follows the book very closely. I have retained the South American opening, with the wonderful character of Madariaga, the Centaur. The Four Horsemen themselves will be seen, carrying out in detail the thrilling description in the Book of the Apocalypse of John's vision, which the war made so horribly true—the vision of Pestilence, Death, Famine and War riding through the human race. The great drawings of Albert Durer will afford guidance in these scenes. Then there will be the exciting scenes of the last social life in Paris, with Julio as the society tango dancer amid the madly frivolous atmosphere that made Paris what it was in those days. The biggest scenes of course will be those depicting the Battle of the Marne."

The screen rights for "The Four Horsemen" were purchased by Metro when the great novel by Vicente Blasco Ibañez was at the top crest of its world-wide popularity. The purchase was made in the face of heavy competitive bidding. As a preliminary step to the production, June Mathis was summoned from California to New York for a conference with Señor Ibañez. She was at that time inishing the screen version of "Old Lady 31," which delayed her a few days in Hollywood. When she arrived in New York, Ibañez had left on his lecture tour, and she set out in Chicago.

There the Spanish novelist and the American scenario writer held a long conference over the screen adaptation. Ibañez had already some experience with motion pictures in France and his understanding of screen technique facilitated the preparatory stages of the work. Miss Mathis set to work immediately on the scenario and had a completed draft ready when Ibañez arrived in Hollywood for a second conference.

Karger Supervising in New York Studios

WITH Maxwell Karger, director general, at the helm, Metro's New York studios in West Sixty-first street are humming with the high-tension activity that characterized them before war restrictions operated to send all of the company's producing forces west. Finishing touches are being put on three big special productions under Director General Karger's personal supervision. These pictures are "The Marriage of Mayfair," "Love, Honor and Obey" and "Clothes." The first two have all-star casts. In "Clothes," Olive Tell and Crauford Kent have been selected thus far as the featured players.

Very shortly Bert Lytell will resume his work before the camera at the New York studios, which will be the scene also of the notable production of "Polly with a Past," starring Ina Claire.

Nazimova in Unusual Settings : : : : :

Nazimova, brilliant emotional star, contributor to Metro's program in Nazimova Productions

NAZIMOVA has completed all work before the camera for her next feature production, "Billions," adapted by Charles Bryant from a celebrated French stage play. This is the first of four unusual productions which will constitute the Russian star's program for the latter part of this year and for 1921.

Her character in "Billions" differs sharply from any role in which she has ever appeared either on stage or screen; and the plot of the comedy drama is described by Metro as one of which the outcome is impossible to forecast until the final fade-out.

Although no announcement has come from the Metro studios in Hollywood, where Nazimova makes her pictures, regarding the complete list of plays for presentation during this year and next, it is known that "Madame Peacock," by Rita Weiman, author of the current New York theatrical success, "The Acquittal," will be one of them.

Not only has she enacted the principal role in "Billions," but she is also credited with having designed and supervised the execution of stage settings, giving her personal attention to lighting effects. She is at present cutting, titling and assembling the picture. As a result the public will be rewarded says Metro, by a photoplay which in every particular is the work of the Russian actress with the exception of the direction by Ray C. Smallwood, the photography by Rudolph J. Bergquist and the scenario by Charles Bryant.

The swiftly moving action of the comedy has made possible use of numerous unusual and fanciful sets, all of which have been designed under the personal supervision of Nazimova. Simplicity, however, has been the keynote, even where the bizarre was sought.

One of the effective touches of the production comes at the very opening of the picture, where the scene is laid in a fictitious city of an equally fictitious Slavic nation. Although the street that is revealed to the spectator is marked by its simplicity, the spirit of pre-war times in this particular corner of the world—the era of intrigue and dark mysteries—has been so convincingly reproduced as to arouse a doubt that it actually was filmed at Metro's Hollywood studios this year, declares Metro.

Another set, and one that will delight the eye of every woman, shows the deft feminine touch of Nazimova in the treatment of the interior of a New York apartment. The sense of luxury and unlimited wealth is conveyed rather by artistic arrangement of its few superb tapestries and regal vastness of proportions than by the unintelligently lavish expenditure of money that is usually considered necessary in such a picture.

A garden of dreams, in which an effort has been made to visualize the ordinarily inarticulate mental operations of one asleep, is the product of numerous conferences between the technical experts at the Metro plant, the electricians, and Nazimova. Even a hint of the result of their work has not as yet been disclosed to any but the favored few who already have been permitted to see it.

Some idea of the painstaking care with which Nazimova watches the development of all her pictures may be gained from the fact that she took the part of an extra in one of the big scenes in order to achieve certainly her conception of "atmosphere," and direct the work of the less important players.

"I'll send over to the casting department for the extras in this scene," said Ray Smallwood, the director, when the need for more people for the big scene became imminent.

"Not at all," replied Nazimova, "We'll take care of it by ourselves."

Whereupon she seized a shawl, tucked up her skirt, patted another part of her costume, twisted her hair back and suddenly was transformed unrecognizably into just the type she wanted for an extra.

Bert Lytell in Interesting Roles : : : :

BERT LYTELL starts camera work this week on his new starring vehicle, "The Misleading Lady," by Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey, at Metro's New York studios, No. 3 West Sixty-first street. This is the first of four pictures, selected by Mr. Lytell for New York production, and will occupy his time for a year. This production marks the return of the popular star to the East after two years spent at Metro's Western studios in Hollywood, California, where he recently completed camera work on a special feature, "The Price of Redemption," from the novel, "The Temple of Dawn," by I. A. R. Wylie. This will be among Metro's fall releases.

Following "The Misleading Lady," Mr. Lytell will be seen in "A Message from Mars," the fantastic comedy by Richard Ganther, which Charles Hawtree played on the stage for many years in both the United States and England.

Then comes "The Prisoner of Zenda," a screen version of Anthony Hope's novel, in which Mr. Lytell will play Rudolph Rassendyl. This is a role in which Mr. Lytell scored one of his greatest stage successes as a stock company leading man. It will be the first essentially romantic role of his recent screen career.

There has been a steady crescendo of attainment in Mr. Lytell's screen achievements in his recent productions. Starting with "Lombardi, Ltd.," the Morosco stage comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, he won unstinted praise for the delicate artistry and warmth of Latin temperament he brought to his characterization of Tito Lombardi, the Italian modiste. Then came Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way." Critics were unanimous in acclaiming his performance of "Beauty." Steele as one of the great achievements of the screen. As the cynical Montreal lawyer buoyed to dashing recklessness by drink, only later to find regeneration in simple, good works, Mr. Lytell made an unforgettable impression, Paul Armstrong's "Alias Jimmy Valentine," from O. Henry's story, followed. It was a piece of straightforward acting in which the charm was heightened by the fascination of Mr. Lytell's personality.

"I played 'myself' pretty much when I did 'Jimmy,'" said the star, commenting upon the production. "And that's just the thing I wish generally to avoid. I like best a role in which I can completely submerge my own personality in the character. The Price of Redemption, I'm convinced, afforded me the greatest opportunity of my career. I feel that in it I have done the best work I ever did."

In "The Price of Redemption," Mr. Lytell plays Leigh Dering, a young British officer who saves the garrison at a post in India from massacre at the hands of revolting natives. He turns to England, where he is lionized as a hero. At the height of his popularity he married a rich girl for the sake of the social prestige it will bring him.

The couple discover that their union is a misalliance. His wife's father is murdered by a woman he has wronged. Leigh Dering witnesses the deed, but, desperately disgusted at his unhappy marriage and weary of society life, he shoulders blame for the crime and flees from England back to the heart of India. There he realizes he is an outcast. He lives with the natives and sinks to the bottom depths of degradation. From a drunkard he becomes a drug addict. A strange development in his life fires him with a desire for regeneration. His fight back to spiritual triumph is painted in masterly strokes, declares Metro.

Lauds "A Splendid Hazard"

Press of Indianapolis Give Much Praise to Dwan's Latest Picture

DESPITE the combined opposition of the first hot spell encountered by Indianapolis and the celebration of the city's centennial, Allan Dwan's latest independent production, "A Splendid Hazard," in its initial presentation at the Circle theatre last week, is said to have drawn capacity audiences throughout the entire week of its showing. The production won the unqualified endorsement of the local press.

Walter D. Hickman, reviewing the Dwan production for the Indiana Daily Times under the heading of "Walthall Triumphs in 'A Splendid Hazard,'" said: "Success Again! Another Screen Triumph. Henry B. Walthall and Allan Dwan have scored a screen victory in producing 'A Splendid Hazard.' Romance and adventure in its purest form have been woven into a dream with a punch never equalled within the experience of the writer. We remember Henry B. Walthall for his work in 'The Birth of a Nation,' but it remained for Dwan to bring out the finest character work so far revealed in Walthall's screen career. Walthall's acting is perfect acting if there ever was perfect acting."

The Indianapolis Star in referring to Walthall's acting says: "With the ease of the actor, either born or made, he dominates every scene and makes this difficult role the finest work of his career." The News voiced its enthusiasm in the following manner: "The producers of 'The Miracle Man' and 'Soldiers of Fortune' have turned out another big film, 'A Splendid Hazard.' It gives evidences of the same discriminating casting, meticulous direction and apparently unlimited expenditure of money as the other Mayflower pictures. A Harold McGrath novel, characteristically brimming with adventure and love motifs is excellently employed as the foundation for thrilling picture." The critic further likens Walthall's acting to "an electric thrill."

Ina Claire in "Polly With a Past" : :

INA CLAIRE, star of "The Gold Diggers," makes her first appearance before the motion picture camera this week at Metro's New York studios, No. 3 West Sixty-first street, when she starts a screen version of her first big stage success, "Polly With a Past." Until the completion of the picture Miss Claire will work every day at the studios, except when theatre matinees interfere. She will continue to appear in "The Gold Diggers" at night.

The scenario of "Polly With a Past," from the play by George

Middleton and Guy Bolton, is being written by June Mathis, the head of Metro's scenario department. The first episodes of Miss Mathis's version of "Polly With a Past" are already in final form, and it is upon these episodes that Ina Claire will start work this week.

Miss Claire's director in this production will be Leander de Cordova, who has just completed camera work on the S-L production of "Love, Honor and Obey," Eugene Walter's adaptation of "The Tyranny of Weakness," the novel by Charles Neville Buck. This will be released by Metro.

In acquiring Ina Claire, the brilliant young Belasco stage star for the screen, and in securing at the same time the picture rights to "Polly With a Past," Metro officials feel that they scored another coup as sensational and important as their purchase of Blasco Ibanez's "The Four Horsemen" for the silver sheet. Miss Claire's prestige in the dramatic world, her youth, beauty and captivating personality, have combined to make her a star much sought after by motion picture producers.

Metro announces that the production will be on a scale of lavishness that will take neither time limits, cost nor painstaking effort into consideration. Miss Claire will display a wealth of beautiful gowns of the latest mode, and the interior settings, all of them designed by a technical expert, will be massive and beautiful in the extreme, according to Metro's statement.

To Increase All-Star Productions : : : :

THE unusual success in the recent past with all-star productions of famous stage hits and best selling novels has caused to be included prominently in Metro's plans for the future a still further and more extensive production of this class of picture, announces the Metro Picture Corporation.

With the inauguration of the "fewer and better" series of productions last fall, it soon became evident to the producing staff at the company's big studios in Hollywood that to present such stories and plays as the company has purchased for the screen it would be necessary to contract for not one star in such photoplays, but entire casts of stellar grade.

"Though we are aware that the public is interested in personalities," remarked an official of the Metro organization this week, "we are no less aware that after all the story is the thing—the production. What people really go to the motion picture theatres for is to be entertained; and if the picture presented at the theatre is weak for lack of proper balance, or is top-heavy because of the prominence of the part a star is to enact, then that picture has failed in entertainment value.

"The solution of this, obviously, is not to do away with stars, not arbitrarily to say: 'No matter whether you like this star or not, she or he is not suited to the story, and so we won't let you see that star.' It is rather the reverse: since the public likes personalities, yet does not feel satisfied merely with a series of close-ups of stars, the cast into the production several players of first-water ability, so that it shall not be necessary for one star to carry the entire picture.

"This arrangement is really much better for the principal players. Every actor knows that, unless the cast works together, unless everyone on the stage plays up to the mood demanded of a scene, that scene will fail; it will drop like an airplane striking a dead spot or an air-pocket. Hence Metro has striven to eliminate any air-pockets from the atmosphere of its productions. And we believe confidently that our pictures make new altitude records as a consequence, new marks both from the standpoint of artistry and popular appeal."

Augments Staff of Writers : : : : :

F. SCOTT FITZGERALD and Arthur Stringer are announced by Metro as the most recent additions to the company's galaxy of distinguished authors. Contracts have just been concluded whereby Metro obtains first call on the literary output of Mr. Fitzgerald, the brilliant young author who flashed into fame with the publication of his initial novel, "This Side of Paradise"; and of Mr. Stringer, writer of quite innumerable tales and verses whose work, in short, has been continuously popular with a generation of magazine readers.

Conclusion of its agreements with Messrs. Fitzgerald and Stringer follows closely upon the recent announcement by the Metro president, Richard A. Rowland, of the acquisition of seven other noteworthy contributors to contemporary drama and fiction—Irvin S. Cobb, George Kibbe Turner, Eugene Presbrey, the playwright; Arthur Somers Roche, Hulbert Footner, Henry C. Rowland and Donn Byrne. These nine supplement the three famous dramatists who form the arch-and keystone of Metro's creative structure—Eugene Walter, Bayard Veiller and Winchell Smith.

"The signing of these contracts," said Richard A. Rowland, "means that Metro has the greatest literary department in the history of the motion picture industry. I make the statement without qualification, because the names of the writers speak for themselves. Each one is a writer who has obtained a tremendous following on the stage or in the magazines and moreover each one is a writer capable of producing pictures of distinct originality, popular appeal, and artistic value.

Eugene Walter has just completed camera work on his first picture, "Love, Honor and Obey." Bayard Veiller is now writing a scenario for a new picture which will be a sequel to "Within the Law." He is also serving in the capacity of chief of production at Hollywood. Winchell Smith has just completed production of "The Saphead" in Hollywood.

Vignola's New Picture Developing Fast

Robert G. Vignola is rapidly nearing the completion of his second feature for Cosmopolitan Productions, "The Passionate Pilgrim," from the story of the same name by Samuel Merwin. Under his direction the Merwin story is reported to be developing into a strong screen production,

Big New York Theatres Book Lloyd Series

Three of New York's biggest motion picture circuits have booked the new series of Harold Lloyd two-reel comedies, released by Pathe. The Loew, B. F. Keith and B. S. Moss houses will feature the new works of the young comedian, beginning with the release which follows "An Eastern Westerner," the last of his first two-reel series.

Viola Dana Stars in "Blackmail" : : :

PRELIMINARY work has been started at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood on the production of the special feature, "Blackmail," with Viola Dana in the stellar role. This is to be a crook melodrama, based on the story of the same name by Lucia Chamberlain, which appeared serially in The Saturday Evening Post. Bayard Veiller, chief of production, has selected Dallas M. Fitzgerald to direct "Blackmail." Mr. Fitzgerald recently finished directing Bert Lytell in "The Price of Redemption," a spectacular adaptation of the novel, "The Temple of Dawn," by I. A. R. Wylie. "Blackmail" is described as a fascinating tale of New York's polite underworld. Miss Dana has the role of Flossie Golden, who becomes for a time the tool of a band of silk-hatted lawbreakers. A. S. Le Veno of the Metro scenario staff prepared the continuity from the Chamberlain story.

Three of the supporting male players have thus far been selected. They comprise Wyndham Standing, who will play the lead opposite the star; Alfred Allen and Edward Cecil.

Wyndham Standing, tall idol of an army of followers of both the speaking stage and the silent drama, will enact the part of the resourceful Lawyer Harding in the picture. On the screen, he is best known for his work in "Paid in Full," "Eyes of the Soul," "The Witness for the Defense," "A Modern Salome," and "Earth Bound." "Blackmail" will be his first picture for Metro.

Alfred Allen recently played in "Burning Daylight," the first Jack London story to be filmed by C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., for release by Metro. Mr. Allen will have the part of Golden, the leader of the group of crooks in the Dana production. "Blackmail" is his second picture for Metro.

Star In Greenwich Village Story : : :

VOICES of director and cameramen awoke strange echoes in the corridors of one of the most exclusive homes in the Berkshire Square section of Los Angeles the other morning as the filming of May Allison's new Metro special production, "Are All Men Alike?" was begun within its walls.

Miss Allison, as the untamed "Teddy" of the Arthur Stringer story, romped out of the house in jumpers and surprised neighbors by her expert handling of the intricate mechanism of an obstinate automobile. Having set these parts to rights she sprang into it and caused the spectators to catch their breath in amazement as she all but ran down an elderly gentleman who chanced to be standing near the rose-bordered drive. The "elderly gentleman" was John Elliott, the veteran film actor who plays the part of the uncle of the harum-scarum heroine of the piece.

The plot of the story, published in McClure's Magazine under the title of "The Waffle Iron" calls for a long succession of reckless adventures on the part of the star.

The story, which opens with a burst of reckless driving of fast automobiles by the girl, moves swiftly on to Greenwich Village, where, under the influence of the long-haired men and the short-haired women, in a smoke beclouded nook in "The Pirate's Den," the girl becomes acquainted with new phases of life and is captured by designing members of the district. The story has to do with the disillusioning process, as accomplished by her more level-headed sweetheart, and her escape from the snares that were set for her.

The spirit of The Village has been carried far from Manhattan and revived on one of the big covered stages of Metro's Hollywood studios, where "The Pirate's Den" and numerous familiar corners of the district about it have been faithfully reproduced.

Bayard Veiller, Production Chief : : :

BAYARD VEILLER, the dramatist, is now installed as chief of production at Metro's West coast studios in Hollywood. He assumed his new duties immediately upon his return to southern California from his recent trip to New York, where, among other things he figured prominently in Metro's negotiations for the services of several distinguished authors, including Irvin S. Cobb, George Kibbe Turner and Arthur Somers Roche.

Mr. Veiller, who won fame as the author of "Within the Law," "The Thirteenth Chair" and other notable stage plays, has been with Metro since last February as one of its quartet of successful playwrights—the other three being Eugene Walter, Winchell Smith and Eugene Presbrey. His initial arrangement with Metro was to write four original screen stories a year. He was on the Coast when he signed up, and was of course immediately given an office in the studios, with access to every part of the lot for observation.

The writer of stage plays, suddenly transplanted to the environment of a motion picture establishment, found so much to interest and absorb him in the newer of the mimic arts that in a short while he was more enthusiastic over the possibilities of the screen than he had been over the scope and influence of the stage. He detected at once a number of ways in which, in his opinion, motion pictures might be improved; and so constructive were his suggestions that Metro officials decided to make him chief of production.

Important among Mr. Veiller's new responsibilities will be the personal supervision of all literary material considered for screen translation, as well as close inspection of the scenarios constructed by the staff writers. He will also keep a close watch on the progress of the various productions as they are made at the Hollywood studios.

Wallace Reid, soon again will be a prominent figure around the Lasky studio, and his long vacation, which he devoted to stage work, will have ended.

ROBERTSON-COLE

EVERYTHING is in readiness for the production on the Robertson-Cole special "Kismet" starring Otis Skinner who made the vehicle famous on the stage. For four weeks preparatory work has been going forward under the direction of L. J. Gasnier. Numerous sets have been completed and Tom Walsh in charge of casting has most of the principal players selected that will make up an all star cast. Elinor Faire who is costarred in Fox comedy dramas will play the ingenue lead appearing in the role of Marsinah. Rosemary Theby is to interpret the part of the wife of Mansur. Hamilton Revelles who originated the part of Monsur in the original stage production will be seen in this role in the film. Leon Bary who was juvenile leading man for Sarah Bernhardt will play the juvenile lead, appearing as Caliph. Tony Gaudio and Glen Mac Williams will be in charge of photography. Mr. Skinner of course will appear in the part of Kismet the beggar.

Mr. Skinner, wife, son and daughter arrived in Los Angeles, Wednesday, June 23d and during the making of the film will reside in Hollywood.

The Hayworth company under the direction of William Parke has completed work on the second of the Edith Storey subjects, this one being "The Beach of Dreams." This is a sea and desert island story adapted from the novel by H. De Vere Stackpoole. The principal players of this play were Noah Beery, Sidney Paine, Jack Curtis, Templar Powell, George Fisher, and Carrie Clarke Ward.

Preparations are now being made by the Hayworth organization for the filming of the Francis Powers play "The First Born" starring Sessue Hayakawa and the work of making this picture will be started when Hayakawa recovers from an operation performed at San Diego, June 5th. The operation consisted of the removal of Mr. Hayakawa's tonsils. Colin Campbell has been engaged as director of Hayakawa's production following the making of two subjects starring Dustin Farnum, and Helen Jerome Eddy will play the lead in "The First Born." The continuity for this play has been prepared by Fred Stowers under the supervision of Jack Cunningham of the Brunton scenario department.

GOLDWYN

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, president of the Goldwyn Film Corporation arrived in Los Angeles Monday, June 21st, for a stay of several weeks of close association with the producing organization at the studios at Culver City. Upon Mr. Goldwyn's arrival there were several productions ready for previewing and among those that have been shown the president are "Earthbound," "Stop Thief," "The Penalty," and two others practically completed. While in the West Mr. Goldwyn will spend a greater portion of his time in the company of A. Lehr, vice president and general manager of the producing organization.

The Mabel Normand company began work on "Head Over Heels" Monday under the direction of Victor Schertzinger and the principal players in support of Miss Normand so far selected are Hugh Thompson, Raymond Hatton, Doris Dean, Russ Powell, and Adolph Jean Menjou.

Another cast which has been completely named is that for the Jack Pickford "Just Out of College" subject which includes Molly Malone as lead opposite Pickford, George Her, Edythe Chapman, Irene Rich, Maxfield Stanley, Otto Hoffman, M. B. Flynn and Loretto Blake.

Final scenes for the Tom Moore subject, "Stop Thief," were filmed Monday by director Harry Beaumont who left this week for a two weeks' vacation which he will spend in Yosemite.

Director Frank Lloyd and company filming "The Great Lover" have gone to San Francisco to make boat stuff and E. Mason Hopper directed company headed by Johnnie Jones, Buddy Messenger and Lucille Rickson have started work on the fifth of the

Edgar series "Edgar's Sunday Courtship."

The sympathy of all of the film colony was extended to Will Rogers this week when news of the death of his little three year old son, Frederick, from diphtheria became known. All three of the Rogers children were taken ill with the disease. Jimmy, who played the leading role in "Tes! Call Me Jim" and his little brother are now both out of danger. Mr. Rogers will be released from quarantine the first of the coming week so that he can assume work in the Ben Aimes Williams story, "Old Hutch."

GARSON

THE next production starring Clara Kimball Young will be a domestic drama by Sada Cowan. This is a present day American story written for the screen. It is being directed by Harry Garson and the cast selected is made up of J. Frank Glendon, Kathleen Williams, Jack Pratt, Bertram Grashy, Girard Alexander, Beatrice Le Blante and John Underhill.

Robert Yost in charge of the Garson studio publicity department left for the East, June 20th to spend two weeks in going over exploitation and publicity work with the Equity Pictures Corp. department respecting mid channel and forthcoming Clara Kimball Young productions. Mr. Yost has been identified with the Los Angeles publicity world for the past ten years, a greater portion of that time serving as director of publicity of advertising for Oliver Morosco the stage producer.

F. P.-LASKY

THERE are but two companies working at the Lasky plant, the other units being absent working on location. George McLeod has had a big street scene and all building necessary for the Jacklins' ranch built in the vicinity of Truckee, California, where director McLeod is now making exteriors for "The Jacklins." To use the settings at Truckee it was necessary to build four miles of electric cable in order to illuminate the scenes.

Rosco Arbuckle and Joseph Henabery and company filming "The Traveling Salesman" are still at Jamestown, California, doing the small town scenes for the production of the James Forbes play adapted for the screen by Walter Woods.

Thomas Forman is working on the finishing scenes for the Ethel Clayton play temporarily titled "Rosanne Ozanne" who having completed all parts of the play in which Miss Clayton takes part, the Paramount star departed for New York Monday of this week. From there she will go to London to work in the Famous Players-Lasky studio. Mary O'Connor is author of the scenario for this play.

A boarding school for girls in a small city near Los Angeles is being used by the Wallace Reid company directed by James Cruze for the scenes of "The Charm School." Forty pretty girls are serving in addition to the members of the cast which is headed by Lila Lee and include Edwin Stevens, Adele Farrington and Kate Toncray. All exteriors including pictures of the school, dormitories, etc. will be at this location.

Work of filming the next William C. de Mille production has been delayed because of the additional time needed for the preparation of sets and the actual filming of "His Friend and Wife" by Cosmo Hamilton will not be commenced until about the middle of July. Ora Carew has been engaged to play the featured leading role in this and opposite her will be Conrad Nagel.

FIRST NATIONAL

COMPLETE cast has been selected for the initial De Havens production, "Twin Beds" and in this cast will be found William Desmond heading the list of supports, the Jesse D. Hampton star being loaned by that producer to the De Havens for this production. Desmond will play the role of Harry Hawkins and Helen Raymond who was starred in "Twin Beds" for the past four years, will play the role of Signora Monti, the wife of the Italian opera singer.

which Ray is interpreted by Mr. de Haven. William J. Irving will be seen in the part of Andrew Larkin and Catherine Lewis will take the role of Amanada Tate. The Irish maid comedy role will be played by Lottie Williams and the part of the sweet and winsome wife of the wop singer will be taken by Flora de Haven. Work is already started on the production and a number of settings have already been filmed.

Complete cast for the Anita Stewart Louis B. Mayer production "Sowing the Wind" is announced to consist of James Morrison, Joseph Swickard, Myrtle Stedman, Ralph Lewis, William V. Mong, Marguerite Landis, Harry Northrop, Ben Deely and William Clifford and work has now been started by director John W. Stahl.

Charles Ray and company have been working at Del Monte, California, for scenes on "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" which is the first work done by Ray's new director, Joseph De Grass.

"The Habit" is the title given the new Mildred Harris Chaplin subject being made by Lewis B. Mayer. Work is in progress with a cast including William Lawrence, Walter McCrae, Emmett King, Ethel Grey Perry and Gilbert Clayton, under the direction of Edwin Carew.

VITAGRAPH

VITAGRAPH studio has an entirely new appearance from a week ago for the finishing of several producing units on their current productions has made possible the clearing away of sets preparatory for building contemplated improvements including large enclosed stage, dressing rooms and other buildings.

The largest set ever erected at the Vitagraph lot was that for the last episode of the William Duncan serial, "The Silent Avenger," this set alone covering the equivalent of six city blocks and representing street scenes of the most elaborate character. The William Duncan serial is entirely finished and when "The Silent Avenger" is released it will give to the theatre owners a production that has cost twice as much as any previous Duncan serial release. The production required almost seven months for its completion after a month of preparatory work in the matter of writing story, continuity and building the necessary sets for the opening episodes.

Director star William Duncan and his leading woman, Edith Johnson, as well as other members of the Duncan producing unit continue on vacation until new serial story and script now being prepared by president Albert E. Smith and Cleveland Moffett are received.

A new story is being prepared for Earle Williams by J. Grubb Alexander and this will be directed by Chester Bennett who is now doing the final work on the "Purple Cypher," starring Williams. This is a melodrama involving oriental and American principals laid on the Pacific coast.

METRO

THE actual work of preparing for the first of the Metro Doraldino series was started June 22nd when the Hawaiian dancer, accompanied by her husband, Frank Saunders, arrived in Los Angeles. Bayard Veiller, head of the Metro play producing department, has assigned the continuity work of the first Doraldino story to Carey Wilson of the Metro staff and it is expected the first, which is from the story "The Passion Fruit," will be under production within another week. This is Doraldino's first visit to Los Angeles in two years, she having made two film subjects here previously. Doraldino's home was at San Francisco where but a few years ago she was a manicurist. Since then she has studied dancing in all parts of America and Europe.

Leatrice Joy, who played in Metro's "Right of Way," starring Bert Lytell, has been engaged to play the part of the society girl in "Someone In the House" which has been put in production under the direction of John Ince. Other members of the cast are being selected.

Metro has engaged Courtenay Foote to play the leading role in the Jack London story production "The Sea Rover" and he has arrived in Hollywood preparatory to beginning work under the direction of Edward Sloman. Foote formerly played in pictures on the Coast but has been on the speaking stage for the past year playing in "Adam and Eve."

The new Viola Dana production "Blackmail" is now in the making. A new member of the cast added this week is Fred Kelsey who will be remembered as police inspector in "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

Edmund Lowe is to come West and play a leading role in the all star production of "Someone in the House" to be made by Metro. John Ince is to be director of this subject and William Irving, who was recently seen opposite Nazimova, will play another of the leading parts.

In casting the next Alice Lake subject "Body and Soul" adapted from the stage melodrama by William Hurlbut, Metro has engaged Stuart Holmes who will appear in the role of Miss Lake's uncle. Forest Stanley is to play the male lead and Dallas Fitzgerald will direct.

Director Rex Ingram and the "Hearts Are Trump" company are working on mountain location on the famous Ridge Route Highway between Los Angeles and Bakersfield and director Phil Rosen is at work on "Are All Men Alike?" starring May Allison.

The first definite information concerning the initial Buster Keaton comedy was given out this week. No definite title has been decided upon but the story has a new twist in that it begins with a wedding instead of ending with one.

UNIVERSAL

FUTURE plans at Universal were made known this week when the information was given out that three stories had been purchased for screening. These are "Black Friday" by Frederick S. Isham which will be used as starring vehicle for Frank Mayo. Wallace Chifton, formerly of the Coast but who has been in the East for the past three years, is a new member of the Universal scenario department and is now engaged in writing the working script for "Black Friday."

The Eugene Manlove Rhodes story "West Is West" has been secured for the Harry Carey production to be made following the one started this week titled "Sun Down Shim." The third story purchased is titled "White Youth" and is a story of Creole life in Louisiana written by Clara Bergeranger and Forest Halsey. It is not definitely decided who will star in this subject.

The title "Foolish Wives" has been selected for the next Von Stroheim Jewel production and the cast is being assembled for this while the technical organization completes the erection of settings at Universal City, San Pedro and Catalina Islands.

Changes have been made in titles for two Universal productions now ready for release. "Fighting Job," written by H. H. Van Loan, starring Harry Carey, will be released as "Blue Streak McCoy" and the south sea island story by Ralph Stock, originally titled "Marima," will be known as "The Adorable Savage."

Other productions now in the making include the Priscilla Dean feature "Outside the Law" being directed by Tod Browning; "In Folly's Trail" directed by Rolin Sturgeon which will serve to reintroduce Carmel Myers as a Universal star; George Hull is directing "The Watchmaker" a comedy drama; Jack Ford is working on "Hitchin' Post" starring Frank Mayo; Norman Dawn is editing "The Adorable Savage" starring Edith Roberts and Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are doing the final cutting on "La La Lucille" and will shortly begin making "Once a Plumber."

The short subject department has five units at work. Hoot Gibson is playing in the short western titled "Marryin'"; Horace Davies is making a domestic comedy featuring Bartime Burkett and Howard Austin titled "The Nuisance." The three serial companies continue—Albert Russell directing "The Moonriders" with Art Acord is now on the sixteenth episode, Robert F. Mill directing "Lightning's Eye" is completing the eighth release and Eddie Polo is at work on "Circus Live." A new serial company shortly to be started is to be directed by Edward Kull and will film a story titled "The Queen of Diamonds" starring Eileen Sedgwick. Two comedy companies are busy at the Century plant, Fred Fishback directing "Cracked Wedding Bells" with Bud Jamison and James Davis is filming "Uncle Tom's Caboose" in which Charles Dorety will be seen as Marks the lawyer, Marjorie Prevost will be the vamp, Zip Monberg will appear as Uncle Tom, Lois Gibson as little Eva and Dolly Stoddard will be the Topsy.

HAMPTON

JESSE D. HAMPTON has purchased a number of stories to serve as vehicles for his stars, Blanche Sweet, H. B. Warner and William Desmond, and also several other novels that will be used for

Actor Injured in Jump for Scene

William P. Carleton leading man who has been seen recently in so many Famous Players-Lasky productions including "The Copperhead," "The Amateur Wife" and "The Society Exile," suffered a severe injury to his foot a few days ago, when he leaped through a window to the ground twelve feet below, in a scene in the Associated Exhibitors' production of "The Riddle Woman," starring Geraldine Farrar.

Mr. Carleton is at present under contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, but was released through the courtesy of that firm in order that he might play the leading role in the International Film Corporation all-star production of Winston Churchill's novel, "The Inside of the Cup," directed by Albert Capellani. That finished, Director Jose begged to have him in "The Riddle Woman," and his leave of absence was extended special productions made under the direction of Robert Thornby and Henry King. The first of these recently bought stories to be put in productions will be "The Checked Suit," which is by Freeman Putney, Jr. This is now being put in continuity by Fred Myton who adapted "Simple Souls" for the screen and the subject will serve as a vehicle for one of the four H. B. Warner starring vehicles to be made in the current year. Previously Warner appeared in six productions each year but this number has been reduced in order that more time could be put in on the making of each play.

Dwight Cleveland, chief of the Jesse D. Hampton scenario department, has a great quantity of material to select from and titles of forthcoming productions will be made known shortly.

BRUNTON

TWO additional producing organizations were added to the list working at Robert Brunton studio this week with the arrival of Marion Davies, star of Cosmopolitan films, made by the International Film Company, who was accompanied to the coast by her director, George E. Baker, and entire staff and cast. The players are Edith Shyne, Norman Kerry, Anders Randolph, Earle Schenck, John Charles and Thomas Lindley. The first story in which Miss Davies will play is "Buried Treasure" adapted from the magazine story by S. Britten Austin which recently appeared in Hearst's Magazine.

Arriving later in the week was Frank Borzage, who directed the making of Humoresque, and he is to direct the second Marion Davies subject which will be an adaptation from the Frank R. and Lesley Adams story "The Love Piker." Director Borzage will do the preparatory work for filming this subject while Miss Davies appears in scenes for "Buried Treasure." The Cosmopolitan star will work in but two subjects in California.

Richard Le Plant was this week added to the cast of the Robert Brunton all star production "The Devil To Pay" which is now in production. Director Ward has been filming scenes of this play for more than two weeks and this week began the assembling of the first print and negative. It will require two weeks more to complete the subject.

The final work on the Dustin Farnum-Cole production, "Big Happiness," has been completed and the negative and print were shipped East this week. The second Farnum production is nearing completion in the editing rooms and this will be sent forward shortly.

The last of the J. Warren Kerrigan features for Modkorn made by Brunton, "The Ghost of Opportunity," is in the final editing stages and will be ready for shipment in the next few days.

Mary Jane Irving, child actress, under contract to Robert Brunton, has been loaned to Thomas H. Ince for work in one picture.

Director Arthur Rosson has everything in readiness for filming of the second Betty Compson production, he having completed editing "Prisoners of Love," which is to be the first release. Macey Harlan arrived from New York this week and is to play heavy in the coming production. Harlan has had an experience of twenty years on the speaking stage with leading producers and his trip to the Coast is solely for the purpose of playing in this one Compson production.

Roy William Neil, Director

R. William Neil, director for Norma and Constance Talmadge productions

"DIRECTED BY R. William Neil." This caption on the main title of a picture hasn't meant so terribly much to the public or to exhibitors until recently in spite of the fact that to his credit as a director are such successes as "The Price Mark," "Flare Up Sal," "Green Eyes," "The Mating of Marcella" and other Dorothy Dalton pictures from the Thomas H. Ince studios, to say nothing of the part he played in the production of "Civilization" or of such good photoplays as "The Career of Katherine Bush," etc. But when a man is selected to guide the directorial destinies of both Norma and Constance Talmadge, even careless and busy filmdom is bound to stop long enough to fix his name in it's mind, for it is now R. William himself who is handling the megaphone for either one or the other of those popular stars and has been doing it quite some time, long enough to have turned out "The Woman Gives" and "Yes or No" with Norma in the lead; and "Good References," Constance's latest, not yet given a public showing.

To have and to hold the job of being the Talmadge's director signifies a number of things, among which is that the man knows his business. Norma and Constance and Joe Schenck aren't taking any chances with anything but the best. So it is that R. William Neil gets the job.

Mr. Neil became a little reminiscent during a recent interview and told us some personal secrets. He had adopted a stage career early in life and had gotten along pretty nicely, graduating from the old Alcazar Stock Company of San Francisco, which has turned out some of our best actors, to good parts in productions such as "Baby Mine" in London, "Wildfire" and other plays that gave him an international reputation. He was also associated with David Belasco as a stage director for eight years.

He hadn't had time or inclination to give the "movies" a thought. Nineteen-thirteen found him in London, producing for R. S. Hunter. While Mr. Neil didn't go into details we gathered that along about this time he lost his rabbit's foot. The Hunter proposition wasn't a success so Mr. Neil hiked for New York where he found lots of people who were willing to admit that he was a corking good actor and stage director and could write an excellent play, but none of them were willing to pay him for the use of his talents just at that time.

Nineteen-fourteen with the World War had arrived by this time, and it was during this year that Mr. Neil made up his mind to pay his home state, California, albeit he was born in "Dublin Bay," a visit. Once at Los Angeles, the motion-picture began to get his attention. Thomas H. Ince was making "Civilization" and needed a man of Neil's ability and talents on the dramatic staff. Neil forsook his first love, the stage, for the silver-sheet and then began a training in picture-making on the Ince lot when some of the greatest pictures of all time, the old "Kay-Bee" Triangle's were being produced. The Ince engagement was pleasant and profitable, and Neil liked the picture business.

It wasn't long before he was a master in his new profession. When the Triangle program was broken up and Ince began producing for Famous-Players, Neil was one of the standbys. He stayed 3 years under the Ince banner. A year and a half ago he came East and soon after affiliated with the Talmadge's.

The writer journeyed over to the 48th street studio to meet him. Mr. Neil laid aside his official duties, side-stepped some insistent actors who wanted to see him about parts in the new picture he is beginning with Constance Talmadge in the leading role and which has a working title of "Dangerous Business," and gave us undivided attention with no attempt to pretend "temperament" or be otherwise than a mighty pleasant chap to meet. Mr. Neil impresses us. He is modest, too modest perhaps viewing matters from the film game. He doesn't sell himself, but he has ideas and a lot of them good ones.

Happy at the Chance "To Go the Limit"

By William D. Taylor

AT last I have obtained my ambition! My new contract with Realarl gives me the opportunity of years to produce pictures with no thought but Perfection. Plenty of time, plenty of money and splendid stories—at last I can "go the limit" and bring out the fine, delicate, enduring things impossible in the days when an inexorable release schedule bade me make eight or ten productions each year.

"I have always held that a poor story is a waste of time. You can't make a sick purse out of a sow's ear. I KNOW—for a regiment of gray hairs testifies to past unpleasant experiences.

"On the other hand, however, the possibilities of really good narrative carry endless fascination to a man who imagines. A story that will help people, lift them out of the humdrum of daily life and for an hour or two bring them happiness and new thoughts to make their existence more pleasurable—such a tale is worth all that is paid for it and deserves every attention that time and money can lavish in its preparation for the screen.

"And Realarl has given me such stories. In succession I am making for the organization "The Soul of Youth" from a gripping story of boy life by Julia Crawford Ivers; "The Furnace" by "Pan" and "The Witching Hour," the great Augustus Thomas stage success.

"I have just finished "The Soul of Youth." Watching its growth in the projection room during the cutting and titling I have felt a flow of thankfulness to Realarl for their splendid policy of allowing me unlimited time and money for my productions. It is the first play under the new contract and I feel that it shows the approach to technical perfection which is possible only when the director is neither hurried nor forced to eliminate desirable effects because his company does not care to stand the expense.

"My first three pictures will present the struggles and conquest of the human soul under different conditions of modern life. "The Soul of Youth" takes the boy of the streets, of the reform school, of the jail and illustrates the thesis that kindness, sympathy and education will cause the latent seed of character to blossom and flower in the full beauty of a high-charactered American citizen. A wonderful cast aided me in the delineation of this intriguing story. Lewis Sargent played "The Boy," Exhibitors will remember him in "Huckleberry Finn." He is a consummate actor and I believe his work in the part will do much to create sympathy for the boys who "haven't had a chance."

"For the part of the Juvenile Court Judge we secured no less famous a personage than Judge Ben Lindsay himself. Judge Lindsay illustrates wonderfully the methods that have brought him world-wide fame. He came from Denver especially to assume this role.

"Lila Lee, Willie Collier, Jr., Sylvia Ashton and Grace Morse also did splendid work.

"At the present moment I am working on "The Furnace," the startling story by "Pan," the noted English author.

"Let me say here that I am afire with enthusiasm concerning "The Furnace." It is the greatest story I have ever been given and one that presents a challenge to the very best directorial talent I possess. Again it is a story of soul growth, this time of a woman who has everything she wants, save the love of her husband. This she has sacrificed through a foolish misunderstanding of the kind that so often causes trouble when class feeling and social conventions bar the way to true happiness.

"The scenes are laid in London, Monte Carlo and aboard ship. The story calls for beautiful settings and gorgeous costumes. We are giving it everything called for. Nothing is to be left undone to present properly what all who have read the story consider one of the most vital human documents of the decade.

"It will be an exceptionally expensive picture. Our original estimates were for half a million but now it appears that the cost will run well over $700,000. Two remarkable sets alone cost what the average man would consider a fortune. One reproduced the interior of a beautiful English cathedral; the other showed the splendors of a gay Monte Carlo hotel. Hundreds of men and women in correct evening and afternoon dress add a gorgeous note of color and life to the assemblage.

"Again I picked my cast with extreme care. Jerome Patrick, famous Broadway leading man, and beautiful Agnes Ayres portray the leading roles. They are supported by such well-known people as Milton Sills, Betty Francisco, Helen Dunbar, Theodore Roberts and Lucien Littlefield."

Jeanie MacPherson Re-news Contract

JEANIE MACPHERSON, special writer for Cecil B. De Mille and author of so many of the famous producer's successes, will continue to write Cecil B. De Mille specials for Paramount for at least five years more. The talented scenarist recently affixed her signature to a new contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at the West Coast studio of that organization.

Miss Macpherson has long been recognized as one of the limited group of truly great scenario writers. Her work in the past includes such successful screen dramas as "Joan the Woman," "The Whispering Chorus," "The Woman God Forgot," "Old Wives for New," "Don't Change Your Husband," "For Better, for Worse," "Male and Female" and Mr. De Mille's latest production, "Something to Think About." She is at present at work on an original story which the director-general plans to film in the near future. Under the terms of Miss Macpherson's new contract, she will do two scenarios a year.

MacLean's Picture Has Child Actress Seen in "An Overall Hero"

Douglas MacLean's sixth Ince-Paramount-Artcraft Picture, announced previously under the working title of "Lucid Intervals," has been changed to "The Rookie's Return." The new comedy is described by the Ince press department as "a cousin, in action, speed and original situations, to the unforgettable '23½ Hours' Leave,'" depicting, as it does, the ups and downs of an American rookie upon his return from gallant service overseas.

Ida May McKenzie, a child actress less than eight years old and of whom great things are predicted, is introduced in the second of the Chester Comedies, "An Overall Hero," which will shortly be released by Educational Films Corporation. Arthur Howell, eighteen months of age, who attracted so much attention in "Four Times Foiled," the first Chester Comedy, will also have an important part.

Meighan and Company Disport at Coney

ON June 28 Famous Players - Lasky Corporation chartered a boat, ordered supper for some two hundred persons, engaged two sight seeing buses, sent down their generating plant to supply the Sunlight Arcs, and invited the press to go along and see their new star, Thomas Meighan, and his leading woman, Faire Binney, directed by Charles Maigne in some unusual extensors at Coney Island. Everything was just as it should have been, and Jimmy MacFarland was right on the job to see that everybody had a good time, but Mr. Weatherman was somewhat over-looked and, like the uninvited godmother in the fairy tale, he took his revenge. Several scenes were taken on the boat going down, but it grew cloudier, and just as the boat landed and the cameras were ready to shoot some more, the drops began to fall.

After a carefully planned supper, the huge Arc light that rivalled the most brilliant sunshine, was turned on, and one typical scene after another was shot. Mr. Maigne secured some wonderful shots of the sort of stuff that should be intensely interesting and effective. And the guests, at least, enjoyed the outing immensely.

Simplex Notes

Another Simplex distributor who was much interested in the activities around the Simplex plant during the past week is Mr. L. H. Francis, general sales manager of the Teco Products Manufacturing Company, Loeb Arcade Building, Minneapolis, Minn., which company holds the distributing franchise for Simplex in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Northern and Western Iowa and Northern and Western Wisconsin.

Mr. Francis, who with Mr. George Feinberg, organized the Teco Company, is here on business and incidentally took occasion to bring a batch of Simplex orders in person to the Simplex plant, and to see that the Simplex orders already at the factory were started moving. At the present time the offices of the Teco Company have orders for at least 125 Simplexes at the factory.

Mr. Francis reports that the Teco Company has just taken the franchise for the National distribution in theatres, schools and churches of the "Safe and Sure" fire extinguisher, the early advance orders on which indicate that this type of extinguisher should prove a most popular accessory.

Mr. Sam Merchant, for years with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and known to practically every film man and exhibitor in New England is now the manager of the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company. This company, of which Mr. Harry Asher, also late with the Famous Players Company, is the head, has just opened up its new headquarters at 69 Church street, Boston.

Mr. Merchant spent several days at the Simplex factory, and reports that the theatres in the cities of Fall River and New Bradford are very rapidly following the lead taken by other New England cities in installing Simplex, while several recent installations including the Boston theatre (a Keith house), and the Congress Hall theatre help to make the city of Boston assume a hundred per cent Simplex appearance.

The Simplex factory during the past week was the objective point for not only the customary number of visitors who usually look with much interest upon a trip through this well-known and up-to-date home of the Simplex Projector, but a number of distributors, active in the marketing of this popular projector, were also registered at the plant.

Among them was George G. (Electric) Webster, the dynamic head of the Webster Electric Company, Simplex distributor in Washington, D. C., Western Maryland and Northern Virginia. According to Mr. Webster, the number of Simplex Projectors being installed in and around his territory far exceeds his fondest expectations.

Is the Star System Waning?

Robert Brunton Delivers a Few Opinions on the Mooted Subject

DURING the past few months a great deal of discussion has arisen over the various merits and demerits of the so-called star system. Some writers have made bold to say that stars are about to pass into sealed oblivion with waltzing and government control of the railroads. Others are of the opinion that stars are an indispensable and permanent fixture of the screen industry.

Robert Brunton, owner of the great Brunton studios in Los Angeles, is making a thorough test of both the star and all-star systems. The contract of his latest star, J. Warren Kerrigan, has just been completed and he now intends to produce a series of all-star features, the first of these being an adaptation of the popular novel by Frances Nimmo Greene, "The Devil To Pay." Here are a few of his remarks on the topic:

"There will always be stars. The most short-sighted producer cannot but see the certainty of that. To eliminate these darlings of the public it would be necessary to suppress personality, beauty and talent itself. Once a player attracts strong popular favor it follows inevitably that he or she be featured until the tide of favoritism turns.

"In every city and community of this nation there is some figure that dominates, someone who stands pre-eminent by reason of superior talents or unceasing effort. No amount of legislation or regulation can prevent Jim Jones from becoming the best lawyer in Clover Junction, providing he has the brains and initiative to gain such an ascendancy. By the same token certain actors, being better equipped for their line of work than others and more earnest in the pursuance of it, are bound to tip the scales of popularity and attain recognition as stars.

"Authors themselves make the star indispensable. Every well-written play has a dominant figure, someone who succeeds in reaching an objective against the will of another. The person taking this part naturally carries the sympathy of the audience, receives the applause. It would be a trying and unethical task to reduce every role in a play to an equal basis. Some character must prevail—that is a primary rule of drama.

"The public itself demands stars. People delight in according recognition to individual worth. If Bill Henry does some particularly striking work in an obscure role the barometer of public favor will assuredly push him upward. Should he display star qualities, star he will become. There is an erroneous belief to the point that producers "make" stars. No greater fallacy exists. The public and their own attainments make them. Producers merely gauge the most propitious moment to launch a climbing actor with star credit.

"One fact alone is sufficient to preserve the star system: it is a commercial success. A production bolstered with the reputation of an established star rarely fails, even though the scenario be bad and the direction worse. On the other hand the so-called all-star feature is a hazard; it requires infinite care and expense—it may bring in a fortune and it may fail entirely.

"Consideration of the story and direction are important points in favor of the all-star production. In this type of picture actors are selected to fit the parts—parts are not shrunk or expanded to fit the actors."

Rotarians View Picture "That Something" Is Given Special Showing at Atlantic City Gathering

A SPECIAL showing of "That Something" was given on June 24 at the Casino Hall on the Steel Pier at Atlantic City at which members of the Rotary Clubs from all over the country were present. The story was written by W. W. Woodbridge, produced by the Hermann Film Corporation and dedicated to the Rotary Clubs of the World. The picture is in five-reels and is being distributed by Irving Lesser.

The Rotarians held their annual convention at Atlantic City this year, and over ten thousand delegates and members of the organization attended, it is declared. Representatives from every state in the Union, Canada, England, Cuba, China, Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and other countries were present at this notable gathering, and the picture was screened to over three thousand members, says the Lesser statement.

In Atlantic City, the Rotarians were each presented with a miniature book of "That Something." Many expressed their desire to see the production play their respective cities and promised their fullest cooperation, according to the Lesser statement. The tieup with the Rotary Club is an assurance of success, says Lesser, as there are over seven hundred clubs all over the United States with over fifty-five thousand members.

The premier presentation of "That Something" was held at the Victory theatre in Los Angeles, where it played for five weeks to big business. The Rotary Club there had sold enough tickets to guarantee a three-weeks run before the show opened, and it played for another two weeks besides, declares the report from the Sol Lesser of Lices.

Irving Lesser expects to make an announcement very shortly in regards to releasing date and policy of the attraction.

Chas. T. Dazey to Edit Kentucky Picture

That J. Harrison Edwards, director of "The Fighting Kentuckians," is a man of keen business perception was proved, says Film Market, when he contracted with Charles T. Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky," to edit and arrange his latest picture, "The Fighting Kentuckians," which deals with the same strange people, children of the wilderness, who dwell in the dim valleys and scanty clearings on the mountain sides of Old Kentucky.

Mr. Dazey has become a recognized authority on the folk-lore of Old Kentucky owing to the twenty-seven years successful touring of his genuine classic, "In Old Kentucky." Mr. Edwards feels that Mr. Dazey's acquisition as editor will prove an additional box-office value for the production. Releasing arrangements are in the hands of Robt. W. Priest, president of Film Market.

Colin Chase Has Had Long Acting Career

Colin Chase, just signed on a long-term contract by Broadwell Productions, Inc., to portray the part of "Chick" in the famous "Nick Carter" series, being produced by Broadwell at the studios in Filmland City, Medford, Mass., commenced his career as a staff artist for the Chicago newspapers. He later joined Clay Clement in the first stage production of "Sam Houston," where he remained for several seasons, afterwards originating a vaudeville sketch which he toured the country with great success. It was in this act that J. K. Spoor of Essanay first saw him, and induced Chase to abandon the stage for the screen, giving him the juvenile parts in many Essanay productions. Chase also acted as leading man with the old Colorado Motion Picture Co. and played leads for Eclair, Universal, Morosco, Paramount, Ince, Fox and the American.

First Hugo Ballin Picture Is Under Way

The first of the Hugo Ballin productions has been begun at the Victor studio, Achmed Abdullah. "The Honorable Gentleman" being the story chosen by Hugo Ballin and those associated with him in the enterprise. It is a powerful comedy-drama of modern life, in which fantasy touches upon tragedy. The locale is New York for the most part, with several highly pictorial episodes in China.

Rockliffe Fellowes has been engaged for the leading masculine role, with Mabel Ballin cast opposite him. The ensemble is further strengthened by the presence of Yama Mito, the Japanese actor, who created a pronounced impression in Marshall Neilan's "The River's End."

Territories Sold for McLaughlin Picture

The Film Market, Inc., reports the following sales of Robert McLaughlin's production, "The House Without Children": Messrs. Ellman & Salkin, 207 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, for Illinois; Super Feature Attractions, Mather Building, Washington, D. C., for Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina; Masterpiece Film Attractions, Sloan Building, Cleveland, Ohio, for Ohio and Kentucky.

Christie Going Full Blast

Al Christie Aided by Two Others in Direction of New Productions

IN order to keep pace with the new schedule of special Christie comedies, which will be presented twice a month, Al Christie has two directors besides himself who are producing the new specials featuring such players as Bobby Vernon, Fay Tincher, Harry Gribbon, Eddie Barry and others.

While Christie and William Beaudine have finished the first two of the new releases, these being "Kiss Me Caroline" and "A Seaside Siren," these two directors and Reggie Morris are all at work on three new special two-reel productions which are being made with the same type of comedy as has usually been seen in Christie two-reels, but produced on a little more elaborate scale. Beaudine is the director who made "Petticoats and Pants" the most successful of the previous Christie two-reel fun films. Morris was the director of the "Bringing Up Father" comedies, three of which have been filmed at the Christie studio with great success.

At present Christie is producing a two-reeler featuring Harry Gribbon. Among other features of this production, there is a cabaret revue and club dining room setting which illustrated Christie's ideas of dressing up comedies on a scale equal to that of any feature pictures. Gribbon, Teddy Sampson, Helen Darling and Oscar, the baby, are in the cast.

Reggie Morris is directing Eddie Barry, together with Charlotte Merriam, Neal Burns and Margaret FitzRoy, in a farcical comedy under the title "Out for the Night" which will be one of the early Christie two-reel releases through Educational Film Exchanges. Morris is giving a vivid contrast in this picture, for it ranges from dancing girls on the lawn of a fashionable Pasadena home to a prize fight, the latter done in a setting which duplicates a well-known Los Angeles boxing arena.

Richard Stanton Flays Extravagance

Richard Stanton, the director of many famous Fox special features, is a stickler for production efficiency. His record as a director of box-office successes shows an unusually low production expense.

Mr. Stanton declares: "In this day of conservation of our national resources, both of money and of goods, why must we of the film world run riot. In the production of special features the general impulse seems to be to outdo all competitors in lavish expenditure. That policy would be all right if the money spent showed upon the screen in the completed picture. As a matter of fact fifty per cent. of the money spent on the so-called million dollar productions is lost to view when the picture is shown on the screen."

"As a director of eight years' experience I maintain that such waste is entirely unnecessary. During my last four years I have directed special features entirely, and the most expensive one cost exactly sixty-one thousand dollars, every dollar of which showed upon the screen. If a director knows his business and plans his work before starting there can be no alibi for shooting a hundred thousand feet of film to make a six or seven-reel feature."

Marguerite Clark to Go Abroad

Following the completion of her last picture for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Marguerite Clark went to her home at Patterson, La., where she has been resting up after her strenuous screen activities. She does not as yet contemplate becoming affiliated with any producing concern, though she is said to have received a number of attractive offers.

Her only definite plans for the future concern a trip abroad in company with her husband and parents in the near future. According to their present arrangements, the party will start abroad from New York July 17. It is expected that they will remain on the other side for about six weeks.

Comedy-Drama's Premier

"Up in Mary's Attic" Will Open in Toledo, July 11; Big Campaign

"UP in Mary's Attic" is scheduled for its premier showing at the Temple theatre, Toledo, O., and an elaborate campaign in behalf of the picture is now being planned in connection with its initial exhibition, according to reports from the Fine Arts Pictures, Inc. The picture will open at this house for an indefinite run beginning July 11th, it is stated.

M. W. Garrison, president of Fine

Arts, has issued the following statement regarding the campaign that is to be pursued in presenting this picture at the Toledo theatre:

"The most extensive campaign ever scheduled for a picture in Toledo has been arranged for. Every street car in the city will be used in connection with the campaign as well as every newspaper and other available medium of exploitation.

The Pantheon Theatre, Vincennes, Ind.

An Article Describing the Plans Shown in This Issue

THE Pantheon theatre, which is under construction at the present time, is being built by the Wilkerson-Lyons Enterprises, an Indiana corporation, which owns or operates all the theatres in this city except two, and controls all the poster advertising business in the seven surrounding counties.

This theatre is located on the corner of Fifth and Main Streets, one of the best corners in Vincennes, and is being built to operate continuously with any type of attraction from moving pictures and vaudeville to the highest class road show and is flexible enough in its arrangement, wiring and equipment to do this without any undue operating expense for the simplest picture.

The building is built of fireproof construction throughout. The outside walls are of brick with terra cotta trimming; all inside walls of concrete or hollow tile.

The first floor is of reinforced concrete; the stage a concrete slab with central wood panel on steel girders.

The gallery is of reinforced concrete supported on cantilever steel construction, necessitating no columns for its support.

The ceilings are of ornamental plaster and contain the grilles for the ventilating system, which is housed in the attic.

The roof is of gravel laid on Pyrobar blocks, for insulating purposes.

The building virtually covers the whole lot and is 73 feet wide and 122 feet long. Stage enclosure is 28 x 62 with a proscenium arch 30 feet wide.

The auditorium has one deep gallery and has a seating capacity of over 1200, about evenly divided between the first floor and gallery.

The cost of the building, including the heating and ventilating, wiring, etc., was $150,000.00. This does not include the seating and fixtures.

The building's accommodations are divided as follows:

That part of the basement under the stage contains twelve dressing rooms of various sizes with overflow rooms for choruses, etc. Each dressing room contains running hot and cold water, etc. Separate rooms are provided for musicians, stage employees and a special machinery room for organ blower and reserve independent electric lighting unit.

Boiler and fuel room with a separate fuel storage room with a season's fuel capacity. The basement floor is also provided with toilets for each sex and Otis hydraulic baggage lift to handle baggage, ashes, etc.

Besides the stage and auditorium, heretofore described, the first floor contains two small shops for rental purposes and a lobby 20 feet square, opening to a foyer which foyer gives access to the gallery stairs and a men's and women's toilet room. This floor also contains an outside entrance stair giving separate and independent access to the company's offices on the mezzanine floor and to a separate ticket office and separate gallery for colored patrons. This feature can be used or dispensed with as the operators see fit.

The gallery floor contains, besides the gallery itself, toilet accommodations for both sexes and the organ chamber connected to the main auditorium with ornamental plaster grilles. Organ is operated from keyboard in orchestra pit.

The machine room and spotlight room, located where shown, and besides the usual apparatus they contain a sub-switchboard for operating the house lights when pictures only are being run.

The attic contains a complete typhoon variable speed ventilating system set on cork foundation, to avoid noise. All operated from a power switchboard where shown on the plans.

PLAN OF OFFICES MEZZANINE FLOOR

This drawing is one of the complete set from the Pantheon theatre designs illustrated on pages 482 and 493

The Pantheon theatre will be a 1200-seat house costing approximately $150,000 to build. It occupies a lot 73 x 122 and is constructed of concrete and other fireproof material throughout

Some of the features of the Pantheon are the ample stage with a proscenium arch 30 feet wide, a variable speed ventilating system and a control system for the hour lights located in the projection room

How the World's Largest Theatre Treats Its Air

An Interesting Description of the Heating and Ventilation of the Capitol

THIS is the second of a series of three articles describing the heating and ventilating system of the world's largest theatre. The same principles are employed in supplying fresh air to the smaller theatres although, of course, on a proportionately smaller scale. Credit is hereby given Mr. D. D. Kimball of the firm of Richard D. Kimball Co., for his assistance in preparing the material for publication.

THE mushroom system of ventilation is now in use among many theatres and particularly the larger ones. In some cases the installation of this system is prohibited by the cost of excavating for the trenches that carry the ducts feeding the the outlets on the main floor. That is why the low velocity, large volume overhead fans have found so much favor.

In the Capitol the mushroom system was used but in a somewhat different way than usually. Most commonly the air is taken in from the outside, forced through ducts to the mushroom ventilators and then out into the auditorium from beneath the seats. With the belief that to do this at the Capitol might mean that the incoming air might be too cool for comfort under certain conditions it was decided to use the mushroom for the exhausting

This illustration gives a good idea of the size of the mammoth Capitol and the space that must be well ventilated of the air. Thus the air is taken in as described in last week's issue and discharged into the auditorium in several ways. Then large exhaust fans create a suction through the mushroom caps placed under the seats and the vitiated air withdrawn through those means.

Fans similar to those used for the supplying of the air are used for its withdrawal. A 20 h. p. direct current motor operates each of these multi-bladed fans.

The large drawing on this page gives a diagrammatic plan of the exhaust system. The four masonry trenches shown in the center of the drawing connect with all the mushroom ventilators on the main floor of the theatre. These trenches are 2 ft. in depth and 8 ft. in width, these figures giving an idea of the excavation necessary for the installation of this type of system.

By following these trenches back toward the rear of the theatre it will be found that each pair leads to an exhaust chamber 12 inches x 1½ inch rising to the roof and thence to the exhaust fans. Thus the used air in the auditorium is taken care of. To do the same with the balcony ventilation grilled work in the back hides galvanized shutters which control the outlet of air from this part of the house. Help is also given by a number of adjustable ventilators placed in the bal-

BEAUTY and durability are the outstanding characteristics of Duratex, the Better Furniture Upholstery.

Here is a material that fits in admirably with the needs of Moving Picture Theatres.

It comes in a wide variety of grains and colors—fits in with any decoration scheme or color motif.

It stands up wonderfully under the hardest usage—it does not crack or check or scuff and it never spews. That is to say no oil ever comes to the surface to soil dainty clothing as often happens.

This last feature is due to the exclusive Duratex process—and for this one reason alone Duratex is particularly suitable for seat upholstery—to say nothing of its finer, richer appearance and its longer wear.

Comfort of Patrons Will Come First in Plans for New Miles Theatre

Detroit Theatre Will Cost a Million and Will Be Second Largest in Country

C. Howard Crane drew up the plans for the Miles theatre

THE second largest theatre in the United States and one which, when completed, will rival the new Capitol in New York both in cost and in beauty, is to be erected soon in Detroit, Mich., by Charles H. Miles, present owner of the Majestic, Regent and Orpheum in that city.

Mr. Miles has secured a lease on property 340 feet by 168 feet at Grand River and Roosevelt avenues, Detroit, and it is on this plot that he intends to build a new house with a seating capacity of 4,800. The estimated cost of the proposed structure is close to $1,000,000 and when completed, the new Miles house will be the largest in Michigan.

Plans for the new theatre are now being prepared by C. Howard Crane, Elmer G. Kiehler and Cyril E. Schley, Detroit architects, and work on the building is to start as quickly as Mr. Miles can make the necessary arrangements for the work.

The building itself will house only the theatre proper, offices of the owner and six small retail stores which will front on Grand River avenue, three on each side of the main entrance. The outside will be of reinforced steel and concrete construction with brick and terra cotta finish, while the interior is to be done in gold, ivory, old rose and blue. Decorations of the period of Louis XVI are to be used throughout.

Provisions are being made for an unusually large lobby that there may be plenty of standing room for patrons unable to gain admission at times when business is the heaviest. Inside will be a spacious foyer for the same purpose. It is Mr. Miles' plan to furnish the foyer as completely and sumptuously as the Detroit fire and theatre ordinances will permit.

The plans also call for spacious lounging and rest rooms for both men and women patrons, with one unusually large room on the second floor being devoted to the comforts of all patrons. In this room will be located public telephones, writing desks, large lounges and easy chairs and plenty of reading matter and lamps.

In the new theatre will be located one of the most completely equipped stages in the entire country. The stage itself will have a depth of thirty-eight feet and will be equipped for handling the biggest road productions, should Mr. Miles at any time care to play such attractions in the new house. Although the type of ventilating and cooling system to be installed has not yet been selected, it is certain that the greatest care will be exercised by the owner in making the choice. A specially-built pipe organ will be installed in the new theatre, which also will have an orchestra pit of sufficient size to accommodate twenty-six musicians.

"It has always been my desire, during the many years I have spent in the show business, to build a theatre, using such plans as will take into consideration only the comfort of patrons," Mr. Miles says. "This new house will do that and do it right."

"People have been building theatres for years and they have all thought they were building the best. But as soon as the structure in question was completed, they found where they had made many mistakes. I'm like all the rest of them. I have made many mistakes in building theatres."

"Now, however, I believe I am going to start profiting by these mistakes. I believe the house I have in mind will be the ideal theatre, ideal from every point of view, especially where the comfort of patrons is considered. I plan on making this new house the most comfortable and most homelike in the country and I'm sure it's going to be a success from the very start.

"With the new theatre I will be able to give patrons the very best in entertainment at a moderate price and I'll give it to them in a theatre that'll be a real theatre. I know exactly what I want and I'm going to have it if I have to stay on the spot every minute of every day that building is going on."

"Work will be under way just as quickly as the architects can complete the plans."

Ventilation of Capitol

cony risers. All of these ventilating means unite under the balcony in a chamber from which large ducts lead to the exhaust fans on the roof.

The adjustable ventilators in the balcony are worthy of a bit of notice here. These consist of openings direct into the concrete risers about 3" x 6" covered by steel plates slightly larger in size. These plates are connected to the riser by steel screws and the distance between riser and plate determined by the compression of a spring through which the screws pass. The accompanying sketch explains this feature with perfect clearness.

Mushroom ventilators placed at strategic points about the balcony attend to the even distribution of air by withdrawing all stale air and preventing pockets of dead air.

As mentioned in the first article of this series it is no simple matter to supply a constantly changing stream of air to a theatre holding well over 5000 persons. And consequently when it is accomplished the cost is considerable. One of the methods by which the cost of ventilating this play-house has been reduced to a minimum is by the recirculating of the air thus eliminating the necessity for bringing in from the outside fresh air for each cycle. When it is not necessary to temper the air this item would not assume such large proportions but when the air of New York during the winter days is taken in at a temperature of 20 degrees or even lower and heated to 65 degrees or thereabouts the heating cost is to be reckoned with. Needless to say, when an audience is in the theatre it would not be advisable to restore normal properties to the used air, but at night and in the forenoon when the big house is empty it is possible to use and re-use the same volume of air.

To set into action the recirculating system the outlets for the used air are closed up by means of rolling shutters, shutting the fresh air intake openings and sending the air from the exhaust fans around through the reheaters. The method of control allows the recirculation to be carried out in total or in part. That is, if desired, part of the used air may be saved and passed through again mixed with a complementary portion of fresh outside air. In this way the minimum load may be placed on the heating plant.

Moore's New House in Washington Will Have Replica of U. S. Capitol as Front

Theatre Front, 125 Feet in Height, Will Be Lighted Constantly by Flood Lights

THE latest Tom Moore theatre to be built in Washington, D. C., was started last Monday, when ground was broken for it on New York avenue, near 14th street. This is probably one of the most desirable theatre locations in the Capitol city, since it has been said that every street car in the city turns the adjacent corner.

The Capitol theatre is capitalized at $850,000 and the complete Board of Directors will be the most representative board conducting the affairs of any theatre in the United States. Many high officials and members of Congress will be associated with Mr. Moore. This project will be financed personally by Mr. Moore with the exception of twelve blocks of stock of $10,000 each.

The Capitol will be unique as a theatre proposition in that it will be named after the United States Capitol and located in Washington, the capital of the United States. Also the lobby and foyer of this theatre will be a replica of the front of the United States Capitol. It will of necessity be a very expensive front as it will reach to the dome in construction approximately 125 feet high. Searchlight floods playing on the dome of this front will make it stand out so as to be seen from most any part of the city. The columns in this building will be of limestone and expensive materials.

This is also the theatre in which Mr. Moore plans to use approximately one change a month, or thirteen pictures a year, each and every one of which is to be staged on a pretentious scale and to have its own set of scenery, lighting effects and atmosphere. The detail of this project is too much to describe in this space and, because of its importance and radical departure as compared with present day presentation, may just as well remain as a surprise for the industry, for I do believe it is the greatest lineup I have ever known.

The Capitol will also fill a long-felt want in Washington, in that it will have a

Tom North,
Managing director of Moore theatres

matinee and evening performance daily set aside for reserved seats where tickets may be purchased as far as a month in advance. The forenoon and supper shows will be given on a continuous policy. Prices for these attractions will be 75 cents and $1.00. The mezzanine loge balcony will have a promenade rich in atmosphere and comfort, with private hat racks in each box. In a word, it is a theatre for the limousine trade of Washington.

The Parkway is Mr. Moore's own project. He is personally expending the total amount of money needed for the erection of this theatre. It covers an area 90 feet wide by 160 deep. This is in the heart of the Mt. Pleasant district on the corner of Park road and Fourteenth street, which is the apex and thickly populated section of Washington's representative people. The Parkway will be a replica of Moore's Rialto, 2,000 seats on one floor.

Canadian Theatre Construction Delayed

The big moving picture theatre interests in Canada, with possibly one exception, seem to be having some difficulty in carrying out plans for the erection and completion of new houses as quickly as intended. Progress with a number of large new theatres has been comparatively slow, because of non-delivery of materials and labor arguments over which the theatre interests have little or no control. One large new theatre in Toronto has already taken more than a year for its construction and the opening date still seems to be quite a distance away. The large new Loew theatre in Ottawa was started more than a year ago and even now it is more than likely that the house cannot be opened by September 1.

According to a semi-official announcement, work was to have started on May 1 on the large new Paramount theatre in Ottawa but the site for this house has not yet been touched. A large suburban theatre on Danforth Avenue, Toronto, was announced some time ago but this house has not yet been started. A large site in the centre of Montreal has been cleared for a big moving picture theatre but progress with construction has apparently been delayed.

In the case of the new Pantages theatre in Toronto, hundreds of workmen are now engaged on the interior work in an effort to have the gigantic structure ready in good time for the fall opening.

One of the latest developments in connection with the establishment of a chain of theatres across Canada for the Famous Players' Canadian Corporation is the purchase of a theatre site in Kitchener, Ontario, a progressive industrial centre. Plans have already been prepared for a large new theatre there. Another large theatre is also being built at Oshawa, Ontario, for the same corporation while houses are being built in Winnipeg, Vancouver and other centres by the same interests.

There is an unprecented activity in theatre building throughout the Dominion but progress with individual "jobs" is apparently not as fast as desired.—

Jackson Studio Nears Completion

MAKING use of the foundations and side walls of an abandoned theatre project, the new studio of the Jackson Film Corporation is being rapidly carried forward to completion.

The E-J Electric Company, specialists in studio equipment, are installing the electrical apparatus. A system of monorails and foot-walks have been provided for the overhead operation of studio lamps, thus eliminating floor cables and other floor encumbrances. Power will be supplied by special feeders from the N. Y. Edison Company and will be converted on the premises by 2-200 K. W. motor generators located in a separate fireproof building. Heavy current distribution will be by bare bus bars adequately protected by heavy grill work.

The studio when completed will be 200 x 125 feet in size, which is large enough to accommodate six companies at one time. Dressing rooms sufficient for 200 people have been provided for, and in addition there are the usual facilities for offices, still laboratory, etc.

The remote control system for the studio illumination, as well as other electrical devices were designed and installed by the E-J Electric Company.

Directory of New Theatres

ARIZONA

Phoenix—An up-to-date theatre will be erected at 33 West Washington street by Rickards and Nace. The architectural firm of William Curlett & Son of Los Angeles has prepared plans for the building.

ARKANSAS

Fort Smith—An Airdome is to be built by Mr. H. Kirkpatrick on a lot on South Ninth street, near Garrison avenue.

Newport—The Newport Amusement Company is spending $12,000 to remodel the local opera house. Work will begin about July 1st.

CALIFORNIA

Anaheim—Messrs. Head & Ingram have purchased a lot on West Center street between Lemon and Clementine on which they will erect a new theatre. Architects are now working on plans for the building.

Madera—Mr. A. C. H. Chamberlain has announced the erection of a 1,200-seat house at a cost of $100,000.

CANADA

Welland, Ontario—Mr. S. L. Lambert began this week the erection of a four-story theatre on East Main street.

CONNECTICUT

Bridgeport—The twin theatres at Main and Congress streets will be under construction within three weeks. S. Z. Poli is the owner. Thomas W. Lamb is the architect.

Waterbury—John L. Fernandez is to erect a motion picture theatre on East Main street. The building will cost $200,000.

ILLINOIS

Danville—Danville is to have a $250,000 theatre on the corner of Hazel and North streets. The Home Theatre Company is building the structure.

INDIANA

Anderson—The Meridian Amusement Company has purchased a site at Richmond and will erect a large theatre there.

Clinton—The contract for the mill work to be used in the new theatre has been let to a local contractor, Mr. T. W. Dowdy.

Columbia City—The contract for the erection of the new Columbia theatre building has been let to S. Kessler and construction work will start soon.

Lafayette—Rapp and Rapp, architects of Chicago, are preparing plans for a theatre at the corner of Sixth and Main streets, now occupied by the Family theatre. The new building will require an outlay of $250,000. The Columbia Amusement Company is behind the project.

Pence—This town is to have a new motion picture theatre constructed of hollow brick and is to be equipped with a private lighting plant.

Vincennes—The Wilkerson-Lyons theatre, at the corner of Fifth and Main streets, is now being constructed by T. Frank Willis, contractor of this city.

IOWA

Marshalltown—A. H. Blank of Des Moines has purchased a site on Main street for a six-story building in which there will be provided office room besides a large motion picture theatre. The building will cost $400,000.

KENTUCKY

Louisville—$70,000 is to be used for the construction of a Liberty theatre at Camp Knox.

MASSACHUSETTS

Worcester—New York theatre interests have looked over the property owned by Charles T. Tatman and James A. Saxe as a possible site for a theatre. It is understood that architects have been commissioned to prepare plans.

MICHIGAN

Pontiac—The Kleist Amusement Enterprises will build a motion picture house in Pontiac at a cost of $250,000.

MISSOURI

Kansas City—The F. D. P. Amusement Company will soon commence a new theatre on the property at 1908 Main street.

Mexico—The Rialto theatre, owned by Gallagher and Streif, will be entirely refurnished during the summer and opened in the fall as an up-to-date theatre.

MONTANA

Eureka—A $22,000 theatre will be built in Eureka this summer.

NEW JERSEY

Morristown—Architect William C. Van Dusen is planning extensive alterations for the Palace theatre.

Spring Lake—Martin Wohlfarth is building a new theatre to be called the Atlantic. The building will have a seating capacity of 850.

NEW YORK

Albany—Construction work on the Strand theatre located at North Pearl street and Orange street is being rapidly carried out. It is hoped to have the theatre ready for occupancy by July 1st.

Brooklyn—The New Farragut theatre is rapidly nearing completion.

Corry—Mr. Manley Parker announced today that he is to erect a theatre this summer to replace the Rex, which was burned some time ago. The new building will cost about $75,000.

Flushing—Bayside is to have an up-to-date theatre. James F. McKenna is the owner. Thomas W. Lamb is the architect.

Jamestown—Peterson & Woods, owners of the Winter Garden and the Mozart theatres in this city, will begin the construction of a large theatre seating 2,000 persons, on Spring street and Third street. It will be the largest theatre in Western New York outside of Buffalo.

Malone—$30,000 will be spent for alterations in the Grand theatre. The building will be entirely remodelled and expanded to accommodate 1,500 people. Architect J. Mills Platt of Rochester is in charge of the alterations.

Peckskill—Isadore Fried is to build a modern up-to-date theatre on the site of the old Raleigh Hotel. The structure will cost $200,000. Plans are being drawn by V. H. Kollier of New York City.

White Plains—The new Lynn theatre on Main street, east of the Citizens Bank, will be under way soon. Russell G. Swartout is the architect for the theatre. Richard S. Hayes will manage the house when completed.

NORTH CAROLINA

Reidsville—Mr. D. A. Hendrix is remodelling the old Primitive Baptist church on Scales street into a 1,200-seat theatre.

Winston-Salem—The Piedmont Amusement Company has secured an option on a building on Liberty street and expect to erect a modern motion picture theatre.

OKLAHOMA

Stigler—C. D. Milam will build a theatre at the corner of Third and Church streets.

OREGON

Oregon City—W. A. Long, owner of the Star theatre, will build a new theatre seating 750. W. A. White is the architect.

PENNSYLVANIA

Philadelphia—Hodgens, Inc., architects of Philadelphia, are receiving estimates for the erection of a theatre and store building at Moorestown for the Criterion Company.

Philadelphia—Hoffman-Henon Company, architects of Philadelphia, have drawn up plans for the complete alteration of the theatre at Frankford and Sargent streets.

Sayre—The Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton plans to erect a theatre at Sayre to seat 1,200.

Seaford—Hoffman and Henan, architects of Philadelphia, are drawing plans for a one-story stone and brick theatre in this town.

Shippensburg—This town is to have a motion picture theatre 57 x 130 feet. M. R. Rhodes, Chambersburg architect, is drawing up plans for the structure. Frank E. Hollar is the owner. Seating capacity, 750.

Washington—Mr. Spero Kosmos has purchased the property at Main and Pine avenue and will erect a 2,000-seat theatre. The house will cost approximately $200,000.

TENNESSEE

South Pittsburgh—Extensive improvements are planned in the Strand theatre on Cedar avenue by Mr. B. P. Ferguson.

TEXAS

Fort Worth—The new Pantages theatre on Tenth, Main and Commerce streets is already under way. The house will cost $100,000 and seat 2,500 persons.

WASHINGTON

Ephrata—J. A. Chaon will construct a concrete theatre building 40 x 80 with a seating capacity of 400 people. The building will be located across the street from the McDonald building.

Magnets

IN order to obtain a clear conception of electrical apparatus it is necessary to understand the principles of magnets and magnetism. In practically all the uses of electricity, magnets of one form or another enter into the operation.

The first magnetic properties were found in natural magnets or loadstone when it was discovered that this material would attract small pieces of iron and steel.

When a piece of the above metal is brought in close proximity to a natural magnet this iron or steel becomes magnetized and acts like another magnet, thus it is said to have become magnetized.

Magnets may be divided into classes of artificial and electro magnets. The artificial magnet which is made by bringing a piece of iron or steel under the influence of another magnet may be divided into classes of temporary and permanent magnets. If a piece of iron is brought under the influence of a magnet and becomes magnetized but upon being removed from this influence loses its magnetism almost immediately it is known as a temporary magnet.

CORRECT ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS OF MAY

30. 44.5 kilowatt-hours

31. Load current 153 amps.
Generator output 16.8 k.w.
Driving engine 26 H.P.

Meaning that it retains its magnetism only as long as it is acted upon by another magnet.

However, if a piece of hard steel is magnetized by being hubbed with a natural magnet and holds this magnetism after the natural magnet has been removed it is then known as a permanent magnet and may be used to magnetize other pieces of iron.

Magnets in which the magnetizing properties are supplied by the flow of an electric current are known as electro-magnets and are usually made up of material which loses practically all its magnetism as soon as the flow of current is stopped.

Permanent magnets are usually made up in two forms, that known as the bar magnet and that as the horseshoe magnet.

A compass is an adaptation of the bar magnet, for should a bar magnet be suspended by a string it would take the same position as a compass in the earth's magnetic lines of force.

When a bar magnet is suspended by a string the end pointing toward the earth's magnetic north pole is known as the north seeking pole or the N pole of the magnet. The other end is the south pole. S.

If when suspended in this manner the north pole of another magnet is brought close to the N pole of the suspended magnet it will be found that they will repel each other, in that the suspended magnet will move away from the other.

But if an S pole of the other magnet be held to the N pole of the suspended magnet it will be found that they will attract each other.

The same effect may be obtained at the S pole of the suspended magnet. Thus we may write the first law of magnetism which is: Like poles repel and unlike poles attract.

The magnetic force of a magnet is exerted at the poles. This may be shown by noting the pull on a piece of iron placed along the magnet in different positions or it may be shown by placing the bar magnet in iron filings and noting the manner in which they cling to the magnet.

The field of a magnet in which iron and steel will be affected is shown by the accompanying sketch and is made up of magnetic lines of force which flow out at the north pole, and around into the south pole and thus back through the magnet to the north pole again. These magnetic lines of force form a complete circuit which is known as the magnetic circuit, the total number of lines making up what is known as the magnetic flux. Although the lines of a magnetic field extend indefinitely, there is very little effect beyond a limited distance since the force exerted between two magnetic poles is inversely proportional to the square of the distance between them.

It will be noted that a magnet attracts pieces of iron and steel but has no effect on other substances. The action which really takes place is that the magnet turns the iron itself into another magnet by magnetizing it and then one attracts the other.

A case in which the iron may be highly magnetized but no poles produced is that of a ring in which the lines are wholly within the iron so that there are no poles or external field. If this ring is, however, broken two poles are formed producing a strong field across a small area. The closed type of magnetic circuit is made use of in transformers, and the broken form as shown by the cut is used in some types of meter construction.

Should a bar magnet be broken it is found that each section has a north and south pole of its own and is in itself a bar magnet. This fact shows that the lines of force actually run through the magnet and not start and stop at the poles.

The theory for the magnetizing of a piece of iron may be taken as follows.

Attention of Mr. Will C. Smith, General Manager.

Gentlemen:

As I am about to begin the construction of two additional theaters in this City, I am most naturally concerned as to whether or not I will be able to get six of your latest model machines. I will not require them for four or five months, but, knowing the demand for your machines, want to get my order in early.

I have, as you know, been using your machines for the past 15 years, during which time I have of course tried about every machine manufactured, with the result that I have always had to replace such other makes with Powers, to be sure I had the best. I am taking no chances of further experimenting—hence the above order.

I look upon your concern as not only having the best and the most reliable machine on the market, but the matter of personal service and attention that follows the sale of your machines is one that gains for you full confidence of the purchaser. Your accomplishments in the direction of putting a perfect picture on the screen and in the durability of your outfit are especially deserving of my high praise.

"More power to the Powers."

With thanks for past and future courtesies, believe me to be Very sincerely yours,

Tom Moore

The Methods to be Used in Adjusting the Power's Intermittent Movement

A Clear and Detailed Account of the Separate Operations Involved

At this stage it is well to see that bushing No. 670 has been inserted to the proper depth. It should be inserted to such depth that when the cam and the pincross are both in place, the pins of the cross will come to about $1\frac{1}{32}$ " from the bottom of the slots surrounding the diamond shaped cam of the Power movement.

Proceeding with the assembly, the cam is temporarily removed from the framing-carriage, and the pincross is drawn out about half way. Then the small eccentric bushing, No. 671, is inserted in its proper hole at the right hand side of the framing-carriage. Bushing 671 is slotted at one end to receive a screwdriver blade for the purpose of making adjustments, and this slotted end of the bushing is, of course, turned outwards. This bushing should be inserted to such depth that its inside face is flush with the framing carriage casting.

The pincross spindle is pushed inwards (from the left) again until its end meets the small eccentric bushing, No. 671, and this bushing is now adjusted by turning it (with a screw driver applied to its slotted outer end) until the pincross spindle enters it readily, and is a free rotating fit. When this is the case it will be found that the intermittent spindle is perfectly level, and it is secured in this position by tightening bushing 671 in place, by means of its set-screw.

Having carried out the previous instructions carefully and accurately, we are now ready for the installation of the intermittent-sprocket. To accomplish this we first withdraw the pincross spindle part way again, and place thereon the small set-collar, No. 662, for the intermittent spindle, and then the Intermittent-sprocket. The set-collar, No. 662, goes over to the left of the intermittent spindle, right next to the large eccentric bushing No. 670.

It is of the highest importance that the intermittent-sprocket be accurately secured to its spindle, which is easy of accomplishment if the following instructions are carefully followed:

Upon examining the intermittent-sprocket, a scratch-mark will be found on one end, and this end of the sprocket should go toward the pincross and large eccentric-bushing 670. Likewise, upon closely examining the pincross, a small center-punch mark will be noted on its hub, just back of the pins; a corresponding mark appearing on the hub of the intermittent-sprocket in the form of a file-scratch. The intermittent-sprocket should be rotated on its spindle until these two marks are in line, and adjusted sideways to bring the holes in the sprocket into coincidence with those through the spindle, whereupon it will be found that the taper-pins for holding the sprocket in place may be easily inserted. The taper-pins are now driven home and their protruding ends clipped off with a pair of end-nippers or other suitable implement.

In installing a new intermittent-sprocket, the operation may be carried out by removing the pincross and the large eccentric bushing 670, and attaching the small set-collar 662 and the intermittent-sprocket and spindle to be supported on a block while driving home the taper-pins, which is a measure of protection against bending the sprocket and spindle. The pincross and sprocket, assembled in this way, can be pushed back in place through the hole in the left hand side of the framing carriage which is the seat of the large eccentric-bushing No. 670, but if this method of assembling and installing the intermittent-sprocket is followed, the adjustment of the pincross and the cam should be carried out in the manner previously described—first adjusting the cross to the cam by manipulation of the large bushing, No. 670, and finally bringing the small eccentric bushing, No. 671, into alignment with this.

After the intermittent-sprocket has been secured to its spindle, and the pincross sprocket, etc., are in place in the framing-carriage, the small set-collar, No. 662, for the intermittent-sprocket, should be set snugly up against bushing No. 670 and secured in place by its screw.

A most important operation still remains, and that is the lining up of the intermittent-sprocket with respect to the aperture, or opening, in the aperture-plate. The sprocket should be so adjusted sideways that each of its rows of teeth is at an equal distance from its corresponding side of the picture aperture, and this alignment is accomplished by sideways adjustment of the intermittent spindle and all the parts attached to it. If, for instance, the sprocket needs to be slightly moved to the left, the set-screw holding the large eccentric-bushing, No. 670, is loosened and the sprocket shifted in that direction by gently tapping the inner face of bushing No. 670. When this is carefully done the adjustment between the cam and the pincross will not be disturbed, and after the sprocket is in proper alignment with the aperture, it is secured in place by tightening bushing 670.

If, on the other hand, the intermittent-sprocket requires to be shifted to the right, in order to properly line it up with the aperture, bushing 670 should be loosened and the sprocket moved to the right by gently tapping the pincross at its center between the pins. Never tap the ends of the intermittent-sprocket, as this might result in bending it, thus rendering it incapable of projecting a steady picture. If it is found necessary to move the intermittent-sprocket to the right after the entire movement has been assembled, it is, of course, necessary to remove the cam, so that the end of the pincross is accessible for tapping upon.

After lining up the intermittent-sprocket, and securing it properly in place, the assembly of the movement is completed by finally installing the cam. The cam spindle is inserted in the bearing at the left of the framing carriage, and the set-collar, No. 676, for the cam spindle, is next slipped on. The cam spindle is now pushed all the way home and the set collar, No. 676, pushed over against the interior of the framing-carriage casting at the left, where it is set up snugly enough to remove end play in the cam spindle, and locked in place with its set screw.

It now remains to restore to their positions those parts which were first removed in order to make the intermittent movement accessible for adjustment. In replacing these parts care should be exercised that all small set-collars, washers, etc., associated with them, are returned to their proper places.

Additional Notes on Soldering

SOME time ago, G. Waldo Bennewitz, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, wrote a short article for the NEWS in which he gave several suggestions which made it possible to save the cost of repair parts by making use of soldering. In the letter which follows he continues the story and adds a few kinks that will be found of great benefit.

Just a few lines more on "Soldering," that I think will be of some interest to Projectionists. There are many things that help to get good results in soldering. Some of the most important are, well tinned iron, parts to be soldered well cleaned (you cannot be too particular about cleaning parts to be soldered), use of

G-E Compensarcs Insure Steady Pictures

Theatres equipped with the right compensarcs give their patrons pictures that are uniformly strong and steady without variation or sudden fading of light.

In starting the first lamp, the arc may be drawn as quickly as the heating of the carbon points permits. At change-over it is necessary only to open the short circuiting switch on the second lamp a minute or two before the end of the reel. The current flowing through the carbons brings the tips to a white heat and a steady, strong arc is immediately established.

The steadiness of a picture depends upon the maintenance of proper voltage at the arc. With G-E Compensarcs, the current may be varied by simple adjustments of the field rheostat to maintain constant screen illumination with films of varying densities. The proper voltage, regardless of current changes, is automatically provided—no wasteful resistance is necessary, the generator maintaining exact voltage.

Compensarcs are safe, easy to operate, economical, efficient and reliable. G-E offices or distributors everywhere for quick delivery and service.

35C-45

Operating Advantages of Compensarcs

1. Steady, strong arc.
2. Easily operates two arcs at the same time for changeover.
3. Quiet arc strike and quick settle-down.
4. Self regulating arc voltage.
5. Current stays at set value.
6. Current easily raised and lowered.
7. Cannot be damaged by short circuit.
8. Fading made easy.
9. Not affected by changes in current conditions.
10. Quiet in operation.

soldering flux, iron at right temperature.

Tinning Iron.—To solder the iron must be coated with solder; this operation is known as "tinning." To tin the iron, heat until hot enough to melt the solder rapidly when lightly pressed against it. When hot enough the heat of the iron can be felt when held close to the face. Clean the surface of the iron with an old file, if temperature is too high the surface of the copper will tarnish immediately. If too hot allow to cool slightly. When surface only tarnishes slightly sprinkle a little flux upon it and rub with a stick of solder. Another way is to sprinkle a little flux on a piece of tin, also a few drops of solder. Now rub the surface of the iron over the surface of the tin.

After you have the iron tinned as desired wipe off the superfluous solder with a clean damp rag. If properly tinned the surface should be clean and bright. Care should be taken not to overheat the iron after tinning. If iron is overheated you will have to re-tin it to get good results.

Cleaning Parts to be Soldered.—The parts to be soldered must be well cleaned, using emery cloth or a file. Remembering that this is one thing that cannot be over done. The cleaner the parts to be soldered the better the finished work will hold. Many have failed on soldering jobs on this one count.

Soldering Flux.—There are many kinds of flux suitable for various kinds of metal. For electrical work use pine amber rosin, as it is non-corrosive. Another good flux in liquid form is rosin dissolved in grain alcohol. Dissolve rosin and grain alcohol into a solution like a thin syrup. If solution becomes too thick add more grain alcohol. Keep container closed when not in use. Chloride of Zinc.—This flux is used for brass, copper, tinned steel, etc. Use 3 parts of hydrochloric (muriatic) acid, 1 part water in a glass or lead vessel, and add small pieces of zinc as long as the acid will dissolve them. Add zinc gradually to prevent boiling over. After settling the clear solution should be poured into another clean glass or lead vessel.

Sweating.—This method is used when two pieces of metal are soldered face to face. (This method is used on the film tracks on the Powers aperture plate.) The surfaces are cleaned, heated, and covered with a film of solder. The soldered surfaces are then placed face to face and heated by passing the iron over the outside surface until the solder melts and unites the two pieces.

Heating the Iron.—There are many ways to heat the soldering iron, such as, blow torch, gas, electric furnace, etc. Never try to do a soldering job with an iron that is not hot enough to melt the solder rapidly when lightly touched. If you do you will not get good results.

Intermittent Chatters

C. H. Menke, Keokuk, Iowa: How can I eliminate the chattering noise at the Intermittent of my Powers 6B. I have tried everything, even a new sprocket but have had no success. Reply:

From the meagre information given in your letter of May 7th, we have an idea that the shaft of your intermittent movement is sprung causing the clattering noise at each revolution. It may also be that the pincross is not properly adjusted in reference to the cam so that one of the arms of the sprocket strike heavily against the side of the cam as it comes into contact. We suggest that you send your entire movement to the nearest Powers distributor or direct to the factory at 90 Gold street, New York City.

Practical Electricity

Each molecule of the iron is a magnet in itself with no regular position and in normal condition the poles of one neutralize the poles of the other. When a magnet is brought in close proximity these molecules will all be arranged in a systematic form so that the lines of force of each molecule add up and appear at the poles of the magnet. This effect is illustrated by the accompanying sketches.

In the case of soft iron this effect is only temporary and the particles rearrange themselves as soon as the magnetizing influence is taken away so that they again neutralize each other and the magnetic effect is lost. However, in the case of hard steel the molecules are held in position thus retaining the magnetic effect, but even this may be broken up by sharp rapping or shocks, thus it is seen that electrical instruments such as meters require more or less careful handling.

National Anti-Misframe League Pledge

As a projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in first class condition. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy all misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

A Letter from Keough

I WISH to thank you for publishing my letter — "Should have better inspectors," etc." in your issue of April 10th, 1920.

Well, regarding the improvements, etc., which I mentioned in same, I feel very sorry to say that it will be some time before I can complete them.

My reason for getting away from this promise is this: This town has quite a number of operators and what they call assistant operators and apprentices, but somehow or other it seems that this assistant operator plan is a thing which should be stopped and any man working in a booth be compelled to have a license. There are more $10.00 a week jobs today than what there was six years ago and this assistant operator scheme is the cause. A cheap boss will fire his operator and put the assistant to work for a few dollars. By the time he raises he has another one ready and the same stunt goes into operation again. Now the film exchanges could stop this in one week. I believe all the film exchanges have joined hands. (I mean this way, if a man does wrong to one they all know about it, and if one refuses to supply him they all co-operate with him). Well now, suppose the exchange said our film will not be rented to any one unless he pays his operator a living wage and enough to make him take an interest in his work and handle his film with care and see it was handled by no one but a licensed man. How long would the fight last?—one day. Of course the Union helps and all operators should get into it but when you come down to small towns the Union cannot fight much only when the exchanges stick with them. So why then don't the exchanges offer their assistance and help make all operators members of the Union and they could compel the Union to appoint a man in every town to see their films were handled properly and taken care of. There always can be found a good man no matter how small the place might be. Let him be responsible for the actions of the others or help make them good men. Pretty soon there would be a mighty big fall-off in fires and damages which films undergo in the present day. There would be no need for writing letters about punch holes and such marks and defacement of valuable film. Now, we organized here and I was elected President and I am going to try to place Williamsport on top of the list for projection and I will guarantee any house here that employs a Union man will never have an exchange say you spoiled my film or your operator does not know how to handle it. Every man in this local will be one; no man will know more than the other guy; if he does he will have to let him in on it and make him as good as himself. There will be little by-laws made to make every member co-operate with the film exchange and take the best of care of all films and keep the films in trim. No one will be allowed to mark changes. If he is caught there will be a fine. A spotter will be set at work and if a man or member receives a bad copy he will notify an officer and he will send word to the manager of that exchange. This will cover the theatre and the operator himself, if he got his report in before the second show starts. There will be many other little acts put into action which will make it a pleasure for the man who employs a Union man. Now, this week I was visiting all the theatres and asking their recognition of the Union. Some were very pleased with my statement and others thought it impossible and made such offers that they might just as well have said, no, we will not. Why—because they can get a boy yet at school and place him in his booth to run a show, or he can step in himself and stick a big 8000 reel feature in and grind away, she going fine, no thought what will happen the next poor guy that gets it. The film exchange don't worry, either; if they did they would never rent their films to a man who would let a man with a license and right by the state to be in that booth walk the street because he was saving a few mean dollars to stay away rather than gratify the man with his profession the means to exist under the present-day wants. We are not going to ask them pay the Union wage of Philadelphia or New York. We are considering the town and its business, but we expect them to pay a living wage if they can or when they do begin to pay the door tender more than the operator it's time to join to my estimation the Projectionist should be the best paid man in the house or on a level with him, anyway. Now we are going to ask a little more for these boys; some may give and some may not. I am doing all myself, so there will be no cause for any of those men to refuse. My boss pays me twice as much as some of them, and I guess if I asked him for more he would not can me because he realizes the value of a man who is able to stand up and defy anyone accusing him of spoiling their film. If some of those fellows would pay their good operators a few dollars to live on and cut out that charge from the exchange for film spoiled they would be in much more at the end of a year. Now, taken all in a lump they make every bit or very little short of what my boss makes. Why do they refuse to give it to them, because the film exchange does not care who they sell to so long as they get the money? And the State Law is a little too lenient with them. It's hard for a man to be everywhere and watch them all, but some day one will be caught and it will cost him all he saved and some more to pay the fine. Well now, if they refuse to pay a few dollars more and the operator has to get out, will the film exchange stick by him or will all the Union houses refuse to handle film from any exchange that supplies him. That's another question to be brought up and when such terms the other improvement; with the present state of affairs good men are only wasting their brains making something that some of those people would never in God's earth know how to use. First of all, make or let the operator or projectionist be looked upon as a man of ability. Let him be recognized by the exchanges, the managers, etc. Let the man who employs him pay him $10 to $20—$30—$40—$50—$60—$70 or $100 if he can. The operators will not want all; they know when a man is treating them fair and square. But when a man pays his usher more than his operator are brought about then is the time to make it is time he was checked up. We do not want to fight. We just want fair play like all good Americans look for, and those boys would not expect more only they need it, and they are getting enough to give probably they will not refuse us, but if they should I hope the men will co-operate with us and stick by. I thank you.

A little scheme for the film exchanges.

Another piece of apparatus in the booth which seldom if ever is thought about: "It's The Reel."

A bad reel spoils more film than any other instrument in machine or on the rewinder. Take the reel of today. It's smooth on both outside faces but put your hands on the inside—what happens? You'll either lose a finger or a hunk of flesh. Now, you get a box of films, say first run right from the exchange. You open your box and start to get your film out. What happens? The reel falls apart and the whole business is on the floor, probably the floor is clean but there will be something there big enough to scratch or crack it. Well, you take the next one and put on the rewind and it runs like a guy getting home from a cellar meeting. Well, you start it off and something calls you away, say your light. Most of the time what happens? She only runs over the side and you've got to make a half dozen patches. If we keep on we would soon reach an Idea. Here is my idea: A man pays $500 for his machine and he will buy a piece of scrap iron for $50 to wind $600 worth of film on. Same with the exchange. Now why not call a junk man and give him every single reel? Go to work and get reels made with as much care as they do the film trap.

I trust you will not feel angry over this being so long and me writing you so soon. I thank you and appreciate your co-operation.

Motiograph Increases Price

THE increased cost of labor and materials has compelled the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company to increase the selling price of their Motiograph De Luxe projectors, according to General Manager O. F. Spahr, who states that the new price for the Motiograph De Luxe is $550.00.

It is the fixed policy of Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company to maintain the high quality of Motiographs which necessitates the use of the very best materials and workmanship in their production, but Mr. Spahr hopes, notwithstanding the determination to maintain this high standard, that the top price now has been reached and that a further advance will not be necessary. He explained that the raise in price at this time had been forced by the advance, during the last ninety days, in labor costs of from 30 to 40 per cent, castings approximately 50 per cent and other parts of the machine from 10 to 25 per cent.

The company's big plant on West Randolph Street, Chicago, is being worked overtime in an effort to keep up with the demand for Enterprise products and the scope of Enterprise Optical Company's service to exhibitors, for which it has become famous, is being constantly widened and developed by Mr. Spahr.

Correspondent in Hawaii Reports Trouble With Titles Made as Direct Positives

Expert of Eastman Company Points Out Several Possible Sources of Errors in Commission

FROM J. K. Araki, Hilo, Hawaii, comes this letter:

At present I am employing a method of making titles "in camera" or direct positives. This process is as follows: On a plain sheet of white paper I type in red, using Carter's Stamping Ink, with a set of rubber type which I purchased from a local stationer. I pin the title on the stand and set my camera to shoot. Of course, the film is threaded in reverse so that the title will be read on the emulsion side from left to right. I use a large lens opening and shoot the title cranking slowly. But upon developing and fixing it produces a title as inclosed herewith. You will notice that it is not contrasty but is dull. Could you recommend a method which will produce good titles? Also recommend a method for or formula for varnishing and waterproofing positive films.

I have seen in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS from time to time such societies as the American Society of Cinematographers, the Los Angeles Photographic School and the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. As I may wish to become a member of one or all of these societies would you kindly give me their addresses and the formalities of each organization.

I have heard that there is a magazine known as the American Kinematography. Could you give me its address?

Reply: Mr. Araki's question relating to his success with direct positives was referred to Mr. J. I. Crabtree, of the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company. In a reply Mr. Crabtree includes two samples of titles made direct and goes on to say:

In reply to the reader from Hawaii I am inclosing a fair sample of titles produced by the direct method. The contrast of these, of course, is not as great as is obtained by printing the titles from a negative though the tendency nowadays is to diminish the contrast of titles in order to reduce eye strain.

The titles inclosed were made by printing on white card in black printers' ink in a printing press and fully developing so as to obtain the maximum contrast in No. 16 developer recommended for use with Eastman film. By fully developing is meant carrying development almost to the fogging point. The fogging point should first be determined by developing a piece of unexposed film and noticing the time taken to produce perceptible fog. Supposing the developer fogs in 12 minutes, then 10 minutes would be a safe margin for development.

Only bold faced type should be used, and the minimum exposure given to secure the desired effect in 10 minutes, say; otherwise the letters will "close in." A test for a good title is to examine it when pressed in contact with a sheet of white paper. If no fog is present the letters will show up plainly, the visibility decreasing with increasing fog.

A few words as to the lighting of the copy which largely determines the contrast of the finished title: The best lighting system is a series of tungsten lamps arranged in the form of a square on a wooden board placed opposite the copy. A square hole is then cut in the center of the board large enough to cover the copy with the lens and it is well to have the copy board black and large enough to cut off stray light from the lens otherwise if light other than that reflected from the copy is allowed to fall on the camera lens this produces "flare" and it is impossible to get good results.

In answer to your correspondent's other question there is no really satisfactory method of varnishing or waterproofing positive film.

Comment:

A comparison between a sample of title work submitted by Mr. Araki and Mr. Crabtree's excellent discussion of the subject would lead us to believe that the trouble with the former's title is undue fogging. This may be due to his improperly arranged lighting system starting with his use of unsatisfactory rubber type and red ink. In view of this we would advise Mr. Araki to test out his lighting system by making up a few simple titles in hand lettering using Higgins Waterproof drawing ink and noting the difference after development. If the fogging still persists he has eliminated one possible source of trouble and has narrowed it down to wrong chemical procedure. We hope he will try this out and report his findings.

Membership is by invitation or more properly, by achievement, since a prospective member must have contributed something tangible to the art to be recognized by the Society. Write to Mr. H. Lighting System and Control Methods Used by Metro Studio in Los Angeles

An Article by Walter Grams, Supt. of Elec. Development of Metro Film Corporation

THE Metro Pictures Corporation at their California studio have recently completed a new installation, consisting of two stages 150 feet by 90 feet wide, and expect to start soon on the construction of a third glass stage, the lighting control of which presents novel and interesting features. The power is received at the company's premises at 15,000 volts three phase three wire, and is reduced to 2,200 volts at the first step. The lighting current is divided into two sections, 110 volt, 30 alternating current for the overhead lighting of all three stages, and 110 volt direct current for the floor equipment. The alternating current supply is stepped down from the 220 volt three phase already mentioned, while the direct current is supplied from the same source by motor generator sets. Both the A. C. and D. C. feeders carry into separate distributing panels, and from these, into the sub-panels, each panel carrying six 100 ampere contactors. The A. C. panels on each runway, each of these carrying three 150 ampere contactors.

These control panels are connected to a master control system through a plugging board, which allows the connection and control of any bank or group of banks. By this method, any arrangement of lighting that is desired may be obtained by the director or his assistant simply by operating the master control buttons.

Each of the three stages is provided with the necessary rails and switches. The rails run up and down the stage in seven rows, the switches being at each end of each stage. Both rails and switches are provided with the necessary stops, safety catches, and manually controlled releasing triggers. This system permits the moving of as many of the overhead lighting units as is desirable.

The overhead lighting of the first two stages

Music For Your Theatre

No. 5

Just a Matter of Taste

By Charles D. Isaacson

WE'RE getting set. That is to say, we are preparing to go at this musical proposition in a serious, business-like method.

We know that music can make money for us. (A letter received today declares "the most essential part of the picture business is the music"—E. C. Weeks. The Hiltonia, Hilton, New York.)

We know that the country is going music mad. We know that there is a vast treasury of materials at hand from which to chose.

Now we face the problem.

Next week we will launch the Music Service of the Motion Picture News (a specific opportunity to put a specific set of suggestions to work for any motion picture theatre).

At this time, just before we cut free of all traditions and strike out for the biggest results, I want to talk to you a few moments about the matter of taste.

As a business man you don't give a continental about the taste of the people of America—at least you think you don't care!

But just figure it this way:

If it made no difference whether people had good taste or bad, there would be nothing of the competitive in motion picture trading. Folks would just go to pictures and all your attempts to make a good looking theatre; all your advertising; lobby displays; and everything else would all go to pot. You wouldn't try to select your programs—you'd just make a contract and buy film in quantity at the lowest price basis.

But people have their tastes—and you know that unless you make good in satisfying the whims of the public, you might as well shut up shop.

So, even though the business men of America may not bother to think about the social factors which enter in the development of our taste, nevertheless they must watch the trend of public fancy and satisfy the demands.

If you will be patient for a few moments only, I want to get this proposition off my chest and in front of you. It will show you what is in the back of my mind all of the time. It will enable you

Ask
Charles D. Isaacson
About Music

These articles contain money-making ideas for motion picture theatre managers who are alive to their big opportunities.

Mr. Isaacson is the best equipped man in the country to advise you on how to get the most out of music in your theatre.

He is at your disposal—address him in care of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

to appreciate the bigness of our ultimate possibilities.

Any clever storekeeper will ratify the statement that you can make your own class of patronage by the sort of appeal you make in drawing trade. Thus, John Wanamaker in New York brings a different clientele to his counters than does Jake's Emporium, a few blocks away. The Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, with prices higher than a certain hostelry two blocks away, draws the real set, while the other has a patronage that is cheap.

I assume that every theatre man who reads The News is ambitious. That he wishes to build up the best trade in his section, and wants to earn a reputation as being a first-class showman. He wants the trade that pays the money—that has the money to spend. He wants the kind who stick—who advertise the place by their good will; who hold fast to a theatre as well as they are loyal to a good store merchant. . . . Perhaps the kind with the cars that line up in front of your house at night, and bring "class" as well as money.

Well, when all is said and done, it's just a matter of taste. If you want to cultivate the fly-by-night trade, you'll give them fly-by-night music. If you want to draw the reliable, solid, dependable following, you'll identify your theatre with the best music, the fine, old, always-satisfying music of the better class.

Burlesque never drew the kind of audience you seek and burlesque music won't do it either. Dance hall stunts never built up a stability of following, and dance hall tunes won't either.

The mind which is content with the "shimmy" in music, will want the shimmy comedies, shimmy dramas, it is a very unsettled, unsafe, unsatisfactory sort of mind to try to do regular business with. If I were an exhibitor, I should like to be able to say of my audience:

"Well, I'll tell you what sort of folks they are—they like good things—they're not content merely with being entertained. In music they want substantial numbers. For instance, they like to hear the fine overtures, they enjoy selections from operas, they like the old songs, they like the real, sincere new music. They like a clean laugh and an honest piece of acting. They love fine violin solos and ensembles of harp and cello. They are what might be called home folks, with a touch of soul to them.

"They are not snobs—oh, no. They can enjoy a bit of common clay as much as anyone. They will take pleasure in an occasional offering of rag and jazz, but don't want it for a steady diet. For their main music, they insist on something better."

If the motion picture theatre manager is going to add to the overflow of the lower type of music, he would a whole lot better leave the subject alone entirely. All conditions seem to point to the genuine place for the treatise if good music is supplied.

But it is purely a matter of taste.

The crowd which is built up on good music has good taste and is the best kind of an audience to cultivate from a dollars-and-cents viewpoint. They understand good pictures. They will want good books—they will be appreciative of the artistic things you do in lighting the theatre, in novelties, in the decoration of the interior of your building. They will be the kind of people that will enable you, by tangible support, to carry out the things you would like to do, who will see you through on your plans for better pictures, better methods, better ideas and ideals.

This is what is in the back of my head as I am making my plans for the musical motion picture.

It makes no difference whether you use jazz or symphony to draw, so long as the results in money count. Remember, we are not dealing in philanthropy, but solid business.

If you will permit the glance ahead, the Motion Picture News is going to permit me to show you how to select your instruments and your music; how to determine what is the right way to plan a new theatre or an old theatre for the best acoustics; how to tie up the music teachers, musicians, students, instrument houses, how to select musicians and directors, etc.

But in order to carry through the operations most effectively, the Music Service of the News will be inaugurated. *A specific set of instructions you can use will be issued only to those who request them. I will place myself, through the co-operation of the News, on your staff, in an advisory capacity, and try to swing through the musical project, so that it will draw the best crowds.

Place your name on the list to receive the Motion Picture News musical aids.

Watch next week for the first outline of the big plan for a consistent campaign.

Next week, Questions, Answers and Discussion Column will start.

(Mr. Isaacson is receiving, and will be pleased to receive exhibitors' queries and suggestions. Tell him what you think of this department—and what you think it ought to contain. Tell him what you have done, are doing, or contemplate doing in a musical way. He will be glad to help you. Address Charles D. Isaacson, in care of the Motion Picture News.)

Studio Layout

is done by means of forty-eight, eight tube banks of Cooper Hewitt, alternating current mercury vapor lamps to each stage, while the floor lighting units both mercury vapor, and are lamps are direct current. The third stage will be equipped with the new 85 per cent power factor Cooper Hewitt lamps which have been recently developed, and will have a remote control system on the same plan as the other two.

All the switch boards plugging boxes, and wiring is confined to the runways. The cables for the floor, lights drop from runways almost straight down. Owing to this arrangement large sets can be lighted without having a tangle of wires and cables on the floor where they will be walked on, or get in the way when things are being moved. While the cost of such an installation is considerable, the cutting of daily labor cost for electricians to handle the lighting, and the increased convenience and speed with which the director can produce any desired effect, owing to the remote control system, more than offset the first cost.

"THE GIRL WITH A JAZZ HEART"

Specially selected and compiled by M. Winkler.

The timing is based on a speed limit of fourteen minutes per reel (1000 ft.)

Theme: "That Cat Step" (a new rhythm), Breu & Henderson

It is absolutely essential that a typical Jazz character theme be used for this picture.

At the same time the theme is not applied to dancing scenes, but should typify the character of a girl who is constantly thinking of Jazz, and all her actions suggest jazziness.

"That Cat Step," suggested as the theme, is an entirely new rhythm of Jazz music. It is most original in construction, and in the estimation of the compiler of this cue it is the most appropriate composition for this picture.

Study as much of the music as is reproduced on this cue and you will find that the above assertions are correct.

1—Theme (2 minutes and 20 seconds), until—S: At screening.

2—"May Dreams," by Borch (and con moto) (3 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "Miriam Smith, a new guest."

3—"Serenade Grotesque," by Borch (Characteristic) (3 minutes and 50 seconds), until—T: "Parlor floor, James, and give."

4—"Scherzette," by Berge (light characteristic) (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "I answered the ad."

5—"Love Letters," by Jackson (Moderato) (3 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "I won't marry Simon."

6—Theme (2 minutes and 5 seconds), until—T: "Perhaps you won't like him."

7—"Laughing Beauties," by Berge (Intermezzo) (4 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "Fine feathers."

8—Theme (3 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "I know a quiet little."

9—"Marriage Blues," by Samuels & Berkin (fox-trot) (3 minutes), until—T: "Swanheimer's Temple of."

10—Theme (1 minute and 25 seconds), until—S: Telegram reading "Locate Miriam Smith."

11—"Air De Ballet," by Varley (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—S: Waiter serves soup.

12—"Wash Rag," by Losey (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—S: Orchestra begins playing.

13—"Hunkin'," by Levy (half-tone Jazz) (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Honey, how about a dance?"

14—"Comedy Allegro," by Berge (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—S: Women scrapping.

15—"Humming Bird," by Breu & Henderson (fox trot) (5 minutes), until—S: Couples continue dancing.

16—Theme (2 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "Are you the Miriam Smith?"

17—Continue to action (55 seconds), until—T: "You tried to get away."

18—"Lento Allegro," by Berge (from Symphonette Suite) (3 minutes and 10 seconds), until—T: "The return to Gideon."

19—"Sinister Theme," by Vely (for scenes of impending danger) (3 minutes and 5 seconds), until—T: "Under the same roof with."

20—"Dramatic Conflict," by Levy (50 seconds), until—S: The fight.

21—Continue pp (1 minute), until—S: After the fight.

22—Theme (40 seconds), until—T: "Gee, Tommy, you're a fast."

The house stands on an elevation in the centre of a beautiful lawn, the land sloping in all directions, and the picturesque scenery is fine. There is about 125 acres in the farm on which there is a ball park, tennis courts, golf links, croquet grounds, etc.

About a block from the house stands a grist mill which is run by water power. A large motor generator set has been purchased and installed at the mill, which will be operated at night by the water power thus enabling the Aberfoyle Company to light up their entire grounds at a trifling cost.

The company has purchased a Powers' 66 motor-driven machine, and will give motion picture shows one or two nights each week for the benefit of their employees. The screen sits about 199 feet in front of the gentlemen in the forefront of the picture, chairs and benches will be provided for their guests, and will be placed on the porch and lawn where the gentlemen are standing.

The booth is mounted on wheels, and can be pushed around wherever desired. Mr. Frank Olden, the chief electrician of the Aberfoyle Company, who is standing on the left in the picture will have charge of the equipment.

"Whispers"

(Five-Reel Feature Starring Elaine Hammerstein—Selznick)

"Whispers," the latest Elaine Hammerstein production, is on a par with the usual pictures done by this star. It will entertain and amuse in a light way and should give satisfaction, especially during the warm summer months.

The story, however, is its weakest feature and although the director, Wm. P. S. Earle, has been careful in selecting his cast and has evidently spent much time in the detail and arrangements of his sets, some of which were lavish, he could not make up for the shortcomings of a rather weak story. He has also handled Miss Hammerstein in a clever way, bringing out her personality with dainty "bits of business" and closeups.

The locale, which is laid in New York, Washington and the small town, contains some interesting shots of same.

The opening scenes show the star living among luxurious surroundings in the big city. She has two admirers, one a wealthy (married) man and the other, a young fellow of good family but of the namby-pamby variety. The older man's attentions are accepted in a social way, much to the disappointment of the younger one.

Events reach a crisis when the young lady and her attentive admirer are discovered at an opera performance, by the latter's wife. Being unable to withstand the humiliation and her aunt's tireless efforts to bring about a marriage with the younger man, whom she despises, she goes to her father, an editor of a small town newspaper.

The lovers follow, but are quickly dispensed with when a handsome reporter appears upon the scene.—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Lone Trapper"

(Robertson-Cole Adventure Scenic—One Reel)

THERE is something fascinating in the sight of a trapper or hunter engaging in his stealthy occupation of catching his prey. Whether it is the element of danger attached or the love of adventure which most everyone possesses, or both, there is no denying the fact that the life of a lone trapper is highly interesting. This picture has plenty of poetry about it—a touch of atmosphere which has been sung since time immemorial. One responds instantly to the sense of adventure as the hardy trapper bids his wife and children goodby to take up his lonely search for the silver-haired fox. He well knows that if he can capture this valuable specie that a snug fortune awaits him—that his family will not be in want for anything.

The trapper places his traps and travels on over the deep snow, his snowshoes making the only tracks in the white carpet of this particular spot of the Northwest. The backgrounds of fir trees standing like silent sentinels, and the snow-capped mountains provide a perfect setting. Weeks go by and his search is rewarded. The silver-haired fox is the richest prize that can be captured in this neck of the woods. The times he has failed are compensated for in this one successful adventure. The picture is wonderfully tinted, the photography being clear and distinct. The subtitles carry out the spirit of the piece which makes one almost transported at times. The offering is bound to please anywhere and during the dog days the sight of the white expanse of snow will counteract the torrid heat outside. "The Lone Trapper" is one of Robertson-Cole's best adventure scenes.—LAURENCE REID.

(Two One-Reel Rolin Comedies Featuring Snub Pollard—"You're Fired"—"All in a Day")

HERE'S a couple of one-reel comedies which should amuse your patrons. They are short and snappy and contain enough horse-play to make them uproarious in places. In fact it might be said, everything considered that the situations injected are funnier than in many of the star's previous releases.

Snub Pollard is his usual self both in comedy and action and is ably assisted by his little negro partner, who is certainly adept in working up the scenes for him.

"You're Fired" shows the comedian as a motor-cycle cop who although very anxious to accomplish anything he is sent after, fails because he is not master of himself.

The principal comedy scene shows a number of "gentlemen" at the door of a "speak easy" where the precious fluid is handed out to them through a small "hole in the door." The last "gent" orders many drinks but forgets to pay for same. Our hero who cannot resist the temptation to "get a taste," walks to the door and while posing in an authoritative attitude receives—not the drink but a club upon his head.

In "All in a Day," Pollard is a very busy soda and ice cream clerk, serving such delicious dishes as "mustard sundays" and "turnip frappes." But in his anxiety to serve his customers he becomes much confused, which results in many funny comedy situations.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Circulation of the Blood"

(Scientific Film Corp.—One Reel)

T HAT the films have their scientific values cannot be disputed after witnessing "Circulation of the Blood." Here is a subject which teaches physiology as it has never been taught in a school room. In fact if this film could be shown before classes in physiology, students would gain a greater knowledge on the functions of the heart and how humans and species of the animal kingdom exist. Some will question the purpose of making such a film, holding to the idea that it has no place in the category of entertainment. But that is beside the point.

Certainly it is unique and it TEACHES. There are doubtless many who never had lessons in physiology who will surely be surprised to learn how the heart carries on its function of pumping the blood through the body. Blood corpuscles and cells are reproduced here, magnified from 30,000 to several million times their own dimensions—a feature not to be lightly considered. Nothing is skipped which has to do with the process of circulation. This reel shows that the screen has unlimited possibilities in offering enlightenment. Medical students are sure to find it a work of immense value.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Fresh Start"

(Mermaid Comedy—Released by Educational—Two Reels)

"LION STUFF" in comedies is not so new but if it is well done it is sure fire with any audience, and it is this fact that makes "A Fresh Start" starring Lloyd Hamilton, one of the best of the slap stick, trick photography offerings we have seen in some time.

Of story there is practically none but of action in which a couple of the "kings of beasts" figure to a considerable extent there is an abundance.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"Outlaws of the Wilderness"

(One Reel Adventure—Scenic—Released by Robertson-Cole)

ONE of the outstanding features on the Capitol theater program this week is a single reel scenic, "Outlaws of the Wilderness" not because of its scenic beauty which, however, is better than average, but because some action and exceptionally written titles are responsible in building the reel into a human interesting little drama.

What you learn from the scenes shown and the titles is a "great outdoors" story of the capture of two wolves that have killed some deer.

Two hunters in Wyoming with their packs, start out to bag these enemies of America's game. The dogs pick up the trail and go chasing away over hills and through valleys until at last they run to earth their quarry. There is a real thrill to anyone who has ever listened to the bay of a good hunting dog, as this big pack of hounds pick up the fresh scent.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"SUDS" (United Artists)

Unique Characterization and Artistic Lightings Lift Slender and Commonplace Story

IT is problematical how Mary Pickford's latest production, "Suds," will be received by her vast host of admirers. To be analytical one might say that this adaptation of Maude Adams' stage play, "Op O' Me Thumb," is only a vehicle offered for the purpose of showing off the star's histrionic capabilities. That she can play other than glad roles was testified to when she appeared as Unity Blake, the ugly duckling of "Stella Maris." Her role of the little laundry apprentice is a vast pocket edition of Unity, without one-half the color and vitality. "Suds" lacks the story interest of the afore-mentioned picture since it is, at best, a simple character study without shading or contrast or moving moments.

Some may regard it as a glorified slapstick balanced with notes of gentle pathos and sentiment. It never leaves its groove from inception to conclusion though the unhappy ending fortifies it—and gives it a certain value. There has been a painstaking attempt to provide plenty of incident, splendid titling, and artistic lightings that in many sequences have never been equalled. The photography is perfect throughout. Certainly the art of Mary Pickford cannot be questioned and the skeptical will have reason to say that she can do other things besides Pollyanna studies. She is a mistress of make-up and hardly recognizable as the cockney waif who struggles for existence in a laundry in the slums of London.

The picture relies heavily upon its comedy points—some of which are entirely out of place. Yet it has a beautiful moral which is expressed in the idea that one gifted with imagination can give color to the universe. The slave indulges in day dreams and by means of flash-backs romance comes to her. The ending is rich and also pathetic. Realizing her ugliness she gives utterance to the thought—"How could anyone love me?" And sobs her poor heart out. With a less gifted actress, the role would be a total failure. As a story it lacks situation and climax. But it won a medal of merit probably through the beautiful thought behind it. Regarding its possibilities as interesting entertainment, we don't consider it in the same class with "Pollyanna," or "Daddy Long Legs."—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Amanda Afflick.....	Mary Pickford
Horace Greensmith.....	Albert Austin
Benjamin Pillsbury Jones.....	Mme. Rose Dione
Mme. Jeanne Galfillet Didier.....	By Frederick Fenn and Richard Bryce.
Directed by Jack Dillon.....	Photographed by Charles Rosher.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The incomparable Mary Pickford is coming to the theatre beginning in her newest production, "Suds," which is based upon the Charles Frohman stage play entitled "Op O' Me Thumb." This is the offering in which Maude Adams scored such a splendid success and it brings the popular star, Mary Pickford, again into the foreground as an actress of marked versatility. "Suds" is more of a character study than many of the actress' previous pictures, but so thoroughly is she grounded in her art that she appeals to the emotions quite as well as when she is giving expression to a piece of Sunnybrook Farm. The part of Amanda Afflick is similar to Unity Blake in "Stella Maris" in that it offers her opportunities to assume the disguise of an ugly duckling.

The picture presents the tale of a shirt, for the scenes are all laid in a laundry in the slums of London and Amanda weaves such a romance about the shirt which has been left by a casual customer that even her girl chums believe it almost as much as herself. In all Amanda Afflick is a figure quite true to life and with Miss Pickford's deft touches and human appeal, she brings the audience back from laughter to tears and back again with her wonderful tales to the tragic ending of her romance. Miss Pickford is supported by a cast chosen for its adaptability. Jack Dillon directed the feature and has filled it full of atmosphere and poetry.

PROGRAM READER

Mary Pickford is unconventional again in "Suds," her latest picture which comes to this theatre in the near future. Our patrons will be surprised to see her in something else than glad stories. She appears as a slave or your lobby with in this film translation of Maude Adams' stage success, "Op O' Me Thumb," and is said to offer the finest piece of acting of her career. A story of the type of "Suds" has never been attempted by any other screen favorite and that the leading film idol should attempt such a thing to soon after her success in "Pollyanna" not only shows her wonderful versatility but also shows her desire to please her vast host of admirers. The star is surrounded by an excellent cast in a production which is artistic and interesting throughout. Watch for further announcements.

SUGGESTIONS

In exploiting this feature be sure to bring out that the star appears in a unique character study—something quite removed from her previous delineations. You might emphasize that she has a chance to show what a fine little actress she is here in the role of an ugly duckling. Compare her work to the time when she appeared as Unity Blake in "Stella Maris." Tell that the picture is an adaptation of Maude Adams' stage success, "Op O' Me Thumb." Sprinkle your lobby with atmosphere characteristic of the various scenes. Run stills of the star as herself and in her unique make-up and print cards asking "Would you recognize Mary Pickford?"

CATCH LINES

See the incomparable Mary Pickford—the idol of the screen, in her latest and greatest success, "Suds," an adaptation of Maude Adams' stage success, "Op O' Me Thumb."

"IF I WERE KING" (Fox).

Costume Play with Farnum as a Romantic Actor

THE first of William Farnum's fall productions for Fox, "If I Were King," founded upon Justin Huntly McCarthy's story and play of the same name which met with great success upon the stage looks up as a creditable achievement, even though there may be some doubt over its reception. The film public has never become reconciled to costume plays based upon historical figures of European history. However, the fact that this particular play is rich in conflict, intrigue, romance and characterization and that it was sound enough to establish E. H. Sothern's popularity upon the stage gives the adaptation a position not to be lightly considered.

Based as it is upon the reign of Louis XI and his Court of intrigue, it furnishes the star ample opportunity to score as a romantic actor in one of those swaggering, swashbuckling roles—a role which presents him quite at his heroic best. The action doesn't carry the moving moments of "The Adventurer," his last costume play, there being quite a few scenes which show nothing but dialogue taking place between the principals. Toward the finish the feature gathers momentum and finishes with plenty of strength. Romance and adventure are the principal elements emphasized. And Farnum as Francois Villon certainly capitalizes the virtues and faults of this post-vagabond of France who saves his country, wins the woman of his heart against all adversaries, and outwits the cruel and cunning king. Certain scenes lose their value through poor lighting and a good deal of the photography is harsh which is surely not creditable to the personalities of the players. J. Gordon Edwards has made the most of the high spots in the story and there is evidence that he has put a deal of painstaking effort in the achievement. The atmosphere is well suggested not only in the backgrounds but in the costuming of the figures. And suspense is emphasized despite the fact that one can anticipate the action throughout. The acting honors go to Fritz Lieber, who, as the puppet king, contributes some of the best pantomime ever flashed on the screen. Betty Ross Clarke is a trifle too repressed at times to be always effective, though she makes an attractive heroine. Others who score are Renita Johnston, Claude Payton, Walter Law and Katherine Chase. The latter, a newcomer to the screen, brings a charming fragrance as an Apache girl. —Laurence Reid.

By Justin Huntly McCarthy.
Directed by J. Gordon Edwards.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

That romantic story, "If I Were King," written by the celebrated Justin Huntly McCarthy, and which firmly established the popularity of E. H. Sothern, who starred in it for many seasons, is now in its film version and offers William Farnum a chance to show his ability as a romantic actor. The picture will come to the theatre beginning..... Mr. McCarthy founded his story country during a crisis. The star appears in the role of Villon. The character might have been conceived with Mr. Farnum in mind so perfectly does he adapt himself to its requirements. Briefly the story takes up his adventures when he rules France for a week with full knowledge that he is to be killed immediately afterward unless he can win the heart of Katherine, the ward of the king. She does not respond to the latter's advances, but Villon fascinates her with his devil-may-care attitude, although she is pained at the thought that he is forced to deceive her. The time comes when she offers her gratitude through rich in atmosphere and offers also plenty of romance, adventure, intrigue and conflict. Mr. Farnum is supported by the gifted Fritz Lieber, one of the best Shakespearean actors on the stage; Walter Law, Claude Payton, Betty Ross Clarke, Renita Johnston, Katherine Chase and others. J. Gordon Edwards directed.

PROGRAM READER

"If I Were King," considered by many the greatest historical romance ever written, and which brought E. H. Sothern great popularity upon the stage, has reached the screen and will appear at the..... theatre in the near future. It is an ideal subject for the interpretation of romantic roles. As best. No actor can quite equal him in the interpretation of romantic roles. As many of our patrons are familiar with the story there won't be any novelty to go in details, but suffice to state that this costume story is rich in such elements as conflict, romance, adventure and intrigue. Mr. Farnum's company is thoroughly adequate. "If I Were King" is a lavish and artistic production and worth seeing.

SUGGESTIONS

Exploit this picture as an adaptation of the book of the same name. You can't go wrong if you play up the author and the fact that the story is considered by discriminate critics as the greatest historical romance ever written. Play up the fact that E. H. Sothern starred in it as a play for many seasons. Play up the use and use stills of him. In fact use stills of the scenes throughout your lobby. Use a fac-simile of the covers of a page for a newspaper spread. Mention the members of the cast. Tell that Fritz Lieber is one of the best actors on the screen, and that the patrons will miss a rare performance if they overlook the picture. Go in for atmosphere. Bill the picture far enough in advance to attract the patrons who remember the book or play.

"SHIPWRECKED AMONG CANNIBALS"

(Universal)

THROUGH the efforts of Edward Laemmle, nephew of Carl Laemmle of Universal and William F. Alder, a member of the Southern California Academy of Sciences, one of the most interesting, amusing and educational pictures seen, has been presented to the screen.

The feature is concerned principally with the life and habits of one of the wildest tribes in existence today. Head hunters, every one of them and they certainly look it.

These tribes dwell on the island of New Guinea, and it is said that it took much persuasion and many presents to get them to pose before the camera. It may be imagined that the danger of going among these wild people was not the least of the adventurers' worries.

Among the most interesting scenes are those of tribal life. Their dances which resemble in a way those of the American Indian, show that they have a new way of doing the "shimmy" and their methods of hunting and eating together with their peculiar adornments and facial makeups are most amusing.

The camera work is especially good, many beautiful scenes of the wild country being recorded.

A thrill is also injected into the picture in the form of a tiger hunt in Java. The natives are seen beating the bush with long knives until the beast is driven up to the camera where he is killed before any damage is done.

Messrs. Laemmle and Alder deserve much praise for the manner in which they have taken their scenes, arranging them in sort of story form.

This feature should interest in any house where it is played.—Length, 6 reels.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Shipwrecked Among Cannibals," the latest Universal special feature will be shown at the theatre on _____ of next _____.

This feature was taken by Edward Laemmle and William F. Alder, a member of the Southern California Academy of Sciences and shows principally in a most interesting and amusing manner, the life and habits of the wild tribes who inhabit the island of New Guinea.

These tribes are head hunters and it may be imagined the dangers that hovered about the two adventurers as they took the pictures, after being shipwrecked upon the island.

Messrs. Laemmle and Alder have been very careful in taking their scenes, which they have arranged in a sort of story form, in order to bring the life and customs of the head-hunters before the picture patrons in an interesting manner.

Among the interesting scenes are those of tribal life, showing the dances, which resemble those of the American Indian, in which they show a knowledge of the way to do the "shimmy." The methods of hunting, eating, cooking and the various adornments worn both on body and face, are most interesting to witness.

A thrill is also injected in the form of a tiger hunt in Java, in which a score of natives participate, driving the beast up to the camera where he is killed before he does any damage.

If you care to see a real good picture with thrills and excitement, here's one for you.

PROGRAM READER

"Shipwrecked Among Savages," the latest Universal special feature will be shown at this theatre on _____ of this _____.

Edward Laemmle and William F. Alder, a member of the Southern California Academy of Sciences have been a little over a year in producing this picture, the scenes for which were taken in the South Sea Islands, many of which were taken on the island of New Guinea among the head-hunters. And it was with much difficulty and danger to their own heads that the adventurous pair took upon themselves before they film the natives, who are said to be members of one of the wildest tribes in existence today.

The native dances, in which they show a knowledge of the "shimmy," the various ways of hunting, eating and sleeping, several families living together in the one house and other most amusing facts are all recorded in the picture.

There is also a good thrill injected in the form of a tiger hunt in Java in which a score of natives drive a beast up to the camera. And all the time the cameraman, Mr. Alder, is grinding away until the beast springs. The animal is killed, however, before any damage is done.

If you care for a real good picture, one which will interest, amuse and instruct at the same time, here's one for you.

SUGGESTIONS

This feature is up to date in every way both as to educational and amusement value, and should give your patrons pleasing entertainment.

Your principal feature in exploitation is the fact that the picture was taken among the head-hunters of the South Sea Islands and you should arouse interest if you play upon the danger the two adventurers underwent in order to obtain the pictures. Run as many cuts in the papers as you can, giving a little description of the natives, their habits, manners, modes of living, dress, etc., and place as many stills as you can in advantageous places. Photographs of any foreign tribe, as you know, always incite interest.

One of the best methods would be to decorate your lobby in the correct atmosphere, selecting a few negroes with savage countenances to represent the South Sea Islanders. Dress them up as near like the originals as possible.

For a thriller you should also play up the tiger hunt which is a feature in itself, for the cameraman is actually seen grinding as the savage beast approaches from the jungle.

CATCH LINES

See the savage head-hunters do the "shimmy." It is one of their native dances and they perform it in "Shipwrecked Among Savages."

"THE SLIM PRINCESS"

(Goldwyn)

Normand in Kind of Role Which Made Her Famous

"THE SLIM PRINCESS," either as a photoplay or stage play, was never much more than an idea, but as such it has furnished Mabel Normand an opportunity to romp about in the kind of stuff which made her famous and in which her admirers insist on seeing her if they are to be pleased; therefore the feature may be labeled a success.

Without doubt director Victor Scharitinger has adopted the right course in producing the Ade play. The tempo all the way through is broad farce, with considerable humor injected, which fits in with the famous Ade slang titles used. Also there has been no attempt to give Miss Normand the whole show. Tully Marshall as the "professor" has a fat role and he makes the most of it. Hugh Thompson is the star's leading man and gets away with his part in fine shape.

As a production the picture ranks high. A lot of good incident has been provided and the settings are excellent. Those who do not care particularly for Miss Normand may justly claim that the picture lacks story value and that it has been padded, but we are inclined to think the wealth of farce comedy business originated, the clever titles, contrast of characters and, above all, a lot of fast action will carry the offering by with the average person who goes to the theatre to be entertained. It looks to us, considered as a whole, to be the best Normand picture in some time. Certainly it should be a box office attraction of unusual worth. In playing it do not overlook its exploitation possibilities. They seem to us to be exceptional. Length, 5 reels. J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The latest Goldwyn production in which the comedienne, Mabel Normand is starring in "The Slim Princess," an adaptation of George Ade's story of the same name. It offers the star every facility for revealing her well-known versatility and comedy ability. Everyone who is acquainted with American literature is familiar with the name of George Ade. He is one of this country's most famous humorists. And "The Slim Princess" is George Ade pretty nearly at his best, in most every imaginable role—from Sis Hopkins to straight characters but this is the first time she has ever been disguised as an Oriental.

The atmosphere for the story is set in Morency and against this background the action revolves around a girl cursed with a slim, beautiful figure when stout rotundity is appreciated more by the youth of the city, according to Oriental ideas. In her endeavors to become fat and suited to her station in life, Miss Normand dons a rubber suit which, at a lawn fete, gets punctured and the popular girl stands before the startled native sons, growing slimmer and slimmer every moment. This is but an incident in a feature rich in humorous situations, all of which are calculated to score with Miss Normand leading the way.

PROGRAM READER

Fat girls and slim girls has always been an absorbing question with the youth of every clime. It is the Oriental custom to admire the fat ones more. Which forms the basis of Mabel Normand's latest Goldwyn comedy, "The Slim Princess." When this sparkling feature arrives at the _____ theatre next _____.

The author needs no introduction. He is none other than George Ade, who is considered America's greatest humorist since the days of Mark Twain. Come to the _____ and see Mabel Normand attempt to captivate the youth of the Oriental city by appearing fat. How she becomes a slim princess is a scene which will linger in the memory. The production has been staged by Victor L. Scharitinger. Enough proof of its excellence.

SUGGESTIONS

The fact that George Ade wrote this one; the fact that Mabel Normand is starred and that Victor L. Scharitinger directed it, is ample exploitation argument. Use these names in all your advertising. It is an excellent combination and should bring your patrons in by droves. Tell that Mabel Normand has an original role here. Which is saying something—because all of her roles are original. Exploit the other players. And bring out that the author wrote "Fables in Slang," and dozens of entertaining documents. Dress your ushers in Oriental costumes. Drape your lobby and interior of the house in Oriental effects. And play appropriate music. Play it up as a rippling farce-comedy, presenting George Ade and Mabel Normand at their best.

CATCH LINES

The Oriental boys liked their girls plump. They didn't care for the slim ones. How did Mabel Normand go about it to put on weight? See "The Slim Princess," and enjoy the comedy delight of the season.

See Mabel Normand in one of George Ade's funniest stories, "The Slim Princess." It is screamingly funny and the star scores a decided hit.

"HOMER COMES HOME"

(Ince-Paramount-Artcraft)

Charles Ray Scores Again in Another Home-Spun Story

CHARLES RAY can continue to humanize the small town youth in the screen without losing a single mark in the race for the popularity stakes. If other stars, who cater to one character studies, tire their following occasionally, it is because these same studies are not so richly endowed with humanity. There is nothing new ever presented in a Ray offering. But that is not important. What is important is the fact that one is looking at life every time he is flashed on the screen. "Homer Comes Home" is pretty near the best picture he has had since "The Clodhopper."

The little human touches, the rich comedy values, the clearly defined characterization and the good lesson established (don't forget that)—these are what bring the feature forth as one of the best treats of the season. In looking for the theme one can say that it is founded upon that tried and true philosophy—"a prophet is without honor in his own country." Homer is a rank failure in his home town. A dreamer, his imaginative mind makes a jest of practical work. Unable to hold a job, he migrates to the city and returns a conquering hero. And true to human nature, the natives give him the glad welcome.

There is not a let-down in the action. Every scene and situation is sure-fire, though there is some exaggeration excusable for the sake of supplying incident. He comes home at vacation time on the Lightning Express, a train that never stops except to drop off some dignitary. And what a reception greets him! The village cut-up, still wearing his store-clothes, is jealous of Homer's success which is written all over him from his glib tongue to his smart appearance. The director, Jerome Storm knows his small town, else he wouldn't have been in charge of Ray these many months. His touch is natural and sure, and homespun to the core. Credit must be given Agnes Johnston for a scenario that is compact with perfect sequences. The author has poked fun in a satirical way at the well recognized figure of the small town youth who can only "find himself" when he ventures out in the world. The star enriches the study every time he appears on the screen. In fact there is nothing more appealing or genuine being presented. The atmosphere is good and the same can be said for the acting.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

Those likeable comedies of small-town life in which Charles Ray has established such a large following have been augmented by "Homer Comes Home," which presents the star in another of his famous character studies. This time Mr. Ray appears as Homer Cavender, a country youth, who goes to the city and gets a job, then comes back to his native hater to startle the natives. Homer is considerable of a dreamer and when he gets to the city and becomes identified with certain promoters, he conceives the dream of establishing a factory in his old town and electing himself manager.

A vacation comes to him and he takes his employer's advice—that the old town shouldn't be neglected. So he goes home to the scene of his former failures. And how things have changed. He is certainly the man of the hour—what with his city clothes and his breezy manner. He takes advantage of his position to put over his pet scheme and marry the belle of the town in the bargain. The picture is punctuated with those delightful touches which have characterized all of Ray's unbounded humor. The star is again his natural self and his support contains some of the best talent in pictures. Agnes C. Johnston, a scenarist of ability, adapted the picture from a story by Alexander Hull, while Jerome Storm directed.

PROGRAM READER

He was a small town boy who never amounted to much because of his impractical mind. In fact, he was something of a dreamer. But he went to the city and made good. And when vacation rolled around he went back home and the folks were ready to recognize his ability. How he made good, how he won the girl of his heart, how his dreams came true is told in five reels of delicious comedy-drama in Charles Ray's newest production, "Homer Comes Home," which comes to this theatre next.

These homespun stories which have endeared the star to the public are the finest things which are coming to the screen. This newest production shouldn't be missed. It carries a full quota of laughs, sprinkled with touches of pathos and sentiment. And there is a happy philosophy behind it all.

CATCH LINES

It was the biggest day that the old town ever saw! Homer came home all dressed up and full of city tricks. He went away the jest of the community and came back a conquering hero. See Charles Ray in "Homer Comes Home."

"THE DISCARDED WOMAN"

(Hallmark)

Hectic Melodrama with Familiar Stock Situations

A HOST of familiar stock situations which are conveniently arranged to make this melodramatic offering, "The Discarded Woman," fall below the average. True it carries enough incident too much to fact to establish any note of simplicity. The action is always arbitrary with the scenes firmly planted so that it lacks the qualities of surprise and suspense. In order to present it in regulation length the director has glossed over certain details which makes the action illogical. Crude indeed is the situation in which the husband discards his wife just as he is placing her aboard a train for the East and the crudities are enlarged upon when the good spouse jumps off at the first stopping place and wanders to a ne'er-do-well's cabin for the purpose of being assaulted by him.

He conveniently falls asleep from intoxication which permits her to make off with a share of his winnings at the gambling table, thus enabling her to continue her journey to the metropolis. Ad interim, the unkind prospector kills her husband, though the latter, in his dying breath, exacts a promise from him to search for his wife and restore her share of the earnings from the mine. The long arm of coincidence enters when he locates her in New York and employs her in his office. A delicate sequence follows which really is without logic. She compromises him in matrimony by informing him he is the father of her unborn child.

Enter the papers. A get-rich-quick syndicate has information which would disillusion her in her husband's eyes—information that takes away the proud fact that he is a father. The situations accompanying the introduction of the "heavies" are charged with unadulterated melodramatic hokum and become so hectic that truth is sent scurrying to the background. Even dramatic license is not excusable here. Be it said, however, that the complications are straightened out and the discarded woman is proven to be an honorable member of her sex. The hero who would have disgraced her is inspired by her presence to become a disciple of manly virtue. The players headed by Grace Darling and Rod La Roque act up to requirements with the exception of the "heavies" who are somewhat superfluous. "The Discarded Woman" may please those patrons who like their pictures seasoned with paprika. Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE STORY

A melodrama of enlivened action and incident with such elements as heart interest and sentiment thrown in bold relief, and enacted by a cast headed by Grace Darling and Rod La Roque, is coming to the theatre on ——— of ——— week under the title of "The Discarded Woman." This is a Frank Hall production directed by Burton King, and is no question that will be received by the average spectator as satisfactory entertainment. Miss Darling appears as Esther Wells, whose husband has tired of her. He deserts her after placing her aboard a train when it stops for orders and wanders to the cabin of Samuel Radburn, an unlucky prospector.

The forsaken wife is attacked by the young miner when he returns after a successful evening at the roulette wheel. His intoxicated condition soon puts him to sleep and Esther helps herself to $200 and leaves, though a note advises him she will repay the theft. Radburn returns to New York after killing Wells, who was responsible for the loss of his mine. Before the latter dies he exacts a promise from the young man to search for his discarded wife and give her a share of his property. The young man meets Esther without realizing that she is Wells' wife and that she once visited his cabin. He believes himself responsible for the child about to be born and marries her. Their happiness is interrupted by certain promoters who would divulge Esther's real identity. In the end the complications are straightened out.

PROGRAM READER

The train was about to start and she wondered what delayed her husband. The conductor gave her the reason. It was found in a note which stated that her better-half had tired of her. Short of funds, she left the train when it stopped under orders and made her way to a lonely cabin. What adventure came into her life? Did romance offer itself? What happened to her husband? Did she find ultimate happiness? These questions are answered in "The Discarded Woman," the Hallmark picture which comes to this theatre next week with Grace Darling, supported by Rod La Roque and others. Burton King directed this interesting melodrama of a persecuted woman. It carries plenty of action and incident.

SUGGESTIONS

Exploit this picture as a melodrama of action and incident. There are no outstanding high lights which you can feature. And you better use the soft ped in detailing the plot. In fact don't give the story away at all, for it will rob the patrons of all suspense as well as convey to them that one scene is rather tedious. Use the names of Grace Darling and Rod La Roque in exploiting the picture. Tell that the former is well known and that the latter has come rapidly forward as an acceptable leading man. You might state that the action covers a mining camp in the West and the metropolis. Play up the plot as one carrying a lot of incident.

New England and the South to Build New Theatres

First National Statistics Prove Exhibitor Optimism Is Country Wide

CONDITIONS in the exhibiting field, as shown by the 1920 Survey by the First National Exhibitors Circuit, for which MOTION PICTURE NEWS has exclusive publication rights, indicates no change in the New England and the Southern territories from that which exists in eastern, middle west and western states, details of which have been given in previous articles in this series. In New England the same buoyant spirit of expansion, the determination to be better equipped to handle better business the coming season, is as apparent as anywhere else in the country, and the Southern states are not taking a back seat to any other section in remodeling, building and realtering of houses.

While it is probable that some projects which have been included in the First National Survey will be abandoned, due to conditions over which the organizers have no control, it is equally probable that other projects which were not included because they were in too nebulous a state at the time the data was gathered, will become facts, so that the conclusions based upon the projected improvements including new buildings in the First National Survey may be regarded as a fairly accurate prophecy of facts as they will exist during the season of 1920-1921. All these conclusions point to but one thing, the largest and greatest season the industry has ever enjoyed next year, unless the opinion of seventy-five per cent of all the exhibitors in the country, as evidenced by their actions, is wrong.

Some of these improvements are merely redecorating while others amount to a practical rebuilding, but all of them are improvements for the purpose of giving greater satisfaction to motion picture patrons the coming year, than was possible last year. In 25 per cent. of the houses which are listed as not to be touched there are a number of theatres which were opened during the winter months, a number of others that have been thoroughly renovated within the past six months, so that the theatres not in first class condition which will not be remedied are practically a negligible factor.

Other percentages which are shown by the survey are no less impressive. The number of theatres in the country will be increased by 9.3 per cent., the seating capacity of the combined theatres increased by 13.7 per cent., and yet the number of exhibitors in the country will be increased less than one per cent. This last is important, for it shows that practically all the expansion in the country is financed by "wise" money, being done by men who are already in the exhibiting field and, being there, are confident enough of the future to expand so that the general increase in the whole country amounts to nearly 1.4 per cent. The expansion in the exhibiting facilities will come through the remodeling and enlarging of existing theatres, and the extension of chain theatres by means of new houses.

That building this summer will not be handicapped by transportation conditions such as existed through the winter seems to be forecast by the sudden clearing up of conditions in New England. In Springfield, Mass., material for the Capitol theatre arrived so suddenly that the opening was a genuine surprise. This theatre, which seats a trifle over 1,800, was to have been opened last October but material to complete it was not forthcoming.

New Bedford, Mass., is to have three new theatres, two in the downtown section and one a neighborhood house. Of these the New Gordon is the most imposing. It will be completed Labor Day, and have a seating capacity of 2,600. The Empire is the second of the new downtown houses. It will have a seating capacity of 1,700. The Capitol, which will be built in the north end, will have a seating capacity all on the main floor of 1,558.

In Lowell, Mass., the Merrimack Square theatre will be practically rebuilt this summer. Plans call for a lengthening of the body of the theatre to provide for a seating capacity of 2,300, as against the 1,400 it now holds, the remodeling of the stage, and the installation of several devices, including a large organ. When these alterations take place it will be the first time this theatre has been dark in nearly ten years. The Owl theatre, also in Lowell, seating 1,000, is scheduled for extensive alterations, and the Strand, the third of the large Lowell houses, seating 1,700, is scheduled for redecorating, although it is still comparatively new.

In Lynn, Mass., The Waldorf will be dark part of the summer. Repairs which will take about two weeks are planned for this house, while the Olympia and Strand will remain open without interruption. The Theatre Comique will be closed for about a month to permit redecorating and minor repairs.

In Woonsocket, R. I., the 1920-1921 season has already opened. The exhibitors there take advantage of the religious devotions which engross most of the population during Hold Week as a time for darkening their houses. The Park and Strand, each seating more than 1,000, were both redecorated at that time, but no alterations are planned. The Bijou and Smith's had minor repairing done without interruption of showings. On April 19th, the Laurier theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,200, opened its doors for the first time.

July will witness a big celebration in the motion picture industry in Louisville, Ky., when Governor Morrow will officiate at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Rialto theatre. The theatre will seat 3,300 people, and is being built by the Majestic Amusement Co.

Lexington's (Ky.) theatrical layout will be changed entirely with the completion of a new theatre to be erected by the Phoenix Amusement Company. The Leonard Hotel site has been leased for the new theatre, which is planned to seat 2,500. When it is completed the historic Lexington Opera house will be sold to make way for a business block, and the Phoenix Amusement Company will convert the Ben Ali theatre from a motion picture house to a legitimate theatre running vaudeville and road attractions. The Strand, also owned by the Phoenix Company, will continue as a picture house, and no other changes are anticipated in the remainder of the chain of theatres operated by the same company through central Kentucky. The Ada Meade theatre, in Lexington, will institute a new policy this year by remaining open all summer. Formerly the playhouse has been closed in May and remained dark until September. The interruption this year will only be long enough for the installation of a cooling system and minor repairs and then the house will re-open for the summer months with a regular bill of pictures and vaudeville.

Shelbyville, Ky., which lost a motion picture theatre when the Music Hall building was condemned as unsafe, will soon have another one to replace it. Lovella and Ivory Ethington, who ran the Music Hall, have taken out a permit for the erection of a theatre upon which work will be started immediately.

The Edisonian Amusement Co. will erect a new modern theatre in Ashland, Ky. Through its manager, Richard Martin, it recently purchased a residential property near the centre of town for $45,000 and will use this site for the new house.

The Signal Amusement Company, which operates the Strand, Queen, Rex and Majestic theatres in Knoxville, Tenn., has concluded two leases on Gay street business sites, on which first run houses will be erected. The deal involves an initial expenditure of nearly $400,000 for construction and the total rental for sixty and twenty-five year terms, respectively, will amount to something over a million and a half.

Remember, some months ago, when we told you of the test of trade paper strength made by one large film company which showed Motion Picture News a 3 to 1 leader over the field?

See to One!
Another large film company has just completed an exhaustive direct-to-the-exhibitor test of the trade papers.

Three thousand exhibitors placed on record in black and white their preference in trade papers. The result? We'll have to ask your patience until the company completes its tabulation.
But remember that 3 to 1 figure!

THREE years in the city—and still making only twelve a week. Poor Homer! And he'd boasted that he'd show 'em! "Wait till I come home," he said, "a millionaire!"

And then Homer came home! And bluffed! Did the town turn out to meet him? Well, rather! But what started as a bluff turned out to be—

Never mind how it turned out! The things that happened make Charlie Ray's funniest picture. It will keep the audience chuckling long after they've seen it.

Five Lives—and one Lie!

TO save her friend she lied—only one little lie. And it involved five lives in a tangle of misunderstanding and tragedy.

Then when her own happiness—everything—was at stake—something happened that's one of the biggest surprises in drama.

Like "Young Mrs. Winthrop" and "The 13th Commandment", this is a story of regular everyday human beings. That's why it's sure to be popular.

We Are Not Your Competitors

Associated Producers are not coming into your cities and towns to buy or lease theatres—thereby becoming your direct competitors. We are not going to do this in the open or under cover.

We know our side of the fence and are going to stay on our side and leave your side to you.

All of our branch managers are on duty with sales policies and contract forms in hand. Our Home Offices are open in New York to serve you Associated Producers haven't anything to sell you except their big productions. We will deliver for release in the year from September 12th thirty big productions—and you may buy any producer's picture or pictures you want.

You may bind into your theatre—at your option and not under compulsion—the pictures of any one, two, three or more Producers. Or, you may obtain all of our productions at the prices we are individually worth in your city. We are not linked together or averaged as to rentals.

Knowing at first hand the pictures we are making we believe exhibitors will be glad to control our entire output—but that decision rests with you, not with ourselves.

If you are leaving for New York, have your mail and telegrams sent in care of our Home Offices, and we will be glad to make your hotel reservations for you if you wire or write us in advance.

IT is seldom that any production is so perfectly turned out as "THE BREATH OF THE GODS." Here, truly, is an ALL-STAR cast and the admirable finish which these talented players impart to this magnificently staged picture is one of the most pleasing of your recollections. "THE BREATH OF THE GODS" should not be termed a Japanese picture, for while the beauty of the scenes is naturally Japanese the dramatic situations spring from a tremendously intense clash of temperaments, American, European and Far Eastern. Here is a chance to give your people "something different" something to talk about—something to remember as a thing of beauty, and a joy forever.

GOLDWYN PICTURES

In 1920-1921

THE Goldwyn Pictures Corporation will release Sixty Pictures in the coming year.

GOLDWYN has spared neither effort nor expense to put into these pictures the finest elements that go into picture-making.

FROM its inception each picture is constantly under the supervision of men and women who know the public taste, and are skilled in meeting it.

MANY pictures to be offered in the new season have been produced in co-operation with the foremost authors in the world, who aim to give to their work on the screen the same personal vitality, the same imaginative and emotional quality that they have given to their works in other media.

EACH picture thus produced is subjected to the severest critical examination, from every angle, as to its amusement and profit-getting quality, before it is offered by Goldwyn for distribution.

President
Goldwyn Pictures Corporation

THE high quality of each Goldwyn Picture in the coming season demands that there be no departure from a system of unit bookings.

ADVANCE showings of Goldwyn Fourth Year Pictures will be held in all Goldwyn exchanges starting July 15th.

FIFTEEN productions will be in readiness, representing the Goldwyn product for the first fifteen weeks of the season. The merit of the individual picture will be the sole factor in every transaction.

IN the following pages you will find complete descriptions of the first pictures to be offered by Goldwyn.

The First Fifteen

pictures will be ready for advance viewings starting this month. They represent the Goldwyn product for the first fifteen weeks of the exhibitor's season. Each is listed with a brief and salient description.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS'

powerful drama

The Penalty

Directed by Wallace Worsley

This picture will inevitably be classed as one of the outstanding and most powerful productions ever made. Lon Chaney, whose famous performance in "The Miracle Man" has established him as one of the greatest character actors on the screen is featured as the legless master criminal. A picture on which no superlative is wasted.

PAULINE FREDERICK

in

Madame X

By Alexandre Bisson

Directed by Frank Lloyd

"Madame X," famed as one of the greatest stage successes has been picturized with even more dramatic power with Pauline Frederick in the most satisfying role of her career. "Madame X" will be talked about by everyone who sees it.

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART'S

famous story

It's a Great Life

Directed by E. Mason Hopper

You've been waiting for another "23½ Hours Leave." "It's a Great Life" even surpasses the author's other success. This comedy sensation throbs with love and dances with humor. It holds the interest all the way.

MADGE KENNEDY

in The

Girl With the Jazz Heart

By Robert Shannon

Directed by

Lawrence Windom

Timed to the minute this picture is a story of a girl with a jazz heart who jazzed her way into one of the most interesting of screen romances. It is Madge Kennedy at her charmingest.

JACK PICKFORD

in The

Man Who Had Everything

By Ben Ames Williams

Directed by

Alfred E. Green

Jack Pickford, in this new and highly original photoplay, plays the part of a young man who has everything he wants in the way of fortune, but a blind man and a pair of beautiful eyes show him the error of his ways. A big picture.

in

Officer 666

By Augustin MacHugh and Winchell Smith

Directed by

Harry Beaumont

Tom Moore puts on his official dignity in "Officer 666," a picturization from the Cohan & Harris play which set Broadway laughing for more than a year.

A REGINALD BARKER Production

The Branding Iron

From the successful novel by

Katherine Newlin Burt

Directed by

Reginald Barker

Adapted by J. G. Hawks

Three hundred leading newspapers are now running "The Branding Iron" as a serial story. Millions are reading the novel. As picturized by Goldwyn it is one of the sensational and inspirational dramas of the screen. Those who have seen it say that this picture will be boomed by exhibitors everywhere it is played.

in

What Happened to Rosa

By Pearl Lenore Curran

Directed by

Victor Schertzinger

Mabel Normand has the part of an overworked, tired, shop girl who, through adventurous circumstance and a fortune-teller, finds love and happiness in life. You will like Mabel Normand in this new and original role.

BASIL KING'S

Powerful Super-Drama

Earthbound

Directed by

T. Hayes Hunter

One year in production, "Earthbound," as powerful as its title suggests, is destined without question to go down in photoplay annals as one of the masterful sensations of the screen. A mere descriptive paragraph can in no way acquaint you with the bigness of "Earthbound." You will judge it when you see it.

REX BEACH'S Famous Story

The North Wind's Malice

Directed by

Paul Bern and Carl Harbaugh

This is destined to rank as one of the most powerful of Rex Beach's blood-stirring photoplays. It is a tremendous drama of human emotions with the action laid in the wilds of Alaska, which Mr. Beach portrays with startling vividness. There is a moral to this story which enhances the great human conflict on which it is based.

Milestones

by

Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock

Directed by

Paul Scardon

As a play, "Milestones," is known in every city in America as an outstanding success. As a picture portraying family life, it will appeal to the emotions of every patron.

WILL ROGERS
in

Old Hutch

By Garret Smith

Directed by

Clarence G. Badger

Will Rogers' inimitable and droll self is once more with us in "Old Hutch," a Saturday Evening Post story that is suited to Rogers as Rogers is suited to your patrons. It means one step more in the development of this swift moving star.

J. Parker Read, Jr., presents

HOBART BOSWORTH

in

His Own Law

Directed by

Irvin Willat

Hobart Bosworth is conceded to be the most powerful, dramatic male star in pictures. This J. Parker Read production presents Hobart Bosworth at his absolute best. Goldwyn presents "His Own Law" to you with the conviction that it is a truly worth-while production.

JACK PICKFORD

in

Just Out of College

By George Ade

Directed by

Alfred E. Green

A typical Jack Pickford picture and a zippical George Ade story. With all the pep and dash that goes with the two names. "Just Out of College" shows Jack Pickford in the best role of his career. Your patrons will say so.

in

The Highest Bidder

Adapted from

THE TRAP

By Maximilian Foster

Madge Kennedy in "The Highest Bidder" promises to surpass her former comedy achievements. "The Highest Bidder" is a sympathetic love story of the ever popular sort.

"WHISPERING DEVILS"

The Story Extraordinary

"WHISPERING DEVILS" adapted from Henry Arthur Jones's pulsating story constitutes what film men instantly recognize on the screen as the story that packs houses. It carries a tremendous appeal to every class. It mirrors in scenes of extraordinary power the struggle between the forces of good and evil. It pictures the sublime faith of the Man of God and the pitfalls and chaos that confront him.

FROM the gentle zephyr of a love story to the dramatic finish that leaves audiences in a whirl, in every scene and every flicker there is force, power, intensity to the Nth degree "WHISPERING DEVILS" is a truly great story, played by Conway Tearle and Rosemary Theby and brilliant cast. It is strong, clean, wholesome, tense, human and a house packer. Let us give you more details on this great play with its great title.

CRITICAL OPINION

DRAMA—

"The power of true realism lies in picturing the known in such a manner as to obtain and hold interest during the story to be told in bringing strong situations out of the easily-recognizable affairs of our everyday lives. Therein lies the prime merit of this production. The main impression made however,—is that enforced by contrast. There is an unpreached sermon in every second of that contrast, a sermon more deeply felt that it is not pronounced in words, one to make the spectators think twice."—LOUIS REEVES HARRISON.

FROM PRESS COMMENTS ON PICTURES

Directed By

"She is a psychological study at acute moments" WROTE MR. HARRISON OF A HITHERTO ABSOLUTELY INEXPERIENCED GIRL IN ONE OF BERANGER'S PICTURES.

GEORGE A. BERANGER

MELODRAMA—

"This production is so highly colored with strenuous action and travels at such a rapid tempo that one hasn't time to reflect about its obvious design. Director George Beranger has made this picture a success through keeping in mind that the incidents must carry punch and suspense."—M. P. NEWS.

"You are surprised time and again throughout the run of the picture by the novel twists and the clever manner in which they have been handled. Director Beranger wastes no footage and makes every incident count. As this picture is treated with the utmost skill, it should afford real pleasure to all audiences. The most successful direction the star has had."—WID.

"It is seldom that a melodramatic feature holds such a well-sustained pace as does this. Not only is the action swift and intense, but the production is full of original situations. It should keep the spectator in his seat from start to finish."—M. P. WORLD.

COMEDY—

"The air fairly staggers with the rapidity of events. One thing to be commended is the capable direction of George Beranger, who kept the mystery atmosphere ever foremost. The continuity hung close as a leech, and intense interest was maintained till the fadeaway" BILLBOARD.

"The star's most agreeable picture in some time." — MORNING TELEGRAPH.

"Something is happening of a strenuous nature from start to finish, an amusing flavor spicing the events. The picture has been well directed, and the story hangs well together." TRADE REVIEW.

Poor Posters—Poor Profits

A WARM day in winter is very pleasant. So also is a cool day during the hot season,—but neither the one nor the other indicates an ideal climate. In a way they resemble a box-office record breaking day,—very pleasant, and all that,—but what a far seeing exhibitor wants, and strives for, is not the exceptional record breaker,—but rather the steady high average.

To do such a business only one thing is necessary,—RITCHEY posters! Used daily! The RITCHEY poster is the only poster good enough to do that, for the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. has in its fold practically all the men competent to turn out such posters. It therefore follows that the exhibitor should center his efforts upon procuring RITCHEY posters. He should ask for, demand, and insist upon having them. He should further insist that every poster sent him bear the RITCHEY trade mark. In that way, and in that way only, can he be sure of avoiding the mediocre posters that are being foisted upon him.

For the RITCHEY trade mark is to a poster what the 22kt. mark is to gold!

On the Record

WE are asked by the Exhibitors Herald of Chicago, issue of June 26th, where we stand "in the Exhibitors' fight for independence."

In reply we beg to advise that we stand just where we stood nearly a year ago, when, in our issues of August 9th and 16th, we ran plain spoken editorials dealing with the subject of producer-owned theatres.

We stated that several prominent producer-distributors were at that time acquiring or openly attempting to acquire theatres (which was a patent fact) in key cities; that evidently the motive was to insure first-run representation; that despite the obvious advantage and even pressing, temporary necessity of such a move, however, we believed it uneconomic in principle and therefore bad in the long run for all concerned; that the proper, healthful and prosperous order of the trade was the independent exhibitor, independent distributor, independent producer; that only with this freedom of movement all along the line could the public demand and get the kind of pictures the public wanted.

WE stand just where we stood in our issues of November 22nd and 29th, 1919, in which in more plain-spoken editorials we advised the exhibitor to "own his public" through everlasting attention to his own business, namely the selection and presentation of pictures to suit the public; and not "to be buffaloes" by offers to buy him or threats to buy his competitor or arguments on the scarcity of picture supply; that "good theatres would always get good pictures," and that any exhibitor who owned his public need fear no producer owning his own theatre or his competitor's. And we stand today just where we stood a year ago.

IN reply we ask the Exhibitors Herald why its editor has waited a year to take its present stand "in the Exhibitors' fight for independence."

Was the Exhibitors Herald unaware that several prominent producers were buying theatres all this time? Was an editorial stand more timely then or now? Or did the Exhibitors Herald know the very well-known fact and yet choose to say nothing? Why a twelve months' silence?

The independence of the theatre so far as producer ownership is concerned is a very important question—particularly in the South where the small town theatres are involved.

There are other big issues, however, directly threatening the independence of the great majority of the theatres of the country.

IF the Exhibitors Herald will make a nationwide canvass it will be found that at least eighty per cent of the picture houses have never had a bona fide offer from any producer to sell out. And of this great majority a large number—too many by far—don't fear the producer owner today half so much as they fear the sheriff.

If the theatres are to maintain their independence—let alone their existence—they must have better pictures at lower rentals. The best thing that can be done for this industry right now, the one true rallying call for the great majority of American exhibitors, is a revolutionary change in the whole scheme of renting pictures which will give the small town exhibitor decent prints of the best pictures—the pictures which the public wants and of which we are now producing an adequate supply—at live and let live rental prices.

When we say the small town exhibitor we refer to eighty per cent of the picture theatres of the United States and Canada.

Put your finger at this point and you will touch the mainspring of independence today in the box-office of the American picture theatre.

DEALING IN PERSONALITIES

It isn't the hot weather, nor the lack of news, nor pure cussed laziness that causes us to use this photo of WATTERSON ROTHACKER to fill so large a chunk of this week's page. It's just because we think that much of "Wat," and besides we hasten to avail ourselves of the opportunity to prove by visible evidence that "Wat" does work occasionally.

We know that we had begun to doubt that latter statement, and perhaps many others had also, because whenever we see "Wat" about New York's tillum hotels or "conventioning" he looks so downright cheerful and free of care. Maybe that's the way a good salesman should appear.

At any rate, the camera, which they say cannot lie, here gives us the evidence of labor. We don't know whether he is inspecting a First National print intended for J. D. WILLIAMS' private view, or whether it's a bathing girl print that the negative cutter has "tipped off" around the plant. You never can tell in a laboratory.

After using several inches of space up with the photograph and a few more in airy persiflage written around it—quite a distance around it—we will now state in quick, brief and snappy fashion that WATTERSON ROTHACKER is in New York preparatory to sailing for Europe. "Wat" does it two or three times a year to our knowledge. And two or three more times he visits Los Angeles. Once or twice a year he journeys to Chicago where a certain well known laboratory is located.

The July 4th holiday is to blame for the fact that THE NEWS is one day late this week, otherwise we might take a chance and hold over another day to give you the last-minute returns on Saturday's big sporting event. HARRY REICHENBACH, a rising young animal show press agent, is host to the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at Bayside, Long Island.

For some unknown reason the event is called a "golf tournament." We believe that the members are going to meet on a golf course. We know of none foolhardy enough to predict that any golf will be played.

ARTHUR JAMES, PAUL LAZARUS and "BILL" YEARSLEY are a committee to award prizes. Some say that a few of the members may have to play golf—or play at golf—in order to provide an excuse for the committee and the prizes.

One thing sure we can guarantee a good time to all who attend. HARRY hasn't "flivved" on a date this season. If he keeps on improving we think he might graduate some day from menageries and Watterson R. Rothacker, the dynamic young president of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., in his private office cannibal isles to motion picture productions.

Attending the A. M. P. A. luncheon this week gave us an early glance at the current bulletin. We'll say that HORACE JUDGE did his job up well. And add that TOM WILEY seems to be wielding the plush-lined black-jack in successful fashion.

Looking around the tables "HOPP" HADLEY and I saw so many new faces that we decided the business must be still in its infancy. HARRY DIGGS is conservatively inclined to agree with us.

PAT DOWLING, the Christie's space-grabber, is a visitor in these parts. Pat brings with him a personality that should result in still further increasing the Christie appropriation of trade paper text space.

SIGMUND MOOS, who attends to the job of leasing space in UNIVERSAL CITY to outside companies is another Coast representative now looking Broadway's sights over.

Still another one. Miss EQUITY WILLIAMSON gave us the pleasure of meeting ROBERT M. YOST, Harry Garson's likeable representative. Br'er Yost is in town looking over contracts and "sech like."

LOWELL V. CALVERT, who will handle the big New Capital at St. Paul for Finkelstein and Rubin was another visitor to THE NEWS office during the week. Manager Calvert's presentations at the New Garrick place him in the front rank among the country's showmen.

Br'er Calvert also has a lot of good ideas with which we heartily agree. For instance, he says:

"It seems to me that the managers of the country are working the 'prelude' to death. Every picture, every week, has to have a prelude on the stage whether it is called for or not. And in most cases the prelude serves only to take the edge off the picture's climax. If the action of the picture towards the end reaches Egypt we get a prelude in a setting of pyramids—despite the fact that for four or five reels the atmosphere of the picture will probably be straight American. It's my opinion that half the preludes and prologues serve to steal strength from the climax and big scenes of the feature.

"We are meeting our greatest success at the New Garrick by building up a good show around the short features. A headline musical feature, backed by a special stage setting, and a theme running through your scenic, comedy and news weekly, will build a show that can stand up and give satisfaction even where the feature isn't a wonder.

"In this connection it's a wonder to me that someone doesn't go at the job of providing musical features to picture theatres in a way that will help the managers. We

Meeting of Georgia Exhibitors in Atlanta on July 11

To Affiliate with National Body and Act on Censorship Legislation

FIRST to take definite action with relation to the strong declaration as expressed at the recent meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in Cleveland, and carrying the plan to organize cooperative State Leagues of Independent Exhibitors, a mass-meeting of Georgia exhibitors has been called by Willard C. Patterson, third vice-president and member of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to assemble in Atlanta.

Date for this meeting has been set for Sunday, July 11th, at the Piedmont Hotel, and according to telegraphic and long-distance telephone responses, Mr. Patterson declared Tuesday afternoon that he expected one of the most representative groups of Georgia showmen ever assembled to attend the meeting.

"The call was not sent out at the request of one or two Atlanta exhibitors, but through the steady appeal of exhibitors throughout the state," said Mr. Patterson. "Following the meeting in Cleveland there has been a tendency among the exhibitors of Georgia to carry on the work as started by the National body. Believing that there is no more auspicious time for the assembly of the theatre owners and exhibitors of Georgia than middle of July and for several weeks thereafter, and feeling assured that the date as set will insure the maximum attendance of exhibitors, I am looking forward to this meeting to carry out the plans as discussed in Cleveland for the formation of State bodies of independent exhibitors."

Mr. Patterson's action in calling the convention of Georgia exhibitors marks one of the first steps on the part of district leaders among independent exhibitors to follow out the procedure as mapped out by the Cleveland convention. The step is significant for a number of reasons, the most important of which is the fact that the majority of state groups are watching Patterson's activities and it will not be a surprise to those who are in close touch with the situation to find that various other calls for State meetings will be heard in the next few days.

Exhibitor organizations are not new for Georgia. The Southeastern Theatre Managers Association has for the past few years been a valuable factor in expressing the combined sentiment of the exhibitors of that territory. However, in the organization of the Georgia branch of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America it is planned to bring about a formidable factor in carrying out to the letter the ideals and aims set forth by the general convention of exhibitors in Cleveland.

While the primary purpose for calling

An Important New Service

MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week announces an important new service to exhibitors

Charles D. Isaacson, contributing editor of the Music Department, is to be the medium of a service to the exhibitors of the country—in theatres large and small—that should be made a big factor in the plans of real showmen for the booming Fall season.

Be sure to read about this new service. Full announcement and details appear on Page 660 of this issue.

this session is to create the Georgia Branch of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, it is also the intention of those sponsoring the call of the meeting to take action against a censorship bill which will soon be brought before the Legislature. This bill, if enacted, will be one of the most arbitrary rulings ever conceived, according to prominent Georgia exhibitors. It will not only provide for the local boards of censors with which every exhibitor in Georgia must reckon, but will supplement the local boards with a state board that once opposed to any given picture can prevent its showing in any and all parts of the State.

"Freedom of the press and the independence of the screen are closely allied," declared Mr. Patterson in calling the general meeting of Georgia exhibitors for July 11 at Atlanta. "The obstacles which are at present hampering the development of the motion picture theatre are collectively aiming at one objective—the independence of the exhibitor. A showdown for these anti-independence forces was brought about by the action of the National Meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in session at Cleveland. This meeting called a spade a spade, and in its resolutions openly branded those forces that are allied against the best interests of the independent exhibitor."

"It is my hope to see every State rally to the call of the national body with district bodies that will unhesitatingly align themselves against those corporations or individuals which seek to impair the progress of our business. Georgia can be relied upon to do its share in this most laudable fight."

The salient clauses of the proposed Censorship Bill to be presented shortly for action by the Georgia Legislature are given as follows:

"Section 2: It shall be unlawful to sell, lease, lend, exhibit, or use any motion-picture film, reel, or view, in Georgia, unless the said film, reel, or view has been submitted by the exchange, owner, or lessee, of the film, reel, or view, and duly approved by the Georgia State Board of Censors, hereinafter in this Act called the Board.

"Section 3: The Board shall consist of three residents and citizens of Georgia, two males and one female, well qualified by education and experience to act as Censors under this Act. One male member of the Board shall be chairman, the female member shall be Vice Chairman, and one male member shall be secretary. They shall be appointed by the Governor, for terms of three years. Those first appointed under this Act shall be appointed for three years, two years and one year, respectively, the respective terms to be designated by the Governor.

"Section 5: The Board shall procure and use an official seal, which shall contain the word, Georgia State Board of Censors, together with such designs engraved thereon as the Board may prescribe.

"Section 6: The Board shall examine or supervise the examination of all films or reels or views to be exhibited or used in Georgia, and shall approve of such films, reels, or views which are moral and proper, and shall disapprove such as are sacrilegious, obscene, indecent, or immoral, or such as tend, in the judgment of the Board, to debase or corrupt morals. This section shall not apply to announcement or advertising slides.

"Section 7: Upon each film, reel, or view which has been approved by the Board there shall be furnished and stamped by the Board the following certificate or statement: Approved by Georgia State Board of Censors.

"Section 11: The Chairman shall receive an annual salary of Twenty-five hundred dollars, the Vice Chairman an annual salary of two thousand dollars. The salary shall be payable monthly.

"Section 12: Each member and employee of the Board shall be allowed all expense of whatsoever nature, actually and necessarily incurred by him or her in carrying out the purposes of this act.

"Section 13: The Chairman shall appoint, with the approval of the Governor, the following employees: One Chief Clerk at a salary of eighteen hundred dollars, one assistant clerk at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars, two stenographers and typewriters at salaries of one thousand dollars each; one Chief Inspector at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars, three Inspectors at salaries of fourteen hundred dollars, one operator who shall be an electrician at a salary of fourteen hundred dollars, one messenger at a salary of seven hundred and fifty dollars, one Assistant

Empire Theatre Wins Its Injunction Fight

According to word received from H. C. Farley, manager of the New Empire Theatre, Montgomery, Ala., the Empire Theatre Company has won in its fight for an injunction against the Lynch Enterprises and the Select Pictures Corporation, thus preventing the Lynch interests from exhibiting in Montgomery two first-run starring vehicles of Norma Talmadge, released by the Select Pictures Corporation.

According to the statement of Mr. Farley, the Empire had signed a contract to run eight Norma Talmadge pictures issued by Select. After the sixth had been run, says Mr. Farley, the Select cancelled the remaining two under one of the cancellation clauses in the contract. Later, the Select people, affirms the Empire manager, came and offered, at an increased price, two more Norma Talmadge pictures, which they said they had bought on the open market. The Empire refused to pay the price, and a contract was signed for the two pictures by the Lynch interests, says Mr. Farley. Proceedings to restrain the Lynch Enterprises from running them in Montgomery were opened by the Empire house. The local Montgomery Circuit Court granted the injunction, and later on an appeal to the Alabama Supreme Court a verdict was awarded in favor of the Empire Theatre Company, it is stated.

Famous Lasky Announce Recent Changes in Field

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces the following changes: Walter P. Lindlar, representative at Minneapolis, goes to the home office as assistant manager. S. G. Sladdin, of the Boston office, is transferred to the Omaha exchange. Charles Winston succeeds Mr. Sladdin at the Boston branch. John P. McConville, exploitation representative at Buffalo, goes into the new Albany field. Albert S. Nathan takes McConville's place at Buffalo. Oscar A. Doob goes to the Chicago office from the Cincinnati exchange. Frank A. Cassidy, of the Chicago office, takes over the vacancy left at Cincinnati by Mr. Doob's departure. Eli M. Orowitz goes to Philadelphia, while his place at the Detroit office is assumed by Leslie F. Whelan, formerly of Dallas. Hal Olver goes to Minneapolis, after a temporary tenure at the New York exchange.

Earl L. Crabb to Manage Buffalo Concern

Earl L. Crabb, former manager of the Strand theatre, Buffalo, and recently connected with Universal in an executive position, has accepted the general management of the Buffalo Motion Picture Company and will open offices at once at 844 6th avenue, New York City.

Chicago Exhibitors Reject Musicians' Demands

CHICAGO exhibitors are standing firm in their refusal to grant musicians who walked out on Monday, a seventy-five per cent increase in pay, and the indications are that the theatres will present their programs without musical accompaniment for the balance of the summer season. Piano and organ music are also being dispensed with in deference to the objections of the operators to work with non-union men.

In accordance with an agreement made a year ago, when a twenty-five to forty-two per cent increase was granted, exhibitors offered musicians an advance commensurate with the increase in cost of living during the period, or an increase of twenty-one per cent. This proposal was turned down by the Union. The public generally approves of the stand taken by the theatre managers, and the attendance does not seem to have been affected by the walk-out.

Sam Atkinson of the Allied Amusement Association reports that circuits such as Balaban and Katz, Ascher's, Lubliner and Trinz, as well as smaller exhibitors, are unanimous in their refusal to be held up by the musicians, and are determined to fight the issue to a finish. They have gone on record as opposed to an increase in admission at this time, while the tendency is towards the decline in prices of most commodities.

DeMille's "Prince Chap" to Run at Rivoli

William DeMille's Paramount production, "The Prince Chap," featuring Thomas Meighan, which scored a big success on the occasion of its initial showing at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, will open at the Rivoli theatre, New York, Sunday, July 11th.

Adapted for the screen by Olga Printz-lau, "The Prince Chap" was produced with an all-star cast. Kathryn Williams appears opposite Mr. Meighan and the cast also includes, among others, Lila Lee, Charles Ogle, Casson Ferguson, Ann Forrest, Lillian Leighton, Florence Hart, Theodore Kosloff, Clarence Goldart and Yvonne Gardelle. The photography is by Guy Wilky.

Court Upholds Referendum on Sunday Pictures

The efforts of the reformers to prevent Baltimoreans from voting on Sunday moving-pictures in the autumn elections received a blow on Wednesday, when Judge Morris A. Soper, in Superior Court, handed down a decision upholding the action of the Maryland Legislature in providing for a referendum vote on the question of whether Sunday movies will be permitted in Baltimore City. The Lord's Day Alliance filed a petition for a writ of mandamus to prevent the Supervisors of Elections from printing the question on the ballots and attacked the right of the Legislature to make such provision. They have indicated their intention of carrying the matter to the Court of Appeals.

In the summary of his opinion, Judge Soper declared that the conclusion was that in granting the people a referendum on the matter, the Legislature was acting entirely within its power. The petition of the Lord's Day Alliance, he added, does not state a case which would justify the issuance of a writ of mandamus against the Board of Election Supervisors.

Tourneur Production of Stage Play Available

Maurice Tourneur's motion-picture production of the famous Neil Burgess comedy drama, "The County Fair," has been taken over by J. J. McCarthy and Theodore Mitchell, and is announced for early release as a special distribution feature. The Tourneur production is in five reels and follows the salient points of the play. Messrs. McCarthy and Mitchell announce for the initial releases that open time will be booked for runs of a week or more in any section of the country where time is available.

Loew Wins Golf Tourney

Marcus Loew was the proudest and happiest man in Greater New York this week as a result of his emerging the winner in the golf tournament of the Milbourne Country Club. Loew came out on top, handsomely defeating Mr. Herzig, who just nosed out B. S. Moss, Mr. Loew's business rival and golfing competitor. Friends of Loew who have seen him slamming the little pill around state that his golf is now almost on a par with his theatre-buying proclivities.

Famous Players Promotes Thomas Kilfoil

Thomas Kilfoil, formerly traveling auditor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been promoted to the position of Special Representative of the Department of Distribution. In his new position, Mr. Kilfoil will work throughout the entire exchange field on the installation of standard routine services.

"Summer Slump" Bugaboo Is Fast Disappearing, Says Report

First National Survey Shows Enterprising Exhibitors Need Not Fear

THE exhibitors' annual "summer slump" bugaboo is less of a reality this year than ever before, with receipts in many important theatres holding well up during the first two weeks of real hot weather, comparing favorably with winter business, and superior to box office returns for the first period of excessive temperatures for 1919, according to a survey just completed among its new sub-franchise owners and other independent exhibitors by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Exhibitors who have refused to follow the old custom of reducing expenses during the hot weather on the theory that a motion picture house cannot keep patronage up to top-notch during the summer months, are having their pioneering judgment vindicated by business which compares very favorably with those of the winter months according to the special reports from various territories requested. The reports indicate that those who have gone ahead with first-class shows and kept their houses up to winter standards are getting first-class patronage, while those who reduced the quality of pictures or attempted to save in other directions are receiving returns in terms of reduced attendance.

The statements from many of the sub-franchise owners and others especially stress the exhibitors' own views as to the reason for the state of business which their theatres show this summer in contrast to the same season last year. Those who report no decrease in patronage with the coming of hot weather, show a remarkable unanimity in the view that there has been a big change in the last twelve months in the status of the motion picture in the minds of the amusement-loving public, and that it is this change which makes the theatres impervious to hot weather.

Reports from five first-run theatres in Atlanta, the Criterion, Forsythe, Rialto, Strand and Tudor, cover the last week in May and the first three weeks in June. None of the five theatres made any changes in policy for the hot months, and all of them report increases in patronage of from thirty-three to forty-five per cent over the same period last year, with an average of twenty-five per cent increase in prices.

Fourteen theatres in Kansas City, including those of the Newman Theatre Company, Loew's Garden and the Liberty, all report patronage fifty per cent in excess of last year. Admissions are about on a level with those a year ago.

Louisville, Ky., reports a general continuance of top-notch winter patronage through the first four weeks of hot weather, with one theatre, the Majestic, of

New Incorporations in New York State

THE past few days have brought the usual number of concerns incorporating in New York State in the motion picture business.

These include the Joan Film Sales Company, $100,000, Nat G. Rothstein, John N. Weber, Gustave F. Myers, New York; The Graphoscope Service Co., $63,000, Walter J. Scott, Annette Day, New York and C. P. Hall of Newark, N. J.; San Marco Films, Inc., $500,000, S. M. DePasquali, College Point, Thomas J. Smith, Flushing; Julius Frankenburg, New York; Cinema Screen Advertising Co., $30,000, Gertrude Wolfer, Frederick Brutsche, William S. Hawkins, New York; Telescreen Corporation of America, $600,000, Jules Burnstein, M. D. Clofine, Chester C. Rankin, New York; Hillfield, Inc., $25,000, Marion Elkin, Etta London, Ruth Vogel, New York; Howells Picture Corporation, $50,000, David P. Howells, William Falt, Jr., Anthony Morello, New York; Celtic Players, $5,000, Eileen Curran, Bina Flynn, H. J. O'Neill, New York; Montauk and Elite Theatre Corporation, $20,000, Barnett H. Miller, Nathan Gerzog, Benjamin Nathanson, New York; Howard Thurston Pictures, Inc., $5,000, Howard Thurston, Beechhurst, Hal Benedict, George Kelson, New York; Lyons Amusement Company, $30,000, Gertrude Ritchie, Sidney E. Arnold, George F. Allen, Rochester.

which Louis Dittmar is manager, giving the detail that his theatre played to 23,000 more paid admissions in May of this year than during May of 1919. Lowell, Mass., and Buffalo, N. Y., as well as many smaller cities, report the arrival of hot weather with little if any decrease in patronage from the winter months, and all reporting large increases over the similar period last year.

Pittsburgh, Pa., is the single exception to report a decrease in business. The manager of one theatre there suggests the reason why this mid-western city is affected adversely. He is Samuel DeFazio, manager of the Blackstone, and he declares that the adoption of the daylight saving law has put the theatres at a disadvantage because the streets remain light enough to make walking and sightseeing enjoyable until about nine o'clock in the evening. For this reason, he declares, first performances in the evenings have shown a decided falling off, but the later performances as well attended as at any time during the winter. N. A. Benson, manager of the Stadium, also in Pittsburgh, outlines a plan of shorter shows and more of them as a method which is successfully meeting the shortened hours for exhibiting. His method of shortening the shows is to emphasize on the quality of the feature productions and the elimination of all other films from the program.

Those theatres which have reported the successful opening of the summer season generally are doing special exploitation work. Lobby arrangements based upon hot weather, such as iceberg displays and frosted trimmings, are popular. The use of lighter colors for the exterior of the theatre and the lobby has found favor with a majority of theatres.

Programs have been given a great deal of attention, and the managers reporting favor comedies, farces and other light pictures for the summer shows, on the theory that laughing is the easiest emotion of any to experience and thus the entertainment of a patron is accomplished with less action on his part. In connection with this matter it may be stated that the reports contained a question as to whether any shortage of high-grade film was present in any of the centers due to the policy of many producers and distributors in curtailing releases. The reports were unanimous in stating that plenty of high-grade films were available.

Changes in musical accompaniments, particularly for summer patronage, have been made by exhibitors who have reported good business. The tendency in music, shown by the report on the part of these managers, has been to string and other soft-toned instruments, with an accompanying decrease in brass and strident blow instruments. In most cases such changes have necessitated an increase in the number of players to provide the necessary volume, but the added lazy comfort of the softer tones are regarded as being a satisfactory recompense for the added expense by those exhibitors who have made the change. Naturally the music itself has also been changed, waltzes and slower, more melodious pieces replacing the jazz fox trots and one-steps that prevailed through the winter.

Committee Will Settle Watertown Censorship

So much discussion has arisen in Watertown, N. Y., in relation to the question of censorship of the motion pictures being shown in that city, that theatre owners and City Manager Bingham have come to the agreement that a committee will be appointed at the next meeting of the Common Council, which shall pass on all pictures to be shown in that city in the future.

The theatre owners have expressed their willingness to submit all bookings to the committee one month in advance of the date scheduled for the pictures and should the committee disapprove of certain pictures, it will notify the proprietor of the theatre two weeks in advance of the date of the showing.

Crandall Adds to Chain of Theatres

Washington Exhibitor Acquires Houses in Roanoke and Martinsburg, W. Va.

HARRY M. CRANDALL, owner of a chain of motion picture theatres in Washington, D. C., president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., last week announced the extension of his circuit of houses to include the most important theatres in Roanoke, Va., and Martinsburg, W. Va. Pursuant to plans made public at the time of the announcement of the beginning of construction on Crandall's Strand theatre in Cumberland, Md., the Crandall interests now embrace the National theatre in Roanoke and the Apollo in Martinsburg. This carries the Crandall chain into four states outside of the District of Columbia, the Colonial theatre in Connellsville, Pa., forming one of the links.

The successful conduct of Crandall's Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Savoy, Crandall's Apollo, Avenue Grand and York theatres in the National Capital has been familiar to those with the best interests of the industry at heart. These houses mark a high attainment in architectural beauty, spaciousness, comfort and managerial efficiency. They serve every section of the city of Washington, each house being recognized as the finest in its respective locality and the one that presents the best bills under the most agreeable auspices. There is no comparable circuit of theatres in the Capital and only a few in the country.

Crandall's Strand theatre, the new Cumberland house with a comfortable seating capacity, verging upon 2,000, is awaiting only the completion of the detail of interior decoration to be thrown open to the public of the thriving Maryland city. The Strand in every respect is the product of the most advanced art of theatre construction, having been designed and built under the direct personal supervision of Reginald Wyckliffe Geare, the Washington architect who also was responsible for Crandall's Metropolitan, Knickerbocker and York theatres, three of the finest examples of modern theatre construction in America. An important feature of the Strand's equipment is found in the full-size stage upon which is every electrical, mechanical and stationary appliance necessary to the successful presentation of the most massive productions sent on tour. The provision for the projection of motion pictures is, of course, equally as complete.

Crandall's new National theatre in Roanoke occupies the most desirable site in the heart of the business section of the city, and when completed will be the largest and handsomest playhouse in Roanoke. It is expected that this new addition to the Crandall holdings will be ready for opening to the public on or about November 1st, construction now going forward at full speed. Like the Cumberland house, the National will be equipped for the presentation of any type of theatrical offering as well as pictures.

Crandall's Apollo theatre in Martinsburg has been in operation under the ownership management of H. P. Thorn for a period of about eight years. It is the present plan to close the house to the public immediately and entirely reconstruct the theatre at a cost of approximately $150,000. Adjoining property has been secured by the Crandall organization which will permit the very material enlargement of the Apollo. This completed it will have a seating capacity of more than 1,400, with comfortable seating arrangements for 1,100 on the orchestra floor. It will be the policy here, too, to provide stage facilities capable of handling the most massive productions ever sent on tour.

In addition to the theatre proper, the Apollo building will also house two large halls in surmounting stories. One will be conducted as a ballroom, 90x125 feet, the other, conforming to the same dimensions, as a civic center where, by the application of a people's forum idea, will be furthered plans for municipal progress and a genuine community spirit fostered. It will be noted that by the successful consummation of the tentative plans now held in abeyance only pending the rebuilding of the theatre edifice, there will be centered in Crandall's Apollo the most important elements in the community life of Martinsburg.

Martin Tells His Impressions of America

English Advertising Manager Tells British Exhibitors to Copy America

THOSE who met Franklin Martin, advertising manager of Famous Players-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of London, or read his impressions of American exhibitor methods, given in trade paper interviews, will be interested to know that his enthusiasm was not cooled by the Atlantic breezes which waited him homeward.

Writing under the heading, "Over There—Reflections and Impressions in America," Mr. Martin said in the June 17th issue of The Cinema, London:

"The American exhibitor, like his English cousin, is enjoying great prosperity these days, but I am of the opinion that the 'good times' in the States have more of the quality of endurance than those prevailing in Great Britain, since they have been brought about by scientific showmanship, whereas those in the United Kingdom are due to other causes. Now, I don't want it to be thought for one moment I have the idea that my own countrymen are ignorant of the first rudiments of the game, because that would be a completely false impression. We have fine theatres, excellent musicians, and, of course, the same attractions as the Americans, but we have a disposition to regard these as the prime essentials to success—which they are to-day. But what of the future?

"There are few things more palatable than an everyday, well-cooked sole, which is a simple culinary feat that obtains no more appreciation in Bromley than it does in Birmingham, and yet there are hundreds of people in both places, as there are in every district, who would never dream of leaving London without eating a sole at a certain West End restaurant, which, by an unusual manipulation of the ordinary ingredients, has achieved a national reputation and enormous prosperity.

"Doing things in a different way is the prime factor of success in American show business. All the time they are endeavoring to give the picture theatre the human touch by having atmospheric prologues—with living actors—which, as it were, dissolve into the opening of the feature. The orchestra is visible, and is not an accessory to the picture, but a special feature of the entertainment. During the playing of the Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody at the Rialto recently they screened a picture of the leader directing the orchestra. The picture was made to synchronize with the music. Later the entire orchestra was shown, and as the solo parts were played pictures of the particular musician were projected. The whole thing was extremely effective, and obtained prolonged applause. Furthermore, it set everybody talking about the Rialto, which, by the way, is not regarded as a 'picture theatre' in the English sense, but is looked upon as a regular Broadway show.

"Although business is phenomenal, none of the exhibitors are 'taking things easy.' This is particularly noticeable in the matter of newspaper advertising. The forty-eight sheet poster is everywhere. It is the standard size for boarding display. These posters are extremely difficult to sell to British exhibitors, why, I do not know, since in the United Kingdom, by

General Manager of Educational Back from Europe

E. W. Hammons Believes English Still Want American Pictures

E. W. HAMMONS, vice-president and general manager of Educational Films Corporation, returned this week from Europe after a five weeks' tour of the British Isles and France. Various reports of new activities on the part of his company, including the erection of a large motion picture house in London, accompanied Mr. Hammons, but he declared that it was too early to make any definite announcements although he admitted that the English connections of his company were closer than ever before.

It is no secret that the Hudson's Bay Company is largely interested in Educational and that the company is associated with the Ideal Film Renting Co., Ltd., of London and that the international relations have been greatly broadened in the past year. It is said that Educational is able to command almost any amount of capital desired for any plans that may seem desirable. While he was in the British Isles Mr. Hammons visited the various Ideal offices so as to get in close touch with activities there.

As to the result of his visit to France, it is expected that new relations will be announced within a short time.

"I found," said Mr. Hammons, "that the demand for American motion pictures is just as strong as it was on any of my previous visits. There is no real antagonism to product of this country, so long as the pictures do not undertake to ridicule the English people, as, unfortunately, a few of them have done. I believe, though, that the English feel much more kindly to those American producers that are handling their product there through companies in which English capital is concerned than to others. It is natural that so great a city as London does not take kindly to being considered a 'branch' office."

"However, there has one great change come over the English motion picture world. They have realized that the pictures they have made have been vastly inferior to those on this side, as a general rule, and the producers are now trying very hard to profit by their mistakes. The works of their greatest writers are being transferred to the screen and real, sincere effort is being made to achieve the best results. I feel very sure that the more serious of these are going to have good results, but I am equally sure that none of us will ever see the day when there is not a demand for the best of American product all through Britain."

"One reason for this is that the natural advantages are not with England as a country. Then, too, the people want on the screen the types that are so typical of America, types that we have in such varieties. For instance, it would not take long to tire the English of their own cockney type, while here we have scores of corresponding types. They like, too, at least for screen consumption, the bright and breezy American stories. In short, the 'atmosphere' of the American picture has a lot to do with its popularity.

"With their determination to produce better pictures the British are devoting their attention almost entirely to the longer pictures. As I have indicated, these are being made largely from the works of noted authors, both from the classics and living writers. The short subject field has been practically untouched. They have not essayed two reel comedies and I found there a great demand for the type that we are distributing."

"The single reel scenic, travel and educational picture continues to have a great vogue. I reached England about the same time that our Mr. Robert C. Bruce arrived there to begin a tour of the British Isles for a number of his pictures which we will release. I found that his arrival was one of the events of the film world. That was not surprising to me, but it may be rather startling for you to know that the revenue from such pictures as the Bruce series abroad has compared very favorably with that in this country. Every one of the Bruce pictures has been shown in the leading cinemas of England and they were very much interested in the prospect of seeing his camera record of their own country."

"Although this phase of picture making has not developed to anything like the extent that it has with us, I was able to get in touch with some interesting plans and we expect to announce some further short subjects that will attract a great deal of attention in this country. You may know that we have already purchased the product of several foreign camera men which we will distribute throughout the world."

"Our own relations with Great Britain, and, for that matter, the rest of Europe, are going to be very much closer. As you know we are intimately associated with the Ideal Film Renting Co., Ltd., one of the greatest distributors of pictures in the British Isles, with offices in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. As soon as certain contracts have expired we will be able to offer distribution through practically the whole of the English speaking world and a number of other countries. Until that time we cannot make definite announcement, but you can be assured that this announcement will bring assurance of better product for this country, better product for Britain and the rest of Europe and possibly some other developments that will result in Educational Films Corporation taking a step still further forward into international activities."

Special Picture Sales Manager on Tour

For the purpose of making an intensive study of the short reel needs of the exhibitors all over the country, H. J. Roberts, general sales manager of the Special Pictures Corporation, leaves the Los Angeles home office this week for New York. After a few days in the metropolis, Roberts will start on his nation-wide tour, covering not only the key centers, but the smaller cities and towns as well. Mr. Roberts will be gone several weeks and he expects to call on at least 1,000 theatre owners personally.

Film Carried By Plane at Cost of $1,000

What is probably the highest sum ever spent for the transportation of a film was paid recently by C. S. Jensen of the firm of Jensen and Von Herberg, of Portland, Oregon. Word was received at 1:30 in the morning that the film had missed connection at Seattle, and would therefore not arrive in Portland until four o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Jensen met the situation by chartering an airplane at a cost that was said to be $1,000, and flying to Tacoma, where the film was picked up.

The plane left Portland at eight o'clock and was back again at 12:25 with its precious freight. The distance by straight air flight is approximately 225 miles.

Exhibitors' Resolution Condemns Producers

At a regular meeting of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce held at the Hotel Astor Tuesday, June 29th, which meeting was attended by the representatives of the best theatres booking out of the New York territory, a series of important resolutions were unanimously passed of which the outstanding feature was the one directed against the United Artists Film Corp., as follows:

"That the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce is opposed to paying in full for any picture as an advance or deposit. That we condemn the efforts of any distributing organization attempting to force full payment from the signing of contract and that the members of this organization in self defence pledge themselves not to enter into any contract requiring payment in full for any picture more than seven days in advance of play dates."

Discussion of this resolution is said to have brought out the facts that the Robertson-Cole Co., who have just released the "Wonder Man," were exacting full payment in advance, upon signing of contract, and that the door was left open for other distributing companies to adopt a similar policy. This resolution was adopted as a matter of self-defence and in accordance with same not any of the members of this "Chamber," controlling three hundred and eighty theatres, will book any of the releases of the United Artists until their policy has changed.

New First Nationaler in St. Louis

The youngest star to sign with Associated First National Pictures, Inc. (the St. Louis Exchange), was announced on the evening of June 23rd by S. J. Baker, manager of this exchange. The new star is named Nina Baker and she has signed a life contract with Daddy Baker, who made the announcement when the charming star was but twenty-four hours of age.

Paul Brunet Kills False Pathe News Report

JUST before he sailed for France, the Exchange, Inc., was called to a resident and general manager of Pathe attention of Paul Brunet, vice-president that the Pathe News was about to be amalgamated with other topical reels.

"Preposterous" was Mr. Brunet's comment. "There is positively no foundation of truth in this statement. The Pathe News is a pioneer in its field, has a reputation for being the most reliable news reel on the market, and today has a greater circulation than any other motion picture reel. Exhibitors may rest assured that we have no thought of amalgamating the Pathe News with any other news reel organization or organizations."

George D. Uffner, manager of the Industrial and Educational department of Universal Uffner Heads Universal Industrial Dept.

George Uffner, formerly manager of the Short Stuff Department for Universal, has been appointed manager of the Industrial Department. Uffner's promotion is a result of the recent resignation of Harry Levey, and the subsequent comprehensive change in the personnel of the Industrial branch of Universal activities.

Reichenback Is Host to A.M.P.A. Members

In the capacity of author, producer and host, Harry Reichenback will handle his great production of the season which is to be staged in eighteen episodes at the Bay-side Golf Club, Saturday, July 10th. Reichenback's latest spectacle is entitled "The Great Golf Galaxy." The principals in the cast include the board of directors of the A. M. P. A. in toto and the ensemble embraces practically the whole membership of that body.

Americanization Films to Be Released Soon

Work on the production of Americanism films has begun in earnest. Pathe will shortly release a one-reel subject, "The Land of Lafayette," to be followed soon by another film, the title of which has not yet been selected, which will be made by the George B. Seitz studios.

The first of the six Americanization subjects to be made at the Eastern Metro studios will be under way shortly. It will be called "Strangers Beware," and the cast appearing in it will be headed by Miss Mazie Beaton. The production will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Arthur Zellner, who is first assistant to Director General Maxwell Karger.

Educational Producers Hold Meeting

At a meeting to be held very shortly at the Bray Pictograph offices, representatives of all the big producers will report on their study of the problem the educational field is turning up.

An important preliminary meeting was held last week. The meeting took place at the Harvard Club at the invitation of Carl H. Pierce, vice-president of the Kineto Co. of America, Inc. At the suggestion of Mr. Pierce there was chosen as temporary chairman, Rowland Rogers, of Bray.

Mr. Rogers explained that the producers' representatives had been called together to discuss the various and complex problems that had been developing in the rapidly expanding educational field; that they wanted to devise some way to co-operate in arriving at methods of distribution, methods of charge, etc. The territorial price also offers a great problem; whether the New York charge is to be more or less than the New York charge for the ordinary entertainment productions, is a problem that still needs study.

It was explained at the meeting that it had not been the intention to slight any producers and at future meetings, of which notice will be given in the publications, all producers interested in educational films are invited to attend or to send a representative.

At the Harvard Club meeting the other night there were present besides Mr. Pierce and Mr. Rogers, the following:

Isley Boone, Argonaut Films; F. W. Blaisdell, Society of Visual Education; Dr. G. P. Benton, Worcester Films; Dr. Maxwell Ryder, Ryder Films; Don Carlos Ellis, of the Harry Levey Service Corporation, and S. A. Bloch of the Fox Film Corporation.

Metro President Sails for Europe

Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, sailed Saturday, June 26, on the Cunard liner Caronia for England and the Continent. He departed for Europe "on Metro business," as he expressed it, saying that he expected to be away until next September.

Mr. Rowland was accompanied on his voyage by J. Frank Brockliss, the English motion picture magnate.

Sam Dembow Starts on Tour of Fox Exchanges

With announcement made by William Fox of the productions with which he will formally launch the 1920-21 season of Fox Film Corporation, comes news also of the annual tour of Fox sales department heads to the various branch offices. Sam Dembow, Jr., Assistant Sales Manager, started on his tour of Fox exchanges in the South and West Thursday, July 8th, accompanied by Ross Whitlock as special representative.

Some Evils of the Percentage System

By Sydney S. Cohen

EVERY motion picture theatre owner is naturally jealous of his ownership. He wants to protect his own investment, use his own judgment, because he is putting his own time and his own money into his enterprise.

We all feel instinctively that the man who seeks to intrude upon our business to the extent of asking us to share our profits with him when he has no stake in our property, is no friend of ours.

Certain interests have advocated percentage booking as a fair proposition. Percentage booking in the very nature of things can never be quite fair. It immediately handicaps the owner of the theatre. It establishes a precedent for rental prices for subsequent pictures irrespective of the extraordinary conditions prevailing with the playing of the percentage picture. It is an indirect method for certain interests to secure your theatre or to find a location for a new theatre, if their percentage returns are sufficiently inviting. They carry away with them detailed information as to the exhibitor's business.

Therein lies the greatest danger of all. In consenting to a temporary partnership with a producer, you must, at least for a day or two, give him the full privileges of partnership. In this way you enable him to obtain a full, accurate knowledge of your business.

No business man wants to share the full knowledge of his business with others. Percentage booking, although it wears the guise and semblance of partnership, is just the opposite of what a partnership should be. Your partner, in theory at least, is your friend. His interests and your interests are identical. What hurts him hurts you. What benefits him benefits you. How different the situation of a man who obtains complete information regarding your theatre but who is not your friend and is very apt to be a prospective competitor.

The way to kill percentage booking is to keep away from it as you would from a dose of bichloride of mercury. Stand by your friends. Shut your ears against even the suggestion of percentage booking. Refuse to entertain any argument which a glib-tongued salesman might offer you.

The renting of films involves but two transactions: fixing of a price mutually fair and payment of that price. When that is through the business is done. The men who advocate percentage have not taken into consideration the fact that the exhibitors taking the risks in the days when the future of the business was uncertain is the backbone of the industry. It is my opinion that before the producer can consistently ask to be allowed to see the books of the exhibitor to determine the price of a picture, he should be willing to let the exhibitor go over his books to see how much the picture actually costs him.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America must bind themselves, as per their action in convention assembled, against the producer with the two contracts: one for straight rental and one for percentage booking, because the man who has two contracts to offer has but one to sell, and that is percentage booking. If this organization means anything, it means the prevention of any attempt by producers to force percentage booking on the exhibitors of the United States.

If the prices quoted you for the rental of film is so high that you cannot entertain it, remember that it is the purpose of the man with two contracts to always force the percentage one. Do not entertain either one of the two, and especially do I plead to the big theatre owners who have often listened to the siren call of the big producers. Remember that while your contract on percentage may have netted you a little bit more money, do not forget the eighty-percenter, the great backbone of the business. If percentage is ever forced on him, the ownership of your theatre is gone for all time.

The interests which at this time may be too weak or too cautious to make a frontal attack on your property, now resort to a roundabout way or to a flank movement. Resent. Resent now and forever. Remedies are always late.

Co-operation with British Exhibitors

Correspondence Shows President Cohen's Desire for Internationalism

INTERESTING correspondence of an international character is seen in the following two letters. The correspondence began with a letter addressed by President Sydney S. Cohen to the president of the Cinema Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain, F. R. Goodwin:

"New York, April 28, 1920.

"Dear Sir and Fellow Exhibitor:

"Permit me to offer you my sincerest congratulations on your recent election to the Presidency of the C. E. A. On reading the excellent report of the proceedings of your annual convention as published in 'The Bioscope,' I find that though the waters may divide us many of our problems must tend to unite us. I am glad to inform you that at the recent meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York, a resolution was passed to strive for closer affiliation with the motion picture exhibitors of other lands and especially to seek an entente cordiale with your organization which has upon more than one occasion shown itself to be a credit to the exhibiting profession and indeed to the entire industry.

"On both sides of the water we have to fight the same evils and resist the same aggression. You have in the past shown the mettle of your organization by opposing with vigor and success all monopolistic tendencies. You have asserted and maintained the rights of the theatre owner to the absolute control of his property and to a voice in the fixing of the prices for the rentals of film. No one knows better than you and I how much inertia there is in the ranks of the exhibitors and how often his unwillingness to act has brought bitter regrets. In spite of all discouragement, however, we have progressed with an appreciable degree of steadiness. Many of our producers are endeavoring to form intimate business relations, and, perhaps, striving at control of the international market. We are in a position to assure you that there is no question whatever of their aiming at the control of our theatres on this side. Some of the most distinguished men in the producing branch are even now in Europe looking out for the protection of their interests. Surely, here is where we ought to take a lesson from them and gather what strength we may from a close affiliation of British and American exhibitors, which we hope will eventually take in the whole exhibiting body in the world.

"Hoping that I will hear from you at an early date and assuring you of my personal willingness to cooperate in every way, I am

"Fraternally yours,

(Signed) "SYDNEY S. COHEN,
President.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League
State of New York.

Mr. Goodwin replied rather fully and among other things he states:

"From your letters it is clear that, as you say, we have to fight the same evils. In this country the producer-exhibitor has only now commenced to rear his head and we are all alive to resist him by every means in our power. The problem is an extremely difficult one, and I have always held that our trade as exhibitors is strong enough, and we should be strong enough with it, to deal with all problems that come before us, excepting the one essential feature: that of the films themselves.

Newspaper Editorial Pays Tribute to The Motion-Picture and Mary

THE following editorial appeared in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat under the date of Thursday, June 24, 1920. It bore the caption, "The Best Known American":

"If all the world were gathered in one huge darkened auditorium and a portrait were to be flashed upon the screen which would be recognized by the greatest number, whose would it be? Would it be the picture of Woodrow Wilson, or Lloyd George, or even of the late Kaiser? No, indeed. It would be wee Mary Pickford, known officially as Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks. For world popularity she is the greatest American, the greatest world citizen, in fact. Even so short a time as ten years ago this would not have been possible. There have been great actors, great singers and beautiful women in public life for centuries. Some of them have been angels of mercy and some of them agents of Lucifer. Their reputations have been world wide in the old sense, but not in the modern sense of the cinema. Never was Zenobia, Hypatia, Cleopatra, Brunhilde, Joan of Arc, Victoria, Nightingale, Willard, Patti or Bernhardt, known to the people of the world, the learned and the unlearned alike, as Mary Pickford is known.

A new thing has come into the daily lives of the masses the world over, introducing them to themselves. Today more than ever before one-half of the world knows something about how the other half lives.

Rightly used, the moving picture might be made the greatest factor in securing world peace through its destruction of ignorance and its removal of prejudice of race against race, which is founded chiefly in ignorance."

Hampton Wires Governor About Censorship

Benjamin B. Hampton has addressed a telegram to Governor Calvin A. Coolidge of Massachusetts, congratulating him on his demonstration of Americanism in vetoing the censorship bill and suggesting a practical substitute for the censorship method of disposing of objectionable pictures. Mr. Hampton, in speaking of his work and that of his associate-producers, says:

"We are producing pictures for the American family. We realize the problem surrounding the new art of photodrama, but we know also that these problems are not to be solved by the creation of un-American institution such as censorship. We have learned by experience that the responsibilities and the temptations of censorship are too great to place in the hands of any group. As practical picture-men may we suggest, Mr. Governor, that the most effective censorship of motion-pictures can be put into operation any hour of any day by the heads of families deciding first whether or not they want their children to see doubtful plays and then by telling the theatre-owner, orally or by letter, of their approval or disapproval of his program. The fathers and mothers of this land will be startled to see the prompt response that will follow an expression of their opinion against doubtful plays.

"The public is supreme. Picture theatres are instantly responsive to the story told by the box office. If when and as the family-trade disapproves doubtful pictures, the box office will see that no more doubtful pictures appear. And no other form of censorship will accomplish comparable results."

Willat Vice-President of National Film

C. A. Willat, who recently emerged from retirement to be general manager of the National Film Corporation of America, has been elected vice-president of that concern.

William Harris, Jr., Replies to Kettering

William Harris, Jr., producer of John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," denies that Ralph T. Kettering "voluntarily" withdrew his use of the title, "Abraham Lincoln," to indicate the Kettering theatrical production featuring the character of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Harris affirms that Kettering withdrew his use of the title only "when confronted by the positive proof and the certainty that he would be enjoined."

Moreover, Mr. Harris requests that it be announced that "an order has been entered in the United States District Court by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis permanently enjoining Ralph T. Kettering from the use of the title, "Abraham Lincoln."

Pierce Protests Against New York Statute

Carl H. Pierce, vice-president of the Kinetograph Company of America, Inc., has written a letter to Nathan Vidaver, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, protesting against the New York State statute which states that no films should be run in class rooms in New York State that are not on safety standard—narrow width—stock.

Mr. Pierce urges that the measure be repealed: "I believe the hour is now come," he stated, "for the proper authorities to present a new bill on this subject to the legislature of New York and make such other plans as shall be necessary to obtain the rescinding of this discriminatory legislation."

Famous Players Sued in St. Louis Court

Two suits to recover possession of the Russell theatre and the Rex Airdome, $15,000 damages in each case, and a monthly rental of $1,500 for each theatre were filed in the Circuit Court of St. Louis yesterday against the Famous Players-Lasky Missouri Corporation and its president, F. L. Cornwell, by the Russell Amusement Company, which formerly had possession of the Russell theatre, and Sam Koplar, former possessor of the Rex Airdome.

Actions now in the Justice of the Peace Courts were ordered transferred to the Circuit Court. The petitions allege that the defendants broke into the theatres on May 1, 1920, and took possession of them. The controversy is one which arose following the sale of the Koplar-Goldman interests to the Famous Players Missouri Corporation which involved the transfer of the Kings, Pershing, Mozart, Arco, Russell and Rex theatres.

South Is Flourishing Says Jack Auslet

Jack Auslet, branch manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in New Orleans, recently on a visit to New York, states that his territory is in a more flourishing condition than ever before. Also that the future is holding great promise, with the construction of several theatres in view and plans already drawn up by Pantages for the erection of a $1,000,000 motion picture house.

"One familiar with the lavish way productions are screened in New York," said Mr. Auslet, "would be surprised to see that these same methods are being used throughout the Southern territory. Exhibitors are getting away from the cheap exploitation stunts and dressing their lobbies artistically, besides ornamenting their stages in a fitting manner for presentations. Great attention is also given to the musical end of the program."

Martin Talks on Conditions

reason of their novelty, they have even greater pulling power.

"There are a couple of changes in the running of American shows which I imagine will presently reveal themselves in Great Britain. One is the 'week run,' and the other is what one may term the 'season house.' The former is due to the realization of William A. Johnston's famous slogan, 'Fewer pictures, better pictures, longer runs,' for the big producers are certainly reducing their output by improving it. Further, so much attention has to be paid to the building of the programmes and the arrangement of the music, to say nothing of the time and money involved in the preparation of the aforementioned prologue, that it is not possible to present two programmes a week."

work through the usual booking agencies, but they don't know our problems. Week after week we don't know the type of singer we are to have until he steps into the theatre."

As we close this more or less important page we receive an essay on percentage from the pen of SYDNEY COHEN. We gather that Sydney has his axe out for someone. There is every possibility that we are right. Maybe we know something. Perhaps a dull summer will soon be enlivened by the sight of flying fur. Dull, we mean, for all but the Ed Mock Association.

Here we are, on an off week, stretching far beyond the confines of our own page. "Ain't typewriting wunnerful?"

We heard a few fish stories at the A. M. P. A. luncheon. Bill Yearsley and Pat Parsons confessed to having set a few trout records while in the Catskills this year, and Hopp Hadley proved his value as a production manager by admitting to having robbed Indian Lake of a five-pound pickerel—or was it a perch? We never hear anything but the weight in these fish stories.

Before we say another word this week we want to announce that we are not personally responsible for the caption on that Rothacker photograph. Some other member of the staff is wise to "Wat."

Besides we never use that word "dynamic" more than once a year.

Good Idea for Getting Them in on Time

G. E. Brown, of Memphis, Originates Plan Advising
His Patrons When the Shows Start

GETTING your patrons into your theatre at the beginning of a performance has always been one of the most difficult problems for a theatre manager to solve. But it looks easy if we are to follow the example set by an advertising and publicity man in Memphis, Tenn. The new wrinkle is in the form of a clock or indicator showing the starting time of each performance.

The idea is credited to G. E. Brown, director of advertising and publicity of the Memphis Enterprises, Inc., and as Mr. Brown handles the advertising and publicity for seven theatres in that city, he had to evolve a clock that would apply in any advertisement. The value of the clock as a time indicator to theatregoers is self-apparent.

Mr. Brown had three clocks drawn and then furnished every newspaper running his ads with mats. Now when he has to advertise a show running an hour and 15 minutes, he indicates in his ads which of the clocks is to run and the reader picks out the time of show he wishes to attend.

As a convenience to the patron, it is of incalculable value. Whereas, before patrons were dropping in at all hours, getting

Effective Prelude Number at Capitol

AN innovation in preludes for a feature picture is in evidence in the arrangement for the introduction of "The Best of Luck" at the Capitol theatre this week. On a black net drop the main title of the film has been reproduced in white letters, size being about the same as the picture image when on the screen, and the same style of lettering and arrangement followed out. This drop is hung in one with a black drop not transparent a few feet up stage. Between the transparency and the black drop a group of performers, singers and dancers, dressed in Scotch costumes are placed.

Under floods and spots in colors the effect is of an animated title of a film or an animated stereopticon slide.

The singers render a potpourri of Scotch songs in which the soprano solo, "The Blue Bells of Scotland" as a soprano solo, "Coming Thro' the Rye" by soprano and ensemble, "Annie Laurie" by a male quartette. A Scotch folk dance closes the stage portion of the prelude. The last number of the prelude prior to the screening is the rendition of "Auld Lang Syne" in at the middle of a show, at the end of the first reel or at the last flash, with the result that he had to see the show backwards or left because he could not see any reason for it all, he gets in now at the title and sticks, enjoying every minute and intelligently, too.

The clocks permit of variation according to the length of show. The hour and 15 minute clock indicates the starting hour for all shows that day, there being nine in number. The hour and a half clock indicates eight shows daily and the hour and 45 minutes indicator showing the hours of the six shows daily.

Not only is the clock a convenience to the public, but it is a distinct benefit to the theatres and a business getter as well. The psychological effect seeing the clock has on a man or woman with nothing to do in the afternoon or evening induces many to look at the next show and he feels that when he gets to the theatre he will not be in at the middle but at the time he would like to be there—at the start.

A few dollars spent with an artist, three cuts and as many mats as your city newspapers require, are all that are needed

Soloists Great Success at Shea's, Buffalo

Harold B. Franklin, Says Music Specialties
Increase Business and Make Friends

IN making up the de luxe program at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, one of the phases of the bill which is given a great deal of attention is the soloist, a number that is now well established in popularity and in the hearts of patrons. Harold B. Franklin, managing director, in discussing the vocal part of the Hippodrome program with the MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, declared that he believed that certain theatres in the country must pave the way for motion pictures in general by giving the modern performance a certain amount of distinction and atmosphere in the way of big symphony orchestras, stage settings and soloists and that while no box office value can be attached to these supplementary parts of the program, they aid greatly in giving these "trail blazing" theatres a "personality" that lifts the entire level of motion picture presentation.

"The play's the thing," argued Mr. Franklin, and must not be dominated by other parts of the program, but these large orchestras, soloists and stage settings given in moderation cannot help but better the program, increase business and make friends of the permanent kind. These "decorations" are but the natural evolution toward greater things in the silent art theatre and we can look forward to even greater innovations, were thoughts brought out by this successful Buffalo exhibitor.

"Quality is a most important thing in engaging soloists," said Mr. Franklin. "It is much better to have one good artist than a quartette of ordinary singers. At Shea's Hippodrome through the courtesy of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York, we have been able to present such famous soloists as Greek Evans, Emanuel List, Eduardo Albano, Sudworth Frasier and others, all of whom have sung their way into the hearts of Hippodrome patrons to such an extent that frequent return engagements are necessary.

"We chose an opportune time in introducing this added feature on our program. A slight boost in admission prices went into effect at the same time that we augmented our orchestra and brought forth these famous soloists. Our plan has always been to improve our performance to such an extent when raising prices that we may always retain the good will of our patrons. In giving these embellishments to our presentation we have been able to increase admission prices with little or no friction, because patrons realize that we are giving them value for money received and that we are not profiteering.

"This is merely another step forward and we feel that our 'customers' are entitled to the same grade of entertainment as that given in the large New York houses and we are willing to go out of the way to obtain this entertainment. In return we find that Buffalonians prefer the Hippodrome because of these added features."

Special settings are built by Mr. Franklin as a background for many of the noted singers who come to Buffalo.

The soloist usually follows the overture and stage setting unveiling so that the whole really provides a delightful little recital previous to the beginning of the regular program and often aids to a great extent in giving the desired atmosphere for the feature picture.

Several times in the past months Mr. Franklin has engaged prominent local soloists to sing songs based on the feature films shown. The song is given by the soloist and as the picture begins, the big symphony orchestra takes up the theme with a most delightful effect.

Soloists at Shea's Hippodrome have been a huge success and with the opening of the mammoth new Shea Metropolitan, which, it is expected, will also be under the management of Mr. Franklin, this part of the program will be even more elaborate.

Suelke Puts Cape May on the Map

IN these days when the wail of the exhibitor in the "eighty per cent. theatre" waxes louder over increased film rental and operating expense with no increase in box office receipts, it is good to learn how Karl A. Suelke, Manager of the Liberty Theatre, Cape May, manages to play the biggest and best productions in a small town without coming "out of the little end of the horn."

For instance Mr. Suelke has just put over "Why Change Your Wife?" to a good profit and he paid more money for it than some small town managers do for a week's service.

Suelke flooded his town with paper on the DeMille feature but he knew that he had to come through with something more than the orthodox stuff if he was to make any money. He decided on a prologue for the picture not a new thing at the Liberty but still capable of attracting attention if put over well.

Cape Town is small enough so most people wouldn't think of "going on the stage" so Mr. Suelke felt safe in advertising for a "perfect 36" to appear in his prologue even if he had hired a professional beauty for the part previously and didn't want any local female anyway. The object of the ad was to excite curiosity and it did. Everybody in the town wondered who the "perfect 36" would be and when Mr. Suelke announced that he had obtained the services of a professional making due note of the great expense to which he had gone to provide entertainment, etc., they were interested.

Mr. Suelke has put into effect something new so far as actual doing it is concerned although we have heard one or two big showmen say they thought it would be good stuff and that is to present the prologue prior to the run of the picture. The Liberty played "Why Change Your Wife?" two days but it ran the prologue number four days previous to the showing.

The result was added interest in the forthcoming event and hardly a person who ever goes to a picture shown in Cape May but that had made up his mind that he wanted to see this picture.

The Liberty is using a three-piece orchestra, each of the trio being a member of a celebrated Philadelphia organization and a soloist of note. He pays the three $200.00 a week so he tells us and finds that the music pays.

You have to walk two blocks off the Board Walk which is "the" street of Cape May to get to the Liberty but the Typhoon fans—Moeller organ, the orchestra and the pick of the pictures bring the crowd to the box office.

There is a moral in this for every small town showman. Put on a good show, do things in a big way and you will get bigger business and better net profits.

Fox News Strip Feature in Itself

AS a part of the specially compiled news weekly at both the Capitol and Rivoli theatres is a strip released by Fox showing the capture of an alligator in the Everglades, Florida.

This strip has a finish which contains more thrills than the best serial ever shown and can be made a feature on any program that will attract a lot of business.

"Hunting the Dragon in Florida" is the title of the strip. The first part has considerable scenic value, being a trip over one of the winding everglades rivers in a "dugout" canoe. Then comes an educational bit of interest in the gathering of alligator eggs and a pond full of little "gators." The finish covering perhaps a hundred feet, however, is the big thing. An alligator weighing a couple of hundred pounds at least is sighted on the water. A young chap, Henry Coppinger, according to the titles, dives overboard from his boat and for several minutes wrestles about in the water before the alligator is subdued. Just why it is necessary to capture this man eater bare handed we don't know but Coppinger does it and the fight is a wonder. Man and beast plunge about in the water, sometimes under the surface and at others coming to the top in a whirl of spray and with much splashing, all the time the hunter keeping his death like grip on the alligator's jaws. A title states that to lose his hold would be death to the man which is easily believable. Get hold of this strip and bill it as something extraordinary.

Depkin Neglects No Opportunities at Baltimore

FOLLOWING an advertising campaign in which all the available shop windows were secured and the city posted until no street was free of announcements "The Virgin of Stamboul" recently played Ford's Grand Opera House at Baltimore marking an epoch in the legitimate theatres of the city.

Nearly every method of exploitation known to the picture exhibitor was used by Manager Bernard Depkin, Jr., who has leased the theatre for a term, in bringing his attraction to the public's attention.

Cardboard statuettes of Priscilla Dean sitting before electric globe camp fires with cut-outs of scenes showing the Persian desert were seen in various drug-store and furniture store windows throughout the downtown section of the city. Riders, of both sexes wearing Oriental costumes, rode through the streets, attracting the attention of shoppers and business people and giving traffic policemen something to worry about.

Special screen settings showing in dim and picturesque outlines, scenes in the Persian desert with life size statuettes of Blackhorse troopers in the foreground, framed the screen in the presentation of the film. The whole was lighted by red and green lights creating a weird, Oriental atmosphere. This atmosphere was greatly heightened by a symphony orches-

Advertising Designed Especially for Youngsters

THE Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans is using a decided novelty in the way of newspaper advertising in the Sunday pages of the New Orleans Item or rather on a special comic page for the children, issued by the Item each week.

Alongside the "funny page" of this section a full column in depth the Saengers print a story set something on K. C. B.'s style and in which the current week's attractions at the several Saenger theatres are woven into the plot.

Following is one of the advertisements used recently. It will best illustrate just what this novelty of the Saenger's really is. The style, however, is necessarily changed, which was to cap the first word of each line and to set within a light rule on all four sides:

There is a boy who lives next door to me who has freckles on his face and ears that stand straight out into the atmosphere. And I remember when he used to chuck his pup up in my palm tree. And he would beat a drum and yell around at night, until I knew I knew just what the din of battle must have been. And one sweet day when I was trying to catch up some sleep this Indian next door let out a whoop and tried to scalp my cat. "Enuf's enuf," I thought and wildly cursed and tore my hair and then I had a brilliant thought. And I called him in and asked him if he ever went to the movies in the afternoon. And he said "nope." And then I gave him fifty cents and told him to go and see them all. And he left. And I slept. And the boy who lives next door has no time now to murder cats. And the neighbors recently gave me a silver set to show their gratitude. And last night this boy stopped at my porch. And told me that at the Strand this week there is a peach of a Harold Lloyd Comedy. And it is called "His Royal Slynness." And he said that next to being Babe Ruth he would rather be Harold Lloyd. And at the Liberty he said there is a Sunshine picture, "Monkey Business," and an awful pretty girl called Wanda Hawley in "Miss Hobbs." And at the Trianon there is a picture any kid would like called "Polly of the Storm County." And Mutt and Jeff in "The Wrestlers." And later on my wife asked me if I would play stud poker at the Masonettes that evening. And I said "not on your life. Your Hubby, dear, is going down to see the shows the boy next door told him about." —Skinny.

tra which gave specially arranged program of Eastern music during the showing.

In the lobby of the theatre were "supes" clad in the turbans and flowing robes of the Arabian troopers, which also added to the Oriental atmosphere of the theatre.

Initial Prologue at Austin Great Success

The Southern Enterprises, operating thirty-two theatres in the Southwest, has adopted the prologue in presenting some of their better attractions. For the showing of "Why Change Your Wife?" at the Majestic theatre, Austin, Texas, recently a prologue number, the first to which Austin people had been treated, was put over.

The Majestic was fortunate to be able to tie up to a home-talent angle in its opening number, securing the services of two members of the University of Texas Cur-tain Club, who rendered an elaborate prologue written and produced by J. M. Edgar Hart of the Southern Enterprises, Inc.

The prologue was based on the Kipling poem, "A Fool There Was." The novelty of the prologue as a picture program number, the local color injected by the two Austin girls who played the roles, and the merit of the attraction was productive of business which taxed the capacity of the Majestic.

Star's Chum Advertiseth "Sex" at Buffalo

In addition to an unusually extensive newspaper campaign for Buffalo where small displays are the rule in which around 250 lines of paid advertising and nearly a like amount of free publicity in the way of reproductions of stills and text, the management of the Shuebert-Teck theatre, Buffalo, obtained some excellent results with an aeroplane flight over the city, during its engagement of "Sex."

Capitol Theatre Presentation Novelties

DURING the projection of "Foam Fantasies," the first of the "Chester Sreenics" released by Educational at the Capitol theatre, excerpts from Edward McDowell's "Sea Poems" are rendered as a musical accompaniment, proving very appropriate for the offering.

The Capitol showing of a new Hy Mayer travelaugh, "A Trip to Coney Island," same being fully explained in the title, is made a decided novelty by the introduction of "effects" similar to sounds that are always heard at this famous resort. A typical "barker" stands on the stage and extols the merits of numberless attractions as they are shown in the picture. Off stage noises human, musical (?) and otherwise all interpreted to provide the atmosphere of Coney have been carefully worked up and continue during the projection. A wheezy hand organ can be heard, the orchestra plays selections that suggest a resort band and the cry of "hot dogs" etc., can be distinguished above the din.

The Capitol audiences seem to enjoy the animated effects as well as the screen offering.

Margaret Maxwell, a chum of Miss Glaum, accompanied the driver of the plane and dropped thousands of cards advertising "Sex" at the Teck. Of course the public was interested in the cards which dropped from the sky and more interested in the newspaper stories which told about Miss Maxwell and her friendship for the star of the picture.

The result of the advertising was a satisfactory engagement for the picture.

Royal Theatre, Newton, Kansas, Has a New One

G. W. Bays, manager of the Royal theatre in Newton, Kansas, is responsible for a very effective and inexpensive exploitation "stunt" used in connection with "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives." Mr. Bays mailed out letters, written in a feminine hand, to all his lady patrons, and another set of letters, in a masculine script, to his patrons of the other sex, in which he said that he would introduce the girls to Mr. Deane Kendall, and the young men to Miss Edith Beecher, if they would meet him at the corner of Briggs and Dory streets at 8 p. m. sharp on a certain day. They were invited to bring two friends along. Mr. Kendall was described in the letter to the girls as a very handsome and well-to-do young man; and in the letters to the men Miss Beecher was described as a pretty though somewhat reckless young lady. The letters were signed in such a hand that the exact name of the writer could not be made out, giving the impression to the recipients that the writer must be a familiar friend of theirs. At 8 o'clock Mr. Bays had a handsome man dressed in silk hat and full dress suit with a small sign reading: "Meet Mr. Deane Kendall, who takes the part of the 'Silk Husband' in 'Silk Husbands and Calico Wives,' now playing at the Royal theatre." At the side of the man stood a pretty girl dressed in calico, bearing the inscription, "This is Miss Edith Beecher, the Calico wife of 'Silk Husbands and Calico Wives,' now playing at the Royal Theatre." The idea was productive of a great deal of publicity for the Royal's attraction.

Duncan Gives Aeroplane Stunt New Twist

Lincoln Ace and City Fathers Form Basis of Great Exploitation Campaign

EDGAR E. DUNCAN, manager of the Colonial theatre, Lincoln, has recently made the Capitol City of Nebraska sit up and take notice with his campaign for "The Great Air Robbery."

The Commissioners of Lincoln have been trying to frame an ordinance forbidding the flying over the city in an aeroplane and in consequence there has been a lot of newspaper and other kind of talk about the proposition. In the midst of the controversy Mr. Duncan announced that "Daredevil Gardner," a local ace, would fly over the city in a locally made plane and would attempt to land on one of the main streets of the city, with its nose as close to the Colonial theatre as it was possible to guide it.

The first advertising for the stunt which had for its object the boosting of "The Great Air Robbery" was by a herald but the announcement was too good news for any paper to pass up and the several publications in the city ran front page stories about it.
